Volume LXVII. No. 1.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JANUARY 1, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

	C	ONTER	NTS.
-"What Year-Bac mas Reme	Modern "Do Do They E ok in Okla	avidites"-Bee?"—B	Contri	adiction follege-	of a	pee Ne	ch ew
Saved?"-	to Be Av	oided—"	What N	fust 1	Do	to	Be from Was	ARTMENT
HOME REAL		*******
FROM THE	BRETHRE	V					3
FROM THE	ncy	*******					**
Our Depende	ncy					1	**
	ney h" Discussion a	at Rockw	ood, Te	nn			**

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

By JAMES A. ALLEN

AS THE OLD YEAR passes and a new year begins, we should seriously and solemnly take an inventory of ourselves. The joys and sorrows and the opportunities of the year of our Lord 1924 are gone, never to return. Its errors and mistakes, its sins of omission and commission, are now beyond the reach of human correction. The record kept by that Hand that is ever writing has been completed. All of our sighs and tears cannot erase one word of it.

The Gospel Advocate, in taking stock of itself, finds that it is standing upon the grounds that were occupied by the spostles and that it is endeavoring to propagate primitive Christianity. We honestly and candidly avow that our whole aim is simply to teach the will of God as it is revealed in the word of God. We have no opinions of our own or of others to press upon the attention of the public. We have no motive, personal or otherwise, except to point sinners to "the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world," and to encourage those who come to the Lord to faithfully continue unto the end. If what the Advocate has taught during the year that now is gone can be found word for word in the Bible, we urge all, for their own good, to accept it; if the Advocate has taught anything for which it cannot produce a "Thus saith the Lord," either in an expressed command or by an approved precedent, contained in the writings of inspired men, we ourselves very cordially and earnestly beg that it be rejected. 0 0 0

THE FIRST NUMBER of the Gospel Advocate was issued in July, 1855, sixty-nine and one-half years ago. Subtracting the omission during the Civil War, the Gospel Advocate commences, with this number, its sixty-seventh volume. It was first issued monthly, in a pamphlet about the size of a Sunday-school quarterly, and was first published by T. Fanning and W. Lipscomb. Its publication was renewed after the war by D. Lipscomb. E. G. Sewell became associated with D. Lipscomb in the publication of the Advocate in 1870. J. C. McQuiddy began work on the Advocate in 1885. F. D. Srygley became first-page editor in 1889. Commenting on the "Prospectus" for the publication of the Gospel Advocate, A. Campbell, in the Millennial Harbinger, June, 1855, said:

We are of opinion that such a periodical as that indicated in the above prospectus is needed in Nashville and in Tennessee. The condition of things in the city and State call for not only oral, but for written and printed materials of thought and action. The press, well furnished and guided, is a powerful auxiliary of truth or of error. If evil spirits use it in the projects of evil, why should not good spirits use it against fraud and imposture? Under the editorship of Elders Fanning and Lipscomb, we anticipate for it a large circulation and a liberal patronage. patronage.

Time has shown that Mr. Campbell's good opinion of the Gospel Advocate, expressed in its infancy, has been amply verified, and that the good he anticipated would be done by its publication has been accomplished.

THE PRESS has exercised an immense influence in the effort to bring about a restoration of primitive Christianity. The position occupied by those grand men engaged in this very laudable enterprise was thus expressed by Mr. Campbell:

To bring the Christianity and the church of the present day up to the New Testament. This is in substance what we contend for. To bring the societies of Christianity to the New Testament is just to bring the disciples individually and collectively to walk in the faith and in the commands of the Lord and Savior, as presented in that blessed volume; and this is to restore the ancient order of things.

In the written address, written and published by Thomas Campbell, it is stated thus:

Nothing ought to be received into the faith or worship of the church, or be made a term of communion among Christians, that is not as old as the New Testament.

The Gospel Advocate stood upon this ground in 1855. It stands upon the same ground to-day.

Indications point to the approach of a great crisis in the struggle for a restoration of the apostolic order of Christian work and worship. All of God's people should stand perfectly united for the contest. The various factions created by the anti-Sunday-school hobbyists, by the rebaptism devotees, and by the anti-Bible-School schismatics are lending support to the enemy and are weakening the Cause. Speculative theories on the millennium and unfulfilled prophecy are doing their detrimental work. Our transgressive brethren, while loudly protesting their identity with those struggling for Restoration, have gone entirely over to its opponents. They eulogize Mr. Campbell; but Mr. Campbell, while living, refused to preach where an organ was used, and hence, if living to-day, would not preach in one of their churches.

We must have union. God commands it. If all will cordially agree to preach nothing but what they can read word for word in God's Book, without advancing a comment or a speculation; if none will contend for the introduction of anything but what was introduced by the apostles; if all will meet upon a "Thus saith the Lord," we will have it, and will be able to present a solid front against the enemy. Then the army of King Jesus, united and concentrated, and advocating pure Christianity as it was once for all introduced by the apostles, will sweep victoriously over the earth, carrying the gospel of redemption and salvation to "every creeture."

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

DAVID vs. MODERN "DAVIDITES."
BY A. M'GARY.

I am writing this to the Gospel Advocate by request of an old reader of the paper who sometimes contributes to its columns and frequently reports his ministerial labors through it. He requests me to write a series of articles on the question, "Whether Christ is to ever reign as King on the earth for a thousand years." He requests that his "name be not mentioned" in connection with the question.

I'll in this attempt to obviate the necessity of writing "a series of articles" by doing my best in this one to so thoroughly strip the wild-eyed hallucination that Christ is ever to "reign a thousand years" on earth, "on David's throne" or any other throne, of its vacuous sophistries and speculative tomfooleries that any one who truly reveres the plain declarations of holy writ may see that egregious fallacy in its outstanding desecration and upstanding sacrilege and stalwart infidelity.

I have chosen the heading I've given this article because those who are clamoring for the literal reëstablishment on earth of David's literal kingdom and throne, and for Christ to vacate the throne "at God's right hand," upon which he is now "sitting" and has been sitting for nearly two thousand years, and descend to this earth and take a seat on David's literal throne for "a thousand years," prove themselves to be "a thousand" times more "Davidites" than "Christites." And I have put "David versus" those drivelling dreamers and distracted romancers because the inspired teachings of David himself palpably repudiate the mock honor they are striving to so gratuitously and gracelessly bestow upon him and knocks into infinitesimal smithereens their cock-and-bull yarn about his (David's) literal kingdom or throne ta ever come into literal existence again.

Now to the proof of all of this, to the utter shame and righteous contempt of all such piffling tomfoolery.

David said: "I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope: because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell [Hades], neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. Thou hast made known to me the ways of life" (which "ways of life" the "Davidites" stubbornly refuse to "know," though David, Daniel, Christ, and his apostles "made it known" in plainest terms; they prefer to remain symboldazed over the symbols of Rev. 20: 4-6, thus "deceived and deceiving").

Now let's consider Peter's inspired interpretation of David's utterences. He says: "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this hefore spoke of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell [Hades], neither his flesh did see corruption. This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses."

But the resurrection of Christ "to sit on his throne" is not all that David "foresaw." He "foresaw" the "gates" and "everlasting doors" of high heaven swing open to admit Christ's entrance to and upon the throne "at God's right hand," which "foreseeing" he expressed as follows: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory."

Daniel "foresaw" the same, which he expressed as follows: "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven [the apostles saw a "cloud receive him out of their sight" as he was ascending from earth], and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." The "Davidites" repudiate all of this, denying that he has ever yet had a kingdom or sat upon a throne, and will never, till he returns to earth and reëstablishes David's literal worldly kingdom and throne.

But let's see how completely what Daniel foresaw in his night visions fulfills Christ's proverbialized prophecy, found in Luke 19: 12, as follows: "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return." Study Daniel's vision and this in the light of each other, and grasp their perfect correspondence.

But while we have this prophecy in parable by Christ under consideration, let's compare it with the "Davidite" speculation that Christ is to have no kingdom till he "returns" and reëstablishes David's worldly kingdom on

According to this saying of Christ in Luke 19: 12, he was to go away from earth "into a far country [heavenly country] to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return." According to the "Davidites"—who don't believe David, nor Daniel, nor Christ—Christ was to "go into a far country" and there wait two thousand years or more, and then return, to receive unto himself David's old worldly kingdom.

Reader, do you see the gross, infidelic misfit these "Davidites" are palming off on such unthinking susceptible as are allowing themselves to be deceived by them? If you do not see it, I'll put it to you in this way: According to Christ, the order of events is, (1) going to the "far country," (2) receiving the kingdom, (3) "returning." According to the "Davidites," the order of events is, (1) going to the "far country," (2) remaining there two thousand years or more in divine idleness and somnolence, (3) "returning," (4) "receiving unto himself" David's old, sequestered, carnal, worldly kingdom! What an impious, profane, blasphemous misfit!

But let's hear David some more, that we may see how befitting is the heading of this article, "David vs. 'Davidites.'"

After David "foresaw" Christ resurrected to sit on his throne, and after he "foresaw" the "gates" and "everlasting doors" of heaven thrown open for Christ to enter upon the throne "at God's right hand," listen to what Inspiration moved him to say: "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool. . . The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." Zechariah said, "He shall be a priest upon his throne," which corresponds exactly with what David said; for he first referred to him as "sitting at God's right hand," and, second, as "a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." In other words, David referred to him as "a priest upon his throne," his "throne" being at God's right hand."

Like Melchizedek, Christ is a Priest-King. As to his priesthood and kingship, when he became the one he became the other, and when he was not the one he was not the other. (See Ps. 110: 4; Zech. 6: 13; Heb. 5: 6-10; Heb. 6: 20; Heb. 7: 17-21.)

Now, finally, as to the priesthood of Christ, let's hear Paul, and then see how the deluded clamor of the "Davidites" for Christ to return and reëstablish David's literal, carnal, worldly kingdom and sit upon its throne a "thousand years" fits in with what David, Zechariah, and Paul say about Christ's priesthood. Paul says: "If he were on earth, he should not be a priest." (Heb. 8: 4.) If Christ should ever sit upon any throne on this earth a "thousand years," during that "thousand years," according to Paul, "he should not be a priest." David said that when he became a priest he would be a "priest forever," and Paul said he should be a "priest continually."

O ye "Davidites," why would ye rob Christ of his priesthood for "a thousand years?" Why would you rehumiliate him by reducing him from the high rank of the kingship he is now enjoying as ruling King of the kingdom of heaven and reduce "his high rank" of kingship at God's right hand," to sit for "a thousand years' on David's worldly, carnal, blood-spattered, God-repudiated throne? Would you "crucify the Son of God afresh" to bolster up your Russellism?

In the first chapter of Revelation, John says: "I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ." Now, right reason will say that it would have been an utter impossibility for John to have been "in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ," as he says he was, if the "kingdom of Jesus Christ" had not then been in exist-

But this same John wrote some symbols in Rev. 20: 4-6, as he did in many other parts of his book of Revelation, which symbols you "Devidites" are, evidently, as incompetent to properly interpret as a bunch of raving maniacs would be, as is evidenced by your interpreting those symbols to imply that Christ's kingdom, which the writer of those symbols clearly said he was "in" when he began writing that book, was not then in existence, and is not yet, nearly two thousand years after John wrote that he was "in" it, in existence.

If you "Davidites" are going to cling to that Russell-David-denying, Daniel-belieing, Christ-repudiating, apostle-contradicting, symbol-befuddling, church-dividing phase of infidelity, the proper thing for you to do is to cut Rev. 20: 4-6 out of your Bibles and throw the rest of the Bible to the winds. In other words, if you are determined to be infidels, be consistent infidels, for even consistency is better than nothing.

This persistent trumpery we are hearing about "a thousand-years'" reign by Christ on earth is as unsubstantial as "a tale told by idiots." It's such stuff as the dreams of tomnoddies are made of. It's trumpery designed to "deceive the hearts of the simple" and entrap the thoughtless and gullible.

I will agree to enter into a binding contract with any propagandist of this turmoiling tomfoolery, from the least to the greatest of them, to produce just as much scriptural authority for teaching that Christ is to go to the moon and thereon set up a kingdom and reign upon the throne of it "a thousand years," as he can produce for teaching that Christ is to ever sit upon any earthly throne "a thousand years," or one year, or one day, or one second.

CONTRADICTION OF SPEECH.

BY WALTER N. RIDGE.

The following is an extract from "Swats from Sunday's Bat," which appeared in the Nashville Tennessean of December 16. In "Strike No. 3" he says: "I don't believe in church unity." "I believe in separate denominations."

Eph. 4: 1-6: "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling: one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church unity."

John 17: 20, 21: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one: as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church unity."

1 Cor. 12: 12, 13: "As the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we he bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church unity."

Rom. 12: 4, 5: "As we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church

1 Cor. 12: 18-20: "But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they were all one member, where were the body? But now are they many members, yet but one body." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church unity."

The apostle Paul in no wise leaves us to guess and speculate as to what that "one body" is. Col. 1: 18 says: " He is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the preëminence." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church unity."

Eph. 1: 22, 23: "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." Mr. Sunday says: "I don't believe in church unity."

In the language of the apostle Paul let me freely speak. 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4: "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Again, Paul says: "Preach the word." And again: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!"

Mr. Sunday says: "I believe in separate denominations." He certainly does not get his faith from the New Testament Scriptures, for the Book of God is as silent as a grave regarding religious denominations. Hence, he has only expressed his opinion; and the apostle Paul forbids him or any other man preaching his opinions.

"WHAT DO THEY SEE?"

BY S. H. HALL.

Under the heading, "What Do They See?" George E. Burlingame, of Los Angeles, Cal., has some very fine things to say, and I am passing it on to our readers:

What do the people see that come to your church? Jesus, in one of his most simple and vivid parables, taken from common life, suggests what people have a right to expect when they come into the assembly of God's children: "No man, when he hath lighted a lamp, putteth it in a cellar, neither under the bushel, but on the stand, that they which enter in may see the light."

That is to say when people come where there is light

That is to say, when people come where there is light, they naturally expect to see the light.

Jesus himself exemplified the lesson of the parable when on earth he lived "the human life of God." Isaiah had on earth he lived "the human life of God." Isaiah had forecast the gracious and redeening attitude of the Son of God to the world in its darkness, telling of the time when "the people that sat in darkness saw a great light, and to them that sat in the region and shadow of death, to them did light spring up." The people saw the Light!

When he came in fulfillment of that prophecy, there was no hiding in cellars nor obscuring under bushels of that Light that lighteth every man coming into the world.

Light that lighteth every man coming into the world. John, in his Gospel, summarizes the whole story of the incarnation in one brief sentence: "The Light shineth in the darkness." In the presence of Jesus the shadows fled away, and in his light the people saw light.

What do the people see, who come to your church, wherein Jesus is incarnating himself before the world today? Do they that enter in see the Light? If that Light is hidden in the cellur or under a bushel does it matter. day? Do they that enter in see the Light? If that Light is hidden in the cellar or under a bushel, does it matter much what else they see? They grope still in the darkness of sin, still in the somber shadows of despair, of bitter sorrow, having no hope, and without God in the world. They came to us lamenting, "No light have we!" and they went away again, enshrouded still in darkness, because when they entered in they did not see the Light. Why did they not find it? Where had we hidden it, that they could not see it when they came? not see it when they came?

Lord Jesus, set this word of thine before us, brand it on

Lord Jesus, set this word of thine before us, brand it on our hearts, until we are all asseme with a prayerful passion to realize it in our ministry and worship and fellowship and service as a church of thine, "that they which enter in may see the Light."

Help the preacher to preach, the congregations to sing, the ushers to welcome, the people to love and smile and pray, to the end that whenever tired and tempted and suffering and sinning folks enter within our doors, they may see the Light, and God may shine into their hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, until the day break and the shadows flee away, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes!

I have taken the liberty to use "congregation" where he had the word "choir." With this change, I heartily indorse the above, and hope that every one who desires that the local church may be just what our Lord wants it to be will read this and strive the harder to make all the services in the assembly of the saints such that the light of our Lord's presence may shine out. I want to say that Jesus is still "the Light," and there is no other. If we will only take him fully into our souls and go to the assembly of the saints with him, there will be no doubt about what strangers and visitors will see when they come in. Let us here read 1 Cor. 14: 24, 25: "But if . . there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all: and thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down an his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth." This simply means that he will report that what we preach is not mere theory, but a reality. We preach that where two or three assemble in our Lord's name, he is always there. Do aliens, strangers, unbelievers, see our Lord when they attend our services? It should be the one desire and aim in all of our assembling together to let the Lord's presence he seen and felt. The one way to do this is to so surrender to him and whole-heartedly strive to let his Spirit fill us with his presence that he will shine out through us. May God help us to so be.

In connection with this, I want to give a splendid poem under the heading, "The Gospel According to You: "

There's a sweet old story translated for man, But writ in the long, long ago— The Gospel according to Mark, Luke, and John— Of Christ and his mission below.

Men read and admire the gospel of Christ, With its love so unfailing and true; But what do they say, and what do they think, Of the gospel "according to you?"

'Tis a wonderful story, that gospel of love, As it shines in the Christ life divine; And, O that its truth might be told again In the story of your life and mine!

Unselfishness mirrors in every scene, Love blossoms on every sod, And back from its vision the heart comes to tell The wonderful goodness of God.

You are writing each day a letter to men, Take care that the writing is true; 'Tis the only gospel that some men will read— That "gospel according to you."

Now, do you not think this just fine? Whoever wrote the foregoing lines, doubtless, had read 2 Cor. 2: 2, 3, where it clearly teaches that Christians are the epistles of Christ, "known and read of all men." How true it is that "the only gospel that some men will read" is the " gospel according to you!"

How earnestly we should all work and pray to feel and act about every question and every being just as our Lord does! The one curse that hangs as a dark cloud over the church is the world's seeing envy, jealousy, hatred, and selfishness in the individual members of the church, instead of seeing that love our Lord ever manifested toward all men, and the gentleness in which he went about trying to lead sinners from the evil of their way. Let us have Christ one hundred per cent in every song, prayer, and act of woship in the assembly, and in every thought, word, and act of ours out of the assembly. How true it is that "a sermon seen is better than a sermon heard!" All of us can, hence should, give this kind of sermon daily.

BURRITT COLLEGE.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

Burritt College closed a successful fall term on December 12. Three programs marked the close, given by the music pupils, the Glee Club, and the Expression Department, respectively, and large audiences were in attendance.

The enrollment for the fall term was one hundred and eighty-eight-ninety-four boys and ninety-four girls. Invariably the spring-term enrollment is larger than the fall-term enrollment, usually by thirty, sometimes by as many as fifty. Preparations are being made to accommodate thirty more students-fifteen boys and fifteen girls.

As a whole, the student body was studious, quiet, and orderly, and very little discipline was necessary. During the fall a successful gospel meeting was held, in which more than forty of the one hundred and eighty-eight students were baptized, and, as a result, a Christlike spirit so permeated the school that teachers were impressed with the good that had been wrought, with the "peaceable fruits" that followed. After that meeting there could be no school trouble of moment, and good work in every department characterized the last months.

Preparations are under way for the spring-term open-ing, Tuesday, January 6. The north dormitories are being repaired and renovated to make conditions as pleasant and comfortable as possible. Nearly all the rooms in these buildings have been assigned, and it looks as though several rooms in the south dormitory will be in use. young men take their meals in private homes, and board is fourteen dollars per month.

The young ladies take rooms in Christian families, where matrons and teachers maintain constant surveillance. Furnished room and board by the month is sixteen dollars. There are several such boarding houses within easy access of the college.

A word about the Burritt improvement campaign. I am told by those who are managing the campaign that it is meeting with success. Brother H. C. Denson, for four years a teacher in Burritt College, is devoting all his time to soliciting. Others also are giving considerable time and thought to the movement. Ultimate success is assured. The trustees are so confident of this that they have planned to raze the old dormitories as soon as school closes in May to make room for the modern dormitory, to be built during the summer and made ready for the opening in September. This good news will hearten the well-wishers of Burritt College everywhere and gladden Christian hearts, especially those who appreciate the cause of Christian education.

The man who wills to know the truth of God must act on what he has to the utmost of his ability. The man who will not act on the simple fact that two and two make four will never be able to make progress in mathematics.- Exchange.

THE NEW YEAR.

BY CARLTON M. BROSIUS.

The new year steals o'er land and sea, Shrouded in solemn mystery; Nor what it brings may mortals see—
To thee and me, to me and thee.

Sunrise, noontide, sunset, and night, Days of dark gloom and glory bright, Blossom and fruit, or bloom and blight, May come to thee and me.

Onward we go, unknowing aught Of coming years with change full franght, Yet these past years have plainly taught That we may trust—O, Lord—may trust in thee.

BACK IN OKLAHOMA.

BY J. G. ALLEN.

After a three-weeks' absence from Muskogee visiting in dear old Nashville, Tenn., I am back home again, and I think I am better prepared in many ways for the work here than before.

I believe I can appreciate what is said about Paul, that when he met certain brethren he "thanked God, and took courage." I certainly feel stronger for having associated on my short visit with so many of my dear brethren and sisters with whom I have labored in the Lord in days gone by. Yes, I met with many noble "soldiers of the cross," and it inspired me with a greater determination to work for God and humanity than ever before.

It was a very great pleasure to mix and mingle with the dear old Gospel Advocate force once more and to note the determined effort each one is making to sustain the high standard the paper has sustained among the brother-hood for pure New Testament Christianity for the past half century or more. Yes, there is Smith, Srygley, and a host of others whose faces are set like flint against any hobby that bobs up to mar the peace of Zion. God bless you all, brethren. Keep up the fight, and the victory will be sweet by and by.

I do not want to close this short article without mentioning one other great pleasure I experienced while in Nashville—namely, that of seeing my son, James A. Allen, do as sensible a thing as any young man ever did, except becoming a Christian. Becoming a Christian is first always, and next to that is for every young man to find a sweet, Christian girl and get married. That is what Jim did, and I am truly delighted with his choice, and, as his father, I expect him to preach better and write better now than he did before he secured such a splendid helpmate. I appreciate the many kindnesses the brotherhood hestowed on him and his bride.

CHICAGO NOTES.

BY ELMER E. BECK.

The West Side congregation had its formal opening of their new house of worship on Sunday, December 28, at two-thirty in the afternoon. Brother George A. Klingman, of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, began a series of meetings at that time. The Central congregation assisted in the formal opening services.

The new house is located at Long Avenue (5400 West) and Crystal Street (1220 North) in a newly built-up section of the city. There are no other churches near, and there is an unexcelled opportunity to reach the people with our plea. This congregation is the original body from which went out the many other churches in the city before the divisions came over instrumental music, societies, etc. Many prominent men in city affairs were once members of this congregation.

The Central congregation meets in Hall 309, Capitol

Building, corner of State and Randolph Streets. There is a Bible class at 9 A.M., taught by Brother David L. Cooper; there are four classes at ten o'clock, and worship and preaching at a quarter to eleven. The congregation numbers about one hundred and fifteen members, with an average attendance of about ninety.

The colored brethren meet in a vacant storeroom at 2241 West Lake Street, and they expect to buy or build a house in the near future. Brother Cooper has preached for them a few times.

Brother and Sister Albright, of 22 East Fifth Avenue, Gary, Ind., have set aside a room of their apartment for a meeting place, having fitted it up with chairs, books, maps, charts, etc., and are trying to reach their neighbors and friends with the gospel. They have baptized three or four, some of whom were Roman Catholics. Brother Cooper preaches for them occasionally.

Brother James A. Allen, office editor of the Gospel Advocate, visited us recently, and was gladly welcomed by many former Nashvillians. Brother Allen brought his bride with him, and spent more than a week sight-seeing in Chicago.

It is expected that other missions will be established in Chicago within the next year, if the Lord tarries.

A CHRISTMAS REMEMBRANCE.

The church at Franklin, Tenn., with which Brother F. W. Smith has labored so many years, very kindly remembered him on Christmas Eve with a princely present, consisting of a very handsome suit of clothes and a purse of gold. Accompanying this present was a very beautifully bound Christmas card on which was written the following note of presentation: "To our dear Brother Smith, who has served us so well and so faithfully, we give this little Christmas remembrance as a small token of our love and esteem."

In acquainting us with regard to this action upon the part of the chnrch, Brother Smith says that words are inadequate to express his feelings of gratitude for the esteem in which the chnrch holds him, and that he sincerely prays that he may never say nor do anything to lessen the favorable estimate the church has of him and of his efforts in the Master's cause. Brother Smith feels profoundly grateful toward all who contributed toward these presents, whether the donor gave much or little, and especially is he grateful to the one who conceived the idea which met with such a hearty response on the part of the many who contributed at her solicitation.

Knowing Brother Smith as we do, we feel sure that he esteems more highly the motive and love of those who contributed toward these presents than he does their intrinsic value; and it may also be admissible, as Brother Smith is one of the senior editors of the Gospel Advocate, for us to say that any honor that comes to those who are so willing, for the sake of the cause of Christ, which is the cause of primitive Christianity, to sacrifice the honors and plaudits of this world, is doubly gratifying to us. Living in an age when many of those who are supposed to be preachers of the gospel have bartered the cause for which Jesus died for the smiles and emoluments of this world, it is refreshing to see a man who, like Brother Smith, is willing to lay his popularity upon the altar and preach the word of God without fear or favor. May his tribe increase! And may his sun, as it leaves the meridian sink gracefully toward the western hills, his last days being his best days, and may it set in peace with God and with all mankind, to rise in radiant splendor J. A. upon that eternal morning!

Inquisitive people are the funnels of conversation. They do not take in anything for their own use, but merely to pass it to another.—Steele.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE.

BY ROBERT S. KING.

The Bible contains 3,586,489 letters, 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books.

The word "and" occurs 46,277 times; the word "reverence," but once.

Ez. 7: 21 contains all the letters of the alphabet except "j."

The nineteenth chapter of 2 Kings and the thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah are alike.

The middle verse of the Bible is Ps. 118: 8.

The shortest verse is John 11: 35; the longest verse is Esth. 8: 9.

Each verse of Ps. 136 ends alike.

In Acts 26 there are no words or names of more than six syllables.

There are sixty-six books in the Bible. They were written by about forty men during a period of about sixteen hundred years.

The Old Testament was written in Hebrew and the New Testament in Greek. These original scriptures, prepared by inspired men, were written by hand on skins and papyrus.

The word "Bible" comes from "biblos," a reed from which paper was manufactured for use in the making of hooks; and the word "Bible," meaning literally "book," gets its name from that particular reed.

The first book printed from movable types was the Latin Bible, in the year 1455. Recently one of these books sold for fifty thousand dollars, the highest price ever paid for a single book.

The American Bible Society recently announced an order for one million five hundred thousand Scriptnres, to be sold at one cent each.

The first Bible printed in this country was in the Indian language in 1663, by John Elliott.

The first English Bible printed in this country was in 1782.

The first movement in America toward supplying the people with the Bible was by Congress in 1777, which ordered the importation of 20,000 copies at national expense, because none were published in the United States.

At present the Bible and parts of Bibles have been translated in seven hundred and seventy languages and dialects.

The Bible has been translated into more languages than any other book.

The present yearly production is approximately fifty million copies of the Bible and parts of the Bible. This is more than the combined sales of any other hundred books published-" best sellers," as we call them. It is an old book, but to-day it is the best seller on earth. The march of civilization has not left it behind; the discoveries of science have only proved its truth. As there are stars unreached by the telescope that have disclosed their light to the longest exposure of the photographic plate, so the Bihle becomes more clear as man learns more with which to comprehend it. The Bible can never be outgrown. All the powers of evil have tried to put it down, but its enemies die and the book increases in its influence.

The catalogue of the British Museum Library fills over two thousand volumes, but the contents of the Bible fill all the world and shall fill all ages. The Bible is the power of God unto salvation.

The Old Testament is the New concealed; the New Testament is the Old revealed.

There are one hundred and forty-one quotations from the Old Testament in the four Gospels.

The Bible is the first book the immigrant to America sees when he lands at Ellis Island, this volume having been chosen by the Department of Labor for the literary test which every newcomer must pass.

Shakespeare makes three thousand quotations from the

There have been various translations and revisions of the Bible from time to time. Those with which we are most familiar are the Authorized or King James Version, made in 1611, and the American Standard Revision, which came out in 1901.

The American Committee, who worked unceasingly from 1872 to 1901, was composed of the best Bible scholars of the leading denominations, four of whom were Baptists, eight were Congregationalists, six were Presbyterians, five were Episcopalians, three were Reformers, two were Methodists, one was a Friend, one was a Lutheran, one was a Reformed Presbyterian, and one was a Unitarian.

The Bible contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy.

It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter. Here Paradise is restored, heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. Christ is the subjeet, our good its design, and the glory of God its end.

It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the

Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be open at the judgment, and will be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, rewards the greatest labor, and condemns all who trifle with its holy contents.

There is a wonderful book that appeals to my heart, A mine of riches untold. Every word is a jewel of luster divine-

The book that never grows old.

Mr. Moody said: "If this book doesn't keep you from sin, sin will keep you from this book."

Bishop Fowler said: "Its greatness cannot be uttered in this world or in time. The universe is too narrow for it, time is too short for it. It is as deep as the foundations of eternal justice, as wide as moral government, as high as the throne of the Infinite, and as enduring as the life of the Almighty, and its inspiration is as exhaustless as the love of God."

Sir Isaac Newton said: "If all the great books of the world were given life and were called together in some mighty convention, the moment the other books would fall on their faces, even as the gods of Philistia fell when the ark of God was brought into their presence."

Martin Luther exclaimed on first beholding the complete Bible: "O God, could I have one of these books, I would ask no other worldly treasure."

David Lipscomb said: "The Bible, in its announcements and revelations, is the most astounding, most wonderful, most majestic, and the grandest hook on earth. In its style and presentation of the truths and principles revealed, it is the simplest book known to man. It is superhuman; it is godlike in its conceptions and revelations; it is adapted to babes in its teachings and requirements."

One wiser than all these said: "The law of Jehovah is perfect, restoring the soul: the testimony of Jehovah is sure, making wise the simple. The precepts of Jehovah are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of Jehovah is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of Jehovah is clean, enduring forever: the ordinances of Jehovah are true, and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the droppings of the honeycomb. Moreover by them is thy servant warned: in keeping them there is great reward." (Ps. 19: 7-11.)

Paul said: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth."

Jesus said: "Ye search the scriptures; because ye think that in them ye have eternal life, and these are they which bear witness of me,"

The above facts are from clippings, with some comments, scripture quotations, etc., and are here given with the hope that the precions book divine may be in consequence more eagerly examined.

THE WATER ROUTE.

BY J. M. DEVENY.

The Texas Christian Advocate of August 21, 1924, gives an article from the pen of "Rev." Marens Chunn, pastor of the Methodist Church at West, Texas, in which he proceeds to express himself quite freely concerning the various churches of West. Among other things, he says: "We have four denominations in our midst." He then mentions the Presbyterians, Baptists, and church of Christ (Campbellites), and proceeds rather caustically to criticize the two first-named churches, and to speak in a slnrring, disrespectful manner of the church of Christ—to wit: "The Campbellites, as usual, demand the water route, and send all others into the regions of the damned."

Mr. Chunn speaks lightly of haptism as "the water route." Now, I wonder if he has ever thought of the number that have been saved by taking what he is pleased to call "the water route." Take, for example, Noah, a preacher of righteousness. Peter says that Noah was saved by water—yes, he says that eight souls were saved by water; and, by the way, they were all that were saved at all. (See 1 Pet. 3: 20, 21.) Noah prepared the ark by the directions of the Almighty, and the floods came upon the earth as God had informed him, which bore up the ark and translated Noah and family from the antediluvian world, filled with sin and corruption, into the world that now is. So Noah took "the water route" and was saved; as Peter says, "the like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now saye us."

Moses, in leading the children of Israel out of Egyptian bondage, passed through the Red Sea. "And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." (1 Cor. 10: 1, 2.) And they sang the song of deliverance on the farther shore, being saved from their enemies. They, too, took "the water route," being the route God had prepared for them to take.

Naaman, the commander in chief of the Syrian army, was healed of his leprosy, a type of sin, by taking the water route. He had expected to be healed in some other way, and was wroth; yet, when his servants reasoned with him, "Why not wash, and be healed?" he bowed in humble submission, dipped himself seven times in the Jordan, and was healed, saved from his leprosy. Naaman took "the water route," that being the route ordained of God, and was blessed.

The eunuch, after hearing Philip preach Jesus, came to a certain water, and said: "See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be haptized?" Philip replied: "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." They went down into the water, Philip baptized him, and they came up out of the water, after which the eunuch went on his way rejoicing. He, too, took "the water route" and could rejoice and sing: "Where he leads me, I will follow."

Saul was on his way to Damascus to persecute Christians. Jesus appears to him, and, after being convinced that Jesus is the Christ, he says: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Jesus answers by saying: "Go into the city, and there it shall be told thee what thou must do." He went, and Ananias, whom Jesus sent to him, said: "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." He obeyed, took meat, and was strengthened, conscious of sins forgiven. He, too, took "the water route."

In fact, in all conversions recorded in the book of Acts, the book of conversions, mention is made of baptism, for Jesus had said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Verily, "the water route" seems to have been quite popular in the days of the apostles; "for they that gladly received his word were baptized."

To Mr. Chunn and to all others of his way of thinking I would say: "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." "Repent, and be baptized . . . in the name of Jesns Christ for the remission of sins." As to the offensive term, "Campbellite," only the prejudiced and uninformed use the term any more.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us for sample copies of Bible Lesson Helps.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once. As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all onr readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"Salvation from Sin," by David Lipseomb, is a most excellent book. This book contains the cream of his editorials, and will be found helpful to all who read it. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

Order from Gospel Advocate Company, Nashville, Tenn.

FOR FIFTY YEARS

The World's Greatest Sunday-School Commentary

PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LLD.

It contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help for ministers, teachers, and Sunday-school workers, so compiled and tabulated that it can be easily and effectively used.

The broadest range of quotations, illuminating houghts, clear and convincing explanation of the text itself, are all tuned to spiritual interpretation.

Unlimited in its possibility for helpfulness.

Beautiful and instructive pictures, maps, chrouological charts and comprehensive index, make it complete in every respect. In text and in interpretation, it is fitted for all grades.

Price, $1.90-$2.00, prepaid

Order from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENN.

OUR MESSAGES

We have installed a Modern Rapid Addressing Machine in our Mailing Department and are recopying our entire mailing list. Hence, no change can be made in the date on the yellow label on any subscriber's paper for about two weeks. But all who send in their renewals may rest assured that they will be given the proper credit and that the dates on their papers will be moved up as soon as we complete our mailing list.

- J. L. Hines preached at Franklin, Ky., last Sunday.
- F. B. Srygley preached at Reid Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

There were two confessions at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Leslie G. Thomas preached twice on Sunday at White Bluff, Tenn. On the second and third Lord's days in December he preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city.

Married, December 24, at the residence of James A. Allen, 900-B Sixteenth Avenue, South, this city, J. T. Cooper and Mabel Sullivan, James A. Allen officiating.

Married, December 24, at the residence of James A. Allen, 900-B Sixteenth Avenue, South, this city, Matthew Dewey Keys and Rosa May Fitts, James A. Allen officiating.

Married, December 24, at the residence of James A. Allen, 900-B Sixteenth Avenue, South, this city, John Caril Fitts and Ida Pearl Baker, James A. Allen officiating.

Married, December 24, at the residence of James A. Allen, 900-B Sixteenth Avenue, South, this city, Lawrence Lester Townes and Mackie Poynor Parrish, James A. Allen officiating.

- S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's-day morning, and at night Andy T. Ritchie gave an account of the mission work he is doing under the auspices of the Russell Street congregation.
- W. E. Morgan, of Senatobia, Miss., preached at Eleventh Street, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Morgan was spending the holidays in the city visiting his daughter, Miss Maudie Morgan, who is a student at David Lipscomb College.

Price Billingsley, McMinnville, Tenn., December 20: "On the night of the first day of 1925 I am, the Lord willing, to begin the Florida meetings, at Mango. I am to be there two months, if present plans are followed. I am to preach at Haynesville, La., on the last Lord's day of the old year."

- D. Lipscomb, speaking of our transgressive brethren, said: "They promise work for the future. If we judge by the past here and elsewhere in the State, the work they will do will be to divide the churches already established and get possession of the houses others have built." (Gospel Advocate, May 16, 1901.)
- O. F. Shearer, Monticello, Ky., December 24: "Our protracted meeting has just closed. There were twenty-two additions, and the entire church was strengthened in faith and zeal. Emmett G. Creacy, of Horse Cave, Ky., did the preaching. Willie Miller, of Persimon, Ky., led the song service. The cause in this section continues to prosper."

The wedding of Mr. Herbert Asa Guy and Miss Hazel Annita Gentry was solemnized at the Russell Street church of Christ, this city, on Tuesday, December 23, at 8 P.M. A. B. Lipscomb officiated in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends. An artistic pre-nuptial musical program was rendered. We extend congratulations

A. S. Landis, Macon, Ga., December 15: "I preached at Hardie's Chapel, twenty miles from Macon, recently, on Sunday afternoon. One young lady made the confession. I went back and baptized her the next day. I always like to baptize 'straightway,' but they are not always prepared, and then I am always glad to do it when they are ready."

- H. D. Jeffcoat, Ackerman, Miss., December 8: "I am at Duffee in a meeting. John P. Lewis came here last July and had nineteen additions, and now I am here preaching in a nice, new meetinghouse; and they tell me that they have enough to finish it, and to paint, seat, and ceil it, and will only owe thirty-five dollars. I think this is fine. Only twenty-one members, nineteen of them 'babes.'"
- H. R. Daniel, Elkton, Ky., December 6: "I have held meetings at the following places this year: Mount Olive, Dickson County, Tenn., preached twenty-two sermons, had twenty-one additions; Union Hill, in Trigg County, Ky., twelve sermons, six additions; Old Bethel, in Simpson County, Ky., a mission point, no additions. I am prepared to preach all the time. I would be glad to have calls to hold meetings or regular work."

Many of our readers are sending us new subscribers. We very much appreciate their assistance. All our readers could so easily send us at least one new subscriber. In this way they would do good and also render great assistance to the Gospel Advocate. The Advocate is pleading for primitive Christianity. The good we can do is limited to the number of our readers. We urge each of our readers to send us a new subscriber.

- Will J. Cullum, Livingston, Tenn., December 30: "We have been in our new work here seven weeks, and things look encouraging. Our two-weeks' meeting closed with one baptism, one restoration, and one from the Christian Church. The Christian Church folks have a mau now in this territory to work with some congregations which have been loyel, but which are bordering on digression. We shall try to make it interesting for him."
- C. A. Taylor, Louisville, Ky., December 18: "It may be of interest to you to know that after a very pleasant year with the Bardstown Road congregation, of this city, F. L. Paisley has concluded that he must devote his entire time to evangelistic work, and it has been mutually agreed that his work with us will close on April 1, 1925. We are, for this reason, anxious to locate another good, young preacher, and will appreciate any suggestions you may be able to make."
- R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, advises that the church in that city is active in the work of the Master. Brother Smith says: "Our congregation is ever ready to show itself willing to meet every needed service. It is one of our specialties that the sick and needy be looked after in every necessary way, and we think it a very poor church that fails in this great and important work. My brethren, let us see to it that we practice personally the 'pure religion and undefiled.'"

Sister E. A. Elam, Lebanon, Tenn., December 22, to F. W. Smith: "I have just read your editorial in this week's Gospel Advocate, 'The Rich Man and Lazarus,' and desire to say that I enjoyed it very much. It is encouraging and comforting. The contrast you draw between the two characters is impressive and beautiful, filling one with desires to escape the destiny of the rich man and to so live as to have the angels near in death and to accompany the freed spirit to the place of rest enjoyed by Lazarus."

Some other Nashville appointments: John R. Hovious at Boscobel Street; Lytton Alley at Eighth Avenue, North; E. G. Cullum at Fifth Street; H. Leo Boles at Foster Street; John W. Beasley at Grandview Heights; E. B. Woodruff at Green Street; Roy Vaughn at Highland Avenue; H. M. Phillips at Lawrence Avenue; D. H. Davis at Old Hickory; J. E. Acuff at Pilcher Avenue; A. W. Jackson at Richland Creek; T. J. Warden at Sixth Avenue, North; W. S. Moody at Trinity Lane; Dr. J. S. Ward at Waverly-Belmont; T. L. McAnnally at Twelfth Avenue, North; and Kirk Ferguson at Twenty-second Avenue.

P. W. Stonestreet, Chattanooga, Tenn., December 26: "This is to express my appreciation and commendation of the sound teaching that has been done this year through the columns of the Gospel Advocate. Especially would I commend the emphasis that has been put on what the Holy Spirit, through the apostles, commands penitent believers to do to be saved. During 'Billy' Sunday's sojourn in your city, its manner of setting forth what inspired men taught on baptism is all the more impressive by contrast with the popular evangelist's refusal to preach it. So, in spite of his interdenominational campaign, good will no doubt result from it to the extent that the Gospel Advocate has been read in connection therewith, since it has wisely used the occasion for centering thought upon the truth, which is nondenominational. Best wishes for the coming New Year."

An early start is better than a quick step.

When a man puts his religion on display, he robs it of its power.

One difference between the talebearer and the tadpole is that the latter sometimes loses his tail.

Many criticize Jacob as a financial schemer who never give one-tenth of all they get to God, as Jacob did.

A. J. Veteto, Normal, Tenn., December 18: "I am ready to accept calls for meeting work or to teach singing."

The Gospel Advocate appreciates the many letters of encouragement and commendation it is continually receiving.

Brother Daniel, of Elkton, Ky., says: "I enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate. I think it is better now than it ever was."

S. P. Pittman being in Washington, D. C., at the request of Brother Larimore, E. S. Jelley filled Brother Pittman's place in Knoxville, Tenn., December 28,

Mrs. B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., December 22: "I am very sorry to say that Mr. Davis' condition is not any better. He is very sick at this writing."

Allen Phy, Dunmor, Ky., December 22: "I have just closed a short meeting at Big Reedy, in Edmonson County, Ky., with five baptisms. I closed my year's work with the church at Drakesboro, Ky., yesterday."

W. G. Wilson, Daylight, Tenn., December 22: "I have held three meetings in Sequatchie Valley, and baptized three persons. I preached one funeral. I am preaching all of the time. I want the brethren everywhere to write for me to hold meetings."

J. E. Wainwright, Corpus Christi, Texas, December 22: "The severe cold wave brought our meeting to an abrupt end. Good attendance and attention. One was baptized and ten were identified. Others are deeply interested. Three subtractions—two moved to San Antonio and one to Taft."

m. L. Bailey, Bradford, Ark., December 22: "I am always glad to get the Gospel Advocate, for it contains just the sort of material that provokes thought. After all, we are educated only to that extent that we are made to think, and no further. This sort of thinking is the surest, if not the only, way to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth."

Louis Underwood, Gorgas, Ala., December 19: "C. R. Nichol, of Clifton, Texas, began a meeting here on November 11 and continued it through November 23. Brother Aldridge, of Glen Allen, conducted the song services. Four were baptized—a husband and wife and two young ladies. Many people here who had not attended church services before seemed eager to come and hear the gospel. We enjoy each issue of the Gospel Advocate. May it grow better from time to time!"

Vernon Rozar, Fayetteville, Tenn., December 19: "I am still in the hospital, hut hope to leave here soon. I have decided that a warmer climate would be helpful to me; so I would like to locate in or south of Central Florida, where I can be busy preaching, and I prefer a rural or village location where I may truck, keep bees, or raise poultry. Only two of us in the family. Any brother wishing to write me may address me at Meridianville, Ala., Route 1. I will appreciate any correspondence."

Claud B. Thomas, Flint, Mich., December 22: "Although the ground was covered with a solid sheet of ice and the weather was very cold, we had very good atendance and two splendid services at the Mabel Avenue congregation yesterday. One took membership with us at the morning service. If any of the readers of the Gospel Advocate have friends or relatives, members of the church of Christ, living in this city, I would appreciate it very much if they would send me their names and addresses so that I may look them up and get them started to attending the worship."

Mrs. M. B. Sherrill, Evansville, Ind., December 22:

"The work with the church of Christ is moving along nicely here. Grover Dasher, of Louisville, Ky., preaches every first Lord's day. We have had two baptisms so far, both being heads of families. We meet regularly in a rented hall, corner of Fourth Avenue and East Franklin. Bible study at 10 A.M.; communion, 11 A.M. If any one having friends here will put us in touch with them, we will go to see them and make an effort to get them out. We are locating members all the time. I am sorry to say that some seem not to be interested."

L. M. Williams, Tulare, Cal., December 20: "On Sunday, November 29, a meeting began with the church in Tulare, and closed on Sunday evening, December 1, with Evangelist G. W. Riggs, of Los Angeles, doing the preaching. While there were no visible results in the way of additions to the church by confession and baptism, we feel that the members were strengthened and edified by the plain, forceful sermons. Two cast their lot with the congregation. We are planning other meetings in the near future in this part of the San Joaquin Valley, and we feel sure that good will result therefrom. Pray for us."

R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., December 23: "I preached at Chattanooga last Lord's day, morning and evening. I preached for the North Chattanooga congregation, in their new building, at eleven o'clock, with a large audience present. They have a splendid house to worship in. I preached for the Ridgedale congregation at night. Two ladies made the good confession and were baptized. The Ridgedale congregation is doing a good work. In spite of the rainy night, there were forty-four at the Bible drill last Friday night. I will preach for the North Chattanooga congregation next Lord's day, morning and evening. Claud Woodroof will be at Ridgedale."

George W. Miller, Chandler, Okla., December 21: "I came home with the snowstorm, December 18, from Cato, Mo., where I conducted a three-weeks' meeting, with eight confessions and baptisms and one restored to the Lord; and then near Crane, Mo., where I held another two-weeks' meeting, with three baptized and one restored. On that trip I went to Rocky Comfort, Mo., and visited my mother, Mrs. Eliza Miller, who is eighty-two years old. Brother Porter, of Bristow, Okla., was holding the Rocky Comfort meeting, with fifteen additions. I am now at home with my wife and children. I expect to hold a meeting at Jenkins, Mo., in January. It seems to me that the Gospel Advocate gets better."

Advocate gets better."

J. C. Mosley, Dongola, Ill., December 19: "I have been here for a few days, and will preach at Wetaug next Lord's day if the weather will permit. I have a sweet little boy to train up for the Lord, and I intend to do my best to make him humble and strong in the faith. Solomon said: 'Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.' Many peeple are training their children to go to shows, dances, prize fights, ball games, picnics, and everything in the line of revelry, thus cultivating their lusts and fanning their passions into a flame, and leading to a downfall in life and to hell after death. We shall reap what we sow. I think I will go to South Carolina in a few days to help Burton and Gibbs in their field."

Parter Norris, Roswell, New Mexico, December 19: "On and Gibbs in their field."

Porter Norris, Roswell, New Mexico, December 19: "On account of my health, I had to give up the work with the churches in West Tennessee. I am now giving all of my time to the church of Christ in Roswell. This church has had a hard time during the past year. One of the preaching brethren divided the church over the Sunday school and literature and took away about sixteen members. The church is at peace now, and we have had two additions since I came. If any one has any friends here who are not attending church, please let me know, and I will look them up. Since I came here the church has ordered sixty 'Choice Gospel Hymns,' and they are well pleased with them. I am going to do all I can for the Gospel Advocate, which I have been reading since I was thirteen years old, and which is getting better all the time. Brethren, pray for us, that we may stand firm for the pure gospel."

H. C. Shoulders, Barrackville, W. Va., December 27:

Brethren, pray for us, that we may stand firm for the pure gospel."

H. C. Shoulders, Barrackville, W. Va., December 27: "Sister Susan Ella, of Granville, Tenn., will celebrate her one hundredth birthday on the twentieth day of January, 1925. Sister Ella has been a member of the church seventy-seven or seventy-eight years. Possibly she is the oldest member of the church of Christ now living. I was to see her last September. While there, she informed me that she had been to the services several times during the past summer. She is not able to get to the meetinghouse without assistance, but some one takes her in a car when she is able to attend. She and her daughter, Sister Sarah Terry, live together. She is able to walk from her room to the dining room for her meals, and really prefers to do that. She can talk to any one about things that happened fifty, sixty, seventy, eighty, and ninety years ago, with much interest and ease. Old people appreciate very much being remembered in any kindly way. So let us all make her one hundredth birthday the happiest one of them all. Let each one who may read this account make a note of the time and send her a birthday card or some kindly remembrance. Please send early, that she may get it on or before the twentieth. Address Mrs. Susan Ella, Granville, Tenn." We urge all our readers to remember this dear old mother in Israel.

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order when changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears; if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription to paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

QUESTIONS TO BE AVOIDED.

BY E. A. ELAM.

(Continued from last week.)

Since the prophets themselves, who were filled with and spoke by the Holy Spirit, could not tell after diligent search what their own prophecies concerning the coming Christ and his suffering meant, there is no uninspired man on earth to-day who can give the meaning of any unfulfilled prophecy, as it is called, or time of its fulfillment, unless that has been already revealed.

Let us study the following:

Concerning which salvation the prophets sought and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what time or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did point unto, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glories that should follow them. To whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto you, did they minister these things, which now have been announced unto you through them that preached the gospel unto you by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven; which things angels desire to look into. (1 Pet. 1: 10-12.)

The salvation which the prophets foretold was that of sculs from sin now and in heaven through faith in Christ. This the prophets foretold, testifying "beforehand of the sufferings of Christ, and the glories that should follow them. They foretold that this grace and salvation should come unto the ones to whom Peter was writing-that is, to all who would accept Christ-and which were announced through the apostles, who "preached the gospel by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven." That which the prophets foretold was revealed unto them, but what the prophecies meant was not revealed. They sought and searched diligently the meaning of these things-" what time or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did point unto," when it testified beforehand of these things. But they did not learn how or when these things would be fulfilled. Even angels who desire to look into these things did not understand them.

Let us learn the truth from these facts. prophets did not understand the glorious things which they foretold and what time or what manner of time they would be fulfilled, yet they accepted them in full assurance of faith in God and patiently awaited their fulfillment in "the fullness of the times" of God's own purpose. Even when these things began to be fulfilled in a virgin of Galilee, a babe in a manger, a boy twelve years of age, a humble carpenter, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, a victim of slander and abuse, a crown of thorns, a shameful death on the cross between two thieves, a triumphant resurrection, a glorious ascension and coronation in heaven, it must still be revealed by Christ and by the Holy Spirit that in this way all these and other things foretold by the prophets were being fulfilled. All this being true, how can fallible and uninspired men presume to say how and when God intends to fulfill the prophecies which he has made, but has not yet fulfilled? We know, as the prophets of old, that God has made unfulfilled prophecies of wonderful things to come, and we believe them with the whole heart, and we know through perfect trust in God that, according to his own purpose and in his own time and wisdom and way, he will fulfill them; but we do not know and cannot presume to teach that which God has not revealed-that is, how and when he will do this. That is making ourselves wise above "that which is written."

We, then, should be deeply impressed with the truth that all men of faith to-day accept fully all God's promises and prophecies of future events and blessings, knowing fully that they will be fulfilled according to his will. Men of faith accept these things in blessed assurance whether or not they can search out the time and way of their fulfillment. If men cannot accept these promises and prophecies until they know when and how they will be fulfilled, they lack faith in God. Such are not men of faith. On the other hand, if men believe these prophecies and promises, although God has not revealed when and how they will be fulfilled, it is presumption in them to attempt to tell.

Let it be remembered that the Jews rejected Jesus as the Messiah because he did not fulfill the many prophecies concerning himself according to their notions and desires as to how and when they would be fulfilled. Is it not quite probable that some to-day may interpret unfulfilled prophecy according to their notions and desires of how they should be fulfilled? Men of faith fear to speculate or to venture to give an opinion concerning unfulfilled prophecy, because this may prove contrary to the will of God, and, therefore, displeasing to him; because this shows a lack of faith in God and Christ; because this may stand in the way of the acceptance of the truth on the part of many; and because they may miss the mark as far as the Jews missed it in their conceptions of what the fulfillment of all the prophets foretold concerning the Christ and his kingdom would be. With these things before us, we feel with great force the danger and wrong in vain attempts to look into and to teach unrevealed things. Another most fearful thing is that these speculations concerning unrevealed things, as the how and when unrevealed prophecy will be fulfilled, are taught with all assurance as the will of God. Never a man rode a hobby or persisted in teaching his notions and speculations about anything who did not come to believe these are the veritable will of God and that he would be lost if he did not teach them, and the world would be lost if it did not receive them. On the other hand, if salvation does not depend on such things, then no man should teach them and no church should want them taught. All-both preachers and churchesshould see and feel the wrong of teaching things not essential to salvation. Herein is sin. What about angels desiring to look into these things? "Which things" concerning Christ's first advent into the world and which the Holy Spirit foretold through the prophets "angels desire to look into." This expresses the wonderful interest angels have in the redemption of men through Jesus Christ in all that he was and is. There was a time when Christ was not on earth. "The Word" was in the beginning with God, "and the Word was God." "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us." (John 1: 1, 2, 14.) These and all similar declarations are wonderful, extending from the coming of the Messiah to the glories of heaven. The prophets who foretold these things did not understand the how and the when they would be fulfilled and the angels desire to look into them. Some things angels do not know; one is the day and the hour of the second coming of Christ. Since angels do not know how God would be manifested in the flesh, or the how the Word would become flesh and dwell among us, it is vain for uninspired and fallible men to attempt to tell how and when prophecies and promises concerning the second coming of Christ will be fulfilled. All that God has revealed concerning these things should be studied and taught with the deepest interest and most joyous hope, but beyond this men dare not go. When Christ came the first time, angels were then sent by Jehovah to announce this great truth to men and to do much for Jesus in different ways from the manger to his coronation in heaven. He himself declared: "Ye shall see the heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." (John 1: 51.) Angels then saw how all these wonderful prophecies concerning the redemption of men through the Word made flesh were being fulfilled and were sent by Jehovah to announce this wonderful truth. prophets and the angels, all the faithful in Christ Jesus now will steadfastly and hopefully await the second coming of Christ, and will then see the fulfillment of the righteous purpose and will of God in this second coming. In faith and hope and love they have no fears but that all the prophecies and promises of God will be kept and fulfilled in due season. This is a matter of simple and pure, supreme and sublime faith.

The Lord's Supper is a standing and lasting pledge from God that Christ will come again. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink the cup, ye proclaim the Lord's death till he come." (1 Cor. 11: 26.) Christians by thousands proclaim their faith in the second coming of Christ every Lord's day in partaking of the Lord's Supper, and otherwise on that day and through the week as well. It is belittling the Lord's Supper and those who in faith and leve and hope so greatly delight in partaking of it to say the church has lost faith in the second coming of Christ.

It is also a miserable misrepresentation of the faith, hope, and love of God's children to-day to accuse them of not believing in the second coming of Christ because they do not accept all the theories and vagaries different men may see fit to preach on the subject, as if they were the very oracles of God. Many of these are conflicting, and, therefore, cannot all be true, to say the least of them. Christians believe every word in the Bible concerning the second coming of Christ, while in faith they reject all the theories, notions, and empty teaching of men on this most wonderful and all-glorious coming event.

"WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED?" BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

Of all the questions that have been asked and answered, there are none of as much importance to lost men as the one at the head of this article. Mr. Sunday preached over six weeks in the city of Nashville before eaching this important question. During the last week e came to it and devoted one evening to it; but with ill that he said, he did not answer the question in harsony with the language of the Savior when he gave the ommission to the apostles as recorded by Mark. lunday said:

Therefore, I say, "What must I do to be saved from the punishment—from hell?" That's what salvation means. The party who has the right and the power to inflict the punishment has the right and power to state the conditions upon which you can escape it. The sovereign power of the State has the right and the power to electrocute, to put you behind bars, if you violate a law. She has the right and power to state the condition upon which you can escape. She is the only power that can. The same power that has the right to inflict punishment can let you escape that punishment, my friends. The Governor can turn the key and let every man out of the State prison if he wants to. Why? He is the sovereign power to do that. He is the only man that has the power.

Then, when we violate God's law, he has the reversed. upon which you can escape it. The sovereign power of

Then, when we violate God's law, he has the power and right to inflict the punishment, to state the condition upon which you can escape it. He has stated it to humanity. It is by faith in Jesus Christ. I say to you, it is Jesus Christ and nothing else, for every man or woman on God's earth.

"What must I do to be saved from the punishment?" Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Trust his willingness, trust his power, and you will be saved.

Mr. Sunday is right when he says that God has the right to say upon what conditions the sinner can be saved. This authority was inherent in God as the Creator of man. No one gave the authority to God, for he already had it; but he delegated that authority to his Son. "And Jesus came to them and spake unto them, saying, All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 18-20.) Mr. Sunday would have been right if he had said that God did have the authority to state the conditions upon which the sinner can be saved, but after the resurrection he gave that authority to his Son, and likewise the Sen conferred it upon his apostles.

Mark (16: 15, 16) records this same commission in these words: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." This commission is the fundamental law of the kingdom. It is the constitution of the new kingdom which Christ set up on the earth. As the Ten Commandments were the basic law of the commonwealth of Israel, so this commission is the basic law of the church of Christ. As every law of the United States must be in harmony with the Constitution, so every law that was enacted in the kingdom of Christ was in harmony with the provisions of this commission. It will be noted that this commission affirms that some one shall be saved. Who is that some one? "He shall be saved." He who shall be saved? "He that believeth shall be saved." I deny that this commission as recorded by Mark says that. "He shall be saved." He who shall be saved? "He that is baptized shall be saved." That commission does not say so; but it does say, "He that believeth and is buptized shall be saved." I contend that a preacher who tells an alien sinner that he can be saved without complying with the conditions of this commission makes the same mistake that a lawyer would make if he should tell a foreigner that he can become a citizen of the United States without complying with the provisions of the Constitution. "But," says some one, "Mr. Sunday quoted the scriptures that prove that a sinner can be saved without complying with all of the conditions of this commission." If he did this, any one should know that something is wrong somewhere; for the New Testament does not contradict itself, and no apostle ever preached salvation on less or different conditions than the Savior authorized him to do in this commission.

But hear Mr. Sunday further:

The jailer came with a light and said: "I'm from Missouri; show me."

He couldn't imagine why anybody would be there when he had a chance to escape; and when he discovered that

Paul was right, he cried out in the words of my text: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

"You've got something I haven't got. How did you get it? I want it. Tell me what you did, and I am willing to do whatever you tell me to do. Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

And Paul replied: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

If there had been any other way, Paul would have told him. There is not and never will be any, so I bring you the words as they fell from the lips of Paul in response to the heart-rending cry of the jailer whose sword Paul stayed from committing suicide.

Everybody, I suppose, knows that the jailer did not say: "I am from Missouri; show me." Jokes of this kind add nothing to the strength of Mr. Sunday's preaching, and they are an appeal to the irreligious element. But the jailer did say: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" they said: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Mr. Sunday is right when he says if there had been any other way to be saved, except through Christ, Paul would have told him. But I ask, why did Mr. Sunday stop where he did? The record does not stop there, and why should he? If Paul had stopped where Mr. Sunday did, the jailer could not have obeyed the command that Paul had given him. It will be remembered that the jailer was a heathen, and, therefore, knew nothing of God or of Christ. How could he have believed on the Lord Jesus Christ without knowing something about him? How could he have known him, if Paul had stopped with the command to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ? On another occasion Paul wrote: "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" (Rom. 10: 13, 14.) The preacher was present with the jailer all right, but Mr. Sunday cut him off, so far as his sermon was concerned, before he let him preach. The jailer had been told to believe; but could he believe if Paul had stopped where Mr. Sunday did? Hear Paul again: "So belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.) What word of God had the jailer heard when Mr. Sunday stopped his quotation? Neither Mr. Sunday nor his admirers can say that he stopped because the subject changed, for, as a matter of fact, this is not true. The verses following the one Mr. Sunday quoted read: "And they spoke the word of the Lord unto him, with all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, immediately." (Verses 32, 33.) If I should be asked where he took them, I would answer that he took them to where there was water; for he washed their stripes, a thing he could not have done without water. But before the history of the conversion of this jailer closes there is one other verse, and to complete the record I here insert that: "And he brought them up into his house, and set food before them, and rejoiced greatly, with all his house, having believed in God." (Verse 34.) So the jailer not only believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, but he was baptized, and, therefore, had the promise of the commission, which says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." No wonder he rejoiced after having done all that the commission requires.

Billy Sunday said: "I have never preached on baptism, and never expect to do so." But it is a pity that any man will cut an inspired man off and not allow him to give his full testimony in as important a thing as, "What must I do to be saved?" I wonder how Brethren Carey E. Morgan and J. J. Walker can indorse a man that will treat an inspired historian as Billy Sunday did when preaching on "What must I do to be saved?" I wonder if they think this is all right. If they do, I must say they are casily pleased. Speaking of unity, you can always get it by sacrificing the truth.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. No. 3.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The history regarding the rich man continues as follows: "And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am in anguish in this flame." The expression, "Father Abraham," leads us to conclude that the rich man was a Jew, n fleshly descendant of the grand old patriarch; for, in so far as the record goes, none save Jews referred to Abraham as "father." (John 8: 39; Matt. 3: 9.) Hence, being a Jew, he had enjoyed opportunities and privileges for knowing and doing the will of God that left him without any excuse for his present predicament on the ground of ignorance. Moreover, his cries were vain and useless, because th y were made too late, and made to the wrong person. His cries for mercy should have been made while he lived in this world, and they should have gone up to God, who alone could have extended the mercy he needed.

The request the rich man now makes is seemingly a very small one-just so much water as would cling to a finger tip; but the great, loving heart of old Abraham, who would, no doubt, have gladly responded in sending Lazarus with the requested drop of water, is powerless to do so. The man who was rich in this world is now a pitiable beggar, and begs from the man who was poor and laid at his gate without food or bed.

CHANGED CONDITIONS.

Before Abraham gives the reason for his inability to grant the once rich man's request, he pictures the changed condition of both the rich man and Lazarus. "But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and Lazarus in like manner evil things: but now here he is comforted, and thou art in anguish."

Now, we may not know why Abraham reminded the rich man of these changed conditions, but we can understand that man carries with him into the other world his memory, and that he is conscious of what he had and what he did in this life. The rich man in torment could see himself as he was in this world, surrounded by every luxury that his fleshly appetites could desire, and he could also see the wretched condition of men and women that he could have relieved. He could see the diseased body of the beggar at his gate day by day, asking only for crumbs, with none save dogs as his companions. We can also understand how such reflections must have intensified the sufferings of the rich man.

This is not a fanciful picture drawn as a dramatic coloring to some human fiction, but it is a solemn reality. There are a number of instances of conscious intelligence and recollection of memory on the part of those who lived in this world. Samuel, the old judge of Israel, came back with a message to the wicked and God-forsaken Saul. (1 Sam. 28: 15-19.) Moses and Elijah came back and talked with Christ on the mount of transfiguration. (Luke 9: 28-31.) The apostle Paul tells of a man who "was caught up into Paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter." (See 2 Cor. 12: 2-4.)

It would, no doubt, be a great boon to multiplied thousands who go out of this world if they could only forget. If they could blot from memory the wicked words and deeds of their lives and cease to remember the many calls and warnings of God's word which eternally ring in the ears of the doomed! But alas! Memory, that great archive of human events, the imperishable record of thoughts, words, and deeds, will haunt the incorrigibly wicked throughout the countless cycles of eternity.

AN IMPASSABLE GULF.

"And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, that they that would pass from hence to you may not be able, and that none may cross over from thence to us." From this we learn that not only is there no mixing and mingling of saints and sinners in the world to come, but, no matter how willing and anxious the saved may be to help the lost, it cannot be done. Now, if the saints in glory cannot help the lost, how can prayers by the living for the dead benefit them?

What we desire to do for men and women must be done while they and we live, or else it cannot be done at all. No matter how beautiful and fragrant the flowers may be that we loy upon the grave, nor how polished and costly the shaft we erect to mark it, the dead derive no benefit from such deeds. One kind word spoken to the depressed and sad-hearted and one kindly deed done to the needy are worth more than a wilderness of roses laid upon the grave or a quarry of marble when that soul has gone to the beyond.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Just across Pennsylvania Avenue from the front lawn of the White House is Lafayette Square, one of the most pleasant of the summer loitering places in this pleasant city, with its trees of native growth, its shrubbery, its graveled and concrete walks, its flowers, birds and squirrels-a bit of the real country in the midst of busy city streets to delight the eyes and refresh the spirits of nature lovers. It is indeed a pleasant place to rest and watch at least a part of the world go by. The four corners of Lafayette Square are dedicated to the memory of four foreign heroes who helped us in our struggle for independence in Revolutionary days, a handsome bronze group of Lafayette and some of his compatriots ornamenting the southeast corner, one of Rochambeau on the southwest corner, Baron Von Steuben on the northwest, and Kosciusko on the northeast, Walks traverse the Square diagonally, from the corners to the center, where they meet in the circle surrounding the central statue of the Square-an equestrian statue of Gen. Andrew Jackson, a landmark intimately associated with earlier days of Washington City. However much or little merit it may possess as a work of art, it has considerable historic value, being the second equestrian statue executed and set up in the United States, and the oldest one now remaining. The first statue so executed and erected was the statue of George III., set up at the foot of Broadway, New York, in 1770, with ceremonies which then seemed suitable to the occasion, and taken down in July, 1776, probably with ceremonies that seemed at that time to fit the occasion. I have heard that that statue was molded into bullets by the colonists, who tore it down and used it in meeting and properly entertaining the soldiers King George sent over to subdue his unruly

The second equestrian statue executed and erected in the United States has retained its place longer—much longer—than the first one. It was modeled by Clark Mills, an American sculptor, born in New York, in 1815, the year of Jackson's victory at New Orleans in the War of 1812. He became a plasterer by trade, but, during a residence in South Carolina, he showed so much promise as a sculptor that friends contributed a purse to enable him to go to Europe to study. Passing through Washington on his way abroad, just at the time Congress was considering erecting a statue to General Jackson, he was urged by friends to undertake the work. He had never seen General Jackson, nor had he ever seen an equestrian statue; hence, he felt a modest reluctance to accept the work. But he finally embodied his idea of the statue in a small model and exhibited it to the committee named to look after the work, and it was promptly accepted. A contract was made by which Mills was to have twelve thousand dollars for the work, Congress to furnish the bronze for the statue. Mills made the plaster cast, and Congress, after a long wait, appropriated for the bronze the old cannon captured by General Jackson.

The conception of the statue was original, and Mills did the work of casting it in bronze himself, all the necessary appliances being of his own invention and construction. He encountered many disheartening experiences—the breaking of cranes, bursting of furnaces, and other trials—but he finally triumphed. The statue was accepted, and was set, with appropriate ceremonies, January 8, 1853, the thirty-eighth anniversary of Jackson's victory at New Orleans. It depicts Jackson in the picturesque costume of his day, reining his rearing steed with one hand, while with the other he doffs his hat presumably to admiring spectators—a rather difficult feat for many, but seemingly very easy for "Old Hickory."

Mills claimed that the steed was modeled directly from nature, he himself having taught his equine model to rear and remain in that position long enough for his attitude to be caught. As to General Jackson, those who remembered the hero of the War of 1812 claimed that the likeness was both faithful and spirited. The sculptor claimed that the center of gravity had been so perfectly attained in the position of the horse and its rider that the group would reat securely on the hind feet of the restless charger without any support whatsoever. A statue of Philip IV., of Spain, in a public square in Madrid, has the same equipoise. For safety against the possible effect of high winds or other disturbing influences, however, the statue is bolted to the base through the hind feet of the horse.

Congress was so much pleased with the statue when completed by Mills that twenty thousand dollars additional was voted as compensation to him, and soon thereafter he received from Congress fifty thousand dollars for an equestrian statue of George Washington, which ornaments Washington Square here.

A peculiar interest centers about this statue of General Jackson because occasional efforts have been made to induce Congress to order its removal to Washington Square and the placing of the equestrian statue of Washington in Lafayette Square-that is, the exchange of the two statues. Some art critics attack the Jackson statue, referring to it disrespectfully as "Andy on his rockinghorse," declaring it to be anything but an artistic piece of work, and considerable agitation arises over the proposed change; but Southern members of Congress, and especially those who hail from Tenuessee, put in such serious objection to the proposed removal of the Jackson statue that the question is dropped, the agitation subsides, and Andy remains in peaceful possession of his vantage ground in front of the Executive Mansion. They may finally move him, but he was never very easily moved; and, having held its place now more than threescore and ten years, I trust the statue may remain in the center of Lafayette Square, and that future Presidents. walking to the front door of their temporary habitation in this beautiful city, may continue to see the gallant figure of "Old Hickory" waving cordial greeting from the back of his prancing steed.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

The Lord will never forsake the righteous.

A train of thought never arrives anywhere if it is running local.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

It's a compliment when you receive it, but flattery when the other fellow gets it.—Greenville Piedmont.

A model husband is one who is as nice to his wife in private as he is in public.—Muskegon Chronicle.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

In the issue of this paper of December 25, page 1247, in the first column and in the first paragraph in the reply to the queries concerning divorce, some mistakes occur. I should have said: "The Congress of the United States, the Legislature of any State, the king of any country, cunnot separate husband and wife before God." A few lines below that a few sentences are so mixed that the reader will have to guess at what was meant.

Brother Elam: In the Gospel Advocate of October 23 you say that "Timothy was inspired." (1) How did he receive inspiration—by baptism of the Holy Spirit or by the laying on of hands? (2) Were inspired men cummanded to study? (3) Were they commanded to give attendance to reading, exhortation, doctrine? (4) Was Titus inspired? (5) What is meant by the expression, "common faith?" (6) Did either Timothy or Titus perform miracles? As you are one of the editors of the Advocate and I a subscriber of the same and in search of information, I request an answer to these questions.

T. D. Willis.

1. Timothy had a degree of inspiration by the laying on of Paul's hands (2 Tim. 1: 6) or the hands of the presbytery (1 Tim. 4: 14.) There were different gifts, or measures, of the Spirit, from that of speaking in "divers kinds of tongues" to that of the apostolic measure. This can be learned from 1 Cor. 12 and Eph. 4: 4-16. The same gifts were not bestowed upon the same persons. These gifts were given by the Spirit, and were, therefore, by inspiration. These gifts continued until "that which is perfect" came, or the complete will of God had been made known.

"Inspire" means to breathe in, and "inspired of God" means to breathe in from God or to be guided by the Spirit of God in teaching and writing the truth. David says: "The Spirit of Jehovah spoke by me, and his word was upon my tongue." (2 Sam. 23: 2.) "Men spoke from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1: 21; see, also, 1 Pet. 1: 10, 11.) Jesus said the Spirit would teach the apostles all things, bring to their remembrance all things which he had said to them (John 14: 26), and guide them into all the truth (John 16: 13). The gospel was preached "by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven." (1 Pet. 1: 12.) The apostles spoke "with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Acts 2: 4.) Paul did not learn the gospel from men, nor was he taught it by men, but it was revealed to him by the Lord. (Gal. 1: 15-17; 1 Cor. 11: 23.) These passages show what inspiration is.

Paul spoke sometimes without inspiration, and told when he did so. (1 Cor. 7: 12; 2 Cor. 11: 17.) The apostles were not always miraculously filled with the Spirit. (Acts 4: 8.) Peter made a mistake and did wrong, when Paul reproved him to his face. (Gal. 2: 11-14.) Peter was not inspired when he did this.

God does not do for men that which they can do for themselves. Inspiration did not save the apostles or any other man, or even Jesus, from temptation, self-denial, and the use of all means of growth and spiritual development. Neither did inspiration give knowledge of the will of God, which could be obtained by the study of the scriptures already given. Jesus, the apostles, and inspired evangelists knew and quoted freely the prophets to prove the claims of Jesus to be the Christ. Inspiration guided them in understanding and making proper application of these prophecies. David, although inspired, sinned, struggled against sin, and laid the word of God up in his heart, that he might not sin. (Ps. 119: 11.)

Paul conferred with Peter, James, and John, having gone up to Jerusalem by revelation, or the direction of God, lest by any means he should be running or had run in vain in preaching the gospel to the Gentiles; but they imparted to him nothing and gave to him and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship to go unto the Gentiles. (Gal. 2: 1-10.) Paul was ready and willing to learn from these men. Peter read and referred to Paul's teaching. (2 Pet. 3: 15, 16.)

Timothy did not have the degree of inspiration which Paul had but had to learn the truth, and was commanded by Paul to read and study the Scriptures and to commit that which he had learned to faithful men who could teach others also. Philip, the evangelist, was inspired, and evangelists were among the inspired list of teachers.

Nothing is said about Titus' having any spiritual gift. His work may imply his inspiration to the degree that it was needed to guide him in it.

Since the complete will of God has been revealed there has been no further need of inspiration, and, as the Lord teaches, there has been none.

Questions 2, 3, 4 are also answered in the above.

5. The "common faith" is faith all Christians have—common to all. Peter had "a like precious faith," or "equally precious faith." (2 Pet. 1: 1.)

6. There is no account of either Timothy's or Titus' working miracles.

0 0 0

Brother G. R. Long, of Paducah, Ky., asks if Matt. 24: 19—and, therefore, the facts predicted by the Savior in verses 15-28—refers to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, or is it yet to be fulfilled?

This refers to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans.

0 0 0

A brother asks an explanation of 1 Tim. 2: 12 through 'these columns.

It means that women are not permitted by the Lord to teach or have dominion over a man, but must be in quietness. Verse 11 says: "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection." 1 Cor. 14: 34 says: "But let them be in subjection, as also saith the law." The reason given by the Lord for this quietness and subjection is: "For Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not beguiled, but the woman being beguiled hath fallen into transgression." Also, "the husband is the head of the wife, as Christ is the head of the church" (Eph. 5: 23); or, "the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God" (1 Cor. 11: 3). But in quietness and subjection women may teach a man, as Priscilla with her husband taught the eloquent Apollos. While the wife is not the head of her husband, many good wives in quietness and subjection have taught their husbands many good lessons in economy, business affairs, and the entire will of God. The New Testament explains how Christian wives can teach and win their unbelieving husbands, even, to the Lord. On this point read 1 Pet. 3: 1-6. And as Priscilla with Aquila taught Apollos (Acts 18: 24-28), so should women now, when competent to do so, in quietness and subjection teach men; but they must not attempt to do so as the head and leader of men or in the congregation-that is, in the church when assembled for public edification. On this read 1 Cor. 14: 26-36.

In studying the Bible in regard to any work of women or of men, or in regard to any subject, we should not allow our preferences or prejudices, our notions and theories, to carry us from one extreme to another or to extremes at all. All we desire to know and to do is the will of our God.

4 4 4

Please answer, through the Gospel Advocate: When we meet on the first day of the week for the worship of God and no brother is present to conduct the service, would it be a greater sin to go home without partaking of the Lord's Supper or for some sister to wait upon the table, offering thanks and conducting the entire service? We want to do our duty, but do not want to do anything contrary to the New Testament. I have read 1 Cor. 14: 34. I think the Gospel Advocate is the most helpful paper I have ever taken.

MRS. LENA THOMPSON.

Wishing not to do anything contrary to the will of God is the only true spirit—the spirit of Christ. We have the blessed assurance from Christ that when we purpose and determine to do God's will—that is, will to do God's will—we shall be able to learn that will, and, therefore, to distinguish the difference between the teaching of men and the teaching of Christ. (John 7: 16, 17.)

Sins should not be compared in order to commit the less. Sin in this sense is sin and should not be committed at all. If it be sin for sisters, when no brother is present, to conduct the service, then the sin should not be committed. The sin in the brethren's failing to be present in the worship of God, when not present because of failure, cannot justify any other sin. The proper question is, in such case, is it sin at all for the sisters to proceed with the service, some of them leading? I do not think so. There is nothing unscriptural in the sisters' proceeding with the worship when no man is present.

IF WE WILL, WE MAY HAVE A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

(David Lipscomb, in Gospel Advocate, January 2, 1889.)

We begin a new year. Every one should grow better with each passing year. Each passing year should add wisdom and strength, virtue and holiness, to our lives and our characters. A growth in strength and stature of the mind and spirit should take place. A growth in grace and in the knowledge of the truth must be promoted if we would be blessed. Blessing or cursing we must receive. We will receive the one or the other as we may be fitted for it. Our lives here must be a schooling that fits us for blessing or cursing. We ought not to wait for the beginning of a year to turn from evil and follow good. A resolve to do better that postpones the change to the future is a delusion and a snare of the devil. If a man has earnestness enough to reform, he will not postpone another week or another day. He will begin now.

But while we should not postpone the change to begin with the year, still, as the new year is upon us, is now here, and serves to remind us of the swiftly passing time, and directs our minds to the future, we should let it admonish us of the necessity of so improving our time that there may be a continual growth in our characters into a fitness for our permanent and eternal home. "Though a sinner do evil a hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that it shall be well with them that fear God, which feer before him: but it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God." (Eccles. 8: 12, 13.) It is supreme folly for men to rush headlong in a course that leads to evil and ruin. Let us think soberly, and ask ourselves, whither are we going? Let us act wisely, that it may be well with us now and fcrever.

With the beginning of this new year, let us deliberately and soberly determine that we will do better this year than we have ever done before. Let our determination take a simple, prosaic, practical turn. The foundation of all true goodness is a knowledge of the divine will. The word of God is the seed of the kingdom of heaven. No good fruit can ever be produced in the lives of men that does not spring from the word of God in the heart.

Let each one of us determine to study the word of God more faithfully than we have done heretofore. Let us not merely read it more—there is a careless, flippant running over it that does not study it—but let us earnestly study it, strive to understand its meaning, and ponder and treasure it in our hearts. If we get the word of God into our hearts and treasure it there, it will influence and control our lives. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth will speak, and "out of it are the issues of life."

Connected with the diligent and faithful study of the word of God, let us determine to be more constant and carnest in prayer. Let us all cultivate the habit of prayer—earnest, true, faithful prayer, not merely a formal saying of prayers. If we cultivate the habit of short, direct, earnest prayer for help in things we need, we will be blessed. Our faith will grow stronger, our nearness to God will become apparent, our enjoyment of his presence will be real and hearty, we will drink into the true spirit of devotion, and we will soon find our truest joy and purest happiness in the service of God. It alone will give a true joy that will abide with us forever. This union with God will lift us above the fortuities and troubles of life and will link us to God forever.

We cannot be true to God without doing our duty to ourselves. Our duty is to restrain our passions and appetites within proper limits. It is to be temperate, to cultivate good habits, to depart from all evil habits that defile and injure the body or that cause us to spend time and money foolishly. No Christian man should use intoxicants or narcotics. No Christian man should use whisky or tobacco. The former is ruinous and degrading in its influences; the latter is filthy, expensive, offensive to others, and injurious to ourselves. Let us be men and refrain from that which benefits none, but which injures and defiles. Let us use healthful and nutritious food. Let us not be gluttons. These things are greatly matters of habit. Let us in our dress be neat and tasteful, be cleanly in our person, dress, and houses, but simple and economical. Excess of dress, costliness of dress, display and show are all in bad taste, hurtful to us, disable us from doing good to others, and are offensive to God. Let us be industrious and economical in our habits. Let us avoid debt, speculation, and anxiety for riches; for they involve in trouble, bring anxiety, care, and embarrassment, destroy all true peace of mind, and involve our souls in eternal ruin. Let us live within our means, and make no false pretense, no false show, for the debtor is the slave of the creditor. Let us not only be just in keeping out of debt and discharging all our obligations to our fellow men, but let us be kind to the poor, helpful to the needy, ready to do good to all men as opportunity offers. Let us be attentive to our church duties. Let us be faithful, cheerful, and prompt in our attendance on the Lord's services, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, but let us feel an interest in what is done, bear a part, and seek to help along and render the services interesting and profitable to all. Let us indulge in no carping criticism and faultfinding with others. Let us seek to see the good, to appreciate it, and get and give all the good we can from these services. Let us not be niggardly in giving to the Lord; for he loves a cheerful giver, and will make all good abound to those who freely give to him. Let us regularly contribute a portion of our gains to his cause, help those preaching the gospel in needy places, and in our owo sphere and associations, by precept and example, teach our (wo families, neighbors, and associates the way of life. If we will pursue this course, faithfully persevere in these plain, practical, homely, everyday duties, we will grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, and we will have the best, happiest, most joyful year of our lives while it is passing, and then its full fruits of joy and happiness will be reaped in eternity. Shall this new year be a happy new year to us all-happy in its heginning, happy in its continuance, happy in its remembrance through time and eternity? If we will, we may have a year bappy and joyful. God will give to us just what we earnestly desire and seek in this.

HOME READING

THE MOTHER WATCH.

She never closed her eyes in sleep till we were all in bed. On party nights till we came home she often sat and read. We little thought about it then, when we were young and gay,

How much the mother worried when we children were away. We only knew she never slept when we were out at night, And that she waited just to know that we'd come home all

Why, sometimes when we'd stayed away till one or two or three, It seemed to us that mother heard the turning of the key; For always when we stepped inside she'd call, and we'd

But we were all too young back then to understand just why, Until the last one had returned she always kept a light, For mother couldn't sleep until she'd kissed us all good

She had to know that we were safe before she went to

She seemed to fear the world might harm the ones she loved the best.

And once she said: "When you are grown to women and to men,

Perhaps I'll sleep the whole night through; I may be different then."

And so it seemed that night and day we knew a mother's care, That always when we got back home we'd find her waiting

Then came the night that we were called to gather round

"The children all are with you now," the kindly doctor

And in her eyes there gleamed again the old-time tender

That told that she had been waiting just to know we were

She smiled the old, familiar smile, and prayed to God to keen

Us safe from harm throughout the years, and then she went to sleep. -Selected. 0 0 0

CLARA'S JOURNEY.

Girls of twelve don't get many letters addressed to themselves, with an invitation to visit an uncle and a twentydollar check to cover expenses.

These delightful things happened to Clara. Do you wonder that she danced up and down with joy when she read it? There was one sentence in the letter which read: "Or, if there is something else you had much rather use the money for, dear little Clara, you may do so. I want you to enjoy it all you possibly can in your own fashion."

With joyous feet the little girl skipped into the kitchen to tell her mother. Outside, Clara had been so happy that she had almost forgotten the heat; but the furnace warmth of the little kitchen reminded her.

"I don't need you just now, little girl. You'd best stay outside a bit longer; it's dreadfully warm in here."

Clara looked at her mother's tired face and forgot her good news.

"When are you going to order the fireless, mother?"

"I don't suppose we can this summer, dear. Yes, I know we planned to, but the baby's being ill so long, at such a great expense, has made it impossible."

"Uncle Harry has invited me to see him, mother. He sent me a twenty-dollar check," said Clara, soberly, holding out the check for mother's inspection.

Mother's sweet face lighted up. "That's lovely, dear. I'm awfully glad for you to get out into the country. It will do you good, and I am sure you will have a good time at Uncle Harry's."

"Yes, mother; but who'll help you with the baby? so cross these warm days."

"Never mind, Clara," came the answer, after the fashion of mothers. "Mother'll manage, somehow."

"She'll just about work herself to death," Clara reflected, as with slow steps she sought the swing-her "thinking place," she expressed it. In the swing the blue sky smiled at you, the little green leaves whispered the nicest things to you, and the birds sang: "Be happy! Be happy!"

"How can I be happy," asked Clara, "when mother works herself to death, and hasn't any fireless cooker these hot days?"

And then an idea popped into her mind. It was such a big idea that it almost bounced her out of the swing.

"Why, I could give mother a fireless if I wanted to."

"Yes, but you'd have to stay at home," somebody seemed to sav.

"I could have the best time at Uncle Harry's," Clara reflected. "I'd have some new dresses and ribbons to wear, and I'd play in the hay and eat peaches and ride the colt bareback. I want to go."

"And mother would roast in the kitchen, and be worn out at the day's end with the care of the baby and all the other things she has to do."

"So you are going to Uncle Harry's?" her father reminded the solemn child who walked with him to the gate after dinner.

" No, daddy."

"What, not going? What better thing have you found to spend your money for?"

"A fireless for mother. Here is the check. I know it will buy a nice one. Please get it this afternoon."

Her father gave her a long, square look. "You are right sure you want to do this?"

"Yes, daddy."

Her father swung her up into his arms, held her very tight, and kissed her. Then he took the check and walked away. When the fireless came home, mother put her head down on it and cried; and when Clara tried to comfort her, she kissed the little daughter many times.

"My dear, dear little girl!" was what she said.

"So our little one prefers to play Lady Bountiful," Uncle Harry wrote in answer to mother's explanatory letter. "Well, I'm sure she couldn't have thought of a better use for her money. I'm coming to your town in August, and I want to bring her back with me. However, she already had her best journey to the Land of Self-forgetfulness and Thought for Other Folks."

"I don't quite understand Uncle Harry, mother," Clara commented, "but I know I'm happy."-Ruth C. Milam.

0 0 0

THE CHURCH IS A HOLY PLACE.

God is everywhere present, and particularly so in his church, and, knowing this as we do, we should respect and reverence the holy house of God.

We have six days in the week in which to gossip, and it would seem that we could spend a few hours on Sundays in God's house in silence and prayer.

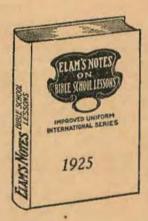

We are Sunday after Sunday making out of the church of God a place of exchange of secular things in a verbal way.

It should be remembered that God is ever present in the church, and the world should keep in silence before him.

It is very common these days to hear persons refer to the church as an auditorium. If such ignorant persons would consult their dictionary, they would find that a church and an auditorium are two separate and distinct buildings, having no relation whatever to each other.

However, for such persons it would be far better if the church were an auditorium, as the latter would fit their manner of worship and deportment more so than the dignity and holiness of a church.-Harry Daniels.

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x5½ inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Hible teacher now living.—
R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound.—N. B. Hardeman.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits.—H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me.

—Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

From the Brethren

Boise, Idaho, December 17.—I wish to write something about church conditions here in Boise. I have learned that there are only six members in and near Boise. There is a congregation at Caldwell, fifty miles away, but they have no preacher now. The brother that preached for them became mentally deranged and was away in an insane asylum for some time, and is still not able to preach. Miss Day, a member of the church who teaches in the school here, and I have decided to see what can be done to get a meeting here. We have all confidence that a meeting to continue for a month or six weeks would build up a congregation strong enough to support a preacher. She says she will write Brother Larimore, of Springfield, Mo. She has all confidence that he is the man for Boise, and I can rely on her judgment, as she is a highly educated, Christian woman. She came here for her health. One of the brethren here has an invalid wife, and all, I learn, are needy people. We will need some assistance from the congregations that want to do some real mission work. I have all hopes of a wonderful work for the Lord being accomplished here if we can get a genuine gospel preacher for a month or six weeks. Sister Day is also writing to see what assistance can be had from congregations in Missouri that she has in past been a member of. We also want to distribute tracts galore on music in the worship and other subjects just before the meeting and advertise it well. I am living in hopes of hearing the gospel preached in Boise, and will do my very best to help in every way.—Mrs. Tenne Benton.

Berry, Ala., December 17.—Since our last report I have preached at Bethel, near Vernon, Ala.; Mount Pleasant: Berry, my home; and Gorgas Power Plant. At all these places the brethren seem to be more deeply interested than before. Gorgas Power Plant is where Brother C. R. Nichol conducted his last meeting in Alabama. I heard many good things about his preaching; best of all, that he preached nothing but the Bible, and that in such a plain way that all could understand it. He placed the church of the New Testament before the people in such a way as to command the respect of all. Until this meeting there were just four members who took any interest in the work, but those four members have supported the work for the past years in having the gospel preached each month far beyond what some old congregations do. In fact, their support has been almost twice that of some congregations that number thirty or forty members. Brother Nichol left with a hearty invitation to return for another meeting. While Brother Nichol was with us he succeeded in getting the sisters interested in a Bible study on Thursday evening of each week. The interest has grown from the first day. They are using Volume I. of "Sound Doctrine." In my judgment, this work has no superior. It has been of great help even in our Lord's-day work. The title indicates just what it is.

It fills a place no other outline of study can fill. After considering the many admonitions by many preachers, I have decided to say that I am ready to answer calls for meetings for the coming year and thus give my entire time to the work of an evangelist. If you desire my help, say so.—Frank Baker.

Getting Up Nights Can Be Stopped

Often in twenty-four hours. To prove that you can be rid of this strength-sapping allment, have more pep, be free from burning sensation, pain in groins, backache, and weakness, I'll send you Walker's Prostate Specific, free and postpaid, under plain wrapper. No obligation. No cost. If it cures your prostate gland trouble, you can repay the favor by telling your riends; if not, the loss is mine. Simply send me your name, and prove that you can feel ten years younger and be rid of prostate trouble.

I. B. WALKER,
1677 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

COMMERCE-UNION BANK

Nashville
Lebanon
Sparta
Spring Hill
Lawrenceburg
Springfield
Gallatin
Gladeville
Woodbury
Murfreesboro

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

Anglo-American Drug Co., 215-217 Fulton St., New York

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either nil the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never speaks.

money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly resatisfaction or money promptly funded. The Pinex Co., Ft. W

CHURCH OF CHRIST

921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning-Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45; Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00. Evening-Singing, Communion, and Ser-Evening—Singing, Comm.
Evening—Singing, Comm. on, 7:45 to 9:00.
Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M.

mon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)

A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

OUR DEPENDENCY

BY H. C. FLEMING.

In a casual view, it would seem useless to speak of man's dependency on a greater power than himself, but all reasonable and thinking people realize this by everyday experience and by their past history. In old age, how often the scenes and transactions of past life are brought to remembrance -the dangers, seen and unseen, that we have escaped by the help of the guiding hand of the Supreme Ruler of the heavens and the earth.

The mistakes made as the years rolled by come vividly before the mind, causing reflections on the weakness of man's power to restrain himself and his dependence for help to avoid his errors; but these do not hinder him from making others as he advances farther on in life.

It has been said that "experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other." In this respect, many people seem to be somewhat foolish, because if they are depending on their own strength, they continue on in the same old beaten track; hence, it becomes necessary to stir up the mind in reference to their own weakness and their dependency upon the greater knowledge and power of their Creator. "Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance." (2 Pet. 1: 13.) "This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior." (2 Pet. 3: 1, 2.) "Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands." (2 Tim. 1: 6.)

If it was necessary for Peter and Paul to stir up the minds of the primitive Christians by way of remembrance of their weakness and dependence, it is surely more important for us to be so acted upon in this age. The sum of the matter is this: We are dependents on God, even for life itself; and as he cannot be eliminated or destroyed, life cannot be annihilated-reduced to nothing. That which supports life comes by his power. The food we eat, the raiment we wear, and the protection of our dwellings from the inclemency of destruction of life, all come from God, but man must use some effort to obtain them; but if his labors are not prospered by the Creator, they are in vain. All know what would become of a child if left without the care of any person. In this respect all of us are in about the same condition as children-that is, we are dependent for help from each other and from God, or we perish. Therefore, we must comply with the laws of life to retain it and also to gain it again after death-that is, a life of happiness-and to escape the second death. (See Rev. 20: 14.) "And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, . . saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him." (Rev. 19: 6, 7.)

Neutralizes Uric Acid.

Reutralizes Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism, it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless, but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a Godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief. Too much cannot espoken in behalf of Renwar for rheumatism." Sold by druggists (price, 50 cents) or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

SOUTHERN INSURANCE CO.

NASHVILLE. TENNESSEE

Writes all forms of Ordinary and Industrial Life Insurance

Coughs, nasaland bron-chial colds are relieved promptly by the vapor of Cresolene—the stand-ard drugless treatment with forty years of successful used its guar-antee. The most widely used remedy for whooping cough and spasmedic croup.

Introduced in 1879

"Used While You Sleep"
Send for descriptive booklet 43C. Sold by druggists
Vapo-Cresolens Co., £2 Contlandt St., N. Y.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nausealess Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and siekening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

McShane Bell Foundry Co. BELLS Memorials a Specialty

Over-Runs and Mill-Ends

DIRECT FROM

Cotton Flannels, Pillow Tubings, Sheetings, Crinkled Cloth for Bedspreads, Pajama Checks, Chambrays, Tinted Dimities, Ginghams, Art Silk Striped Madras for men's and boys' Shirts. Write for FREE samples and prices. MONAGHAN MILL STORE, Dept. A., Greenville, S. C. "Textile Center of the South."

666

is a prescription for

Colds, La Grippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria It is the most speedy remedy we know

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

OFFICE Hours

PALMER GRADUATE

R. H. BENEDICT, D. C. CHIROPRACTOR

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES

Office 176 Eighth Avenue, North

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

"APT TO TEACH." ву н. м. Ришлея.

"Apt to teach" is one of the qualifications as stated by Paul in 1 Tim. 3: 2. Of all those things mentioned which pertain to the eldership, I feel sure none are more important than this one. Every child of God should strive to be apt to teach; and every faithful child of God is a teacher, though he may not be an apt one. We are told to teach and admonish one another, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, faithful men who shall be able to teach others also. Christ saw the real necessity when he commissioned his apostles to go and "teach all nations." word must be obeyed; but it cannot be obeyed till it is learned, and it cannot he learned till it is taught, and it will never be properly taught till there are apt teachers who can actually teach. The need now is just as great as it ever was for teachers of the word of God. So many now who profess to be preachers teach but little, and instead please the crowds for self-glory, and let the souls starve for the bread of life. The crying need of the church to-day is apt teachers. Since an elder is to feed the flock and the feeding is done by teaching the word, how can a man be an elder who will not even speak in public teaching or private talk to the flock? If he does not know the word or cannot deliver the food, what place does he occupy as an elder? To be "apt to teach" not only means to have the knowledge, but to be able or fit to present it. The mere fact of being a good man does not fill the requirement. If one is not capable of holding the attention, but is dry and dull in presenting the word, he is not meeting the demand. Though one may know and be a fluent speaker, yet if he speak in such a way as to drive off instead of drawing to, he is still not "apt to teach." Some who know and are interested in the word are sa harsh is their ways it is a hindrance for them to speak. Some may know and be interesting speakers, yet live such lives as to not get the teaching into the minds of the hearers. It is also possible for a wellversed, fluent speaker to so hold the hearer that the man and not the message will be remembered and no teaching done. "Apt to teach" would be getting the hearer to see that which was presented.

Old Scres, Cuts and been have Burns healed since 1820

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota, -"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous break-down following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise you can see how lit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs.OLE NORD-LEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer.

98 per cent. of these replies answer

This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

"BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST! SAY

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Pain

Headache Toothache Neuralgia Neuritis

Lumbago Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

COSDEL ADVOCATE CO

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per single copy....$0.40 | Per 50, per copy... 37 Per dozen, per copy .88 | Per 100, per copy... .86

PLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy.....$0.30 | Per 50, per copy......27
Per dozen, per copy .28 | Per 100, per copy.....25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of wor-ship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 11/2 inches deep, 91/4 inches in diameter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

WANT MUSIC DISCUSSION AT ROCKWOOD, TENN.

ROCKWOOD, TENN.

Rockwood, Tenn., December 20, 1924.—Dear Brethren: I have enjoyed this week's issue of the Gospel Advocate greatly and read it with unusual interest. It comes as a welcome visitor to my home each week. It seems to me to be getting better all along. The article of Brother H. Leo Boles, which is a review of Brother Cowden's report of the Shelbyville debate, is fine. I am confident that there are many "digressives" who, from reading the Tennessee Christian, really believe their defenders, J. J. Walker, John Cowden, and others, really are urging upon our brethren the public discussion of the music question. There is one more place on the map besides Clarksville, Tenn., and Selma, Ala., where the discussion will be welcomed on the part of our brethren, and that is Rockwood, Tenn. One of the members of the digressive church here placed that same issue of the Tennessee Christian so I would get it. I read the article referred to, and sent him word that if the debate did so much good in Shelbyville as the article stated, it would certainly do some good here, and urged that he use his influence to get the debate did so much good in Shelbyville as the article stated, it would certainly do some good here, and urged that he use his influence to get up such a debate here. I have not heard of his making any effort to that effect. I want to assure Brother Hall that his expenses will be taken care of here and that he will be paid well for his services if he can get Brother Walker to meet him here. If our "transgressive" brethren are not really joking in this matter, surely they will be willing to care for Brother Walker, since their enrollment is around six hundred members. Now I would say in the language of Brother Cowden: "If it takes a debate to settle it, as it seems it will, let's have it." I want you to mail me one dozen copies of the issue of the paper containing Brother Boles' review, so that I may place them in the hands of some of the leaders of the digressive church here; then we shall see what we shall see. I will assure them, too, that our congregation is anxious to know the truth and will attend the debate. Come on, brethren, let's have it at Rockwood. Come on, brethren, let's have it at Rockwood.

Your brother in the Lord, THOMAS J. WAGNER.

The brethren have been greatly gratified and pleased by the good work done by Brother Hall in his three discussions with Brother Walker. But our transgressive brethren at Nashville, Tenn.; Birmingham, Ala.; and Shelbyville, Tenn., where these discussions occurred, seem to have been inspired with a sudden aversion to debates. Notwithstanding the voluminous words of bravery and courage that issue from them, and the braggadocio in which they indulge, the simple fact seems to be that one debate completely satisfies their appetite for discussion. The "transgressives" have three times proclaimed from the housetops that Brother Walker has completely defeated Brother Hall, and yet, after each victory, Brother Walker is more reluctant than ever to win the honor of being victorious again.

I think that a discussion would do much good at Rockwood. But, as winning one of his great victories is such a strenuous ordeal for Brother Walker, I predict that he will never voluntarily meet Brother Hall again. The "transgressives" are clearly without a willing representative. Rockwood probably has the same aversion to a debate with which others have been inspired by the great victories of Brother Walker. But if Brother Wagner can assist them in overcoming this aversion, and encourage them to admit the necessity of being able to give a reason before they can rightfully "go beyond what is written," Brother Hall is willing and anxious, for the sake of truth, to suffer another defeat at the hands of Brother

THE UTILITY OF HARDNESS. BY MORGAN H. CARTER.

Soft, mushy food is an outstanding cause of decayed teeth. Nuts and hard foods are recommended by many leading dentists to offset this conspicuous defect in modern life. Our food must also contain the elements which constitute genuine teeth. These teeth should be protected from disease and cleansed regularly and thoroughly. Sound teeth are a real pleasure. No well-balanced person ever enjoyed the toothache.

A life of ease and idleness produces a body with flimsy muscles. Work and play should be used to exercise and develop the properly nourished body. Disease germs will destroy your health. Wrong food and lazy habits prepare for their reception. Turn the tables; defeat the germs by barricading against them. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Frequent baths keep the pores open; and through these we are helped to breathe. Lack of oxygen weakens the blood. You may be of a blueblooded family, but a red-blooded body serves you best. Why be sickly, when you can have the thrill of health?

Superficial reading, silly conversation, and shallow thinking give even collegians unfurnished brains. Some one has said that we are a part of all we see and hear. That which we appreciate most becomes a magnet of great power, drawing us, sometimes unconsciously, but always directly, toward a given goal which is the re-"Where thy sult of our choice. treasure is, there will thy heart be also." Choose the worth-while, listen to the wise, hear real music, see the beautiful; for, "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Compromises with even the seemingly petty wrongs and self-gratification in the everyday affairs of life weaken us and bind upon us the devilish yoke of sin. Only Christ can set us free, and he conditions this freedom upon our rejection of evil: "Except ye repent, ye shall all in like manner perish."

Finally, he that always seeks the soft, whether in mushy foods, lazy idleness, frivolous companions, trashy books, "crip" courses, or licentious morals, gets more than he is looking for. But it is after its own kind. We reap what we sow, eventually. This same great principle that brings all the pernicious weeds and thorns also produces the wheat and the cotton that help to feed and clothe the world. So it is in the spiritual world. We gather a hervest of salvation from a seed sowing of faith, hope, and love, God giving the increase. The utility of hardness is accepted on the rock foundation of faith in Christ. Even from a human viewpoint, our best friends are those who are not satisfied that we should live below our possibilities. Henry Churchill King suggested this idea and stated further: "He that would attain his best in any art must keep himself persistently in the presence of the best." "Let Jesus lead: he knows the way."

Christ set his face steadfastly toward Jerusalem. He knew that suffering was ahead. Gethsemane and Golgotha must be experienced that men might be saved. But he moved forward, knowing that beyond the cross and the tomb was the triumph of the resurrection. Our Lord "was made perfect through suffering." Friends, "he that hath not the Spirit of Christ is none of his." He calls us. Can you not hear him saying: " Follow me: be not afraid?" Shall we not bear the cross, counting it all joy to suffer for him? The love of Christ constrains me. Shall anything in earth or hell detain me from walking in his steps?

NOTICE.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of many interesting books for the library on page 22 of this issue of the Gospel Advocate. Make your selection and mail us your order to-day. This will enable us to get the books to you promptly.

LEG SORES

ARE CURABLE. If you suffer from Leg Sores or Varicose Uicers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous book that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my remarkable, painless treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over thirty-five years' specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 373, 421 East Eleventh Street, Kansas City, Mo.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

OTHERS WANT IT

for croupy children because it quickly clears away the choking phlegm, stops hoarse, croupy coughs and allows restful sleep. Noalarming croup when Mother keeps a botte of always on hand in the home. Benefits children and grown persons.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

HERE IS YOURS!

An opportunity to engage in a dignified position seiling Coggins Monuments. Intuition bids you act now. Territory is being assigned daily.

COGGINS MEMORIALS, executed in EL-BERTON BLUE GRANITE, "The Stone Eternal," or GEORGIA MARBLE, are unexcelled for beauty and durability. What more fitting tribute can be paid a departed loved one?

Mr. Palk, of Oklahoma, writes us: "Inclose the fifth order from Mr. Crenshaw, and the Gamble order inclosed was unsolicited." He speaks from ten years' experience, and says further: "Your monuments have always been better than we have experted."

For spare or full time. Write for particulars and confidential contract.

COGGINS MARBLE COMPANY 24 Main St., CANTON, GA.

McQUIDDY'S

OF MUSIC

Edited by

A First-Class Music Composer

This is the clearest and simplest rudiments of music published. It is not filled with superfluous words and illustrations, but every word and illustration that is used is to the point aud necessary. The pamphlet contains thirty-two pages and cover, and is very essential in the study of music. Price, 20 cents single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid.

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

GOOD BOOKS FOR YOUR LIBRARY

BOOKS WRITTEN BY D. LIPSCOMB AND E. G. SEWELL	RELIGIOUS DISCUSSIONS . Brents-Herod Debate. Paper bound. Price,
Civil Government. By David Lipscomb. Cloth. 158 pages. Price, postpaid$1.25	postpaid$0.50 Debate on the Roman Catholic Religion. Cloth.
Questions Answered. By D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell. (Edited by M. C. Kurfees.) Cloth. 700 pages. Price, postpaid$3.00	New edition. 360 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75 The Evidences of Christianity. Cloth. New
Commentary on Acts. By David Lipscomb. Cloth. 250 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	edition. Price, postpaid$1.50 Cayce-Srygley Discussion. Cloth. 352 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Salvation from Sin. By David Lipscomb. Cloth. 440 large pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Salvation. Cloth. 350 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
SERMONS, SERMON MATERIAL, COMMEN- TARIES	Why the Baptist Name. Cloth. 320 pages. Price.$1.50
Gospel Sermons. By Dr. T. W. Brents. Cloth. 440 large pages. Price, postpaid$2.00	Stark-Warlick Debate. Paper. 186 pages. Price.$9.50
Letters and Sermons of T. B. Larimore. (In three volumes. We have only Volumes II. and III.) By Mrs. Emma Page Larimore. Price.	Music in the Worship. Cloth. 239 pages. Price, postpaid
per volume, postpaid$1.50 Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons. Volumes I.	FOR TEACHERS AND SCHOLARS and II. Cloth. Price, per volume $1.50 Sweeney's Sermons. By John S. Sweeney. Cloth. 12mo. 304 pages. Price, postpaid $1.75	Outlines of Bible Study. By G. Dallas Smith. Price, single copy, postpaid
Biographies and Sermons. By F. D. Srygley. Price, postpaid$1.50	Sermon Outlines. A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines. Price, postpaid $1.00
The Gospel Plan of Salvation. By Dr. T. W. Brents. Cloth, 8vo. Price, postpaid$2.50	Handbook on Baptism. By J. W. Shepherd. Revised Edition. Cloth. 486 pages. Price,
The Jerusalem Tragedy. By A. P. Stout. Illustrated. Price, postpaid$1.50	postpaid$1.50
Christian Treasures. By A. B. Lipscomb. Two volumes. Price, per volume$125	SPECIAL GIFT BOOKS
The Christian System. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth. 12mo. 383 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	Ailenroc's Book. (Poems and Stories.) By Mrs. Sarah Cornelia Alexander. 205 pages. Bound in cloth. Price, postpaid
Christian Baptism, By Alexander Campbell. Half leather, 12mo. 444 pages. Price, post- paid$1.75	Sunshine; or, Uncle Minor's Stories. 256 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Evidences of Pardon. By C. E. Holt. Paper cover. 105 pages. Price $0.25 Per Dozen $2.50	Character; or, The Making of the Man. By Edward W. Carmack. Leather ooze. In box. Price, postpaid
Instrumental Music in the Worship. By M. C. Kurfees. Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50	Old Limber; or, The Tale of the Taylors. By DeLong Rice. Price, postpaid$1.00
Travels in Bible Lands. By Andy T. Ritchie. Price, postpaid $1.50	BIOGRAPHICAL
Adventism and the Bible. By J. Henry Monk. Cloth. Price, postpaid	Larimore and His Boys. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. Price, postpaid
The New Testament Church. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50	Seventy Years in Dixie. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. 400 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
The Word of Reconciliation. By J. D. Floyd. Cloth. 231 pages. Price, postpaid$1.00	Gospel Lessons and Life History. By E. G. Sewell. Cloth. 338 pages. Price, postpaid$1.25
FOR ELDERS AND DEACONS The Model Church. By G. C. Brewer. Price,	Life of Elder John Smith. By John Augustus Williams. Cloth. Price, postpaid$1.50
Around the Lord's Table. By A. B. Lipscomb. Price $0.25	Life Work of Mrs. Charlotte Fanning. By Mrs. Emma Page Larimore. Cloth. 12mo. 201 pages. Price, postpaid$1.00

ORDER TO-DAY

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

WORD FROM A MISSIONARY. BY F. R. SHEPHERD.

"I am in bed again for a few days. I have been feeling very well for a while; and by not trying to do any work to amount to much, I am able to keep going. Saturday, I suppose, I lifted too much. Then Sunday I took a six-mile hike, preaching at a village about three miles from here. Well, that finished me, and I have been in bed ever since." This is from a personal letter from Brother W. N. Short, of Sinde Mission, Livingstone, Northern Rhodesia, South Africa.

Brother Short writes further: "The house is coming along very fine, only for lack of funds. I am loosing up on it a bit until we get some money to buy more material. I am letting a good number of boys go. It is a good deal of finishing up now. Plastering is almost done; floors are partly down. This week and next we will get most of these jobs finished; then I will let the native builders go. We are in about as bad circumstances this year, financially, as we were last year; but for ourselves, we are a little better fixed. We have a little garden, a few chickens, and are getting some milkvery little, but some for the babies. Our grocery supply was pretty well stocked up from Harper."

This house is being built with funds borrowed by two brethren and sent to Brother Short, but he needs much more than was sent (five hundred dollars) to complete it. When the Lawvers arrive, there will be nothing but the bare veldt for them; and remember, brethren, they will be thirty miles from the nearest "siding," which is merely a flag stop. It will not be at all unusual for them to go three months without seeing one white face. These two Americans, with their two little babies, have lived for two years in a mud hut, such as the natives use; and they have had their books and clothing eaten entirely up at times by the white ants. They need a mule, wagon, cow, and the house finished. Five hundred dollars would do all this. One hundred people giving five dollars each would make this possible. Think of this poor man in bed the greater part of the time because needing an operation that would make him better and able to go right ahead with his work, but a lack of funds for the real necessities forbids it. And he is not a "self-appointed missionary," either. He is sent out by a loyal church and remains amenable to that church. He sends regularly every month a report to the elders of that church, and that church appointed me to act as its agent to solicit and forward funds. Will you have fellowship? If so, address me at 420 Euclid Avenue, Abilene, Texas.

N. B. HARDEMAN

BIBLE SEARCHLIGHT and HOLY LAND

This masterpiece contains nineteen hand-picked sermons, brilliantly cartooned by Sidney Hicks, of the University of Chicago, and is supplemented by three lectures of about ten thousand words each, giving a living description of

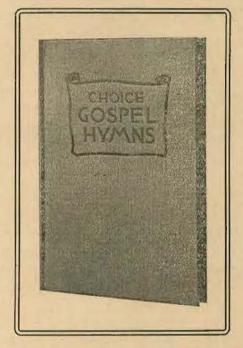

ITALY, EGYPT, AND THE HOLY LAND

This great gift for Father, Mother, Son or Pastor . . $2.85 Our agents making from $50 to $75 per week. Write for particulars. THE STUDENTS' EDUCATIONAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, 667 Shrine Building, MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding____$0.40 Per copy, cloth binding ____$0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate

PLEASE DO NOT OVERLOOK PLACING YOUR MONEY IN THE ENVELOPE WITH YOUR ORDER

ORDER BLANK

FOR

BIBLE LESSON HELPS

	Date_		, 192
Please enter the following	order to be se	nt to the address bel	ow:
Formonths, frym	, 1	92, to	, 192
Jame		. M. W.
P. O
County		State
Remittance inclosed in		2 3
NO STAND	ING OR	DERS TAKE	N
ELAM'S NOTES FOR 19	925 r More to One Ad (Single Copy, 9	@ 85 cents per (dress, Each)	сору, $
ADVANCED QUARTER	LY, 64 pages More to One Adgle Copy, 20c Per	@ 12 cents per qu ldress, Each) Quarter)	arter, $
INTERMEDIATE QUAR	RTERLY, 32 par More to One Ad	ages @ 6 cents per qu ldress, Each)	arter, $
PRIMARY QUARTERLY	Y, 32 pages r More to One Ad	@ 6 cents per qu ldress, Each)	arter, $
LITTLE JEWELS (maile (Five or (Sing	ed quarterly) r More to One Ad gle Copy, 20c Per	@ 12 cents per qu idress, Each) Quarter)	arter, $
THE YOUNG PEOPLE (Five or (Single Copy, 20e Per Quarter, 80	(mailed month r More to One Ad de Per Year—Ford	nly) @ 15 cents per qu Idress, Each) eign, 30c Per Quarter, $1.	arter, $ 00 Per Year)
LESSON LEAVES	r More to One Ad	@ 5 cents per qu ldress, Each)	arter, $
SETS LESSON PICTUR	RE CARDS	@ 4 cents per quidress, Each)	arter, $
LESSON PICTURE CHA	RTS	@ $1.00 per quart	er, $
CLASS BOOKS (7 cents	each)	@ 75 cents per do	zen, $
SUNDAY-SCHOOL REC	CORD (for enti	ire year) $2.50 per	сору,$
COLLECTION ENVELO	PES	@ 75 cents per do	zen, $
Total .	* 5* * * *	* (*) * * (*)	. $
Water Name	1000	1000

Literature should be ordered to expire with the end of the quarters. Quarters begin January, April, July, and October; expire March, June, September, and December.

Remit by Post-Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or Express Money Order, otherwise at the sender's risk.

CAREFULLY EXAMINE YOUR ORDER BEFORE MAILING

Cut Out Order Blank and Mail To-Day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criticism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)
- "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sundayschool literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly commend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

 "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as pub-
- "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, scriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the hest efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years.
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

Volume LXVII. No. 2.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JANUARY 8, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT OUR CONTRIBUTORS Beautiful Hands—A Fearful and Shocking Sin—Commentary on First Corinthians (No. 9)—"And This They Did" (No. 2)—East Tennessee as a Mission Field—A Popular Misapprehension.	27
OUR MESSAGES	32
QUERY DEPARTMENT
HOME READING
EDITORIAL Questions to Be Avoided—Gone Forevermore—"Immersion Not in the Bible"—Word from Washington.	36
FROM THE BRETHREN	40
Fine Houses and Big Congregations	41
Notes from West Tennessee
Jewish Mission Activities
At Capetown
Wheat and Chaff
Hardy-Love Debate-Lowry-Douthitt Debate	47

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

An editorial in a recent issue of the Methodist Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., deplores denominational differences thus:

The meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America starts the mind moving. Why should not the great religious bodies of this land get together on some of the great problems which are as vital to one body as to another? Surely denominational differences should be no barrier to such getting together.

The years ahead should see more of this sort of agreement on issues germane to the common good. If denominations in the past have set an inglorious example before nations in the past have set an inglorious example before the public by splitting hairs and pummeling each other about differences, is it not time to set the public a better example by forgetting those hairsplittings and pummelings and catching step to a march for the world's uplift?

The South is more than glad to have had so distinguished a company of ecclesiastics from over the whole land to meet under her sunny skies, and to put heads and hearts and hards together to do something in consent for hearts and hands together to do something in concert for the betterment of humanity.

The existence of division among Christians is sinful. All who are united with God are united with each other. The same thing that unites a man with God unites him with all children of God. The same thing that makes a man a child of God and that puts him into the family of God, which is the church, makes him a brother to all other sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. children of God, members of the family of God, which is "the body, the church," "were called Christians first in Antioch." It is sinful "to go beyond the things which are written" by calling or naming them anything else.

No "meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America" can "start the mind moving" in the direction of the New Testament, because that sort of a meeting by that sort of a council was never called by the apostles. Anything that "starts the mind moving" in the wrong direction is not good for "the mind." It is true that "the great religious bodies of this land" should "get together," not only "on some of the great problems," but on all of them. Instead of patching up a temporary truce

"on some of the great problems," they should really "get together" by resolving themselves into "one body in Christ." But as long as men are members of various denominations and honestly and sincerely believe the doctrines that make those denominations, "surely denominational differences" will continue to be a "barrier to such getting together."

How could it be otherwise? For instance, the Universalist is teaching that there is no hell and that even Judas Iscariot will be admitted into heaven; while the Calvinist is teaching that only an "elect few," elected before the foundation of the world, will ever be saved. "Surely" there is no discounting the fact that there is a most inherent and fundamental "barrier" to these two denominations "getting together," and that this "barrier," "which is as vital" as vitality itself, is of such a nature that if one of them is teaching the truth, the other one is teaching falsehood. Another illustration, for instance, is seen in the fact that a portion of the religious world is teaching sinners to "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins," just as they were taught by the Holy Spirit through inspired men; while another portion of the religious world, in which is numbered the editor of the Methodist Advocate, is teaching sinners to disregard the command of the Holy Spirit and assuring them that they can be saved without being baptized at all. "Surely' here is a "barrier" of such a nature that if one is right, the other is wrong. The two positions are so diametrically opposite that even a Methodist editor ought to see that nobody but a lunatic or a hypocrite could stand on both of them.

Denominational "getting together" is an impossible absurdity. Not until truth can be reconciled with falsehood or wrong made synonymous with right can "the great religious bodies of this land," teaching and practicing "denominational differences" as irreconcilable as day and dark, ever "get together," except by abandoning those "differences," dissolving those "great religious bodies," and coming together in "one body in Christ," to preach and practice those things for which they can read a "Thus saith the Lord" in God's word.

Under the title "Whither," an editorial in the Methedist Advocate very correctly points out that every road leads to a certain destination and that "much depends on the train you get on as to where you are going to get off." The startling information is imparted that "one can enter a sleeper in Nashville and wake up next morning in Chicago, or St. Louis, or Cincinnati, or Knoxville, or Chattanooga, or Memphis, or Atlanta, or Birmingham." While, of course, it is possible "to go to one of these particular places" without "getting in a sleeper thither bound," as circumstances might cause some to prefer a chair-car and make it imperative for others to walk, still it is true that for a man to get to any particular destination he must travel on the road that leads to it. Following an excellent homily on "the train speeding in the night while the passenger sleeps," he forcefully asks:

Where is the bootlegger going? Where is the cigarette-smoking woman going? Where is the hater of humanity going? Where is the profane man going? And the unclean, and the drunkard, and the covetous, and the unbelieving? Their intentions have nothing whatever to do with the way they are journeying. If they are on a train of appetite and reckless disregard of God, then they are sure to land in the wrong terminal station.

These are certainly appropriate questions, and we humbly beg to heartily indorse the propriety of propounding them to those who are guilty of such things. And we also courteously beg to propound a few others. For instance, as Jesus commanded every penitent believer to be immersed, where are preachers going who teach the people that they need not pay any attention to Jesus, but that sprinkling and pouring will do just as well? Bootleggers and cigarette-smoking women certainly have their faces set in the wrong direction and should seriously think of their awful destination. But what about Methodist editors who refuse to print in their papers the things that Jesus and the apostles command bootleggers and cigarettesmoking women, as well as those of pure personal habits, to do to be saved? Heaven knows that selling whisky, using profanity, and indulging in covetousness are bad enough; but are these sins of the weakness of the flesh worse or more heinous than that presumptuous spirit in the hearts of some editors and preachers that leads them to deliberately set aside the word of Jesus and make void what he has commanded? Where is a man going who refuses to obey the command of Jesus to be immersed? Let no one think that we are posing as a judge. God only is Judge. But God commands penitent believers to be immersed. Where are people going who refuse to do it? It is a question between them and God. They had better think about it.

Indeed, "where is the bootlegger going?" Of course, it is all right to talk about a bootlegger "landing in the wrong terminal station." But when a man substitutes sprinkling for the command of Jesus to be immersed and refuses to become a member of the church that Jesus established upon the Rock, which is composed of all penitent, immersed believers in Jesus wherever found, preferring to be a member of some human denomination that does not include all Christians, it becomes a sort of sacrilege and causes Methodist editors to raise their hands in a sort of holy horror for a Christian preacher to intimate that those who willfully do such things "are sure to land in the wrong terminal station."

$ $ $

The Christian Advocate, "the organ of the churches of Christ in Great Britain and Ireland," says:

When the House of Clergy of the Anglican Church was dealing recently with Prayer Book revision, an attempt was made to insert in the revised baptismal service a rule that one acting as sponsor for a child must be a communicant of the church. But the proposal was not carried. This was the beginning of a number of proposals, all of which tended to show a growing consciousness of the weakness of the case for the baptism of irresponsible infants. Much of what was said was in keeping with Bishop Gore's objection in "The Holy Spirit and the Church" to indiscriminate baptism of infants when there is no personal faith on the part of the parents.

faith on the part of the parents.

Some speakers criticized proxy vows made on behalf of the child. The unreality of a sponsorship in which the sponsors "undertake that he [the infant] will renounce the devil" was urged, and a lively discussion raged round the idea of other people making vows on behalf of the child. It was contended by one of the disputants that the deding away with vows in the child's name "would make the defense of infant baptism much more difficult." Another spoke of the "legalistic obligation" which these proxy vows place upon the child. Yet another claimed that "the baptismal covenant," in which these vows for the child are made by others on its behalf, was moral and not magical.

The editor of the Advocate replies to this as follows:

The whole discussion appeared like an attempt to bolster up an unreality. How can the irresponsible babe be bound later by vows made without its knowledge and consent? The vows are the vows of those who make them and not of the child at all If the rite is not merely magical, it is of no value at the time of its administration, but could only become of value later when the child is taught to know and accept what had previously been done in its name. Why not, then, wait till the act can be the voluntary surrender of the person? If, as Dr. Gore has written of baptism, "its efficacy to effect the spiritual enrichment of the soul of the recipient depends upon the faith of his converted will," why not wait for baptism till it can be efficacious?

What right have delegates from a human denomination to assemble and decide what or what not "to insert in the revised baptismal service?" A religious service is right only because God commands it. No set of men has a right to "revise" the commandments of God. If God did not command it, it is not right at all. If God does command it, no man has a right to tamper with God's commands.

Infant sprinkling is not a command of God. There is not a syllable in God's word that authorizes it or that says anything about it. Hence, it is sinful for people to have water sprinkled upon their infants. No inspired man ever sprinkled water on an infant. It is sinful for uninspired men to do it. Infant sprinkling is a human tradition, not a divine command. "And ye have made void the word of God because of your tradition," by sprinkling water on people in their infancy and teaching them that they have been scripturally baptized.

Our life is one. There is a substantial identity between what we are and what we shall be.—T. T. Carter.

A wise man tries to redeem time, knowing that the days are evil.

FOR FIFTY YEARS

The World's Greatest Sunday-School Commentary

PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LLD.

It contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help for ministers, teachers, and Sunday-school workers, so compiled and tabulated that it can be easily and effectively used.

The broadest range of quotations, illuminating houghts, clear and convincing explanation of the text itself, are all tuned to spiritual interpretation.

Unlimited in its possibility for helpfulness.

Beautiful and instructive pictures, maps, chronological charts and comprehensive index, make it complete in every respect. In text and in interpretation, it is fitted for all grades.

Price, $1.90-$2.00, prepaid

Order from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENN.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE BUSY HANDS OF TABITHA.

Living at Joppa was a certain disciple named "Tabitha" ("Dorcas" in the Greek). "This woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did." She fell sick and died, and her friends prepared the body for burial. At this time Peter was at Lydda, a near-by town, and the friends of Tabitha, in their distress and sorrow, sent two disciples to the apostle, urging him to come to Joppa at once. Peter came. When he entered the silent chamber where the dead lay, he found assembled together many friends of Tabitha-broken-hearted women, the objects of the good woman's charity. They gathered about the apostle, "weeping, and showing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while she was with them." No wonder that these widows (for so they are called) whom Dorcas had befriended and blessed should weep for her now. Peter put them all forth and kneeled down and prayed. Turning to the body, he said: "Tabitha, arise!" And she opened her eyes; and when she saw Peter, she sat up. He gave her his hand and raised her up. Then he called the saints and widows into the chamber and presented her alive. There were rejoicings at this miracle. It was meet that it should be so. The news spread abroad and caused many to believe on the Lord. Peter tarried many days in Joppa with one Simon a tanner, and here on the housetop he saw the vision that led him to Cornelius.

I love this little story of Dorcas, friend of widows, who was missed when she died. She was not afraid nor ashamed of work, and hers were busy hands. The coats and garments which she had made for the destitute bore witness to her deeds of love. I do not know that we can estimate her worth. In the impressive and expressive words of Luke, she was "full of good works and almsdeeds." She plied the needle early and late-"Stitch, stitch, stitch!"-that she might clothe the naked. Perhaps she was a woman of moderate means, who made use of what she had that she might have treasure in heaven. Hers was the pure and undefiled religion, because she did indeed "visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." Finding a disciple naked and in lack of daily food, she did not say, "Go in peace, be ye warmed and filled," but gave him "the things needful to the body." Thus it was that the widows, beneficiaries of her charity, loved her so. They could not forget her deeds of mercy, and they wept to know that they had lost so good a friend.

The godly women of the Bible are lovely characters. They are patterns of good works. Willing hands were theirs, and busy ones. Always they found something to do; they were diligent, not slothful, day in and day out, from week to week, from year to year. Rachel kept her father's sheep; Ruth gleaned in the barley fields; Dorcas made coats and garments. Great and good women were they, and their good works do follow them.

THE TOUCH OF A MOTHER'S HAND.

My own mother was something of a Tabitha. The same may be said of many mothers. Naturally I think of my mother, as you think of yours, and I speak of her without apology, yet with no small degree of self-reproach. Now that she has been dead many years, a clear gauge of my childhood ingratitude smites my conscience—and it bites like a serpent and stings like an adder.

I shall never forget her hands—honest hands that knew no cunning, except the dexterity of useful toil. One hand was worse looking than the other; it was drawn and crumpled as the result of a bruise made by the hoe handle. This crumpled and drawn hand she carried to the grave as a testimony to her toil. Her fingers were rather slender, rough, and worn on the ends. I could weep now at the thought of those fingers of so good a woman, and at the thought of the touch of that crumpled hand.

My mother was a slave. That is the right word for the woman of the small rural community and small means of her day. With a large household to care for, and with little help, she slaved day in and day out. She arose while it was yet night and set her house in order. She sewed, knitted, cooked, worked at something every moment of the day. She made much of the clothing for her children. Always she was patching, darning, mending, at night. Nearly all the families of that community raised their own hogs and had a general butchering time early in the winter. I can remember the kettles of lard boiling, and the days of souse and cracklings and spareribs and jowl-terms now almost unknown in usual speech regarding viands. My mother did most of this work outside of the actual quartering and cutting up of the carcasses. She did the weekly washing also, the ironing, and the scrubbing. She worked all her life-not for herself, but for others. She helped the poor, and the night was never too dark for her to answer the call of the sick. Thus she went through life, with burdens heavy and work too exacting; thus did most housewives of that time and place render service in home and community. They were slaves, but happy, and unconscious of it all. We-their childrendid not know that these good women were working too hard and shortening their days. I did not once think that my mother would soon break down. She never complained at her lot. None the less my mother was a slave.

She toiled to the end. Rest came with death, when weeping friends folded her hands forever upon her encoffined breast. . . . The last hours linger in my memory like some sorrowful dream. I see that drawn hand, now tossing to and fro, now lying silent and still, during her last illness. I feel its fevered pressure as she gives me her blessing. And then I behold it lying cold in death, folded in sweet rest—peaceful rest—perfect rest—eternal rest. O, the touch of that hand then—the touch of a mother's lifeless hand! We laid her away with her people in the silence of the tomb, but her crumpled hand and her sweet face I shall never, never forget. Forget thee! Thy memory is my sweetest joy, my dearest sorrow!

"And when the sunset gates unbar, Shall I not see thee waiting stand, And, white against the evening star, The welcome of thy beckening hand?"

A STORY OF BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

When I was a child, the schools of my county, in Tennessee, used McGuffey's Readers, a series now published by the American Book Company. This series was noted for its splendid stories, each one pointing a moral. The following story, entitled "Beautiful Hands," is quoted from the Third Reader:

"'O, Miss Roberts, what coarse-looking hands Mary Jessup has!' said Daisy Marvin, as she walked home from school with her teacher.

"' In my opinion, Daisy, Mary's hands are the prettiest in the class.'

"'Why, Miss Roberts, they are as red and hard as they can be. How they would look if she were to try to play the piano!' exclaimed Daisy.

"Miss Roberts took Daisy's hands in hers, and said: 'Your hands are very soft and white, Daisy—just the hands to look beautiful on a piano; yet they lack one beauty that Mary's hands have. Shall I tell you what the difference is?'

"'Yes, please, Miss Roberts.'

"'Well, Daisy, Mary's hands are always busy. They wash dishes; they make fires; they hang out clothes, and help to wash them, too; they sweep, and dust, and sew; they are always trying to help her poor, hard-working

"'Besides, they wash and dress the children; they mend their toys and dress their dolls; yet they find time to bathe the head of the little girl who is so sick in the next house to theirs.

"'They are full of good deeds to every living thing. I have seen them patting the tired horse and the lame dog in the street. They are always ready to help those who

"'I shall never think Mary's hands are ugly any more, Miss Roberts.'

"'I am glad to hear you say that, Daisy; and I must tell you that they are beautiful because they do their work gladly and cheerfully.'

"'O, Miss Roberts! I feel so ashamed of myself and so sorry,' said Daisy, looking into her teacher's face with tearful eves.

"'Then, my dear, show your sorrow by deeds of kindness. The good alone are really beautiful."

A FEARFUL AND SHOCKING SIN.

BY S. H. HALL.

It would mean so much to us if we would force ourselves to see and feel as our Lord does about all people and questions. This way we will feel more and more as we grow into the "divine nature." Just recently I read an article on "The Sin of Jealousy." The author, as you will see, has the same idea that the denominational world has about "choirs," "pastors," etc., but he says some fine things about one of the most destructive sins that has ever entered the life of a human being. Read what he says, then let us reason together for the good of the cause of Christ:

There are many ways by which Satan tries to lead God's people to follow the paths of sin. But just let the devil fill us with jealousy or envy, and we will soon find ourselves possessed with a satanic spirit that will make us anything but Christlike in our walk and conversation.

us anything but Christlike in our walk and conversation.

Indeed, some of the worst crimes recorded in the word of God are those which were prompted by a spirit of jealousy. What was it that led Cain to murder Abel? He was jealous of his brother because God was more pleased with his sacrifice than he was with his own. And it was that same spirit of jealousy that caused Saul to plot against David to slay him. So we might go through the Scriptures and point out one crime after another which was prompted by a spirit of jealousy.

And do we not ofttimes find this same spirit manifesting itself in the lives of God's people to-day? We fear that not only the laity become victims of it, but that it also finds its way into the ranks of the clergy. Let a pastor show great intellectual attainments in this or that sphere, or let him be seen climbing the ladder of success in the accomplishment of great things for the kingdom, and very often little stones of unjust criticism are hurled at him which were gathered from the brook whose waters were poisoned with jealousy. Many a pastor, because he happens to have remarkable success in his congregation, is ofttimes accused of this or that lax practice, even were poisoned with Jeanousy. Many a pastor, because ne happens to have remarkable success in his congregation, is offtimes accused of this or that lax practice, even though there may be nothing to warrant such conclusion. Are we sure that many of these criticisms are not contaminated with a spirit of jealousy and envy?

But, dear church member, must you not admit that you, too, have offtimes been infected with this same spirit of envy? What kind of a spirit animated your soul when some other member of the church was given special praise for their loyalty or success in this or that sphere of service? Perhaps you are a singer in the choir. Have you ever found yourself possessed with a jealous spirit there when some other member of the choir sang beautifully, perhaps more beautifully than you, or when this or that person was given a solo which you would like to have sung? What about that young man or young woman who seems to take better than you do and who has more friends than you? Again, I say, look well into your heart and see if there is no sign of jealousy there.

Yes, we must all admit that ofttimes this spirit of jealousy takes possession of our hearts, resulting in hateful thoughts, unkind words, and actions which lack the spirit of love.

The author of the above words has a very mild way, it seems to me, in condemning this sin. Nor do I like his closing sentence, in which he says: "Yes, we must all admit that offtimes this spirit of jealousy takes possession of our hearts, resulting in hateful thoughts, unkind words, and actions that lack the spirit of love." It is all right for him to confess it, if such a devilish spirit "ofttimes" "takes possession of" his heart; but the thing he needs, as well as many others, is to once see this sin in all of its hideousness. Solomon had it right when he said: "Jealousy is cruel as the grave." And I am forgetting jealousy in the family circle and staying with the idea of jealousy that members of the church sometimes have. It is a sin that should be condemned as quickly and vigorously as murder, lying, and stealing. It is worse than stealing. It is the mother of hatred, and the Bible declares that he who hates a brother is a murderer. (See 1 John 2: 9-11; 3: 14, 15.) "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." Men can say what they please and argue as long as they please, this is what God, who cannot lie, says about hating brethren.

The thing that makes jealousy so fearful is the fact that men, even preachers, can be filled with it and still be received, indorsed, and praised by their own brethren. I hardly think the church of Christ would take a coldblooded murderer-not one that has just once been guilty, but who is continuously murdering-and indorse him and support him. So far as God is concerned, such a sinner is no worse than souls loaded down with hatred for their brethren. But le jealous-hearted members of the church think they are very respectable members. The churches will appoint such for elders and deacons; women who are possessed with this devil are sometimes among the most active and highly respected in the local church; and preachers can just have this spirit to their own heart's content, and even the churches can know it and see it, but they are never considered as being very serious transgressors of God's law. Sometimes you will find this evil spirit working in the hearts of some of our "biggest" preachers. That the right spirit they do not have toward others seems outstanding. Backbiting is indulged in. Things are told and whispered around-very innocently, of course -for no purpose under the sun except to break down the confidence of others in those they have allowed the spirit of jealousy to lead them to hate.

There can be no doubt that this spirit belongs to the carnal nature, that nature that "is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." (See Rom. 8: 7.) It is as blind as death to justice. To do unto others as you would have them to do to you, it does not know. Selfishness, hard-heartedness, envy, hatred, bitterness, character assassins, are all born in the womb of this scarlet-covered woman. There is nothing more to be dreaded than to fall under her influence. How many are playing the rôle of disciples, ministers of the gospel, leaders in the local churches, who are cursed with this sin and are almost wholly unconscious of their condition! The cause of Christ suffers. The world has no confidence in the churches. And we wonder why.

Now, of course, I know there is a righteous jealousy. Even God is a jealous God. But do not try to tell us about this kind, because if you have it we will know it. It is a thing that cannot be hidden, and it sheds forth light, never darkness. It needs no one to herald it and make it known. I think I have, a few times in my life, heard those who had that jealousy of the wrong kind try to make others believe it was a jealousy of the right kind. Such have a desperate love (?) for the cause of Christ. But when they really do love the cause and not themselves, they will be found loving and praising others more, and not always knocking and saying things that can only harm others.

May God bless us with men—men who are striving to let the divine nature take full possession and control them. This is the need of to-day. Whatever is right and just to all concerned can be easily seen, provided we will let the Spirit of our Lord control us. The carnal nature keeps us forever blinded to that which is good. Whatever will help and bless others will help me. There is nothing that I can do or say that will harm others that will not also harm me. To do and be just what our Lord teaches us to do and be is good business sense.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 9.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter I.—Continued.

"CHRIST CRUCIFIED" A STUMBLINGBLOCK AND FOOLISHNESS. (Verses 22-25.)

22. For the Jews require a sign. Demand a sign. Since the apostles performed many miracles to confirm the gospel, probably the sign which the Jews demanded was "the sign from heaven" which the Pharisees sought from Christ. (Mark 8: 11; Matt. 12: 38; 16: 1.) Daniel fore-told the coming of Christ in the clouds of heaven to receive his kingdom. (Dan. 7: 13.) The Jews, mistaken in the meaning, expected he would make his first appearance in the clouds, and, by some exertion of power, take the empire of the world from the Romans. This is one reason why the preaching of the crucified Savior was a stumblingblock to the Jews. Greeks seek after wisdom. Demand the depths of philosophy and the charms of eloquence.

23. But we preach Christ crucified. To preach Christ did not fulfill the demand, but "Christ crucified" did. Unto the Jews a stumblingblock. Because opposite to the sign they seek, and this because they had a wrong conception of Christ. Unto the Greeks foolishness. A silly tale, just opposite the wisdom they seek.

24. But unto them which are called. Those who have obeyed the gospel call. God calls by and through the gospel. (1 Thess. 2: 13, 14.) The power of God, and the wisdom of God. To both Jews and Greeks who obey the gospel, Christ is accepted to be both the power and wisdom of God.

25. The foolishness of God is wiser than men. The crucifying of Christ seemed foolish to the world, yet there is more wisdom in it than can be found in all the philosophy of the world. Weakness of God. To the worldlywise it seemed a weakness in God to allow Christ to die, yet it proved mightier than all the strength of the wise. The scheme of redemption, revealed in the gospel, which the world judges to be mere foolishness, is wiser than the wisdom of men; and weak as they account it, it is stronger than all the strength of men. They overlooked the fact that as it takes the sufferings and pains of others, the bleeding and dying of animals for food and to produce and sustain temporal life of man, so it required the sufferings, bleeding, and dying of a divine Being to produce and sustain eternal life. Note (1) how both Jews and Greeks (Gentiles) conspired together in their contempt and rejection of the gospel. "The Jews require a sign." That is, besides all the miracles and the resurrection of Christ, they required some sign from heaven to prove that Christ was sent from God. So unreasonable and obstinate was their infidelity that all the miracles of our Savior's life, death, and resurrection could not remove it, and so they demanded more. "The Greeks seek after wisdom." That is, they looked for profound wisdom, eminent learning, and deep philosophy in the gospel, and scorned it because they found not there what they expected. It was too simple to please them. (2) Paul's determination to preach Christ crucified, though it was a stumblingblock to the Jews and foolishness to the Greeks. Christ was a stumblingblock to the Jews relative to his poverty and sufferings, the lowness and misery of his condition in the world. They expected that their Messiah should be a victorious prince, one that should rescue them from their enemies; instead of which they find this Jesus to be overcome by his enemies-that seemingly he had no power to defend himself, much less to deliver them. They thought he was deserted by God, whom he called his Father; forsaken by his followers, whom he styled "disciples;" scourged with rods, crowned with thorns, ignominiously treated, and shamefully crucified. This was a stumblingblock to the Jews. How was Christ "to the Greeks foolishness?" They despised the gospel of Christ as an absurd, ridiculous, and ill-contrived fable. They concluded the incarnation impossible, that a being infinitely perfect should unite with a nature so inferior to itself, and rejected the doctrine of the Lord's death as an impiety contumelious to God. They could not reconcile servitude with sovereignty, punishment with innocence, the lowest of human miseries with the highest of divine honors, and accordingly they esteemed it foolishness to expect eternal life from him that was put to death, and that he should bring them to the highest glory, who suffered himself in the lowest weakness. (3) The preaching of the cross was not thus to all of either class. There was a number of both Jews and Gentiles converted and saved by the preaching of the cross, unto whom Christ was the "power of God, and the wisdom of God." Observe (1) that Christ, through the gospel, is the power of God to save; that the works of mighty power were performed by him;" that all things in heaven and in earth were created by him; that he is the work of providence and the redemption of man. (Isa. 9: 6; Col. 1: 16; Heb. 1: 3; Gal. 3: 13.) (2) Christ is the wisdom of God. His divine nature had a fullness of infinite and uncreated wisdom found with it; also his human nature had a fullness of infused and created wisdom found in it. The redemption of man by and through Christ was a design of admirable wisdom. He who turns his back on Christ rejects the wisdom of God and renders his ruin both dreadful and certain. They must perish eternally by the hand of justice who will not be saved according to the plan of divine wisdom, which is to save us from hell by saving us from our sins. (3) The reason assigned why the preaching of Christ crucified became the power of God unto salvation is, "because the weakness of God is stronger than men"-that is, the ordinances and institutions of God, though they seem weak and foolish to the world, yet are more powerful than all the wisdom of men. should observe the fact that the ordinances and institutions of God, and particularly the preaching of the gospel, though despised by the world, by the power of God have great power and produce wonderful effects. "The weakness of God is stronger than men "-that is, the weakest means and instruments used by God are stronger in effects than the strongest which men can devise and use. "The foolishness of God is wiser than men." Not that there is either foolishness or weakness in God, but that which men call "foolishness" and "weakness," and deride as such, overcomes all their admired wisdom and strength. If the wisdom of man cannot match the foolishness of God, how shall it vie and contend with the wisdom of God? No wisdom or power of man can stand before the foolishness and weakness, much less before the wisdom and power, of God.

Our whole peace in this life consisteth rather in humble endurance than in not feeling adversities. He that knows best how to suffer will best keep himself in peace. That man is conqueror of himself and lord of the world, the friend of Christ, and an heir of heaven.—Selected.

"AND THIS THEY DID." No. 2. BY J. W. BUSH, M.D.

"And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God." (2 Cor. 8: 5.)

4. They were poor. (See verse 2.) They were not the wise, the mighty, and the rich of Macedonia. Paul, in writing to the Corinthians, uses language that likewise can be applied to the Macedonians, and to us, when he says: "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence." (1 Cor. 1: 26-29.)

Such is the character of those the Father draws by the gospel to Jesus Christ. Few, if any, of the rich, the wise, the mighty, or the noble, stood with Christ and his church in Paul's day. The gospel, God's power to save, had little or no effect upon them. Loadstone will not draw the precious metals; it has little or no attraction over gold and silver. But the common metals are attracted by it, such as iron and steel. Comparatively few of the great ones of earth ever cared for Christ our Lord. "The common people heard him gladly." And high ecclesiastics asked significantly: "Have any of the rulers of the Pharisees believed on him?" The Macedonian Christians were poor, and, therefore, did not give out of their abundance or superfluity to help others, but out of their "deep poverty." On natural grounds they might have said: "Why, the wolf is even now howling near our door. We do not have all we need for ourselves, and so cannot give anything toward the relief of the poor saints at Jerusalem." Why should they part with what they needed for themselves to relieve the needs of others? Echo answers, why? There is only one reason beneath the stars why, and that reason is to be "rich in faith" and "rich toward God." (See James 2: 5; Luke 12: 21.)

My friend, have you these riches? If you have, then you have laid up "for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." (Matt. 6: 20.)

5. They abounded in liberality. "How that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality." (Verse 2.) These Macedonian churches did not work through nor contribute to "boards" or other missionary organizations. Indeed, they knew nothing of such organizations; they knew only one divine organization—the church of the Lord Jesus Christ; and they just believed, loved, lived, and contributed of their means in and through the church of our Lord. They fully realized that spiritual success is secured only when Christ and man work together in partnership; that if the "hand of the Lord" is withheld, the hand of the strongest man is paralyzed. The gifts of the Macedonian churches were liberal; they were fully worthy of generous souls.

6. They went beyond their power. "For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power." (Verse 3.) They went to the extreme limits of their possibilities. Let me illustrate by a story that came from the lips of a veteran missionary: "A trying mishap had come to us in our work. A fire had broken out in the mission home. Before it could be quenched, the roof was entirely consumed. Every dollar was needed for the necessary work of the mission. The blow was a heavy one. That evening, as wife and I sat and talked over the situation, it seemed that dark clouds hovered over us, and the future looked dark indeed. By and by, as we talked, we heard footsteps. The door opened, and in came two aged sisters whom I had persuaded by the sweet gospel story to accept the Lord of glory. They lived in a little shack and were very poor, but they were rich in faith and good works. The older of the two walked up to us with a knotted handkerchief in her hand, and, untying it, she emptied the contents into my hands. There lay all their little store of earthly wealth—pennies, half pennies, and smaller fractional coins. 'Brother,' said she, 'we do not have very much, but all we have we want to give to help put the roof on the mission house.'" A tear stole down the missionary's cheek as he told the story, and with faltering voice he said: "It was not much they gave, but it was all they had, and—O!—it was so acceptable!" They went beyond their power.

Brother J. Madison Wright, a devout Christian, a lover of both God and man and an earnest, faithful, loyal preacher of the word, tells me this story: One time he was preaching the gospel at a certain missionary point in Ontario, Canada. He succeeded in establishing a loyal church of Christ at that point. He learned that there was a plain, but substantial, meetinghouse in the little town that could be purchased for seven hundred and twenty dollars. He went among the brethren and succeeded in collecting six hundred and ninety dollars, thirty dollars short of the amount that was necessary to make the purchase of the house possible. He had just thirty dollars. He talked the matter over with his Christian wife. They needed food, and their child needed shoes and clothing. What should they do? They decided to give the thirty dollars and purchase the house of worship and trust to the Lord for food and raiment. They went beyond their power.

The Macedonian churches were consecrated. This was an outstanding fact of the apostolic age. It was the climax and glory of Christian service. Those men and women went beyond their power—yea, often surrendered all. What things were gain to them, they counted loss for Jesus' sake. They took up their cross and followed him. This is our supreme need to-day—heroic devotion.

Are we going back to the Macedonian churches for a pattern? If so, are we heroic enough to live as they did in such days? Christ shook the world with a few congregations in apostolic times because they were consecrated to his work. Can he shake anything with us to-day? Can he build anything with us? Can he conquer anything with us? Yes, if we believe in God; if we have courage and confidence; if we be men and women of purity, prayer, and power; if we preach the truth, live the truth, love the brethren, and lay down our lives, if need be, for the Master, we can do all things through Jesus, our loving Savior, who "loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood." (Rev. 1: 5.)

EAST TENNESSEE AS A MISSION FIELD. BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

He that undertakes to go to heaven without trying to get somebody else to go, too, will never get there himself. The church or congregation that is content to see itself move along in a good, easy way, without reaching out into other fields and making new conquest for Christ, is certainly not patterning after the divine order and will not meet with divine approval. It may have a name to live, and yet it is dead. The religion of Christ is a missionary religion. The command is to go into all the world and teach—not to sound the word in, but to sound it out.

I call attention again to the fact that of the thirty-two counties in East Tennessee, twenty-one of them have no churches after the New Testament order, so far as known to us. There may be a few members scattered here and there in some of them, but in some I doubt very seriously if there are any members at all. I contend that it is just as much a Christian duty to try to get the gospel before these people as it is to pray and sing and commune on the first day of the week or to attend worship at any time. Of course, East Tennessee is not the only mission field. There are many, both in the homeland and in the foreign lands; but I am particularly interested in this section now, and I want to see some others interested in it. Every congregation of disciples that has been planted should be interested, first in the people around it, and then in the people away.

If all will catch the missionary spirit of Jesus and his apostles, it will not be long until the most benighted parts of the earth will have the opportunity of hearing the "sweet old story" and learning the true way.

One great evil I see under the sun, and that is this: oftentimes there are members that go into parts isolated from church—say, they move into towns or neighborhoods where there are no true churches. Now, there is a great opportunity to do a world of good missionary work, perhaps, if they will only use it. Some few do use it, but oftentimes such members sit down, bury their talents, and do nothing, or else they go into some one of the denominations; and if they do not go into these churches, they attend them and work with them, giving their time, presence, and means, to be turned into these sectarian channels. Now, here I just wish to say, if sectarian teachings and practices will save people, let us all fall into their ranks, go on with them, and give them our presence, time, influence, and money, and boost them all we can, for the world needs saving. If they are right in teaching and practice, then it will certainly save; so why should one give his time, money, and all that is within him to build up anything else? If their teachings and practices are not right, why should any one work to promote them? What do you say, my brother, sister? Do you believe that all they teach and practice is right? Now, of course, it is not; and if you know anything about the teachings of the Bible, you know it is not right. What do you think and say? Then why do you bury your talents or dissipate them in this way?

Become a real hero for Christ. Stand up for him. Be a real missionary wherever you are. Work and help build up the true. Do not think, because you are far removed from a congregation, that you are relieved of any responsibility, for you are not. These conditions make your responsibilities greater, if possible, and you should be the more concerned about the "Father's business." God would have us know our responsibilities and be seriously impressed with them.

Now, under such conditions as stated above, instead of sitting down and doing nothing, or going into sectarian churches and giving our influence and the means God puts into our hands to help in the promotion of things that are wrong, I suggest that each become a missionary in that community. Worship God under your own vine and fig tree, if you can do no better. Study the Bible to be wise unto salvation, scatter good tracts and leaflets and all kinds of good, religious literature. "Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." This means your money or any other material substance that you command. Do this, and at proper times put it into the hands of some one who can use it in having the gospel preached, or call the preacher into your own community and have him hold a meeting there. By doing this way the whole wide world will soon be evangelized and people will have a chance to learn the truth.

East Tennessee is certainly a great mission field, ripe unto the harvest. Let us work it. Who will help us?

We are all so constituted that the love of happiness is both a necessity of our nature and a positive duty. There is no truer index of character than the kind of object or pursuit that affords us our intensest pleasure.

—Thain Davidson.

A POPULAR MISAPPREHENSION.

BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

LOVE MUST BE THE CHRISTIAN'S RULING PASSION.

He who knows God's truth knows that the supreme and moving force of his life is love, the motive power which drives him in all life's correct relations. Love must be at the helm if we avoid wreck and at last arrive in the port of eternal rest. In love God created us in Christ, and for love. In love we are to be rooted and grounded (Eph. 3: 17); walk (Eph. 5: 2); be knit together (Col. 2: 2); edify ourselves (Eph. 4: 16); abound (1 Thess. 3: 12); increase more and more (1 Thess. 4: 10); and owe no man anything, but to love (Rom. 13: 8). Above all things we are to love (1 Pet. 4: 8); it is greater than all else besides (1 Cor. 13: 13); all the law is fulfilled in it (Gal. 5: 14; Matt. 22: 40); every other commandment is comprehended in it (Rom. 13: 9); it is the bond of perfectness (Col. 3: 14); the end of the commandment (1 Tim. 1: 5). Nor is any other grace worthy or acceptable without it. (1 Cor. 13: 1-3.) This impressive emphasis should make us sure that always we are impelled by love, and that everybody who knows us should understand it also.

BUT LOVE'S TRUE MANIFESTATIONS ARE MISUNDERSTOOD.

Most of the world, including many in the church, understand little or nothing at all of love's real nature and fruits as defined by the Holy Spirit. They are under the delusion that it is always a sweet and never a bitter thing; that he who loves another shows only the most gentle and tender sentiment, expressed in approval or condoning of no matter what wrong, and be very pleasant and sweet all the time. And, therefore, he who rebukes and condemns wrong must be impelled by something less worthy than this holy force of love. And this popular misconception works general damage among us.

LOVE SEEKS THE HIGHEST ULTIMATE GOOD OF THE OBJECTS LOVED.

To violate the manner and spirit of presenting the truth is as sinful as to violate any other part of it. This is the utmost kindness, humility, and long-suffering. But love is a heroic spirit, not a sickly sentimentalism. No one ever loved as did Jesus; all he did and said was through this divine compassion. But terribly did he hate wrong and flay and oppose wrongdoers. Likewise, Paul to the Corinthians, where horrible sins were uncovered. He brought grave public charges and administered stinging rebukes, and added that he did it to make manifest his love to them. (2 Cor. 2: 4; 7: 12.) Were the Master and Paul therein actuated by anything but love? Suppose you that they violated their own commands to love? What shall we say to these things?

THEN DO PREACHERS LOVE ERRING CHRISTIANS? How SHALL WE KNOW?

We must prove that we are possessed of great love, even to giving of our lives should the need arise. Then when I love brethren and know them to be in error, instead of excusing or capitalizing their weaknesses by playing up to them, I seek to set them right, regardless of cost to myself, even mayhap at the risk of arraying them against me. Their future is involved, and my love for their good will admit of no other course. It would be gross misuse of terms to say I love them and regard their friendship highly and take any other course. To let them alone would be hate and deception in me, even though I sugar-coated with loud assurance of love and regard for their feelings. And the same holds good in professions of love for the truth and the church. And the man who would preserve present peace and good will at the cost of allowing sins to go unrebuked and uncorrected does not really love God and the divine way and the eternal salvation of souls. Rather, he loves ease and his own belly, and with good words deceives the hearts of the simple.

OUR MESSAGES

A prosperous New Year!

Idleness is always a disgrace.

Brother Elkins asks: "Can the folks learn what Christianity is by watching you?"

Brother Srygley said: "Verily, if thou tootest not thine own horn, it shall not be tooted."

Brother Cameron says that "lots of church members are handy at criticizing and dandy at doing nothing."

E. S. Jelley requests that all mail to his address be sent to Birmingham, Ala., care of Burgess' Store, Gate City.

Brother Cameron says that "these goody-goody people who observe only the moral laws are just half ready for heaven."

W. T. Hines, Neosho, Mo., December 30: "I will conduct a debate, during the second week in January, with Mr. Fowler, on 'Russellism.' The debate will take place three miles south of Neosho."

We note Brother Golphenee, out in Montana, advises that one lady came five miles through a snowstorm to be baptized. There is not a case on record where any one was ever known to have been injured by doing what Jesus commands.

O. C. Tidwell, Huntingdon, Tenn., December 26: "I inclose a check for four dollars, for which please renew my subscription to the Gospel Advocate for 1925. Also mail me 'Peloubet's Select Notes on the International Sunday School Lessons for 1925.'"

Miss Martha Allen, 136 Green Street, Nashville, Tenn., sends in two subscribers and says: "I have six more subscribers promised. I hope I can get more. I am certainly pleading for the dear old Gospel Advocate. I wish I could put it in every home."

Tice Elkins, Arlington, Texas, December 30: "A three-days' meeting here at home closed on Sunday night, with one baptized. There is a band of good brethren here. I will go to South Texas again in January for several meetings. I have time the last of May for a meeting."

A. J. Bachman, 2638 Guyan Avenue, Huntington, W. Va., December 29: "Our meeting in this city closed on Lord's day, December 21. During this meeting twentynine were added to the fellowship of this congregation. The Lord's work is moving along nicely in this city. We hope to do greater things for Him in 1925."

Mrs. B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., December 29: "Mr. Davis is not suffering so much, but his condition remains about the same. He is still unable to leave his bed. I am profoundly grateful for the many remembrances received from the brethren here and elsewhere. May God bless and keep us all."

- J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, December 29: "I have been busy in the Lord's work and have all my time engaged in Central and East Texas. I want to commend the bold, brave stand on the unscriptural 'Billy Sunday' revival, and again affirm that the Gospel Advocate is the bravest, soundest paper among our brethren to-day."
- G. A. Dunn, 823 West Tenth Street, Dallas, Texas, December 31: "I have been much pleased with the work of the Gospel Advocate for some time. No one can make the teaching of the Book too plain. Of course, one should always be courteous. Keep the Advocate humble and true to the Book, and it will thus continue to do great good."
- J. P. Sewell, Fort Worth, Texas, Route 5, Box 158, December 30: "With the new year, 1925, I am beginning work with the Southside Church, this city. The meeting-house is located at the corner of College and Leuda Streets, just across the street from the Central High School. When in the city, worship with us. Take the University car."

Armstrong says that Boll teaches that the kingdom is now in existence. If that be true, then Boll is wrong when he says that Christ will establish a millennial kingdom when he comes again; for Daniel said the kingdom that God would set up would never be destroyed, nor should the sovereignty thereof be left to another people, but that it should stand forever, which shows that the present kingdom will never have a successor.

J. W. Brents, 711 West Street, Topeka, Kan., December 28: "In spite of sub-zero weather here, we had an excellent audience to-day. Not being able to preach myself, a number of the brethren made short and interesting talks. We enter the new year with faith in God and a firm confidence that if we will be actively engaged in his service his blessings will attend us. The article in the Gospel Advocate, December 18, entitled 'Pioneers,' and written by 'X,' was written by your humble servant. I unintentionally left off my name."

tionally left off my name."

H. L. Ray, Nashville, Tenn.: "On the second Sunday in January the Lischey Avenue congregation, formerly Jones Avenue, this city, will have their opening services in their new meetinghouse on Lischey Avenue, just beyond the end of the Meridian Street car line. Brethren Wallace and Dickson will begin a protracted meeting. There will be three services—at 11 A.M., 3 P.M., and 7 P.M.; and the congregation would appreciate your attendance at any or all three of these meetings. The meeting at 3 P.M., by Wallace and Dickson, will be especially for the members of the different congregations. Will you lend us your presence and assistance, especially at this meeting, as we wish each congregation to be represented? Be sure and come, each one of you. We take this opportunity of extending to you, one and all, our appreciation of the help and encouragement given, enabling us to have this new meetinghouse."

W. F. Lemmons, Swifton, Ark., January 1, writes: "Our last meeting of the year, at Porum, Okla., was frozen out with zero weather. I came to this place on December 24, and spent the holidays with my brothers at this place, and at Pocahontas, where I first saw the light. The last Lord's day in the year I preached at Swifton. The recent death of our only sister, Mrs. M. A. Phillips, of Memphis, Tenn., mingled sadness with the joy of the holidays. She lived as she died, with unshaken faith, and her reward is sure. I expect to be in this section of the country some time. Mail will reach me (general delivery) at Little Rock, Ark., or Nashville, Tenn. The old year has passed away with all its joys and sorrows. What whave accomplished, with all of our failures, is a matter of record. We have more to be thankful for than space permits our mentioning. We face the new year, determined, by the grace of God, to do all we can. We expect to lay hold of every opportunity to do our part in the great work."

Robert E. Wright, Bradentown, Fla., December 30, has

Robert E. Wright, Bradentown, Fla., December 30, has this to say: "My good brethren and sisters, we have made a great improvement this year over the year 1923. You have certainly done well. If you want to know where every cent of the amount given by your congregation went or the way it was expended, ask for an annual report of all funds. But we will do better than this next year, I am quite sure. I was talking to one of the Cortex brethren to-day, and he said: 'We will give three times that amount next year.' What do you think of that? 'Give, and it shall be given you,' is the way God speaks on the subject. Rob the Lord, and he will not let you go unpunished—just count on that. I believe that I can stand before you quite a number of brethren right here in Bradentown who will tell you that they have given to the Lord this year more than ever before in their lives in a single year, and who will also tell you that they have been prospered more this year than in any one year of their lives, and will prove it to you by their books, if you are a doubter. Who wants to call my hand on that?"

H. C. Shoulders, Barrackville, W. Va., December 27:

H. C. Shoulders, Barrackville, W. Va., December 27: "Sister Susan Ella, of Granville, Tenn., will celebrate her one hundredth birthday on the twentieth day of January, 1925. Sister Ella has been a member of the church seventy-seven or seventy-eight years. Possibly she is the oldest member of the church of Christ now living. I was to see her last September. While there, she informed me that she had been to the services several times during the past summer. She is not able to get to the meetinghouse without assistance, but some one takes her in a car when she is able to attend. She and her daughter, Sister Sarah Terry, live together. She is able to walk from her room to the dining room for her meals, and really prefers to do that. She can talk to any one about things that happened fifty, sixty, seventy, eighty, and ninety years ago, with much interest and ease. Old people appreciate very much being remembered in any kindly way. So let us all make her one hundredth birthday the happiest one of them all. Let each one who may read this account make a note of the time and send her a birthday card or some kindly remembrance. Please send early, that she may get it on or before the twentieth. Address Mrs. Susan Ella, Granville, Tenn." We urge all our readers to remember this dear old mother in Israel.

Neglect and indifference are bad signs.

Always be ready, and then you will never be sorry.

A man without an ideal is like a ship without a port.

The time we trifle away, eternity itself cannot retrieve. When some people get what they want, they don't want it.

F. W. Smith preached at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day.

H. C. Hale preached at Lewisburg, Tenn., last Lord's

day.

Trying to explain away a fact is like kicking against the goads.

The more riches a man has, the more he is burdened with care.

F. B. Srygley preached at Fifth Street Church, this city, last Lord's day.

H. Leo Boles preached at Grandview Heights, this city, last Lord's day.

What some people are speaks so loud that we cannot hear what they say.

Lytton Alley preached at Highland Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day.

R. P. Cuff preached at Seminary, in Rutherford County, Tenn., last Lord's day.

Shakespeare says that "in struggling with misfortune lies the true proof of virtue."

A young man or a young woman who has his or her own way is sure to go to ruin.

No scholar has ever been found who did not say that "baptize" means to "immerse."

Perhaps the reason some depict the New Year as a baby is that people stay up all night with it.

A man can be depended on never to preach the truth when he is trying to build up his popularity.

Married, on December 20, at the Hermitage Hotel, Joe Morris and Christine White, of Bowling Green, Ky., S. H. Hall officiating.

A. B. Lipscomb preached at the Reid Avenue church of Christ, this city, last Lord's day, with two fine services and one baptism.

Married, on December 27, at the home of S. H. Hall, 800 Shelby Avenue, Morris S. Page and Lillian Lawrence, S. H. Hall officiating.

David Lipscomb College opened its winter term on December 31 with an increased enrollment. It is enjoying the greatest year in the history of the college.

Many persons, "for the sake of convenience," go to more trouble to try to prove that baptism does not mean immersion than they would have to go to be immersed.

E. A. Elam preached at David Lipscomb College last Lord's day. His subject was, "God Has Spoken to the Human Race." Brother Elam showed that God spoke first through the prophets and then through his Son.

John Wesley said: "'Buried with him,' alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion." ("Notes on New Testament.") We call upon Methodists to accept the truth as spoken by their founder, John Wesley.

S. H. Hall reports great services at Russell Street Church, this city, on the first Sunday in the new year. Large crowds, with one reclaimed and six added by statement. Dr. J. S. Ward delivered a very highly appreciated sermon at the evening services.

W. S. Moody preached two excellent sermons to large and attentive audiences at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day. Over four hundred were present at the Bible study. The average attendance for last year was three hundred and thirty-six.

Dr. S. T. Hardison, of Lewisburg, Tenn., said last Lord's day that he had been reading the Gospel Advocate for fifty years, and that he had never seen it as good as it is at the present time. Also, Dr. Hardison encouraged the Lewisburg congregation to subscribe for and read the Advocate.

W. A. Hardy, Bemis, Tenn., January 3: "A meeting is to begin here this evening at the church of God (Holy Rollers, or Holiness). We tried to get the pastor to discuss the operation of the Holy Spirit, but they refuse to discuss any Bible subject. They say they do not believe in debates."

John Calvin, founder of the Presbyterian Church, said: "Churches should be at liberty to adopt either [mode], according to the diversity of climates, although it is evident the term 'baptize' means to immerse, and that this was the form used by the primitive church." ("Institutes," Volume III., page 344.)

On the design of baptism, John Wesley, in "Notes on the New Testament," Acts 22: 16, says: "Baptism administered to real penitents is both a means and a seal of pardon. Nor did God ordinarily in the primitive church bestow this on any unless through this means." Will Bishop Mouzon please take notice?

Brother Srygley says: "I have never studied about how to sail away in space, unpin the curtains of the night, and show the audience the stars. I notice that those who try to do that sort of thing are more interested in trying to increase their popularity by pretty flights of oratory than in plainly preaching the word of God."

B. B. Young, Bartlesville, Okla., January 2: "R. L. Colley, of Paragould, Ark., began a meeting here on December 7 and continued it eight days, closing with five additions—three by baptism and two by membership. We have had one confession and baptism since the meeting. We are striving to build up the cause of Christ here. We would be glad to have any one passing through Bartlesville stop off and see us. We meet on the corner of Santa Fe and Cudahy Streets. May the Lord bless the Gospel Advocate."

F. D. Srygley said: "The Christian Guide of December 20, 1899, had on its front page a large picture, under which were printed the words: 'John Wesley, founder of Methodism.' The Midland Methodist of the same date had on its front page a large picture of Mary, with the infant Savior in her arms. I like the picture in the Midland Methodist better than the one in the Christian Guide, though I regard John Wesley as a man of many excellent traits of character. After all, it is better to get away from Wesley, Calvin, Luther, Campbell, and all other uninspired men, and draw near to the Lord in full assurance of faith."

R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., December 31: "I was with the North Chattanooga congregation, Chattanooga, Tenn., last Lord's day. I preached, morning and evening, to two splendid audiences. One took membership with the congregation at the night service. Claud Woodroof was with the Ridgedale congregation. R. R. Brooks was with the St. Elmo congregation for the morning service and was with the Central congregation for the night service. W. C. Phillips was with the Cowart Street congregation. I will be with the Ridgedale congregation next Lord's day. This congregation is moving along nicely with its Bible drill each Friday night."

G. F. Gibbs, Greenville, S. C., December 30: "Wise people are always on the lookout for a good investment. Well, a good one has been found, and though it is not a new one, yet it is often passed up for some less suitable. The church here, feeling a greater need of things divine, decided to have a Bible study, which we did. It continued six weeks, and covered the books of First Samuel and Luke and various connective passages. Those who had before studied the Bible were strengthened in their knowledge; some who did not understand now have an exceptional understanding of the books; some who had before stated that they read the Bible, but could not understand it, now know why; and, all in all, we are a wiser people, a better church, and are more able to stand against the wiles of the evil one. Try it. Three have recently been baptized, and with plans and prayers we enter 1925 with hope of seeing much done in this part of the Master's vineyard."

Price Billingsley, Mango, Fla., January 1: "I am now in the land of flowers and perpetual sunshine for several meetings. The first service of the new year we held to night in the initial sermon of the Mango revival. We had a full house, and everything seems to be in the best possible condition for a glorious meeting. While down here this time I plan to tell the Gospel Advocate readers some things concerning this marvelous country. This at some later time. For the present, while the matter is fresh in mind, I would make a brief report upon a short meeting I have just held at Haynesville, La. A good congregation is there, though it has lived under some handicaps. Last Lord's day we made up near eight hundred dollars in cash to pay off their paving indebtedness, and at the same time succeeded in getting subscribed about two thousand dollars toward employing a preacher for full time to work for the congregation and to give attention to some near-by mission points. I now expect the best things of those brethren, and I would say, 'Watch Haynesville grow.'"

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Please answer the following question: A young couple marry, and in about two months thereafter a child is born. They are members of the church. They say they are getting on well and are happy. What should the church do g on well and are happy. What should the church do this case? Please give the scriptures bearing on the subject.

The church should congratulate them on doing the only scriptural thing which they could do after having done wrong. They should have married at the proper time, or before they sinned; but since they did not, they should repent of their sin and live happily together, as they are reported as doing. That they are doing this helps to show that they have repented. Adultery, whensoever committed and by whomsoever committed, is adultery, a sin condemned by the Lord. Those who live in it without repentance will be lost; but when repented of and forsaken, it will be forgiven. If these young people have not already done so, they should voluntarily acknowledge in a proper way that they have sinned.

Celina, Tenn.-Please answer, through the Gospel Advo-With what kind of a heart does a sinner believe in C. A. ASHLOCK.

Faith comes by hearing the word of God. (Rom. 10: 17; see, also, John 20: 30, 31; Acts 2: 14, 22, 36, 37; Acts 15: 7; Acts 17: 11; 2 Thess. 1: 10.) Before a sinner can believe in God, he must hear and learn of God. (Acts 14: 15: Acts 17: 25.) Before he can believe in Jesus, the Christ, the Son of the living God, he must hear of Christ. (Rom. 10: 14; see especially John 6: 44, 45.) After a sinner has heard the truth of God and the gospel of Christ and has been convinced of their claims, all depends then upon what he decides to do. Many rulers of the Jews believed on Jesus; "but because of the Pharisees they did not confess it ["him" in the margin], lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the glory that is of men more than the glory that is of God." (John 12: 42, 43.) What kind of hearts did they have? And who was responsible for this condition of their hearts? "The demons also believe, and shudder." (James 2: 19.) What kind of hearts have they? On the other hand, thousands who heard the word of the Lord "were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles. Brethren, what shall we do?" And when told by Peter, "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins," they that "received his word were baptized: and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." 2: 37, 38, 41.) This is the kind of heart they had.

The parable of the sower embraces four kinds of hearers and three kinds of believers after having heard the word of God, therefore four kinds of hearts-namely, the wayside hearer, out of whose heart the devil snatched the word of God, lest he should become a believer; the stonyground hearer, who became a believer, but who had no depth and courage of conviction to endure persecution; the thorny-ground hearer, who became a believer, but who allowed the word of God to be choked out of his heart. This is the kind of heart these believers have and for which condition they are alone responsible. The goodground hearer is the only one benefited by the word, because he not only believes the word, but holds it fast in a good and honest heart, and brings forth fruit with steadfastness. His heart is honest with itself, with the truth, and with God. God does not make men dishonest, but gives all opportunities to hear the gospel, to obey it, and to be saved. He leaves it with men to choose for themselves whom they will serve, and commands them to keep their heart "with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." (Prov. 4: 23.)

Select, Ky., November 2.—Gospel Advocate: Can you not give us an article on the evil of the tobacco habit? I look upon it as very sinful and think our church should denounce it in strong terms. Please give our church members your advice as regards this filthy and sinful as well as costly habit. I think many would quit the habit if they were admonished by their friends to do so. In love for the Advocate.

J. W. Cox.

The strongest terms in which any evil or evildoer can be denounced are the ones used by the Bible. The strongest thing that can be said against anything is that God declares it sinful, and therefore wrong. To all who love God this is enough and also very strong, because they fear disobedience to him and transgression of his law. To denounce sin and sinners in a partisan and bitter spirit and in harsh and vituperative terms is to drive the sinners from the truth. Bitterness, a partisan spirit, vituperation, etc., are not signs of either courage or strength, but, on the cortrary, of weakness. I repeat, God's language is sufficiently strong.

For the consideration of all, I ask: What does the Bible say about tobacco, anyway, either in favor of or against its use? The Bible very clearly, strongly, and abundantly teaches against the manufacture, sale, and use of strong drink of any kind as a beverage. But that raising, selling, and using tobacco as a stimulant are wrong are inferences, because they are not mentioned in the Bible. But the same is true of opium and other narcotics as stimulants or "dopes." Yet such use of narcotics is wrong. "Come now, and let us reason together, saith Jehovah." (Isa. 1: 18.) This is the wise and righteous course.

The use of "a little wine" only for the "stomach's sake," or as medicine; the use of opium and other narcotics only as medicine and when really needed; and the use of tobacco for any good purpose cannot be sinful or wrong. I am not familiar with the good uses to which tobacco is put; but for these purposes it cannot be wrong to raise it.

To show that to smoke it, to chew it, or to dip it is cestly, injurious to health, and a filthy habit ought to be enough to restrain Christians from its use. Christians are forbidden by the Lord to do anything which defiles and weakens the body and mind, because their body is a temple of the Holy Spirit. (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20; see, also, 1 Cor. 3: 16, 17.) If in any way it can be shown that it is beneficial to mind or body to any man, it would not be wrong for that man to use it.

That public and private schools, colleges, railroads, manufactories, banks, etc., are discriminating against its use shows that increasing enlightenment regards its use as evil. This is a strong argument against its use. This shows, too, that sometimes money does more to restrain evil practices than the Bible. The great World Warthat is, its officers and others connected with it-had much to do with spreading the injurious habit of cigarette smoking, as well as other uses of tobacco.

If preachers, elders, other teachers in the church, and parents would study this evil and teach wisely and continuously against it, they could do much toward restraining Christians from its use; but when preachers, elders, teachers, and parents use it, they cannot teach against it.

God cannot help me in my business if my business injures others. Nor can I expect God to give me wisdom that I may outwit and defraud my neighbor.—Selected.

In true worship, the soul of man can have but one attitude toward material things, and that an unselfish and beneficent one growing out of a desire to gather up those material things in one grand, supreme oblation to God in worship .- Henry Lowndes Drew.

HOME READING

MEN WHO SHOULD NOT MARRY.

The man who talks about "supporting" a wife when she is working fourteen hours a day, including Sundays.

The man who thinks it is "all nonsense" for a woman to want a ten-cent bunch of pansies or violets, when she hasn't seen a flower for five months.

The man who thinks a woman's bonnet ought to cost about seventy-five cents.

The man who thinks his wife exists for the comfort and convenience of his mother and sisters.

The man who provides himself with a family and trusts Providence to provide the family with a home and somehing to eat.

The man who thinks that women are angels.

The man who thinks that nobody but an angel is good elough to be his wife.

The man who thinks that a woman ought to give up a thusand-dollar salary and work in his kitchen for her board and a few clothes, and be glad of the chance.

The man who thinks a five-year-old worsted street gown is the proper sort of toilet for a dinner party or a receition.

The man who labors under the delusion that his wife's motey belongs to him.

Te man who thinks a parlor carpet ought to last fifteen years.

Th man who has seventy-five dollars' worth of fishing tackle and can't afford a new set of curtains for the dining rom.

Theman who always leaves his wife at home when he takes is summer vacation.

The nan who doesn't know what on earth a woman wants ith money when she has a bill at the dry-goods store.

The mn who thinks a sick wife would feel better if she would "ust get up and stir around,"

The mn who forgets his manners as soon as he crosses his own treshold.

The ma who thinks he can keep house better than his wife does.

The ma who thinks there is "no place like home"—for grumbing and growling.—New York Times.

♥ ♥ ♥ ELLEN MAY'S PRAYER.

Ellen Ma was a salesman's wife. Her last name was Smith, but hat doesn't matter, really, for every one called her Ellen My instead of Mrs. Smith.

Ellen Ma's husband was a tall, thin, worried-looking man. He as trying hard to make good in a difficult territory, an he wasn't at home very often.

"My dear" he said to Ellen May once, as he hurried stationward fter a flying visit—"my dear, it seems as if I never see yo any more. It seems as if I'm always going away from yu!" And his worried mouth twitched, and he winked hi eyes as if he wanted to keep back the—well, tears.

Ellen May was a blonde, fluffy thing, with a sunny smile, and, at imes, a childishly serious manner.

"You must't look at it that way," said Ellen May, touching his pat sleeve with her slender little hand. "Sometimes wen you're as far away from me as—as Los Angeles—feel as if you're near—near!"

"When is tht?" questioned Ellen May's husband.

"When I saymy prayers!" answered Ellen May, softly.

"Darling," teathed Ellen May's husband.

They were smost in sight of the station before Ellen May spoke agen. And then—

"Honey," said Ellen May, "let's say our prayers, each of us, at exactly nine-thirty every night, so we'll know really that we're together!"

And then they reached the station, and the train came snorting in, and Ellen May's husband kissed her fervently, though hurriedly, and she waved her handkerchief and smiled her sunny, though a bit tearful, little smile, until the last smoke wreath had quite faded from sight.

But that night when she knelt down, at nine-thirty, to say her prayers, she wasn't alone; for some hundred miles away, in a dingy hotel bedroom, her husband knelt and asked God, reverently, to keep her—safe.

Every night they knelt down at the same time—Ellen May and her husband, although the hundred miles that stretched between them lengthened out to a thousand, and then two thousand. Every night at nine-thirty they were together, really together. And then, one day, when Ellen May's husband was on his return trip, the great flood came, and report had it that whole railroad trains were washed away.

There were other wives in Ellen May's town who had salesman husbands on the road; and, when the news of the flood came flashing across the wires, there were many drawn faces and tearful eyes and tortured hearts. Perhaps a score of women gathered at the railroad station to send telegrams and watch the trains. Ellen May was there with a white little face, and the sunny smile quite gone from her lips.

"My husband"—a frail, middle-aged woman touched Ellen May on the arm—"is on a train that was just in the flood district. Do you 'spose—?"

Ellen May looked at her pitifully.

"So was mine," said Ellen May. Her lips quivered.

The day wore on. Morning lengthened into afternoon, and afternoon crept into dusk, and turned, of a sudden, into night; and still the women waited for word there at the station. Trains had stopped coming through, and many of the wires were down. Somewhere a clock struck nine, and the women sobbed as they huddled together, piteously, in a corner. The oldest of them looked almost broken as she sat there; even the youth of Ellen May had been crushed from her soul. The moments dragged on, and from somewhere the same clock chimed a half hour; and then, all at once, with an inarticulate little cry, Ellen May dropped to her knees. In after years she never tells what made her pray—whether it was impulse or divine guidance or just habit. But she did pray—

"O God," said Ellen May, "please—he's out there; in danger. Keep him safe, if," she faltered—"if it be thy will; and let him know that I'm with him, with him—" Her voice trailed into nothingness.

Suddenly the other women were on their knees beside Ellen May. One of them raised a quavering old voice: "Father," said the voice, "we'll have been married forty years—come June. This was his last trip. Bring him safe to me—"

"If it be thy will," finished a younger voice that shook. And the women knelt there, each one silently saying her own prayer to her own God—a prayer for her man, in danger and distress.

The telegraph operator found them so when he came in fifteen minutes later, telegraph blank in his hand. He cleared his throat several times before he spoke:

"The messages," he said, softly, "are beginning to come through. No trains have been swept away, after all, I guess—" and then stopped talking, for Ellen May quietly had fainted.

And that is why, in Ellen May's little town, every woman, with a husband on the road, kneels down at half after nine and says a little prayer to God—a prayer for a man who is far away, and may be going into danger.—Margaret E. Sangster.

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipseomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is malled regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subacribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is charged, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

QUESTIONS TO BE AVOIDED.

BY E. A. ELAM.

(Continued from last week.)

That which the Lord says against stealing, lying, drunkenness, adultery, and murder should be taught, as all will admit, with all the force of the word of God. But immorality is not the only sin. All that the Lord says against teaching fables; foolish and untaught questions; "secret things," which belong to God alone; and the doctrines and commandments of men, should be taught by the same authority and with the same force and zeal. Furthermore, all who do not preach as zealously against all efforts to teach on such questions as they do that which God commands to be preached do not preach as he requires.

Let it be understood that preachers have no choice of what they should preach and teach. God has made this choice for them. Neither can they decide to preach according to whether or not it suits their convenience, comfort, and pocketbook, as one chooses a profession. They can choose whom they will serve; but when they choose to serve God, that choice in the main settles the questions of their preaching. Their strongest preaching is their godly daily lives; but if as Christians they can accomplish more good by publicly proclaiming the gospel than in any other way, then they must do that. It is not a matter of support or nonsupport, just as becoming Christians is not, but of love for God and men. Then, when it is clear that they can accomplish more good by preaching the gospel, God, as stated, says what they must preach and what they must not preach. As God said to Jonah, " Preach . . . the preaching that I bid thee," so he says to all preachers for all time. As God alone could send the Savior into the world, he alone could give "the word of reconciliation," or the conditions of pardon and peace; hence, any preachers who presume to change or modify these conditions exalt themselves above God, or set him aside. Furthermore, preachers cannot choose what part of God's will they will preach and what part they will not preach. They must preach it all, rightly applied; nothing can be omitted and nothing can be added.

What a man preaches depends upon why he preaches. If he preaches only for the salvation of men and the glory of God, he will preach only the will of God; if he preaches for the glory of men, he will preach that which will glorify himself; and if he preaches for money, he will preach that which will bring him the most money.

The New Testament shows that in the days of the apostles some sought their own glory by teaching their own theories (John 7: 16-18); some perverted the gospel of Christ (Gal. 1: 6, 7); some corrupted [made merchandise of] the word of God (2 Cor. 2: 17); some supposed that godliness is a way of gain (1 Tim. 6: 5); some were unruly, vain talkers and deceivers, who subverted whole houses, "teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake" (Tit. 1: 10, 11); some handled the word of God deceitfully (2 Cor. 4: 2); some with fair and smootl speech beguiled the hearts of the innocent, caused divsions contrary to the teaching of Christ, and served ther own belly and not the Lord Jesus (Rom. 16: 17, 18; some taught a different doctrine from that of Chris; and some fashioned themselves as ministers of righteosness, while they were only servants of Satan. They were false prophets and deceitful workers. (2 Cor. 11: 12-14) Thus we see that many, claiming to be followers of Chrit, fell far short of or went beyond his teaching. In tis way they caused trouble, produced strife, and made ac-

However distressing this sad fact is, we should no be astonished that there are such preachers to-day a the ones described above.

That we may be absolutely safe in this particulr, let us, in deep reverence for God and profound respet for his word, mark with our pencils all passages in the New Testament which name questions to be avoided an which condemn the preaching of anything except Chrit, and him crucified, or "the word." Let us note in this connection the strife, division, and ruin which result frm such

By the laying on of Paul's hands Timothy ossessed some spiritual gift, which he was exhorted to 'stir up" for the edification of the church and the glor of God; yet, with this gift, he was commanded to continu to study the Bible and to refuse foolish and untaught custions. If Timothy with this spiritual gift must continu to study the scriptures and must avoid all the questionswhich God says must be avoided, no preachers of the resent day can be so well educated and wise, or can he such an insight into unrevealed things, that they should not heed the admonitions and obey the commands thich were given him. Beyond the word of God, or thirs revealed, none can see and go.

Timothy was left in Ephesus that he miht "charge certain men not to teach a different doctrin, neither to give heed to fables and endless genealogies, thich minister questionings, rather than a dispensation f God which is in faith." (1 Tim. 1: 3, 4.)

Such teaching and such questions do ot feed and strengthen faith, but, on the contrary, descoy it. Such teachers are not men of faith; but they unlermine faith in the simple but powerful gospel of Christ

Already in the church at Ephesus som had swerved from "love out of a pure heart and a good onscience and faith unfeigned," and had turned aside ato vain talking, desiring to be teachers of the law, although they understood neither what they said nor whreof they confidently affirmed. (1 Tim. 1: 5-7.)

Now, as then, teachers of various errs confidently affirm that which they do not understand, ad they do not know what they say.

"A different doctrine" is anything diffrent from the teaching of Christ, and, therefore, contrary to it and divisive and sinful.

Whether "endless genealogies" refers to Jewish genealogies or to a mystic philosophy of false teachers then arising, a discussion of them was forbidden. Hence, this question or any mystic philosophy is now forbidden.

Fables are frequently mentioned in the New Testament. By consulting any ordinary dictionary, it can be learned that a fable is not only "a story with a moral, especially one in which animals speak and act like human beings," but "a fictitious narrative, or statement; untruth;" a fabrication, invention, as a story.

God warns the church against giving "heed to fables," and commands it to "refuse profane and old wives' fables." (1 Tim. 4: 7.) Preachers are charged also not to preach fables. Timothy was solemnly charged to "preach the word;" to be "urgent in season, out of season," in doing so; to "reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching," and he was charged to do this for the reason that the time will come when the church "will not endure the sound doctrine; but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 1-4.) Note the striking contrast between "the word" and fables.

Never in the last hundred years so much as now have fables been preached for the gospel and have so many congregations shown a distaste for the gospel and have turned unto fables—fictitious stories, fabrications, smooth and fair speeches of the modern "minister" or "pastor." Congregations are heaping unto themselves such teachers. Such teachers are in demand; congregations are calling for and hunting for them.

Peter declares that the gospel is not composed of "cunningly devised fables," and that the apostles in preaching Christ had not followed such.

A sermon which does not embrace the facts, the commandments, the promises, the hope, and the salvation of the gospel—all the teaching of Christ—however smooth and fair its language may be and entertaining and beautiful the story, is nothing more than a cunningly devised fable which gratifies itching ears and turns away the hearers from the truth.

GONE FOREVERMORE.

BY F. W. SMITH.

We have emerged from the old year which marks another annual milestone on the road of life, and are standing upon the threshold of the new year with its unwritten history.

While we thus stand, it may be profitable to look back upon the pages of the past and out upon the unknown future. It is sadly true that we cannot alter the record of the past nor foretell the future, but we can profit by the one and plan for the other.

WHAT LESSONS CAN WE GATHER FROM THE OLD YEAR?

- 1. It has gone, to return no more—an unreturning record of time, with its failures and successes, its opportunities and responsibilities. How appropriate, then, are the words, "The mill will never grind with the water that is past!"
- 2. We must, therefore, recognize the past as a sealed record, and, in the language of Pilate, we are forced to say, "What I have written, I have written," which means, of course, it cannot be changed. Our thoughts, words, and deeds are indelibly fixed for time and eternity, and a thousand prayers with an ocean of tears cannot recall them.

The evil thought that polluted the fountain of life has done that which only repentance and the blood of Christ can clarify; but neither can repair the injury wrought by that evil thought, for "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The hot, hasty, and unkind words which fell from our lips have hurt, wounded, and crushed the spirits of those for whom they were intended. They and God may forgive us, but all of our repentance cannot remove the scars our cruel words have made.

The evil deeds of our past have left their imprint, not only upon our characters, but upon the hearts and lives of those who could be influenced in the wrong direction who came within the range of our influence. Have we, by an evil deed, started even one soul on the downward road? The very possibility of having exerted such an influence is enough to cause the soul to shudder.

- 3. The old year has been one of unnumbered blessings and mercies. Each day has brought to us blessings in our homes, in the social and business world. The song, "Count your blessings one by one, and see what the Lord hath done," asks too much of us, for no one can estimate the blessings of God within a day. But the all-important question for each one to determine is: Am I grateful, and does my gratitude find expression in holy and righteous living?
- 4. The year that has just been swept into the great ocean of eternity was one of glorious opportunities for growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. What, then, is our spiritual status? Have we lowered or raised the standard of our religious lives before God? Are we stronger in the Lord and in the power of his might than we were twelve months ago? These are serious and solemn questions, and should not, therefore, be passed without an introspective view.
- 5. The old year has been one of discipline, of trial, or a testing time, as all its predecessors have been. Homes have been draped in mourning, reverses in business have fallen to the lot of some, and beds of affliction have been the heritage of others. God has been pruning his vineyard that it may bear more and better fruit. His afflictive dispensations are as needful and beneficial as any of his manifold blessings. Have we been rebellious at the rough and rugged pathway over which our God has led us? Remember that he only permits such afflictions to come upon his faithful children for their good and for the good of the world.

The afflictions of Job have blessed the world for centuries and nerved many a suffering saint to endure his seeming misfortune. Will we profit spiritually by our trials, and let them be coined, by Him who causes all things to work together for good to them who love God, into rich assets, priceless jewels of Christian experience? (Note Heb. 12: 4-11.)

"Sometime when all of life's lessons have been learned, And sun and stars forevermore have set, The things which our weak judgments here have spurned,

The things which our weak judgments here have spurned. The things o'er which we grieve with lashes wet, Will flash before us out of life's dark night,

As stars shine most in deepest tints of blue;
Then we shall see how all God's plans were right
And what seemed reproof was love most true."

LESSONS REGARDING THE NEW YEAR.

- 1. We should enter it with increased knowledge gained from the experiences of the past, and this should enable us to make great improvement. Men in all the business affairs of life profit by past experiences, and why should not the children of God do the same in religion? Shall we make the same blunders and mistakes that so impeded our spiritual progress in the past? "Look therefore carefully how ye walk, not as unwise, but as wise; redeeming the time, because the days are evil." (Eph. 5: 15, 16.)
- 2. We should plan greater things for the extension of the kingdom as churches and individuals. Our fields for Christian endeavor are constantly increasing, and with these our opportunities and responsibilities will also increase. Shall we meet them? Will churches remain in the same old notch, or will they move up to a higher standard of effort to save themselves and the world?

- 3. New experiences and new problems will confront us, and with these we must deal; for, in the language of Joshua to Israel: "Ye have not passed this way before." (Josh. 3: 4.) The future is an untrodden path, and we know not yet its dangers.
- 4. Finally, in all of our calculations and plans for ourselves and for the Lord's cause, let us not forget that we may not live (Prov. 27: 1; James 4: 13); but let us be ready and willing to live or die for the Lord.

"IMMERSION NOT IN THE BIBLE." BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

Recently a pamphlet of some thirty pages with the above title fell into my hands. This booklet claims to give "twenty-five reasons why immersion is not taught in the Bible." The author of the booklet as given on the flyleaf is the "Rev. C. W. Wimberly, of the Louisville Conference, M. E. Church, South."

Though the author boldly declares that immersion is not taught in the Bible, yet on page 6 he says: "'Do you ever immerse?' we are often asked. Certainly, and, furthermore, we have never spent one moment trying to dissuade a candidate who desired immersion. If, from training, early impressions, seeing and hearing, one feels that they prefer immersion, and as there is no principle involved, by all means they should have what they want. It is utter folly not to give them immersion. If for any reason it once gets into the system, it will come out later, and thereby become more embarrassing. Yes, immersion is baptism; no one who believes in affusion will deny that; but our contention is-and we propose to give twenty-five proofs to sustain that contention-immersion is not taught in the Bible at all." The bad grammar in this extract is the best thing there is in it.

It will be noted that the brother says: "If . one feels that they prefer immersion." I am unable to see how one becomes they so quickly; but I could overlook this little discrepancy if anything in the quotation was right. But here it is in black and white, and in italics at that, immersion is not taught in the Bible at all, and yet the gentleman says he would immerse one if he prefers. In other words, he would go down into the water and, with uplifted hand, say, "I baptize thee in the name of the sacred Three," and do a thing which the Bible does not teach. But he says he certainly would do that, "as there is no principle involved." I wonder how a principle could be involved, if doing a thing in the name of Christ, which he has not commanded or in any way taught, does not involve a principle? If the gentleman had much principle, it would certainly be involved in the doing of such a thing. The gentleman thinks that a man should have what he wants, but I think he should have what the Bible teaches; but granting that a man should have what he wants, does a preacher have a right to do what he believes is unscriptural in order that one may have that right? But immersion is baptism, though it is not taught in the Bible! But if it is not taught in the Bible, it cannot be Bible Baptism, and the man that helps one perform such a baptism is not a Bible man. The gentleman rejoices over the fact that he is helping one do an unscriptural act, because he will be more embarrassed when he gets over his delusion. It seems to me that it ought to embarrass Mr. Wimberly that he helped him do an unscriptural act and has never got over the part he played in it, as he has announced here that he proposes to keep it up. He is out to please the people; and if he has to do an unscriptural thing to please those who for any cause want immersion, he is the man that can do it and involve no principle. He says immersion is baptism, and that no one who believes in affusion will deny it. Then my practice is not in dispute, since I am sure that no one who believes in immersion will deny it.

The gentleman begins his first reason in these words: "Baptism with water in any form or mode cannot be considered as essential to salvation. All who place such construction upon it are not regarded as orthodox in the true sense. Those who place the most stress upon immersion will, when pressed, deny that salvation is dependent upon water at all. Then, viewed from their own position, it is not in harmony with the wisdom of God—a wisdom so obvious in all he does—to impose an ironclad, unchangeable, essential mode of doing a nonessential thing."

From the foregoing I can see that Jesus Christ is not regarded as orthodox in the true sense, because he said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) This quotation from the Savior's own words seems to me to make baptism as essential to salvation as it does faith. Mr. Wimberly says that any man who does that is not considered orthodox in the true sense. If I have to go back on the Savior's word in order to be orthodox in the true sense, then I will be it in some other sense. I admit that this quotation from Mr. Wimberly hits my Baptist friends rather hard, but it does not touch Christ and me, because we believe that baptism is as essential to salvation as faith. Mr. Wimberly says that when men are pressed they "will deny that salvation is dependent upon water at all." Christ and I have never been "pressed," I suppose, because he never denied his language which I have just quoted, and I am sure I have never done so. Jesus Christ and I have never been in Mr. Wimberly's grip, and we may not have been pressed as badly as he seems to think he could press us:

In this connection the gentleman makes another statement without authority from the word of God. He says, "God has left the question of church government open. Why? Because it is secondary and not essential to our religious life. Baptism is a nonessential touching salvation, because salvation is predicted on nothing but faith in the atoning blood." Who said that God had left the question of church government open? C. F. Wimberly, of the Louisville Conference, M. E. Church, South. The New Testament makes no such statement. Jesus said: "And I also say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16: 18.) This language is fundamental, and it means, "I will found my church." Jesus did not say, "I leave this question open and only give you a few principles, and you can take these and build a Methodist Church, South;" but he said, "I will build my church." It is, therefore, a divine institution, and Mr. Wimberly has no scriptural right to talk about its not being essential to abide in this building. It is an open question because he and his kind have opened it without authority from the Head of the church.

After the gentleman says that church government is an open question, because it is secondary and not essential to our religious life, he says, on page 12 of his pamphlet: "Our religion is expressed through the church of God, all of which is an exponent of his wisdom; it is mercy, tenderness, and decency. Whatever violates these cannot be in harmony with the spirit of a compassionate Father. It is not in keeping with all else he has done to impose upon his church a ceremony so crude, so shocking, and so dangerous as baptism by immersion." What has he got to do with the church of God, when he belongs to the "M. E. Church, South?" What does the gentleman mean by saying our religion is expressed through the church of God? I would say that the religion of the church of God is expressed through the New Testament, rather than through the church; but Wimberly seems to put things together just to hear them jingle without any regard to the truth in the matter. But immersion is crude, shocking, and dangerous! The gentleman is needlessly agitated. He would make his readers believe that water is nearly as dangerous as a "Gatling gun." Water does not hurt any one internally, externally, or eternally. But he talks about Greenland and Iceland, where it is so cold. But does not the brother know that water cannot get colder than thirty-two degrees? For at that point it turns to ice. If the air is below zero, it would be better to put one into the water, which is always above thirty-two. Instead of its being so dangerous in cold climates, it appears from this fact that it would be merciful to immerse these freezing Icelanders.

One other misrepresentation and I am through: "Some of the strongest of immersionists have in this country renounced it all after going below the surface of the subject. This was the result of research, exposing the theories and dogmas of a lifetime. We mention two noted examples, Doctors Fairfield and Whitsett. Both were selected for special duties touching the tenets of their faith, which was a compliment from their church. The result was the same with both; as soon as they went into the subject as honest scholars, the superstructure tumbled. Dr. Fairfield's 'Letters on Baptism' is one of the strongest books on the subject we have met with. Dr. Whitsett was removed or forced to resign from the presidency of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary as a reward for his discoveries."

That is a terrible misrepresentation of Mr. Whitsett, who is now dead. The gentleman may have thought he was telling the truth on a dead man, but his ignorance is inexcusable. Mr. Whitsett made no such discoveries or announcement as is here suggested. Whitsett learned by his research that some of his misguided Southern brethren were in error in their claim to Baptist church succession. This was no new discovery to men of information on church history. But Mr. Wimberly does not misrepresent Whitsett any worse than he does Jesus Christ and his apostles. Mr. Wimberly hails from Louisville, or the Louisville Conference, and could have easily learned the truth on this subject. I do not recall "Dr. Fairfield," but the gentleman says the result was the same with both; and if this be true, he has misrepresented "Dr. Fairfield' also.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON. BY T. B. LARIMORE.

December 25-Christmas Day-has come and gone, and we are still alive. According to our morning papers, however, many who had been alive and happy now, had there been no Christmas Day, have ceased to suffer and to speed. It is almost unbelievable that, in nearly all cases of automobile wreck and ruin, death and destruction, the cars concerned were making less than twenty miles an hour! Selah. As we have no car, have never had one, and have no hope of ever having one, however, I shall sidestep that subject and say something about Christmas.

Yesterday was a bright, beautiful, sunny Christmas Day here, with scarcely enough scattering clouds to break the monotony of the beautiful blue above us. The temperature was seasonable: highest, 36; lowest, 19-above zero. But I purposed to write about Christmas originally and historically, which, of course, suggests consultation of books on the subject. As the Book of books is silent on that theme, I shall try to gather some satisfactory gleanings from the Encyclopedia Britannica. A word with Webster first, however. He defines "Christmas" as follows: "An annual festival (December 25) in memory of the birth of Christ."

So much for Webster. Now for the Encyclopedia. Speaking of Christmas, the Britannica says: "Before the fifth century there was no consensus of opinion as to when it (Christmas) should come in the calendar, whether on the 6th of January, or the 25th of March, or the 25th of December." This makes it clear that the compilers of the Encyclopedia Britannica claimed no better authority for what they recorded on the subject than "consensus of opinion." The Encyclopedia further says: "There were, however, many speculations in the second century about the date of Christ's birth. Clement of Alexandria, toward its close, mentions several such, and condemns them as superstitious. Some chronologists, he says, alleged the birth of Christ to have occurred in the twenty-eighth year of Augustus, on the 20th of May. Others set it on the 19th or 20th of April. Clement himself set it on the 17th of November."

All of this shows, of course, that nothing definite is known concerning the date of the birth of Christ, and circumstances connected with that wonderful event indicate that those who placed the date at December 25 probably missed it as far as it was possible to do so.

Observed as a midwinter holiday, devoted to expressions of love and friendship and the interchange of good wishes, it is a pleasant day. But the world seems to have gone to the extreme in making it the occasion of gift giving, with a deplorable tendency to reckless extravagance in that While African slavery was tolerated in the southern section of our country much practical significance was attached to Christmas. Merciful masters were glad to give their slaves one week, including Christmas Eve. Some, giving the week, added a probable margin to the week by allowing the slaves to roll a big backlog into "old master's" big, open fireplace, Christmas Eve, and allowing the holidays to continue till that big backlog was completely consumed. A solid, green black gum was the favorite backlog for that occasion. A condition was that old master was to have a good fire, appropriate for the season; hence, the warmer the weather, the longer the log and Christmas would last. But "them days is gone forever," and better days have come to bless us as the years are going by.

Some of us elderly people are sometimes disposed to say the days of long ago were better than are the days now going by, but that is not wise. Solomon says: "Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this." (Eccles. 7: 10.)

In ye olden time Christmas was always noisy-firecrackers, Roman candles, big guns, little guns-anything to make a noise. Yesterday-Christmas Day-was almost as silent and still in Washington City as a Canadian "Sabbath"-and that's the limit.

GOOD BOOKS.

We recommend to our readers the following good books:

HARPER'S AIRCRAFT BOOK. By Alpheus Hyatt Verrill. Cloth. Price, $1.35.

Why aëroplanes are made, how to make models, and all about aircraft, little and big. Many illustrations. Explains in a simple, lucid manner the principles and mechanisms involved in human flight, and tells the boys how to design and construct model assemblence slides and more to design and construct model aëroplanes, glides, and man-carrying machines. The six divisions of the book are: "Why the Aëroplane Flies," "Model Aëroplanes," "Glides of Nonpropelled Aëroplanes," "Various Types of Aëro-planes," "Hydro-aëroplanes," and "Use of the Aëro-

THE BLUE BONNET SERIES. Each volume complete. Illustrated. Price, $1.75.

"Blue Bonnet's Ranch Party;" "A Texas Blue Bonnet;"
"Blue Bonnet in Boston;" "Blue Bonnet Keeps House;"
"Blue Bonnet, Debutante;" "Blue Bonnet of the Seven Stars."

MEMOIRS OF ALEXANDER CAMPBELL. By Robert Richardson. Price, $3.

Embracing a view of the origin, progress, and principles of the religious reformation which he advocated. Order from Gospel Advocate Company, Nashville, Tenn.

PHEST COLDS Apply over throat and chest cover with hot flannel cloth.

COMMERCE-UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market, Postpaid, 300, 75c; 500, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B. Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.50; 10,000 up, at 80c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price. Satisfaction guaranteed.

D. F. JAMISON, Summerville, S. C.

WANTED and women, to Testaments, and Religious as well as Educational Books in homes. Big profit. Full or spars time. Feducational Books in homes. Big profit, Full or spare time. JOIN HANDS WITH US. Write to-day for free information.

WILMORE BOOK & BIBLE COMPANY 443 S. Dearborn St., Dept. 190, Chicago, Ill.

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to vour friend.

Itis a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, men-tion this paper.

From the Brethren

Sedalia, Ky., December 29.—I closed a meeting at Brookport, Ill., last week, which was my last meeting for this year. I began last January in Florida and have held the following Florida and have held the following meetings, with results as stated: Avon Park, Fla., with ten additions to the church; Riverside, Tenn., four additions; Dyersburg, Tenn., two; Memphis, Tenn., one; Hohenwald, Tenn., three; Springfield, Tenn., ten; Centerville, Tenn., eleven; Lexington, Tenn., ten; Lyles, Tenn., twelve; Union Grove, Ky., seven; Latham, Tenn., no additions; Isom, Tenn., fifteen; Greenfield, Tenn., seventeen; Dickson, Tenn., twelve; Scottsville, Ky., five; Mayfield, Ky., fourteen; Clarksburg, Tenn., none; Sedalia, Ky., one; Brookport, Ill., none. I shall leave next week for Avon Park, Fla., where I mean to spend the win-Fla., where I mean to spend the win-ter and hold meetings.—I. A. Douthitt.

San Francisco, Cal., December 25.

—This is Christmas Day, a glorious day in San Francisco. The air is cool, but the sun is shining beautifully under a cloudless sky. The church work moves along smoothly. We were much pleased to have Brother and Sister J. S. Willis, of Fresno, with us last Sunday. Brother Willis presided at the Lord's table, and gave us a good talk, urging us to press forward with the work of the Lord. After six months in San Francisco, I am highly pleased with the outlook for the future of our church work. We are looking hopefully into the new year. ture of our church work. We are looking hopefully into the new year. Please remember that we meet each Sunday morning at half past ten o'clock in Richmond Hall, Fourth Avenue and Clement Street, and that my address is 1281 Sixth Avenue. If you are thinking of coming to California to live, please don't fail to consider San Francisco. We need you here, and this is a fine place to live.—W. Halliday Trice.

Elmdale, Mont., December 20.— This is my first attempt at reporting for the past few months, but I have told my helpers that I make reports only when I am not busy preaching. So now, as the wind howls and the temperature goes down to thirty-six below zero, I will take a vacation long enough to get a report to the papers. I have been in at least four meetings since my last report. All of these were marked with some success, exwere marked with some success, except one. One lady came five miles through a snowstorm to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. The year 1924 is nearing its close, and we will look to 1925 with a heart determined to do more in the Master's work. I believe that the past year has been the best in the history of the work in this field. The brethren in this State expect to do some mission work in 1925 that will be worthy of note. The Indian will be just sixteen miles away, and the brethren may look after that work. I expect to go back to Wyoming in February, as I feel that the young members there should be taught their duty. They have been pleading for me to return. Those that were converted at Casper Those that were converted at Casper and Sheridan, Wyoming, were of the poor class. They have been meeting coughs.

UIETS COUGHS Safe and reliable for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs and those sleep-disturbing night

For more than half a century

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

carefully made of the best cough-relieving medicines obtainable, has stopped coughs and colds of children and grown persons everywhere.

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

for worship ever since I was there last July. Their own expenses are last July. Their own expenses are about all that they can carry. I shall go there without the promise of a penny.—J. O. Golphenee.

Denton, Texas, 405 Ponder Avenue, December 25.—I labored all of 1922 with the brethren at Burk-1922 with the brethren at Burk-burnett, Texas, and last September the church there asked me to come and help them again. This I agreed to do for a while, and have been with them there since that time. I will preach there next Sunday, and that will close my work there for this time. The church wants me to remain with the sunday in the church wants me to remain with the sunday. main with them, and I regret to give main with them, and I regret to give up the work, but I am looking into the open fields of New Mexico as a needy field for the establishment of the cause of Christ. The Lord's command to the apostles, was: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The preaching of the word is in the hands of the church to-day and we have said of the church to-day, and we have said that we believe in "sounding out the word;" but really, brethren, how word;" but really, brethren, how much of this is being done by the churches of Christ? I was in New Mexico a few weeks ago, and I found a few brethren here and there, and for miles and miles not a Christian preacher to be heard of, and the people are starving for the bread of life. I am being forced to go into this field because of the condition of our soldier son, who has had tubercu-losis ever since the war, and his wife now has it, too; so I am going out there to arrange things to get them there as soon as they can get out of the hospital and able to go. I will be located at Clovis, and will assist the church there some, but I want to get out and do a lot of mission work over the country. Brethren, will you help me in this needed work? I will tell you how you can do it. I have quite a number of Bible pictures and mottoes that are fine to place in any If you will buy some of these, it will help me pay expenses, and in this way I can get along. Here is the list: "Keep Christ in Your Heart," "The Christian Bearing the Cross," and "Christ in the Temple." These are sixteen by twenty inches, and the regular price is fifty cents each. The three will be sent for one dollar, postpaid. Mottoes: "What the Bible Is and Does" and "The Christian's Watch Cry" (sixteen by Christian's Watch Cry" (sixteen by twenty inches), twenty-five cents each; "The Mission of the Bible" and "The Bible the Light of the World" (twelve by eighteen inches), ten cents each. All four for fifty cents, prepaid. I also have a few of the "Divine Library" on cloth, showing the Bible as a library of sixtysix books, with all the proper divisions of the Bible presented. This is fine for preachers and to hang on the walls of church buildings. Price, one dollar and fifty cents. This is about walls of church buildings. Price, one dollar and fifty cents. This is about three by five feet. Also, brethren, I have a few copies of my booklet, "A Great Battle." This is a critical examination of the unknown-tongue fad of the day. Price, twenty-five cents each. Every church should get at least a dozen and circulate among the people. the people.

Brethren, I will not take my family to New Mexico now, as I have three boys in school here at Denton. Denton will be my permanent address; but mail addressed to me at Clovis, but mail addressed to me at Clovis, New Mexico, will get to me. I am greatly torn up about the condition of my boy and his wife, but we are trusting in the Lord. I am really having a hard time, and I am asking you to pray for us.—D. S. Ligon.

FINE HOUSES AND BIG CON-GREGATIONS.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

There are evidently two growing wrongs of the church which will finally result in much evil and destruction to the cause. A great deal has already been said, and those who are not blinded and can see afar off can see wreck and ruin for the spirituality of the church.

Houses in which to have church services should be neat, nice, and comfortable; but the expenditure of fifty thousand to one hundred thousand dollars for a place to worship is, to my mind, somewhat for a worldly show and "to be like others around." Fifty thousand dollars ought to be enough to build at least two or three church houses which would comfortably serve for all who have the real spirit of our Lord. The looks, style, and to make an effort to compete with the worldly in worldliness will never get the cause of our Lord nearer like the word of God commands. Excessive money spent for large, fine houses could be used in preaching where the word has never gone and help in the building of houses in destitute places. When a member refuses to go because the house is not as fine as others, it is a case of house worship and not of worshiping God in spirit and in truth. I feel sure God would have us to build a neat place for worship, and it is a shame to look at some places that are so badly in need of repair and a real cleaning. Extremes are rarely good for the cause. Expensive houses or dilapidated ones are not conducive to spirituality. What the church needs to-day is more heavenly and less worldly glory. Stylish houses demand stylish people; and the common people who once heard our Lord gladly are not "at home," nor, as a rule, are they wanted at those places. In doing big things for God, we should not exalt the thing above God.

Fine houses naturally suggest large congregations, for small ones cannot have them. How large a congregation should be, I do not know. When it gets so large that many are not kept at work, it is, in that respect, too large. It is hard to find work for all in a large place. These large, fine places demand a large, fine fellow to get before them, and the poor, humble one who is beginning finds but little opportunity for development. The leaders let so much energy go to waste that the energetic ones start an affair of their own, and in a short time a lot of trouble follows. Almost all digression comes from these fine, big places. Many will go only to the place where the big crowd goes.

Do not understand me to say the big crowd cannot serve God or that the big congregation is unscriptural because of its size, but I do say the tendency is in that worldly direction more than the smaller ones. Reasons for it are plainly seen. All are not given work in the church to do and soon make a work in the wrong way. In a church of four hundred, there ought to be over one hundred men and boys who need work to do. About seven or eight would do all the public work each Lord's day. Twelve weeks, or three months, pass before one is called on, taking it by rotation. Four times a year is rather slow in practice. As a rule, small congregations give more than large ones in proportion. Large ones have more in a bulk, louder singing, bigger preachers, and prettier prayers; but is there more love for one another and for the cause? Do they come with more devotion to the Lord? Are they more active in the church work, man for man? Do they attend church as willingly when the "pastor" is not present? Do they talk more of their preacher, house, crowd, and ways than the service of the Lord? Are they as friendly to all? Are they as humble? Are they more spiritual? Are they more converted? These are thoughts for all. Let us carefully study before we reach a decision.

 WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL TEACHERS' BIBLES SELF-PRONOUNCING Containing References, a Concordance and the most authoritative Aids to Bible Study. Printed in Black Face Type. Beautiful Bindings Send for Illustrated Catalog THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers American Bible Headquarters
433 Winston Building Philadelphia ************************

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per single copy_____$0.40 | Per 50, per copy____ .37
Per dozen, per copy .38 | Per 100, per copy___ .35

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy_____$0.30 | Per 50, per copy____ 27
Per dozen, per copy 28 | Per 100, per copy__ 25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 11/2 inches deep, 91/4 inches in diameter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

For the treatment of non-contagious chronic ailments by improved naturopathic methods. Neuritis, neurasthenia, high blood pressure. Excellent climate. Pleasant surroundings. Good food and care. Moderate charges. Write us about your trouble. Pamphlets free.

No Home Treatment, Nothing to Sell but Service

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid_____$1.50

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

NOTES FROM WEST TEN-NESSEE.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

On the fifth Lord's day in November I began a meeting in Caruthersville, Mo. Brother J. E. Hogan and wife were called to lead the song service, which was done to the satisfaction of all. When the meeting began, I found two men, one boy, four women, and one girl-eight in allwho have been meeting from house to house to worship as "it is written." The room where they now meet is one used for agricultural purposes, in which can be seen specimens of all kinds of farm products-a small but comfortable place in which to meet, sing, pray, study the word of the Lord, and observe the Lord's Supper. They wanted a meeting, and four of them wanted me. Some had heard that I was a "hard hitter" and would run everybody away, could not hold a crowd, etc. The "Rev." J. Murray Taylor, a digressive preacher who lives in Memphis, Tenn., told a sister that no good could result from a meeting they would hold. "You want to steal my members," said he. In conversation with this sister, he said: "I once believed as you do, and did until I went to college." He also said to her: "I hardly ever talk to one of your faith, and you should consider it a compliment to get to talk to a man like me." So, brethren and sisters, you should take off your hats when the "Rev." J. Murray Taylor meets you on the street. Another thing about this "Rev." J. Murray Taylor: he flatly refused to let these eight (the same number that were saved in the ark) have the use of their tabernacle in which to hold the meeting. The eight were not to be outdone by this refusal and rented the "Woman's Club" building, paying twenty-five dollars for the use of it for two weeks. Plucky for two men, one boy, four women, and one girl! Before the meeting began I learned that some thought, from what they had heard of me, that I was the wrong man to hold a meeting there. All this and the bitter opposition of the "digressives" I had to carry from the beginning. No one can blame them for not wanting a man who would do them harm. They needed a man who could do them good. The meeting began as advertised and continued until the second Lord's-day night in December. Two or three times the meeting was rained out. The attendance was never large, but the attention was never better at any place I have ever been. Five were baptized, three (husband, wife, and son) came from the Baptists, and three were restored to fellowship-eleven in all. All but three were heads of families; all but

HUSBAND SAID

Wife Said She Would. Result. Lydia E.Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

East Hardwick, Vt.—"Last winter I was not able to do any work at all. I had backache, head-ache, side ache, and was sick all the ache, side ache, and was sick all the time for six months. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers, and my husband said to me, 'Why don't you try it?' So I said I would, and he went and got me a dozen bottles. It has done me more good than I can ever tell, and my friends good than I can ever tell, and my friends say, 'What have you done to yourself? You look so well.' I tell them it is the Vegetable Compound that makes me so well and strong. There is no use to suffer with backache and pains. I will tell every one what it has done for me."—Mrs. Fred. Primo, Route No. 2, East Hardwick, Vermont.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so ill

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so ill that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their household duties.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00.
Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:90.
Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)
A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick. Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredlents. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick relief assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago sald to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 70c and $1.00.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

two, men and boys. It has never been my pleasure to hold a meeting for any congregation that seemed to enjoy it as these brethren and sisters. Those who opposed my going there, from what they had heard of me, were delighted with the meeting and said I had been misrepresented to them. They paid well for the preaching and singing.

In years gone by the gospel was preached there by Brother A. O. Colley and others, and a house was built, with the creed in the deed; but from some cause-no one seems to know-the "digressives" have a mortgage or some kind of lien on the building. They are not all agreed as to who committed the claim into the hands of the "digressives," but some claim that a preacher or preachers had a hand in it. Money was borrowed from the church building fund of the "digressives," which, perhaps, explains the reason for a lien on the property. They claim to have a debt of six hundred dollars against the property, but "Rev." J. Murray Taylor tells them to never let "that bunch" have it. This man was in Caruthersville while I was there, but I could never get a chance to speak to him and thus be "complimented;" so I had to put up with just a common sort of Christians who are perfectly satisfied with God's arrangements.

I have set up one new congregation this year. Some places want me to continue to preach for them, and some have dropped me out. Such is life. The year 1924 will soon be gone, and in a short time we old preachers will be gone. Let us hope and pray that the young preachers may do more good than we old ones have done. God bless the Gospel Advocate, its editors and readers.

JEWISH MISSION ACTIVITIES.

BY STEPHEN D. ECKSTEIN.

We are pressing on with all our energy, and, by the grace of God, we are spreading his kingdom among Israel, and we rejoice at the great thirst among them for the gospel.

We were delightfully privileged in having with us at our meeting on Friday night, November 29. Brother Charles R. Brewer, from Abilene Christian College, who is not only a real man of God, but is also a distinguished speaker, and an educator as well. His message was illuminative and of such a nature as to be readily grasped by honest listeners. Among the splendid audience were eleven Jews present. This is an amazing attendance and may not have a parallel in Jewish mission work, even among the denominations, in proportion to the Jewish population, and each of them displayed an open mind. May God richly bless the

Mrs. CORA REYNOLDS

Are You Ailing? Then You Cannot Afford to Over-look One Word of This

Chattanooga, Tenn.—"I make this statement in regard to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Pleasant Pellets in the hope that I may help some one else. I had dizzy spells, backache and, in fact, I hurt all over. I took a few bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' and it relieved me completely. My mathematical forms of the property of the second of the completely. pletely. My mother was suffering with feminine trouble, but the 'Favorite Prescription' saved her. We have also used the 'Pleasant Pellets' and think there is nothing to equal them as a liver and bowel medicine."—Mrs. Cora Reynolds, 1900 Long St.
Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg, Write for free medical advice.

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

SOUTHERN INSURANCE CO.

NASHVILLE. TENNESSEE

Writes all forms of Ordinary and Industrial Life Insurance

OTHINE

In Use for Over 16 Years

Your freckles need attention NOW or may remain all winter. Use Othine— double strength—the old and time-tried guaranteed treatment that has given satisfaction to millions of women, and rid yourself of these homely spots.

We recommend Othine Complexion Soap for use with Othine

At all Druggists and Department Stores. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When an-swering their ads, men-tion this paper.

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x51/2 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living. R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound .- N. B. Hardeman.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits .- H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me. -Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

sowing and bring in the harvest. Realizing as they should how greatly indebted they are to the Hebrew race for what it has given them, the children of the living God are given what should be called a coveted opportunity to permanently preach the gospel of Christ to the Jews in their own language and bring them in contact with the vital, conquering Christian faith.

In conclusion, let me say, with humility and thankfulness to the guidance of the Holy Spirit for the marvelous results of our labors in Dallas, Texas, during the year now drawing to a close, with your prayers and the wisdom and strength of Jehovah, we will go forth to do greater things during the coming year.

AT CAPETOWN.

BY F. B. SHEPHERD.

Word has just been received that Brother and Sister Ray Lawyer, missionaries from the church at Harper, Kan., to South Africa, have arrived at Capetown. They are still fifteen hundred miles from their destination, which is Bulawayo, in Northern Rhodesia, and will in all probability have to remain in Capetown until sufficient funds are forwarded to pay their fare to that field.

These two brave-hearted souls have gone out to join Brother and Sister W. N. Short, who also were sent out by the Harper church and who still remain amenable to it, sending regular reports of the work to the elders.

In the case of the Lawyers, the Harper elders were only able to indorse them and continue the oversight of their work, but were not able to assume any financial responsibility. In this case, however, following an apostolic precedent, they appointed a man to become their "messenger to the churches" and collect and forward funds for their support. I have that honor, and, on behalf of these elders and these missionaries, I ask for churches to send regular donations to me for forwarding. Remember, when you do this, you have fellowship with a sister church that is doing mission work itself in assuming full responsibility for one couple abroad, besides the work it does here in helping Brother Ben J. Elston in Louisiana.

Write me at 420 Euclid Avenue, Abilene, Texas, and send a donation, large or small. Can the churches not send regularly each month?

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day by Use of Virex, Formerly Known as Rattlesnake Oil

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattlesnake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the ountry.

Mr. D. Fey, a Nebraska resident, sixtyseven years old, says: "I have used the treatment for only two weeks, and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous, and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years' standing, is improving wonderfully."

Mr. Ban Jackson

Mr. Ben Jackson, who lives in Indiana, says: "Before I used Virex I could hear nothing. After ten days, I could hear my nothing. A watch tick."

Angeline Johnson, a Mississippi resident, had been stone deaf for eighteen years. She says: "Virex has stopped my head noises,

She says: "Virex has stopped my head noises, and I can hear the train whistle three and one-half miles away."

Roy Fisher, Iowa man, says: "I hadn't heard a watch tick for eleven years. Now I can lay my watch on the table and hear it plainly."

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says: "After being deaf thirty-eight years, I used your treatment only a few days, and hear

Mr. Anthony Chapman, of Michigan, says: "The terrible head noises have stopped entirely, and my hearing is practically back to normal."

Deaf Baby Now Hears

Mrs. Ola Valentine, of Arkansas, says:
"My little boy, now five years old, had been deaf since about four months of age. Now the hears very well, and is learning to talk."
Mr. Mather Pelleys says: "My young son, deaf for years, has used Virex for only three days, and he hears almost as well as ever before,"

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and Canada. The prescription, which is known as Vires, is easily used at home, and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will resort your bearing culcilly and to introduce this your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory, the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 1659 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the on, Kansas City, Mo., and the will be mailed at once. Use it treatment according to the simple directions. If at the end of ten days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be re-funded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write to-day and give this wonderful compound a trial.

5,000 CHRISTIAN WORKERS CHRISTIAN

To sell Bibles, Testaments, good books, and handsome velvet Scripture mottees. Good commission. Send for free catalogue and price list.

GEORGE W. NOBLE, Publisher, Dept. 3H, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

for this world!"

WHEAT AND CHAFF. BY A. ELMORE.

Youth, looking into the future, says: "Yes, I intend to do something worth while, but it is no use to be in a hurry. It will be a long time until I am old." Old age, looking back to youth, says: "O, how short has been my life, and how little have I done

Who is Christ? Can we think of a greater misfit than that Christ in his humanity should have been a wag or a religious loafer? In such case, all his pious followers would have been ashamed of him and avoided him. But being the very highest type of man, and clothed in divinity, we love him as man, and we adore him as the Messiah. Thank God for the man, Christ Jesus!

"The Bible is a perfect chart for the entire voyage of life. Beyond that it is of no value. It is not adapted to man in heaven or hell!" (A. Campbell.) What a great thought from a great man! It suggests that there will be men in both heaven and hell.

The good we may do, no mortal can tell;

Then cease to do evil and learn to do well.

There are millions of people now living under human governments, but all those human governments operate imperfect laws. Not one king can be approached by the loving appellation, "Our Father." How careful we should be who are living under a perfect government!

Once a citizen was trying to sell a fat ox, and among other good points the vender was making was that his mother was a first-rate milch cow! But when that ox was dead his progeny was cut off; he had no descendants. So with the man who is vending a religion not once spoken of in the Bible.

The sunshiny Christian is welcome everywhere. But how about the association of the dancing Christian? I would rather have one quiet Christian for my guest than three stormy ones! Fact.

The Lord often sees a great man in the "ragged little boy," but it requires a lot of training and boosting. And how much of this are we doing? Ah! What have we done in the last twenty years to this end?

There is no path shown to man, from the gilded highway to the private footpath, which is free from anxiety. Even if blessed with a spiritual portion of grace, this does not take away sorrow. Perfect Christian living does not secure us against trouble, but it prepares us for the great effort of the Christian life.

In the fourteenth chapter of Acts we read of one of the many whippings which Paul received; but immediately after being released from those heathen, Paul began again to preach the gospel. And how he could call those bonds, imprisonment, whippings and starvings, "light afflictions," we may never fully understand, but such are great incentives to pure Christians now.

There is much being said upon the subject of missions; and if the various systems now being operated agreed with the system of the New Testament, there could not be too much done. But there is one consoling possibility in missions—viz., that one man can lay out a field and operate it himself. I have witnessed this in many cases, and great success followed.

A Christian should so live that he will not be ashamed of what he does, but he should never do what he should be ashamed of. And yet a man might live out before the world a moral life and never touch the law of spiritual life. A good man might represent one character, and a perfect Christian will show a different character. Unless our Christian life is actuated by the heart and through the heart, it will fall short of its proper design.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, or gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Headache

Pain Neuralgia

Toothache Lumbago

Neuritis Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets—Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicyllogoid

N. B. HARDEMAN

Author of the Famous

BIBLE SEARCHLIGHT and HOLY LAND

This masterpiece contains nineteen hand-picked sermons, brilliantly cartooned by Sidney Hicks, of the University of Chicago, and is supplemented by three lectures of about ten thousand words each, giving a living description of

ITALY, EGYPT, AND THE HOLY LAND

This great gift for Father, Mother, Son or Pastor . . $2.85

Our agents making from $50 to $75 per week. Write for particulars.

THE STUDENTS' EDUCATIONAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, 667 Shrine Building, MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.

GOOD BOOKS FOR YOUR LIBRARY

BOOKS WRITTEN BY D. LIPSCOMB AND	RELIGIOUS DISCUSSIONS
E. G. SEWELL Civil Government. By David Lipscomb. Cloth.	Brents-Herod Debate. Paper bound. Price, postpaid$0.50
158 pages. Price, postpaid$1.25	Debate on the Roman Catholic Religion. Cloth.
Questions Answered. By D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell. (Edited by M. C. Kurfees.) Cloth. 700 pages. Price, postpaid$3.00	New edition. 360 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75 The Evidences of Christianity. Cloth. New
Cloth. 250 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	edition. Price, postpaid$1.50 Cayce-Srygley Discussion. Cloth. 352 pages.
Salvation from Sin. By David Lipscomb. Cloth. 440 large pages. Price, postpaid	Price, postpaid$1.50 Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Sal-
SERMONS, SERMON MATERIAL, COMMEN- TARIES	vation. Cloth. 350 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50 Why the Baptist Name. Cloth. 320 pages. Price_$1.50
Gospel Sermons. By Dr. T. W. Brents. Cloth.	Stark-Warlick Debate. Paper. 186 pages. Price_$9.50
440 large pages. Price, postpaid$2.00 Letters and Sermons of T. B. Larimore. (In three volumes. We have only Volumes II. and III.) By Mrs. Emma Page Larimore. Price, per volume, postpaid$1.50	Boswell-Hardeman Discussion on Instrumental Music in the Worship. Cloth. 239 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons, Volumes I.	FOR TEACHERS AND SCHOLARS Outlines of Bible Study. By G. Dallas Smith.
and II. Cloth. Price, per volume$1.50 Sweeney's Sermons. By John S. Sweeney. Cloth. 12mo. 304 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	Price, single copy, postpaid$0.75 Per dozen, postpaid$8.25
Biographies and Sermons. By F. D. Srygley. Price, postpaid $1.50	Sermon Outlines. A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines. Price, postpaid$1.00
The Gospel Plan of Salvation. By Dr. T. W. Brents. Cloth, 8vo. Price, postpaid$2.50	Handbook on Baptism. By J. W. Shepherd.
The Jerusalem Tragedy. By A. P. Stout. Illustrated. Price, postpaid$1.50	Revised Edition. Cloth. 486 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Christian Treasures. By A. B. Lipscomb. Two volumes. Price, per volume$1.25	SPECIAL GIFT BOOKS
The Christian System. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth. 12mo. 383 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	Ailenroc's Book. (Poems and Stories.) By Mrs. Sarah Cornelia Alexander. 205 pages. Bound in cloth. Price, postpaid
Christian Baptism. By Alexander Campbell. Half leather. 12mo. 444 pages. Price, post- paid$1.75	Sunshine; or, Uncle Minor's Stories. 256 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Evidences of Pardon. By C. E. Holt. Paper cover. 105 pages. Price $0.25 Per Dozen $2.50	Character; or, The Making of the Man. By Edward W. Carmack. Leather ooze. In box. Price, postpaid$1.50
Instrumental Music in the Worship. By M. C. Kurfees. Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50	Old Limber; or, The Tale of the Taylors. By DeLong Rice. Price, postpaid$1.00
Travels in Bible Lands. By Andy T. Ritchie. Price, postpaid$1.50	BIOGRAPHICAL
Adventism and the Bible. By J. Henry Monk. Cloth. Price, postpaid$1.25	Larimore and His Boys. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. Price, postpaid$1.25
The New Testament Church. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50	Seventy Years in Dixie. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. 400 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
The Word of Reconciliation. By J. D. Floyd. Cloth. 231 pages. Price, postpaid$1,00	Gospel Lessons and Life History. By E. G. Sewell. Cloth. 338 pages. Price, postpaid$1.25
FOR ELDERS AND DEACONS	Life of Elder John Smith. By John Augustus
The Model Church. By G. C. Brewer. Price, postpaid $1.00	Williams. Cloth. Price, postpaid$1.50 Life Work of Mrs. Charlotte Fanning. By Mrs.
Around the Lord's Table. By A. B. Lipscomb. Price $0.25	Emma Page Larimore. Cloth. 12mo. 201 pages. Price, postpaid$1.00

ORDER TO-DAY

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

HARDY-LOVE DEBATE.

BY W. A. SISCO.

J. B. Hardy (Primitive Baptist) and Brother Earnest C. Love (Christian) began a four-days' debate at Hohenwald, Tenn., on October 28. Hardy was in the lead the first two days, affirming that "all for whom Christ died will be finally saved." Brother Love led the last two days, affirming that "faith, repentance, confession, and baptism are conditions of salvation to the alien sinner."

This was the most pleasant discussion it has ever been my privilege to hear, especially Brother Love's part of it. Hardy was not rough, but dared Brother Love a number of times in his first three speeches, after which Brother Love took the floor, turned to Hardy, and said: "Jesus Christ is the Son of God. I dare you to deny it. Did you ever see your wife? I dare you to deny it." Then he showed him how absurd it is to indulge in things of that kind. Brother Love said he realized that he was personally responsible for everything he said in that discussion and wanted to say nothing that would not meet God's approval.

Let us have more such discussions. They will certainly do good.

Had it not been for the discussions we have had with opposers of truth, we never could have planted the truth in the hearts of people as we have. Elder Burns, of Florence, Ala., moderated for Hardy; Brother H. N. Mann, of Riverside, Tenn., moderated for Brother Love the first day, and I moderated three days. We had nothing to do but keep time.

I am now at Dyersburg again, under a chiropractor, trying to get able to render a greater service in the future.

LOWRY-DOUTHITT DEBATE.

BY COLEMAN OVERBY.

This debate was held at Sardis, Tenn., twenty miles out of Lexington, beginning on November 25 and continuing four days. T. F. Lowry affirmed that Baptist churches are scriptural in origin; Brother Douthitt affirmed that the church of Christ is scriptural in origin.

The discussion was well attended throughout, and the people listened with almost rapt attention to each speaker. Nothing unkind was said by either speaker. The moderators only kept time.

No attempt will be made to give an outline of the arguments, but one special thing of interest was introduced by Mr. Lowry. He introduced 2 Sam. 7: 12, 13 as an argument as to the time when the kingdom was set up. In substance it was this: (1) Christ, David's seed, would build a house. (2) He would build while Health and good looks.

—the reward of internal cleanliness.

If YOU do not keep clean internally your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks and insomnia, each of which saps your health and vitality.

Avoid Laxatives—say Doctors

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found at last in Iubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, pen etrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

David was asleep in the grave. (3) In Matt. 27: 52, David was raised from the dead. (4) This was before Pentecost. (5) Therefore, the church was established before Pentecost. In reply, Brother Douthitt introduced Acts 2: 29-34, where the apostles positively affirmed: "For David ascended not into the heavens." But, in spite of the apostle's declaration, Lowry contended to the contrary, which only demonstrates how far some men will go to sustain a false theory.

A number of other things were introduced that were just as astounding to Bible readers as the above; however, they were handled aright and mightily refuted.

The church was highly pleased with the work done by Brother Douthitt. Coleman Overby kept time for him.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

PLEASE DO NOT OVERLOOK PLACING YOUR MONEY IN THE ENVELOPE WITH YOUR ORDER

ORDER BLANK

BIBLE LESSON HELPS

Da	ite	, 194
Please enter the following order to be	e sent to the address below	:
Formonths, from	, 192, to	, 192
Name
P. O
County	State
Remittance inclosed in payment	of this order, $
NO STANDING O	RDERS TAKEN
ELAM'S NOTES FOR 1925 (Five or More to One (Single Co)	@ 85 cents per cop e Address, Each) sy, 90e)	у, $
ADVANCED QUARTERLY, 64 pag (Five or More to On (Single Copy, 20c	es @ 12 cents per quart e Address, Each) Per Quarter)	er, $
INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY, 3.	2 pages @ 6 cents per quart e Address, Each)	er, $
PRIMARY QUARTERLY, 32 pages (Five or More to On	@ 6 cents per quart e Address, Each)	er, $
LITTLE JEWELS (mailed quarterl (Five or More to On (Single Copy, 20c	y) @ 12 cents per quart e Address, Each) Per Quarter)	er, $
THE YOUNG PEOPLE (mailed me (Five or More to On (Single Copy, 20c Per Quarter, 80c Per Year—	onthly) @ 15 cents per quart	er. $
LESSON LEAVES	@ 5 cents per quart e Address, Each)	er, $
SETS LESSON PICTURE CARDS	@ 4 cents per quart e Address, Each)	er, $
LESSON PICTURE CHARTS	@ $1.00 per quarter,	$
CLASS BOOKS (7 cents each)	@ 75 cents per dozer	, $
SUNDAY-SCHOOL RECORD (for	entire year) $2.50 per co	у, $
COLLECTION ENVELOPES	@ 75 cents per dozer	, $
Total		$

Literature should be ordered to expire with the end of the quarters. Quarters begin January, April, July, and October; expire March, June, September, and December.

Remit by Post-Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or Express Money Order, otherwise at the sender's risk.

CAREFULLY EXAMINE YOUR ORDER BEFORE MAILING

Cut Out Order Blank and Mail To-Day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good."
 (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criti-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)

 "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

 "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

 "Prephar E. A. Elam's Notes, as pub-
- wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

 "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, scriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.) "At the Central church of Christ in Fort
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

Volume LXVII. No. 3.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JANUARY 15, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT	. 49
OUR CONTRIBUTORS Reply to Brother Smith—Early Recollections (No. 3)— Spreading the Kingdom—Publishers' Items—Lust, Sin and Death—Should We Hear Christ's Apostles To-Day —Complimentary Criticisms—Unity Restored.	i.
RDITORIAL	. 58
QUERY DEPARTMENT	. 63
OUR MESSAGES	- 64
FROM THE BRETHREN	. 66
The Lawyers Help Needed at Niota, Tenn.—Our Indian Missionary Help Brother Yohannan. Croswell-Black Debate—Progress at Akron, Ohio	. 70 . 71

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

The Methodist Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., says:

The Bible goes on distancing all other books as a "best seller." It is being read by more people on this earth than ever before in the history of the whole world. It is being printed in more languages and dialects than ever before, and will continue growing and going.

The general increase of Bible reading is working a mighty revolution in the public mind. Denominational dogmas, long held to be holy truth, are losing their grasp upon the minds and hearts of the people. The power of the Pope has been broken, his power over the millions in his domain crumbling under the increase of intelligence—"whom the Lord Jesus shall slay with the breath of his mouth," or by his word, "and bring to naught by the manifestation of his coming."

This increase of public intelligence, which comes from an increase of Bible reading, is playing havoc with some of the most venerable and long-cherished practices of the religious world. The people are awakening to the fact that there are no Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, or other sectarian churches in the Bible, and are rapidly coming to see that anything that cannot be found in the Bible ought not to be found anywhere. They are learning that Jesus Christ established his church upon the Rock on the memorable Pentecost in the city of Jerusalem, and that all churches established by others at a later day, at other places, are necessarily built upon the sand. Methodist editors are kept bosy trying to explain how a man can be a Methodist and a Christian, too, at the same time, and are forced to make the fatal admission that, as one can be a Christian without being a Methodist, he can also be a member of the church that Jesus built without being a member of the Methodist Church. Little intelligence is necessary to see that any church out of which a man can live the Christian life here on earth and go to heaven when he dies is unnecessary and unscriptural. No such church can be the church purchased by the blood of Christ, out of which no man can live the Christian life or have a promise of heaven when he dies.

During the Dark Ages, when the Bible was lost, clergymen had little trouble convincing an ignorant public that sprinkling would do for baptism. But times are changing and the people are reading. They are beginning to see that Jesus was immersed in the river Jordan, and that every convert to Christ, under the preaching of inspired men, "came up out of the water," and then went on his way rejoicing. If this general increase of Bible reading continues, inculcating public intelligence and stimulating the march of the mind, we may promise ourselves, as a grand desideratum, the dissolution of human sects and denominations, an abandonment of human dogmas and doctrines, and a glorious restoration of primitive Christianity, in both theory and practice, by one great religious brotherbood in "the body, the church," of which Christ "is the head," every Christian a member, and outside of which no man can live the Christian life or claim the promise of salvation, temporal or eternal. 0 0 0

An example of how one departure from New Testament teaching leads to another may be seen in the following extract from an article written by E. J. Forrester, "pastor at Sparta," and published in the Christian Index, "the organ and property of the Baptists of Georgia:"

Religious creeds may be widely different and yet basally Christian. For example, here are a Baptist, a Methodist, and a Presbyterian Christian. We may say that the Baptist adheres to the "Philadelphia Confession of Faith," the Methodist to his manual of theology, and the Presbyterian to the "Westminster Confession." These three men are basally Christian in creed. There may be some human philosophy and some speculation theology in their creeds. These elements may all be wrong. They may also contain widely different interpretations of Scripture. But, in spite of these differences and possible errors, they are all basally Christian. Religious creeds may be widely different and yet basally Christian—let that, also, stand.

How can things "be widely different" and yet be "basally Christian?" What kind of an idea does Mr. Forrester have of Christianity, anyway? Does he think that the Bible teaches different doctrines to different people at different places? Such an idea is a travesty on the Bible and a slander on Christianity.

The Bible is not self-contradictory. All that it tenches on every subject perfectly harmonizes. The Bible does not teach Methodists to sprinkle, Baptists to immerse, or anybody to do neither. There is no such thing in the Bible as "a Baptist, a Methodist, and a Presbyterian Christian." Being "a Baptist," "a Methodist," or "a Presbyterian" is a separate and distinct thing from being "a Christian." When a man becomes a Baptist, a Methndist, or a Preshyterian, he becomes something more or less than a Christian, as he can be a Christian without being either of them. We are happy to think that all Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians accept parts of Christianity. But such parts of Christianity as they accept cannot make them Methodists, Baptists, or Presbyterians. A man must accept something that is not Christianity before he can become a Methodist, Baptist, or Presbyterian.

Two contradictory things cannot both be Christianity. The Methodist "Discipline," the "Philadelphia Confession," and the "Westminster Confession" are as flatly contradictory as it is possible for things to be. How can such things be "basally Christian in creed?" A man can be a Christian without accepting either of them; and if he accepts either of them, he becomes something more or less than Christian. Neither of these human creeds came from the apostles. Of course, all of them have borrowed from Christianity, and all of them contain parts of Christianity. But they owe their very existence to the things they contain that are not Christianity at all. A man who preaches and teaches nothing but Christianity needs no creed but the Bible. All of Christianity can be found in the Bible. Anything preached by anybody for which book, chapter, and verse cannot be produced is not Christianity. It may be Methodism, Presbyterianism, or Baptistism, but it is not Christianity. "Let that, also, stand."

0 0 0

T. R. Glover, president of the British Baptist Union, sometime ago was quoted as saying: "As I grow older, I want more and more to preach Christ without theory." To this he further added that we are "to divest ourselves of set-up couclusions." Under the heading, "Are Theological Views a Condition of Membership in Baptist Bodies?" the Western Recorder replies to Mr. Glover, an extract of which follows:

Dr. Glover, as he is quoted, wants "more and more to preach Christ without theory." That is, without any doctrinal interpretation of what his life was and what his death meant. That would suit Satan very well. It would suit every infidel group in the world. It would even suit Mohammedanism and Mormonism and Christian Science, and every other false faith. For the one thing they most want to get away from is the Bible doctrine of Christ.

But it will not suit the abundant teachings of the word of God. The apostle John had a doctrine—a "theory," if you please—about the Christ, a very definite one. John had this to say: "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world." (1 John 4: 2, 3.)

The Western Recorder is deeply concerned over the skeptical utterances of Mr. Glover. The Gospel Advocate joins with the Western Recorder in feeling a very grave concern over the skeptical utterances of anybody. We wish to go further and add that we feel a very vital concern over the human creeds and human denominations that are the cause of skepticism.

Mr. Glover has merely shifted the line of attack. He stands upon the same position, more fully developed, that has so long been occupied by denominational preachers who have been, and who still are, teaching the people that Jesus and the apostles did not mean what they said. They themselves have undermined the divinity of the Lord Jesus. They ought not to complain at Mr. Glover for standing on a platform that they themselves erected.

But "to preach Christ without theory!" We have heard that before. It sounds like denominational preachers telling the people that what Jesus said is nonessential and that they can be saved without rendering obedience to it.

The words spoken by Jesus constitute his teaching, his doctrine, or his "theory." No man can believe in Jesus without accepting his teaching or his "theory." To reject anything taught by Jesus, or to refuse obedience to anything commanded by Jesus, is to deny his divinity and to reject him as the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus said to his apostles: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) It is no greater infidelity for Mr. Glover to deny the statement of Luke that Jesus was born of a virgin than it is for Baptist preachers to deny the statement of Jesus and tell sinners they can be saved without being baptized. Peter said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) It is no greater infidelity for Mr. Glover to deny the statement of Paul that Jesns arose from the dead than it is for a Baptist preacher to deny the statement of Peter and tell sinners they can receive the remission of sins without being baptized. To repudiate one statement of the Bible is to repudiate it all.

Indeed, "ye have made void the word of God because of your tradition." Nothing will overcome infidelity except a return to God's Book. Jesus prayed for the unity of his people, "that they may all be one," giving, as an objective to be obtained by such union, "that the world may believe that thou didst send me." Any man who teaches anything he cannot read in the Bible, as well as the man who refuses to teach all he can read, produces division and inculcates infidelity. All of God's people can stand united on God's Book. Efforts at union on anything else are illusive and sinful.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

FOR FIFTY YEARS

The World's Greatest Sunday-School Commentary

PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LLD.

It contains the greatest possible wealth of practical help for ministers, teachers, and Sunday-school workers, so compiled and tabulated that it can be easily and effectively used.

The broadest range of quotations, illuminating houghts, clear and convincing explanation of the text itself, are all tuned to spiritual interpretation.

Unlimited in its possibility for helpfulness.

Beautiful and instructive pictures, maps, chronological charts and comprehensive index, make it complete in every respect. In text and in interpretation, it is fitted for all grades.

Price, $1.90-$2.00, prepaid

Order from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENN.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

REPLY TO BROTHER SMITH.

BY A. M'GARY.

My esteemed Brother Smith wastes his splendid ability striving to roll the "stone of Sisyphus" to the top of the hill. After his last Samsonian effort, the pesky thing came tumbling back to the foot of the hill, where I must look it over again.

He seems to think that the only essentiality connected with baptism is plenty of water, and that what was sufficient qualification for John's baptism is all-sufficient for the baptism ordained by Christ. If he is correct in this, Paul exceeded his authority in the case of the twelve at Ephesus.

Christ taught that none can "come to him," save such as had "heard and learned of the Father;" and to "come to him," one must "come" through baptism. Therefore, none can "come" to the baptism ordained of Christ, save such as "hear and learn of the Father." This saying of Christ correlates precisely with his saying: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make yon free." Christ received this "truth" from his Father and "gave" it to his apostles and "sent" them into "all the world" to "preach it to every creature;" and they did preach it, and we have it as they preached it, and are warned of God to neither "add to it, nor diminish aught from it."

In a general way, Brother Smith and I are perfectly agreed that God's word is an all-sufficient rule of faith and practice, and that we should, in speaking on all questions pertaining to salvation, speak only as it speaks and keep silent where it is silent. But in one particular way of Brother Smith's—the way he is in this controversy—he will not abide by his general agreement, but persists in speaking where the Bible does not speak and in not keeping silent where it is silent—as he did with reference to the "young girl"—and this course of his brought on our controversy.

He says he has "been at a loss to know why Brother McGary would couple 'in order to the remission of sins' with baptism as something to be obeyed and leave out 'the gift of the Holy Spirit." He is not only "at a loss" on this matter, but is wholly lost in the jungles of delusion; for "Brother McGary" does neither of the things he accuses him of. The "complement" to which he refers was done by Peter, and all that "Brother McGary" has done in the premises has been his efforts to keep Brother Smith from uncoupling what Peter "coupled;" nor does "Brother McGary leave out the gift of the Holy Spirit," but "leaves" it right where Peter "left" it.

I'm perfectly satisfied with the way Acts 2: 38 reads, and I'm well satisfied with the way Brother Smith handles the passage when he is in discussion with Baptists—for instance, his discussion with Dr. Lofton, in which he said the following: "I now affirm that the Baptist theory of regeneration, or conversion, is wholly physical, and absolutely destitute of moral power." (See page 285, "Why the Baptist Name.") Brother Smith was at himself then; but in this controversy with me he is beside himself, way off in his near-Baptist confusion. When in this state of confusion, he imagines that the water of Baptist baptism, in some miraculous way, transforms the "physical" of "the Baptist theory" into spiritual, and changes its immoral power into "moral power."

Again, on page 283 of the same book, Brother Smith quotes, altogether approvingly, from a letter Prof. W. R. Harper wrote to J. W. Shepherd, concerning Acts 2: 38, as follows: "The preposition indicates that remission of sins is the end to be aimed at in the actions expressed by the predicates 'repent' and 'be baptized." This places precisely the same stress upon "the remission of sins" of the passage that I have placed upon it in this controversy. Think, then, of Brother Smith's course toward my contention, after having approved this statement by Professor Harper! Here's what he says about my contention for the very same idea that he indorsed in his debate with Dr. Lofton: "Brother McGary seems to be wholly unconscious of the fact that he is the one wandering in the wilderness, having gone beyond what is written in the word of God, making and seeking to bind his law on the children of the Most High." Lofton could just as truly have said to him, when he approvingly quoted to him (Lofton) what Professor Harper said about Acts 2: 38: "You have gone beyond what is written in the word of God, making and seeking to bind your law on your Baptist brethren." Brother Smith ought either to retract his charge against me or confess to Dr. Lofton that he was not sincere in his use of Professor Harper's words concerning Acts 2: 38.

On page 272, "Why the Baptist Name," Brother Smith, in referring to his own conversion, said: "McQuiddy told sinners what to do to be saved in the very language of the apostle, and that is the reason why I understood baptism to be for the remission of sins. It is the interpretation of Peter's language by Dr. Lofton and others [Brother Smith comes mighty "near" being one of the "others"] that keeps multiplied thousands from understanding what Peter said." According to his contention with me, and his "young girl's" case thrown in for bad measure, people need not "understand what Peter said!"

On page 257 of the book, "Why the Baptist Name," Brother Smith, after reminding Dr. Lofton that the Baptist doctrine takes baptism from the place where Christ put it, says: "I would not tamper with the word of God in that manner for this whole universe." But, in contending, as Brother Smith does, that the baptism to which such "tampering" leads is valid baptism, and in his efforts to depreciate the teaching of Acts 2: 38 as a means of bolstering np such baptism, I must say that he makes himself as guilty of "tampering with the word of God" as Dr. Lofton is. I say this, not to wound Brother Smith's feelings, but to cause him to use that splendid brain and honest heart of his in seriously considering the attitude he is occupying.

I could quote many, many things Brother Smith said in his debate with Dr. Lofton that are very palpably inconsistent with things he has said in his rejoinders to me, but I'll desist and hasten this to a close.

In referring to my calling him a "near-Baptist," he says: "It has become a mental disease with our brother, until he is comparable to the man who was so fond of pudding that he could not talk about anything without having something to say about his favorite dish." This pleasantry afforded me a hearty laugh; and as a laugh is sometimes good for us, I'll see if I can't make him laugh by telling him a different "pudding" story. But before I tell the story I want to remind him that he can't reasonably object to my calling him a "near-Baptist," because he advertises himself to the world as a near-Baptist in publicly proclaiming that the Baptists are his brethren and in calling the Baptist Goliath (Lofton) "Brother Lofton" all through their discussion; for the term "brother" stands for a very "near" relationship.

Now to the story. During the Mexican War, as a recruit was approaching the American encampment to enlist, he met a discharged soldier coming out. In the course of their brief conversation, the former asked the latter: "What's your name?" He replied: "My real name is 'Wilson,' but now the boys all call me 'puddin'-head.'" The other asked why they called him that. He replied: "Well, in the battle of Buena Vista I got half of my head shot off, and while I was in the hospital a young girl nurse put a puddin' on the shot-off side;" and, lifting his hat, he said: "You see the puddin' is growed thar." The recruit remarked: "That's wonderful! You talk mighty good sense for one in that fix." He replied: "Yes, I talk good sense when I talk out of the good side of my head; but I have two ways of talking—sometimes out of the good side and sometimes out of the puddin' side; and when I talk out of the puddin' side, I sho' do talk mighty foolish." This story's application is not far to seek!

I'll conclude by relating the case of another "young girl," of Austin, Texas. This case is as true, in every particular, as the one Brother Smith related; and after I relate the case, he can, if he feels so disposed, tell us what he "thinks" of her chance at the judgment. This girl, on her deathbed, expressed an urgent desire to be baptized. So one of our quite prominent preachers, who lived in Austin (but whose name I'll not give in this), was sent for to baptize her. But before the preacher reached her bedside her parents and interested friends had decided that she was too feeble to withstand the ordeal of immersion; so they suggested to the preacher to try to satisfy her with sprinkling. He finally, out of his natural weakness and kindliness of heart, yielded. When the water was sprinkled on her face, she expressed her indignation, saying: "That's not baptism; and it's a cruel shame to treat me so." But she died unbaptized. Will Brother Smith say she was lost, or will he say she was saved?

From his statement of his "young girl's" case, I, for one, had as soon take this girl's chance as his girl's. But I hope the readers of the Gospel Advocate may realize how feolish and sectarianlike it is for disciples, who claim to regard the Bible as an all-sufficient rule of faith and practice, to relate such things to confuse the minds of superficial thinkers into acceptance of untaught positions.

No man can so thoroughly fortify gospel truth with proof texts and logical argument that a smart opponent who may resort to sophistry cannot so inwrap in clouds of sophistry as to hide the truth in the premises from unthinking minds.

EARLY RECOLLECTIONS. No. 3. BY LEE JACKSON.

Since the early days of boyhood, when under the tutorship of my mother I learned to spell "baker" and "horseback" and "botany" and to read the short defining sentences below the columns of words in Webster's blueback spelling book, I have been devoted to reading as a means of instruction and entertainment. The first papers that I enjuyed the privilege of reading, as published in the interest of our restoration plea, was the Southern Christian Weekly, edited by J. M. Pickens, of North Alabama, and the American Christian Review, edited by Benjamin Franklin, of Cincinnati, Ohio. I never failed to read all that appeared in these papers from the pens of such men as Jacob Creath, Carroll Kendrick, Lawrence W. Scott, B. F. Manire, J. M. Pickens, and others. As these men all stood for the simplicity and purity of New Testament teaching, and as I was under the influence of a newly born enthusiasm in behalf of this plea, I never questioned as to the scripturalness of any teaching set forth by these writers. A time came, however, when I found myself earnestly calling in question many ideas presented by writers for our periodicals as being no part of the plea for which we propose to stand. Then, as now, there were those who held speculative ideas about the meaning of certain scriptures, the difference being that the speculative opinions of that time have been relegated to the trash heap of worthlessness, while new issues have been brought to the front that will finally prove to be as worthless as those that have been cast aside and forgotten.

At the time of which I am writing, and when I was searching all nooks and corners for something to read that would give me more information concerning the plea for New Testament teaching, I received a bundle of copies of the Millennial Harbinger, ranging in dates from 1851 to 1859. This was through the good ministration of a Sister Clark, whose home was near Sardis, Miss., and whose brothers had been educated at Bethany College. Sister Clark has long since passed to her reward, but I still have those old copies of the Harbinger. They are now faded and worn, but I still occasionally take them from their hiding place and read them. At the time referred to W. K. Pendleton, Robert Richardson, and A. W. Campbell were coeditors on the Harbinger. A series of articles on "Christian Unity," by Richardson, appeared in the Harbinger for the year 1859. This was before I was old enough to begin learning the letters of the English alphebet. In beginning the third one of these articles, Richardson says: "We have seen that Christian unity is oneness with Christ, and that it is effected by the indwelling of Christ and of the Father, by the Spirit." Often have I read these words of Richardson, and often have I asked myself the question concerning those who disrupt congregations by contending for innovations and those who press their mooted issues for acceptance as a part of the plea for unity: Do they have the indwelling of Christ and of the Father, by the Spirit, as the governing authority in their hearts? Further along in the same article Mr. Richardson again says: "As Christian unity is essentially 'the unity of the Spirit,' it can exist or be maintained only by the presence of the Spirit, producing in the heart and life the fruits of the gospel. Peace is one of these fruits, and, as intimately connected with purity, the one most directly concerned in the preservation of unity; and it is the one, therefore, which, in reference to this end, is especially to be cultivated." Thus did leaders of the plea for unity write sixty years ago; and in the light of this teaching we are often led to wonder why so much contention and factionalism exist to-day among those who claim to be pleading for the same sort of teaching that then emanated from Bethany College. Paul says: "If any man bath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Rom. 8: 9.) Is it not true that contentions and factionalisms exist among us because of a failure to stress this teaching, and that too many have accepted the things of the gospel as a matter of agreement in "church" formality?

At the time when I began my humble career as a searcher after Bible knowledge there was a general desire among the people of our immediate section of country to learn "the what and the why " of the "church." Preachers of all sorts and sizes were preaching sermons on the "church;" denominational papers contained lengthy articles on the "church;" songs were sung in praise of the "church;" and in all leading circles of society the "church" was a prominent theme of conversation. I heard the "church" discussed by Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, and Baptists; and pamphlets and books on the subject were placed in my hands. If I did not learn the various angles and turns of the "church" question, it was not because of a lack of teachers in sufficient number. And all these preachers and teachers followed well-beaten paths that had been marked ont by ecclesiastical leaders. A Baptist book, entitled "Ten Days' Travel in Search of the Church," was placed in my hands. I read the book, and enjoyed the reading; but at the conclusion I found myself wondering how these Baptists allowed the church to remain lost in the wilderness for long centuries and then be able to find it within a period of ten days. Especially was I mystified by the fact that, according to their own admissions, the "church" which they had found had such a small number of members as compared with the number of Christians outside of it. To my way of thinking, there was a "loose screw" somewhere in the machinery of their logic.

The male members of the little congregation that met for worship near my mother's home were Dr. J. M. Mc-Lendon, W. J. Owen, John Troutman, James Peterson, and Marion Hughes. I have met in worship with many different congregations since those days, but I have never been more edified in any worshiping assembly than in that first congregation of my early associations in worship. John Troutman was a Dutchman who had moved with his family from Pennsylvania to Mississippi. He was full of zeal and energy, always trying to do something for the betterment of conditions for the little congregation. He did not know as much about the general subject of "church" as Peterson and McLendon seemed to know. The only church that Troutman knew anything about was his little home congregation, and he was always there present at the appointed time for worship. To John Troutman there would have been no church if the members of that little congregation had ceased to meet for worship. In broken English he would exhort us to be regular in our meetings for worship, to do our duty in Christian living, and to look to Christ as a Savior who would help us. A man by the name of Ashmore was afraid of getting baptized into the wrong church. Troutman told him that if his faith in Christ was sincere and if he sincerely desired to obey Christ, he was in no danger of missing the mark. One preacher said of another one that he could get more of Christ into his sermons than any man he had ever heard. I asked him if that was not as the apostles preached; and then I thought of Trontman's exhortations.

SPREADING THE KINGDOM.

BY J. A.

The greatest work in which any man can engage is the work of saving the lost, rescuing the perishing, and establishing scriptural congregations of those thus redeemed from the world. Individuals and congregations who engage in an enterprise of this kind, doing "all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him," contribute their labors to that which honors God and increases joy and happiness among men.

Few men have shown a greater willingness to assist preachers of the gospel in their work or can claim the honor of having had a part in the establishment of more congregations than Brother A. M. Burtou, of this city. To incite others to do the same sort of work, and for the encouragement of those so engaged, we publish the following letter from Brother Burton to Brother Thomas H. Burton, of Union, S. C., and also append Brother T. H. Burton's reply:

Nashville, Tenn., January 1, 1925.—Mr. Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C.—Dear Brother Burton: I do not believe I could start the New Year off in a much better way than to dictate this letter to you the first thing this way than to dictate this letter to you the first thing this morning.

I have been wonderfully blessed during the past year in many ways, and I am going to try to show my gratitude to our Heavenly Father by being a little more active and doing a little more, if possible, during 1925 than I have in the past year. I had some part in starting several new congregations last year, and a small part in several hundred people's making the good confession.

I am sending you under separate cover one hundred tracts of a printed sermon of Brother Porter Sanders, of Jackson, Miss., and I would be glad to know that each member of your congregation had one and would carefully read it and re-read it and then lend it to others. I believe in this way each can help double the congregation there during 1925. Brother Sanders has been very successful in using tracts. Too, he has had some of his tracts printed in the daily paper. He thinks this has been worth more to him in his work than anything else: so I pass the idea on to you. Of course, he follows up all of these with house-to-house visits.

Brother Marshall Keeble (colored), whom I have had some part with, has started two new congregations in the past year and has had something like two hundred confessions.

fessions.

Prospects for this year are very bright. I really believe, if we would get as enthusiastic over our spiritual work as we do over our material affairs, that each congregation, young and old, could double its membership during this year. I believe it would be a much easier job to double some of the older and larger congregations than it would some of the older and larger congregations than it would some of the smaller mission points, if we could get the membership to do halfway its duty, or the elders or leaders to believe that this is possible. The biggest trouble I have had is to get our leading brethren to visualize or see the great possibilities. Of course, if we do not believe anything like this can be done, it is useless to try.

Yours fraternally,

A M BURTON.

A. M. BURTON.

Union, S. C., January 5, 1925.—Mr. A. M. Burton, Nashville, Tenn.—My Dear Brother Burton: The good news of yesterday must come first. Eleven confessions at Union. Five at the morning service and six at the evening service. You may guess that it was a time of great rejoicing with us. Three men, heads of families. Others are expected any time.

I received the check, which I appreciated very much, also the good New Year's letter. They both were a source of great encouragement. May God richly bless you and yours in the great work which you are doing. May we all be blessed in every effort that we put forth in the Master's

Referring to your statement in your last letter concerning the doubling of the congregations, both old and new, I heartily agree with you that in many places it can be done. Greater opportunities have never been afforded the church in this century than at this time, and I doubt if we have ever had the opportunity that we now have since the days of the apostles. If the brotherhood would only awake out of the apostles. If the brotherhood would only awake out of their sleep and get busy while the religious world is in an unrest and looking for something better than the denominations, we could gather the golden grain by the thousands. I really believe if I were turned loose with a good helper and a tent, that I could establish six good congregations this year. The condition of the minds of the people in this State land at the believe the state of the state neiper and a tent, that I could establish six good congregations this year. The condition of the minds of the people in this State leads me to believe very strongly that hundreds of congregations can be established and thousands of people baptized within a very short time. May God hasten the day when this will be done.

As to the colored people of this State, I am of the opinion that a greater place does not exist for a work among them than here. I hear of many who are very anxious to hear the gospel, and have several calls to preach to them, but have been so busy that it seems almost impossible for me to give them any time just now. I hope to have the opportunity to go among them soon. If Brother Keeble would come to this field, he could do a wonderful work. There are some who have heard me preach that would gladly obey the gospel within a short time, I am sure. Perhaps we are not praying God to send laborers into the field as much as we should.

Brother J. C. Mosley will arrive this week, I hope, to help out in the work. He will locate in the neighborhood of Moore and Stone Station. That is one of the greatest fields that I have ever seen. We are expecting great things over there.

We will appreciate the treats and will try to use there things over there.

We will appreciate the tracts and will try to use them for good.

I thank you again for the financial assistance, also the letters of encouragement. Yours fraternally, Yours fraternally, THOMAS H. BURTON.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once-

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

Order from Gospel Advocate Company, Nashville, Tenn.

LUST, SIN, AND DEATH. BY C. B. DOUTHITT.

There are theories set forth in the creeds of the denominations that are seldom publicly advocated except when attacked in debates. Many of the "lay members" of the denominations are surprised when they learn that such theories are in their creeds. I know of no better opportunity to point out the theories peculiar to denominationalism to people who have become a part of sectarianism than through debates.

In the last few centuries a few men have been found who would affirm the theories of "hereditary total depravity" and "impossibility of apostasy." But in recent years it is not so easy to find men who will affirm the things set forth in their creeds. Some of them have learned that the consequence of the doctrine of "hereditary total depravity" (infant damnation) is very repulsive to thoughtful, considerate mothers. It does not take a Solomon to see that one of the motives of repentance, fear of the judgment, is no motive to an erring brother who believes he will be saved whether he repents or not.

Opposition to the theories of "hereditary total depravity" and "impossibility of apostasy" cannot be more clearly stated than is stated by the inspired James. "But each man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed. Then the lust, when it hath conceived, heareth sin: and the sin, when it is full-grown, bringeth forth death." (James 1: 14, 15.) If children are born into the world totally depraved, spiritually dead, and remain in that condition until the new birth, after which they cannot die spiritually, regardless of anything they might do or fail to do, how could sin bring death to any man, woman, or child in all the world? Sin cannot bring death to one horn dead. Neither can sin bring death to one who cannot die. Can the advocates of "hereditary total depravity" and "impossibility of apostasy" find one person in hell, on earth, or in heaven, who ever did or ever will die the spiritual death, except Adam and Eve? Can one die that death who was never alive? Will they concede that one who has been made alive by being born again can be drawn away by his own lust and enticed to the extent that the lust brings sin, and the sin brings death? If sin cannot bring death to either of these characters, I believe that sincerity and justice demand that the advocates of the theories mentioned above tell us to what class James had reference and what he meant when he said that sin brings death.

Will they say that it was Adam's lust and sin that bring death as used in this sense? No, for James says each man by his own lust. Will they say that death as used in this sense means the physical or natural death? No, it would never do, while conducting the funeral services for an infant, to let the mother know that they believe that it was the child's own lust and sin, conceived and developed, that killed it. In writing the obitnary of one of their preaching brethren, it would never do to say that it was his own lust conceived and his own sin full-grown that killed the brother. That would bring down the anathemas of the most ardent defenders of "total depravity" and "impossibility of apostasy." No, they just cannot afford to say that James has reference to the physical or natural death. The terms, "each man" and "his own," prohibit an escape there.

Without jeopardizing their "impossibility of apostasy" theory, can they say that James uses the term "death" in the same sense that John uses it in Rev. 21: 8? Yes, by joining the Holy Rollers in saying that one born again never sins. Otherwise, they cannot; for, to concede that sin brought by lust can be found in a child of God, and, at the same time, claim that the sin cannot develop death, is to say that James correctly set forth a canse, but was mistaken in the effect.

James (1: 14, 15) is very clear to the man who has neither "hereditary total depravity" nor "impossibility of apostasy" to protect. The condition of a child is such that the Savior could say, "To such belongeth the kingdom of God." But as they reach the stage of accountability, and, therefore, responsibility, they are drawn away by their own lust, and enticed. They could not be drawn away if already away. The lust conceives sin, the sin develops death. They are then dead through their own trespasses and sins. (See Eph. 2: 1-3.) Thus they remain until made living stones in that holy temple which is the church, the "called out" of God. Henceforth the carnal mind or animal propensities must be circumscribed and controlled. If not, lust and sin, conceived and developed, will again render them dead through trespasses and sins.

SHOULD WE HEAR CHRIST'S APOSTLES TO-DAY? BY J. H. M'BROOM.

Several years ago a man told me he was willing to hear Christ, but positively would not listen to anything the apostles said. Recently, in one of our cottage prayer meetings, some one raised this question and suggested that I preach along this line. I here give a part of the sermon for the readers of the Gospel Advocate.

Jesus did not come into the world to primarily make known himself-his thoughts, ways, and will; but to reveal the Father-his thoughts, ways, and will. During the great discourse on the bread of life Christ said: "For I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6: 38.) Once when the Jews persecuted Jesus for healing on the Sabbath and calling God his own Father, he said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father doing: for what things soever he doeth, these the Son also doeth in like manner. . . . I can of myself do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is righteous; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 5: 19-30.) Once Jesus said his word would be the standard of judgment in the last day, and gave this reason: "For I spake not from myself; but the Father that sent me, he hath given me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life eternal: the things therefore which I speak, even as the Father hath said unto me, so I speak." (John 12: 49, 50.) In Gethsemane his prayer was: "Not my will, but thine, be done." From these scriptures we must conclude that what Jesus taught and did was the will of his Father and our Father and our God.

Jesus selected and trained twelve apostles, and one of them, Judas Iscariot, betrayed him. In that memorable and farewell prayer in the presence of and in behalf of eleven of the apostles he said to his Father: "Now they know that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are from thee: for the words which thou gavest me I have given unto them; and they received them, and knew of a truth that I came from thee, and they believed that thou didst send me. . . . I have given them thy word. . . Neither for these only do I pray, but for all them also that believe on me through their word." (John 17: 7-20.) After his death and resurrection, he said to the apostles, Thomas being absent: "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." (John 20: 21.) Just before he "wus received up into heaven" he said to the eleven: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) It logically follows that "the apostles' teaching," "their word," "the gospel," did not have its origin in the minds of the apostles, but came from the very highest source-heaven-originating in the mind of God. God gave the teaching to Jesus. Jesus gave it to the apostles to give to all the world, and sent up a fervent prayer to the Father for the unity of all who might believe on him through "their word." The trouble is, we do not all believe on him through "their word." If we should, certainly we would come more nearly being one. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear the apostles.

In accepting the apostles' doctrine, we receive teaching from the very highest authorities; but in rejecting this doctrine, we reject both God and his Son. When sending out the twelve to preach to the Jews, Christ said: "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me." (Matt. 10: 40.) As the seventy went out, he said: "He that heareth you heareth me; and he that rejecteth you rejecteth me; and he that rejecteth me rejecteth him that sent me." (Luke 10: 16.) When contemplating sending the apostles into all the world, he said: "He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me." (John 13: 20.) To receive God is to receive Christ; to receive Christ is to receive the apostles. To reject the apostles and their teaching is to reject Jesus; to reject Jesus is to reject God. Then, to whom shall we go?

Not only did Jesus teach and train his apostles for the great work of preaching the gospel, but he fortified and immunized them against error in telling people what to do to be saved from their sins and how to live a life wellpleasing to God by sending them the Holy Spirit. "But the Comforter, even the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said unto yon." (John 14: 26.) "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he shall guide you into all the truth." (John 16: 13.) This promised Spirit came on the first Pentecost after Jesus ascended to heaven. Read Acts, chapter 2. Many good people put great stress on the Spirit, and pray for the Spirit to come, teach, bless, guide, and save, and at the same time refuse to listen to and obey the apostles, who taught "as the Spirit gave them utterance." If the Spirit should come, he would not bring a message contrary to the one he brought to the world about two thousand years ago. The Spirit, through Peter, preached Jesus. The people who believed and were pricked in their hearts and wanted to know what to do were told by the Holy Spirit, speaking through the apostle Peter: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) "They then that received his word [word spoken by the Spirit through Peter] were haptized: and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." (Acts 2: 41.) Of course we can easily see that those people were led by the Spirit in becoming Christians. Why should not all people want to be led by the Spirit in the same way-in gladly doing all things the Spirit, through the apostles, calls upon them to do? Who can point out a better and wiser way?

The Holy Spirit guided men in writing the New Testament. This book contains a sufficient amount of the teachings of Christ and the Spirit through the apostles to lead us to Jesus and to guide us in living the Christian life. To reject the New Testament is to reject the apostles, the Holy Spirit, Jesus, and God. To fail to obey the gospel as preached by the apostles is to fail to obey the Spirit, Jesus, and God. Even those who preach a different gospel to the people rest under a curse. Paul says: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, should preach unto you any gospel other than that which we preached unto you, let him be anathema." (Gal. 1: 8.) To consider anything the apostles taught as narrow and "old fogy" is to place the "old-fogy" brand upon the Spirit, Jesus, and God. Is any one willing to do this? To laugh at baptism, or anything else the apostles taught, is to laugh at the apostles; to laugh at the apostles is to laugh at Jesus and the Holy Spirit; to laugh at Jesus and the Holy Spirit is to laugh at God. Certainly we cannot afford to do this.

When people come to themselves and soberly turn from the traditions of men, human creeds, and articles of faith, to the apostles, do they take a step backward? They take a triumphant step forward and upward to the realm of eternal truth, the Spirit, Jesus, and God. Friends, let us shake off our delusions and move forward.

COMPLIMENTARY CRITICISMS.

BY S. H. HALL.

It seems to me that criticisms should always he appreciated and studied, it matters not from what source they come. Even when your enemies criticize you, study that criticism. Though it is their nature to magnify our faults. and sometimes make faults where there are none, often is it the case when there is some defect in us upon which to base the criticism. We should not warry about criticisms, nor ever allow ourselves to think very much about the critic. When you are criticized, look self over at once to see if there is a cause in your own life and character. And be certain that you want to see it if it is there, to the end that it may be removed and your own heart and life improved. I think we should he so desperately in earnest about keeping our own hearts and lives right before God and man that we could not find time to hold unkind feelings toward any critic, I care not how ugly and unreasonable his feeling toward us may be. Just make up your mind—and be steeled against any influence to change it—that you will not do otherwise than right and just toward any soul on earth; that you will not hate any one. but will love all in the true sense of this word. Others can do as they please-so often you are powerless even to influence them-but for self you are responsible before God, and he gives you power to control your own heart and keep it right before him. How sensible is such a life as this to live, and how easy when we allow ourselves to he sane and not deranged with jealousy and envy!

But I have been thinking of some criticisms that I have heard that are very complimentary to the one criticized.

Two preachers were once associated with the work in a town where the people were factory-working people, as a rule. They were fine people, but the medium class, and many of them below this class. One of the preachers felt like giving it up, and said: "Brother —— can work in such places and with such people as these, but we [referring to himself and wife] cannot." And then, when a preacher was once called to a congregation to help with the local work, it was said by some of the members that their fear was that this preacher would be interested in all classes and be taking in the poor, downtrodden, and cutcast, or words to that effect. When this was told me, I could not keep from saying: "What a compliment that is to that preacher!"

I think I have seen some preachers of the gospel who could preach only to the poor, and a very few who seemed to desire to be associated only with the rich. But there is one thing I know—viz., that a one-hundred per cent case of the religion of our Lord will make one feel perfectly at home wherever there is a soul to be saved, let him be rich or poor, educated or uneducated, old or young, "whether Jew or Gentile, bond or free."

But I am asking that your heart run with me as we hasten through the "Grand Old Book" and see what is said about the poor.

Under the old law, they could not hold an acceptable fast without providing bread for the poor. (Isa. 58: 1-9.) Nebuchadnezzar was taught to redeem himself from his sins and iniquities by showing mercy to the poor. (Dan. 4.27.) There is a special blessing for those who remember the poor. (Ps. 41: 1-3.) Then it would be well to study what Job has to say about his feelings and attitude toward the poor, this man in whom God could find no wrong. (Job 29: 12-17; 31: 16-32.) Then note the special provisions made in the law of Moses for the poor. (Lev. 19: 9; Deut. 15: 9, 10.) One of the things that put Sodom beyond redemption was her neglect of the poor. (Read Ezek. 16: 48, 49.) Note what our Lord says to the rich young ruler. (Luke 18: 18-23.) And after our Lord had spent a part of a day in the home of Zuccheus, behold its effect when Zaccheus declared: "Half of my goods will I give to the poor." Observe what Jehovah says about Cornelius' almsgiving. (Acts 10: 1, 2.) And have you been stirred by the way the women talked about Dorcas while she was lying before them a corpse? (Acts 9: 36-39.) Her fingers had made garments for the poor. The one great thing that is said of the Jerusalem church, the first and most nearly perfect congregation that has ever existed, is that none of the poor were left out. (Acts 4: 32-35; Acts 6.) And note the early Christian example in thoughtfulness of the poor. (Acts 11: 27-30.) The collections called for in 1 Cor. 16: 1-4 were for the poor saints. And is it not true that one of the outstanding evidences that our Lord was what he claimed to be is the fact that in his preaching the poor were not left out? "The poor have the gospel preached to them." (Matt. 11: 5.) This fact was associated with his miracles. And true it is that a complete transformation has been wrought in you that changed your nature from the human to the divine nature, if in your heart you find no disposition to shun or neglect the poor. Note the relationship the poor sustain to our Maker. (Prov. 14: 31; 17: 5.) The righteous never forget the poor. (Prov. 29: 7; 14: 21; 19: 7.) God will not hear us when the cry of the poor we refuse to hear. (Prov. 21: 13; Matt. 18: 10.) And bave you noticed that special instructions were given to Paul from the other apostles and elders in Jerusalem that the poor be remembered? (Gal. 2; 10.) And finally, pure and undefiled religion before God is to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. (James 1: 27.)

I have so often thought how God must look on many who work for the "Community Chest" and in big drives for money to give to the poor, and who may make large contributions to such drives, yet would shun the poor on the streets. When any soul is shunned or avoided just because he is poor, the one that is doing it may have given all his goods to feed the poor, but he will be lost, world without end, just because he had not that love divine that ever filled and controlled our Lord in all his thoughts, words, and actions. (Read 1 Cor. 13: 3.)

I have just seen a picture drawn by M. Leone Bracker of the "Third Commandment," in which we are taught not to take the name of the Lord in vain. It is that of a well-dressed churchman, with his stovepipe silk hat, and a prayer book in his hand, praying to the Lord. By his side kneels a poor woman and her starving child, pleading for bread, and he holds his head too high to see them. This artist says this is taking the name of the Lord in vain, and it is. All such prayers are vain. And that ruffian in the backwoods who persistently curses every breath has a better chance for heaven than such a hypo-

I close this article with that beautiful poem by Mrs. Emma A. Lent, "They Say, 'The Master is Coming:"

They say: "The Master is coming
To honor the town to-day,
And none can tell us at whose house or home
The Master would choose to stay."
And I thought, while my heart beat wildly,
What if he should come to mine?
How would I strive to entertain
And honor the Guest divine!

And straight I turned to toiling
To make my house more neat;
I swept and polished, and garnished
And decked it with blossoms sweet.
I was troubled for fear the Master
Might come ere my task was done,
And hastened and worked the faster,
And watched the hurrying sun.

But right in the midst of my duties,
A woman came to my door;
She had come to tell me her sorrows,
And my comfort and aid to implore.
And I said: "I cannot listen,
Nor help you any to-day;
I have greater things to attend to."
And the pleader turned away.

But soon there came another—
A cripple, thin, pale, and gray—
And said: "O let me stop and rest
A while in your home, I pray!
I have traveled far since morning,
I am hungry and faint and weak;
My heart is full of misery,
And comfort and help I seek."

And I said: "I am grieved and sorry, But I cannot help you to-day: I look for a great and noble guest." And the cripple went away. And the day wore onward swiftly, And my task was nearly done; And ever the prayer was in my heart That the Master to me might come.

And I thought I would spring to meet him
And serve him with utmost care,
When a little child stood by me,
With a face so sweet and fair—
Sweet, but with marks of teardrops,
And his clothes were tattered and old;
A finger was bruised and bleeding,
And his little bare feet were cold.

And I said: "I am sorry for you,
You are sorely in need of care;
But I cannot stop to give it,
You must hasten on elsewhere."
And at these words a shadow
Swept over the blue-veined brow.
"Some one will feed and clothe you, dear,
But I am too busy now."

At last the day was ended
And my toil was over and done;
My house was swept and garnished,
And I watched in the dusk alone—
Watched, but no footfall sounded,
No one e'er paused at my gate,
No one entered my cottage door,
I could only pray and wait.

I waited till night had deepened,
And the Master had not come.

"He has entered some other door," I cried,
"And gladdened some other home!"

My labor had been for nothing,
And I bowed my head and wept;
My heart was sore with longing,
Yet in spite of all I slept.

Then the Master stood before me,
And his face was grave and fair:
"Three times to-day I came to your door,
And craved your pity and care;
Three times you sent me onward,
Unhelped and uncomforted,
And the blessing you might have had was lost,
And your chance to serve has fled."

"O Lord, dear Lord, forgive me!
How could I know it was thee?"
My soul was very shamed and bowed
In the depth of humility.
And he said: "The sin is pardoned,
But the blessing is lost to thee;
For, comforting not the least of mine,
Ye have failed to comfort me."

It is very easy to attack the foreign growth; it is very difficult to deal with the home-grown sins.—H. E. Kirk.

UNITY RESTORED.

On November 9 the Fairfax church of Christ, at Win-On November 9 the Fairfax church of Christ, at Winchester, Ky., began a series of gospel meetings, with Brother J. P. Sewell, of Fort Worth, Texas, doing the preaching. This meeting continued fifteen days. The brethren, with many of the other citizens of Winchester, regard this the biggest and best meeting ever held here. In fact, we believe it to be one of the greatest and most far-reaching meetings ever conducted. Brethren who know the conditions which have prevailed here for several years will heartily concur with us in this judgment and will rejoice with the angels of heaven and with us in the scriptural achievement and victory to which the Lord has scriptural achievement and victory to which the Lord has brought us.

The hindering and hurtful division of about seven years' standing among the brethren has been eliminated and we standing among the brethren has been eliminated and we now have an exceedingly fine congregation of about three hundred members who are "giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The brethren realize now, as never before, "how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" We now stand together as one man to go forth to battle against sin in all of its forms here in this magnificent country, the blue-grass section of Kentucky, whose influence at one time for pure Christianity was felt around the world. There is now offered to the body of our Lord here the greatest opportunity known to us, and, with our forces united, living together in harmony and love, we hope to see the borders of God's kingdom rapidly extended in this country.

country

The Fairfax congregation made the advance movement toward a restoration of unity, and found a most brotherly and Christian response on the part of the Main Street brethren. Nearly all had come to see the awfulness of the situation and many hearts yearned for a better day. Brother Claude Neal, who has worked with the Main Street Church for more than four years, is to be greatly commended and loved for his whole-hearted coöperation in this noble accomplishment. With all of his soul he indorsed the movement and used his time and influence in that direction. Had he been characterized by a selfish spirit instead of the spirit of Christ, he could have prevented the coming together. In this most worthy undertaking and holy attainment he has shown himself to be a man of God prompted by the highest and most laudable The Fairfax congregation made the advance movement man of God prompted by the highest and most laudable motives. Brother Neal and I will both remain in this work until the services of a suitable man may be secured.

Brother Sewell, an outstanding factor in the meeting and work of which we have spoken, as a man, a preacher, and work of which we have spoken, as a man, a preacher, and a coworker, fully came up to our expectation; and we expected much, because he was recommended for this meeting by Brother F. W. Smith. We have never been associated with a man who is more thoroughly imbued with the real spirit of Christ than is Brother Sewell. He is a wonderful preacher of the gospel, is truly a Christian gentleman, and the best man to help in the adjustment of a church difficulty that we have ever seen. The brethren and sisters of Winchester will love and respect him while life letts for his work's sake, and we pray that God may life lasts for his work's sake, and we pray that God may give him strength of body and mind and many years yet to contend earnestly for the word of the Lord.

THOMAS D. ROSE.

The Gospel Advocate rejoices in the good work accomplished. The blessing of the peacemaker rests on Brother Sewell, Brother Neal, and others who labored to restore "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" between these two congregations. Both congregations are now in a position to accomplish something in behalf of the greatest Cause ever pleaded.

But woe to those who are dividing the body of Christ! To drive a nail through the spiritual body of the Lord is a very far more horrible crime than was committed by those who wickedly and brutally drove the nails through his physical body. It is enough to cause any intelligent man to shudder with terror to know that "he that soweth discord among brethren" is an abomination to the living

Let us be specific about the identity of the man who sows discord. The man that causes agitation, investigation, contention, and discord by preaching the truth, which is to preach nothing but what he can read word for word, without comment, in the word of God, does not come under this head. Jesus came to bring not only peace, but a sword, and kindled a fire that has involved sin and corruption in a conflagration that will eventually drive them from the earth. But the man who sows discord is the man who has a theory of his own to advance, some darling speculation, or some morbid hobby that has so twisted his mind as to make him incompetent to have a normal thought on the subject. We need not mention the sins of sectarianism and denominationalism on the outside. We speak now of those on the inside who have given birth to a darling hobby over anti-literature, anti-Sunday school, and anti-Rible school, or who have disturbed the peace of Zion by the propagation of groundless speculation over unfulfilled prophecy.

Such things must stop. The elders of congregations should extend the exercise of scriptural discipline to the disturbers. As long as a man will say nothing about antiliterature, anti-Sunday school, anti-Bible school, or unfulfilled prophecy, except what he can read in God's word, he is not a sower of discord. When he gets beyond this, he causes trouble in Israel and is an abomination to Israel's God. J. A.

OUR MESSAGES.

Worldly ambitions are unwise.

A storm is a harbinger of peace.

Brother Srygley says a man is not a member of the congregation unless he congregates, and that he ought to place his membership every Sunday.

S. H. Hall preached to two large audiences at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Hall reports one from the Baptists and one by statement.

Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky., January 5: "I preached to a splendid audience at Foster's Grove yesterday. I was busy through 1924, and want to be busy this year. I have some time open for monthly preaching. Brethren, if I can help you, write me."

T. H. Burton, Union, S. C., January 10: "The congregation at Union was made happy last Sunday, when eleven confessions were made at the regular services. This congregation wants to double its number this year, and will appreciate the petitions of all interested saints."

E. A. Elam delivered a series of splendid lectures at the chapel exercises of the David Lipscomb College last week. Brother Elam preached at Hendersonville, Tenn., last Lord's day. "The Pleasures of Sin" and "The Pleasures of Christianity" were the subjects discussed.

We wish we knew some pretty terms in which to suggest to some of our preachers the danger of becoming chronic beggars. When a man is begging for a good cause and not for himself personally, or when he does not have a habit of being in the hole financially all the time, it is not so bad; otherwise it looks like a real man would get a little ashamed of himself.

- R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky., January 5: "Last Sunday I was with the church here. Fine attendance at the morning and evening services. Everything looks encouraging for the new year. Next Sunday I go to the Forks of Elkhorn, in Franklin County. I enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate. You have a mighty good paper, and success is sure to crown your efforts, for you shun not to 'declare the whole counsel of God.'"
- declare the whole counsel of God."

 C. D. Crouch, Portland, Tenn., December 28: "You will please change my address on your mailing list from Portland, Tenn., to Fountain Head, Tenn., Route 3. I am moving out to a farm recently contracted for, and shall hereafter be a real dirt farmer. This does not mean that I have quit preaching or that I intend to quit. I am merely forced to do something that will enable me to pay expenses, which I have not been able to do by devoting all my time to preaching. I have promised two meetings for the coming year, and may be able to arrange a few more in the fall. I still have some time open for monthly engagements on Lord's days. Any church that desires my services for such engagements, or for meetings after the first of October, may address me at Fountain Head, Tenn." Why will not churches do their duty by preachers? Preachers are the most sacrificing set of men on earth. They do it for the good of the cause they love. If stingy church members would wake up and give a tenth, and thus hold up the hands of our preachers in the work, we could get something done. It is a public calamity when a man that can preach like Brother Crouch has to quit preaching to support himself. preaching to support himself.

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell,

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2,00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your eld as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Beventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter.

Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

QUESTIONS TO BE AVOIDED.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Continuing from last week, let us study the following:

If any man teacheth a different doctrine, and consenteth not to sound words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is puffed up, knowing nothing, but doting about questionings and disputes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, wranglings of men corrupted in mind and bereft of the truth, supposing that godliness is a way of gain. (1 Tim. 6: 3-5.)

As we have seen, Timothy in Ephesus was to "charge certain men not to teach a different doctrine" from the teaching of Christ. "The end of the charge is love out of a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned." (1 Tim. 1: 3-5.)

On this charge the whole of 1 Tim. 1 must be studied and followed, especially by teachers and preachers, because that which Timothy must do we all must do. Timothy was charged likewise to hold "faith and a good conscience; which some having thrust from them made shipwreck concerning the faith."

If Timothy must receive and keep this charge from "a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned." I repeat, what less than this can preachers now do and be pleasing to God?

What, then, is "a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned?" All teaching and preaching must be done from such a heart and conscience and in faith unfeigned. A teacher and preacher who shirks responsibility, dodges obligations, leaves behind him a string of unpaid debts, is smirched with immorality, or whose trail is marked with imprudent conduct and evil reports, cannot be pure in heart and cannot have a conscience void of offense toward God and men. Such men cannot teach the truth and preach the gospel in unfeigned faith. Certainly one who teaches anything different from the teaching of Christ does not do so io faith unfeigned. Faith comes by hearing the word of God; hence, no man can preach in faith anything except the word of God. He cannot preach in faith his own opinions, his own theories and speculations, or any doctrines and commandments of men. Men of faith are the ones who practice and preach only that which God teaches. (See Heb. 11.)

Three different brethren preach on "the millennium," giving their respective opinions concerning it, as if they were the oracles of God, but they differ; hence, two of them must be wrong, and doubtless all three are. This, then, is not of faith. By faith they can study and teach without speculation or opinion all the Bible says on the subject, and in this way all will teach the same thing and be "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) What is more than this comes of evil and produces evil-the evil of contention and division.

I ask in all seriousness, and press the question with all earnestness, how can all teachers and preachers "speak the same thing" and "be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment" on the millennium? Just as they can "speak the same thing" and are of "the same mind and the same judgment" on baptism, the Lord's Supper, and every other subject.

Some preachers seem never to be impressed with the failure and sin of not speaking the same thing and of not being "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." And some seem not to be impressed with the fearful fact that the ones who do not speak as the oracles of God, but speculate and give their opinions, and who do not "hold fast the pattern of sound words" which have been learned from the inspired writers (2 Tim. 1: 13), are responsible for the sin of strife, contention, and division. I would rejoice greatly if I had the power to cause all teachers and preachers to realize this.

In 1 Tim. 6: 3-5, which has been quoted above, it is not only declared that men should not teach "a different doctrine" from that of Christ's teaching in regard to the duties of masters and servants given in verses 1 and 2, but also they should not teach anything contrary to "the doctrine which is according to godliness "-that is, the teaching which honors God and leads into the true, godly life. Not only so, but this true teaching-Christ's teaching-must be taught in "sound words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ." Cannot Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, and God express themselves in their own words concerning all things they wish men to know? If they cannot, then what mortals can?

We have heard it emphasized from boyhood that there can be no unity and peace; that all cannot "speak the same thing" and cannot be "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment" without the use of "sound words." Sound words are the words of Christ. The doctrine of Christ must be taught in his words. Bible things must be called by Bible names. All teachers and preachers must "hold the pattern of sound words" Tim. 1: 13), and must speak as it were oracles of God (1 Pet. 4: 11)—that is, only that which comes from God hy revelation. As Moses received "living oracles" from God and spoke them to the people (Acts 7: 38), every teacher and preacher to-day must study the will of God revealed through Christ to the apostles by the Holy Spirit, and must speak only as this revelation speaks.

The man who teaches "a different doctrine," or who does not teach the true doctrine of Christ in the "sound words" of Christ, is wise in his own conceits, is inflated with pride of opinion, does not know the will of God and has not the humble spirit of Christ; but is sick and makes others sick "about questionings and disputes of words." Such a man is sick with his own conceits, indulges in "questionings," raises "disputes of words," or splits hairs and is full of words.

It can be seen easily that such a man by this course stirs up envy and strife, causes railings and evil surmisings and wranglings among men, although in his own eyes he is teaching the very will of God. No wonder Paul says he is "puffed up." From this others begin to rail and wrangle and to indulge in evil surmisings, become "corrupted in mind and bereft of the truth, supposing that godliness is a way of gain."

Are not brethren like this in a deplorable condition? Yet, it is more deplorable to lead whole congregations into such wranglings, evil surmisings, railings, strife, and envy.

Study also the following:

O Timothy, guard that which is committed unto thee, turning away from the profane babblings and oppositions of the knowledge which is falsely so called; which some professing have erred concerning the faith." (1 Tim. 6: 20, 21.)

If Timothy should be on his guard and turn away from profane babblings, etc., should not the rest of us heed such admonitions? If some erred from the faith in Timothy's day by considering and trying to teach questions from which they should turn away, are not some in the same danger now?

Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them in the sight of the Lord [margin, "God"], that they strive not about words, to no profit, to the subverting of them that hear. (2 Tim. 2: 14.)

In contrast with this, Timothy is commanded to give diligence to present himself "approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." Also, he is commanded to "shun profane babblings: for they will proceed further in ungodliness, and their word will eat as doth a gangrene." (2 Tim. 2: 14-18.) Of this number were Hymeneus and Philetus, who erred concerning the truth, saying that the resurrection had already passed, and overthrew the faith of some.

Who doubts that there are contentions, strife, and gangrenous sores in not a few congregations because teachers and preachers have not heeded this admonition given to Timothy, and which he was careful to do?

But foolish and ignorant [untaught] questionings refuse, knowing that they gender strifes. And the Lord's servant must not strive [over such questions], but be gentle toward all, apt to teach [not to strive], forbearing, in meekness [not self-conceit] correcting them that oppose themselves; if peradventure God may give them repentance unto the knowledge of the truth, and they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him unto his will. (2 Tim. 2: 23-26.)

The same instruction is given to Titus. (See Tit. 1: 10-12: 3: 9, 10.)

If to-day all preachers, old and young, would learn and would follow the instructions, the solemn warnings, and charges given to Timothy and Titus in regard to what to preach and what not to preach, and how to treat old men and old women, young men and young women—in other words, how to live righteous and clean, pure and holy lives—they would not only be true preachers of the gospel of Christ, but unity and peace would flow as a river among the churches throughout the land.

BROTHER McGARY ONCE MORE. BY F. W. SMITH.

Before reading this, see Brother McGary's article on page 51.

Brother McGary insisted that he be heard again, on the ground that I introduced new matter in my last rejoinder; and not wishing to appear unfair, his request was granted. I think, however, it is the "old matter" of Brother McGary's bold and unqualified affirmation that is worrying him—viz., Peter "coupled for the remission of sins with baptism as a part of the command he was giving." This I as boldly denied, and challenged him to give scriptural proof of his affirmation, as that was the only issue between us. I said: "If Brother McGary desires one more article on the subject, he can have it; and if he cannot prove in that article that 'for the remission of sins' is a command to be obeyed, he cannot do it at all."

But what did our brother do? Why, he wrote an article covering quite two pages of the Gospel Advocate, and the only effort he made to prove his proposition—the very thing he was, by all the rules of fair and honorable controversy, obligated to do by the Scriptures—was to prove it by Alexander Campbell and myself. Suppose he had succeeded with his witnesses, what then? Did he suppose that our readers would have been satisfied with the settlement of such an important matter on the evidence of uninspired men? The best he could have done with my testimony would have been to convict me of an inconsistency; but he, as I showed, most signally failed to prove his proposition by me, and it still stands staring him in the face, absolutely untouched with one scintilla of proof.

In his present reply he does no better, and had he not possessed a copy of the Lofton-Smith discussion, he would have run short of material, although I suspect he had a copy of the New Testament on his table, hut not before him. Well, I will stand by every quotation he makes from me in my discussion with Lofton; for not one of them proves his contention, nor makes me contradict my contention in this controversy. I still maintain "that the Baptist theory of regeneration, or conversion, is wholly physical, and absolutely destitute of moral power;" hut that is not the proposition we are discussing. Brother McGary affirmed that "for the remission of sins" is a command to be obeyed, and I have not undertaken to prove that "sect" baptism or "Baptist" baptism is scriptural.

Why has he not addressed himself to the task he assumed, instead of running off into these misrepresentations of me? Note the following: "He seems to think that the only essentiality connected with baptism is plenty of water, and that what was sufficient qualification for John's baptism is all-sufficient for the baptism ordained by Christ. If he is correct in this, Paul exceeded his authority in the case of the twelve at Ephesus." Now, lay alongside of what he here says what he said in his long reply: 'And I deny that my criticism 'contained one sentence or one word that even squinted at' his making 'baptism a nonessential.' I did accuse him of trying to make the design of baptism a nonessential, and I repeat the accusation." This, to me, is what may properly be termed "funny" talk. Just how I could contend that baptism is essential to salvation (and this I am proving by Brother McGary), and at the same time make the design of baptism a nonessential, is a profound mystery. On this point the reader can take the witness. I must, however, beg our readers not to fall out with Brother McGary on account of these misrepresentations of the Advocate, for it has become a kind of "second nature" with him. He began it a long time ago, and it has grown with his years until he is like the boy who had formed the habit of saying, "I have went." His teacher kept him in one day after school hours and wrote on the blackboard, "I have gone," saying, "Write under this fifty times, 'I have gone,' and I will return presently." The boy finished his task, and, becoming impatient for the teacher's return, wrote on the board: "I have went home."

Our brother has been corrected times without number through the years that are past, and in this controversy I have corrected him, but he persists in saying, "I have went." I never preached a sermon nor wrote a line that intimated in the slightest degree that any one had the promise of salvation before or without baptism, and am perfectly frank to say that the girl he tells about died without the promise of salvation. But why our brother cannot see that there is no comparison between the cases of the two girls brought into this discussion is strange indeed to me.

I said in the editorial, "On what Does Acceptable Obedience Depend?" and which precipitated this discussion, the following: "But is one's 'faith right' who goes through a form of obedience to a command of God while considering and regarding such as a nonessential and of no value in rendering him acceptable to God? I do not believe so, for it would be impossible to have the proper reverence for the authority of God and to honor God with any such feeling in the heart. There can be no obedience to God without the desire to honor and revere his anthority even in the smallest matters." Now, in the face of this, Brother McGary says: "He seems to think that the only essentiality connected with baptism is plenty of water." I would be ashamed to misrepresent an opponent as he has done; but it is "second nature" with him, and I forgive him on that ground.

But what about his reference to John's baptism and the baptism Christ ordained? In so far as faith, repentance, and God's design in John's baptism and that which Christ ordained are concerned, there is no difference. John called on the people to repent, and baptized them, that they should believe on Him who was to come after him-that is, on Jesus. (Matt. 3: 1-6; Acts 19: 4.) Their baptism would have been absolutely worthless without repentance and feith in Jesus Christ. I am surprised at our brother's referring to those mentioned in the nineteenth chapter of Acts that Paul commanded to be baptized into the name of Christ, as if they helped him in any way. He knows that if those Paul commanded to be baptized had been haptized unto John's baptism before Christ ordained his baptism, that their baptism would have been as valid as the baptism of the apostles and all others while John's baptism was in force. His effort here shows most clearly that he is greatly confused in his attempt to evade the argument set before him regarding the faith and understanding of those John baptized. Brother McGary's "puddin'-head" soldier has decidedly the advantage of our brother, from the fact that the soldier talked sense out of "one side" of his head, while Brother McGary does not talk sense out of either side of his. But he does talk as the soldier-viz., two ways-and his words are absolutely strangers to each other.

He stakes his cause on two passages which I will now notice; and when he is stripped of his misrepresentations and these passages shown to afford him no relief, he will be anxious to be heard again.

1, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Unless our brother trims, modifies, and even circumscribes to some extent this text, I am prepared to say that he has not been scripturally baptized. Hence, a proper question is: How much truth and what truth must one know before he is a proper subject for baptism? The truth comprises the revealed will of God, and I am sure that Brother McGary did not at the time of his baptism, nor does he even now, know all the truth. I venture to say he knew practically nothing of the truth regarding the Christian life when he was baptized.

Our brother certainly overlooked Christ's words to his disciples: "Already ye are clean because of the word which I have spoken unto you." (John 15: 3.) How much truth did those disciples know at that time? They did not even know that Jesus Christ was divine, nor the nature of his kingdom, nor that he must shed his blood for the remission of their sins. When he actually died, they lost all hope of having a king. (Luke 24: 21.) They believed he was a good man, a prophet sent of God, and they loved him and did what Christ told them to da, without understanding the nature of those things.

Does any one claim that John meant by the words, "believe on him that should come after him," that those he baptized should believe that Jesus would establish an earthly kingdom? Well, that is what they did believe, and yet Jesus said: "Already ye are clean because of the word which I have spoken unto you." If those disciples, with their minds full of mistaken ideas, could be acceptable to Christ, why cannot people to-day be acceptable to him, with mistaken ideas while doing what he commands them to do? Note the following: "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands there are among the Jews of them that have believed; and they are all zealous for the law: and they have been informed concerning thee, that thou teachest all the Jews who are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, telling them not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs." (Acts 21: 20, 21.) Now, if thousands of Jews could be baptized acceptably with such errors and mistakes in their minds, is it not possible for some people now to be baptized acceptably with mistaken ideas in their minds? If not, why not?

2. Christ taught "that none can 'come to him,' save such as had 'heard and learned of the Father;' and 'to come to him,' one must 'come' through baptism." Here again we must have Brother McGary to do some trimming. How much and what must they "hear" and "learn" of the Father in order to come to Christ? The disciples of Christ came to him through the baptism of John, but how much and what did they know either of baptism or of Christ? While John baptized unto the remission of sins, those he baptized did not learn beforehand that they were to receive the remission of their sins through the sledding of Christ's blood. They learned enough to know that God wanted them to be baptized, and on that Christ received them, for he said his Father had given them to him. (John 17: 9.)

Finally, in both of his last replies our brother has manifested a consciousness of the weakness of his position in an expressed fear that I would with sophistry "hide the truth in the premises from unthinking minds." This not only betrays his feelings of weakness, but it is a charge of weakness upon the readers of the Advicate; for, if his contention is so clearly taught and stands out with such boldness in the word of God as he clains, the most ordinary mind should be able to see it. Brother McGary has had "the truth in the premises inwrapped in a cloud of sophistry" placed before him twice, as follows:

Whatever result follows any act of obedience to God is the design or purpose of God in issuing the command; and since "for the remission of sins" is the result of obedience to the command of baptism, how can it be "a part of the command?" Unfortunately for our brother's contention, the apostle Paul gives to us that which is to be obeyed in order to be made free from sin, which is the equivalent of "the remission of sins." Hear lim: "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were the servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousiess." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.)

The "form" is a pattern or mold of teaching which is

The "form" is a pattern or mold of teaching which is to be obeyed, and by which obedience one is made free from sin. Just how Brother McGary can get the results of obedience to this "form" as a part of the form is not clear to my mind clear to my mind.

Why did he not make some effort to expose this "sophistry?" He has not even touched it with the tip of his little finger.

THE END.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

On Seventeenth Street, fronting President's Park on ground that was, a few years ago, a malarial swamp, are four beautiful buildings—the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the Red Cross Building, Memorial Continental Hall, and the Bureau of American Republics, or the Pan-American Building, as it is popularly called. I have already written something about the first two named above—the Corcoran Gallery of Art and the Red Cross Building—and next in order is Memorial Continental Hall, which was erected by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the society familiarly known as the D. A. R.

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was organized in Washington City, October 11, 1890, with eighteen members present. Its objects, as stated in its constitution, are:

1. "To perpetuate the memory of the spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence, by the acquisition and protection of historical spots and the erection of monuments; by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution and the publication of its results; by the preservation of documents and relics, and of the records of the individual services of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots; and by the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries.

2. "To carry out the injunction of Washington in his farewell address to the American people, 'to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge,' thus developing an enlightened public opinion, and affording to young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens.

3. "To cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty."

The eight hundred and sixteen members whose applications were approved within a year of the first meeting are considered charter members of the organization, and the membership now includes more than one hundred and forty thousand, representing every State and Territory of the United States, us well as residents of most of the countries of Europe and some who have wandered as far from the homeland as Asia and Africa, and there is one chapter each in Cuba, Mexico, the Philippines, and Hawaii. Seven hundred and forty-one real daughters of Revolutionary patriots have been admitted to the society, all other members claiming right to admission by more distant kinship to such patriots.

The building is beautiful—a large, square building, of white marble, with three lofty porticoes. The eastern or front portico is semicircular, and is supported by sixteen immense drum columns, with the inscription, "Memorial Continental Hall," across the front above them. The north portico is square, and on the south side is the Memorial Portico, semicircular, supported by thirteen monolithic columns, representing the thirteen original States and named for the States in the order in which they entered the Union—Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginia, New York, North Carolina, and Rhode Island. From this portico a fine view is had of the Washington Monument across President's Park.

The corner stone of the building, which was laid April 19, 1904, bears the inscription: "Memorial Continental Hall—A Tribute to the Patriots Who Achieved American Independence. Erected by the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution." The Hall was used in the next annual meeting, and thereafter; but at the twenty-sixth Annual Continental Congress, April, 1917, final payments were made for the completed building, the building and its furnishings having cost approximately seven hundred thousand dollars. The society has since found it necessary to build an annex, and now other buildings are being planned. There is ample space for other buildings, the society owning practically the entire block inclosed by Seventeenth and Eighteenth and C and D Streets.

The interior of the building is very attractive and interesting, most of the furniture being antique and dating back to colonial days. Twenty-three States, two chapters, and the junior society—Children of the American Revolution—have each distinct and separate rooms to bear their names as having been finished and furnished by them; but every State has had its part in the completion of the building and in furnishings of various kinds—doors, chairs, electroliers, statuary, books, pictures—all being suitably marked as gifts of States, chapters, or members.

Many of the rooms furnished by the various States are used for the work of the society, and furniture suitable for the purpose has been furnished by the respective States. But most of the furniture in the rooms is antique, each piece having a history connecting it with Revolutionary days, or else it is a reproduction of antique furniture.

The Library contains nine thousand volumes, consisting principally of reference books pertaining to the history of the United States and its people. It is open to the public for reading, but no books are taken away from the building.

On the first floor is a Museum containing many things of historic interest—manuscripts, old books, textiles, a John Hancock desk, a banjo clock, articles made of pewter, fans, old andirons, warming pans, foot warmers, and many other things that serve to carry the observer back to ye olden times.

The large Auditorium, with its three galleries and four boxes, has a seating capacity of two thousand. From the cornice around the ceiling hang brilliantly colored flags, representing the forty-eight States in the Union. These flags are arranged in the order in which the States were admitted, beginning with Delaware, in 1787, and ending with Arizona, in 1912. Each flag is the gift of the Daughters of the State it represents.

Many of the chairs on the platform of the Auditorium, as well as various articles of furniture throughout the building, were given in honor of officers, past or present, of the society, or presented in honor of ancestors of the donors who served in the Revolutionary War. A large table made from a handsome piece of koa wood came from the Aloha Chapter, of Honolulu, Hawaii.

The Auditorium is not often used by the D. A. R., as its convention is held only once a year, in April; but the society very generously allows it to be frequently used for other purposes. It was on the platform in that room that President Coolidge was officially notified of his nomination by the Republican National Convention—several weeks after he and all the rest of us had learned that fact from the newspapers, of course—and it was from that platform that he delivered the speech of acceptance that was sent out by radio to all parts of the country.

On the third floor is an attractive banquet hall, and, separated from it by a well-appointed pantry, is a large, conveniently equipped kitchen. Just outside the banquet hall, the roof of the Memorial Portico is utilized as a tea room—a most delightful place on summer evenings, to sit and view the stately Washington Monument, sip tea, talk or listen.

There are many committee rooms, private dining rooms, offices of various kinds, furnished by and named for certain States, all containing objects of interest to lovers of the historical and the antique. From the portico through which visitors enter the building to the roof garden above the Memorial Portico, the building and all its furniture represents gifts of Daughters, chapters, or States.

Memorial Continental Hall is open to visitors every week day from eleven o'clock to three o'clock. A pleasant, efficient guide conducts visitors through, free, and tells many things of interest, heing careful to point out the gifts of the various States represented in the group he is conducting.

THE EVILS OF THE MOB.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The following appeared in one of the daily papers of this city a few weeks ago:

Reward for information leading to the identification and conviction of the members of the mob that took Sam Smith, fifteen-year-old negro boy, from his bed in the General Hospital, to which he was chained, and caused his death by hanging and shooting, was increased to six thousand five hundred dollars Wednesday morning with the State of Tennesse's adding fifteen hundred dollars to the five thousand dollars already offered by the board of governors of the Chamber of Commerce.

At the same time Governor Peay issued a statement strongly condemning the mob and setting the machinery of the State in motion in an effort to discover the perpetrators.

The statement of the Governor follows:

"The Prison Board, of which I am a member, was in session at the branch prison to-day when the Smith boy was lynched. The affair comes to my attention to-day on my return. It is most deplorable. Nothing has happened since I have been Governor so regrettable. Those who since I have been Governor so regrettable. Those who took the law of their State into their own hands and killed this half-dead negro lad perhaps had the idea that they were serving law and order in their summary punishment and that the act would promote more regard for human life in their community. They were terribly mistaken. But it should be realized that back of this horrible thing it accounts to the the law is at heir faithful. is a conviction that the law is not being faithfully enforced in Davidson County and that the juries are frequently recording a miscarriage of justice in the local courts.

"This was no case in which mob law could possibly be justified. A foul blot and stain has been laid on the good name of Tennessee which can never be erased. Strange that these offenders took no thought of the honor and reputation of their State."

There is, perhaps, no reasonable ground on which a mob can be justified. It lessens respect for law in those who engage in it and does not lessen crime. The negro is usually the one who suffers mob violence, but he in his ignorance should have the same right to an orderly trial as the white man. It does not improve the morals of those who take the law into their own hands and try to wreak vengeance on the guilty. By suffering death at the hands of a mob the negro is made a martyr, and instead of deterring others it sometimes almost casts a halo of glory on the one who is cruelly put to death by a lawless mob. I have no idea that crime has ever been lessened in this way, but it sometimes appears to me to increase it. Those who engage in the brutal work of hanging and shooting a helpless human being are certainly not following the course in life that purifies the heart or elevates the life. No man can defend the mob by the teaching of Christ or by any law that has ever been enacted by civilized men.

But there are some things connected with the quotation here made that are strange to me. Why is it necessary to raise six thousand five hundred dollars in order that justice may be meted out to those who have broken the law by being party to such an unlawful act? Of course I recognize the fact that the Chamber of Commerce has the right, so far as I am concerned, to use their own money as they see proper. But why is it necessary that they should pay five thousand dollars and that the Governor should add fifteen hundred dollars more of the people's money to that large sum? Is it possible that justice will not be done by the courts of the county without all this money being added to the salaries of our officers? We have a sheriff with a number of deputies, who are servants of the State and who receive pay to bring criminals before the courts. All the men who engaged in that mob are, perhaps, within twenty miles of the city, and why should it cost several thousand dollars to bring them before the courts? This is a bad precedent to set, unless they propose to pay these additional prices to bring every criminal to justice. The officers may learn to hold back for reward. I notice that the Chamber of Commerce proposes to pay part of this for additional counsel to prosecute these men. Why is that necessary? We have an Attorney-General and an assistant. Why are these not sufficient to prosecute? They are paid officers of the State; and if they are not qualified to prosecute criminals, the voters of the State should elect some who are qualified.

In my opinion, the Governor struck the keynote when he said: "Back of this horrible thing is a conviction that the law is not being faithfully enforced in Davidson County and that the juries are frequently recording a miscarriage of justice." This is precisely the trouble, Governor, I have not kept up with the courts and will not say that no one has been properly punished for crime in this county, but I know of several cases of murder in which those who did the deed have gone stock free after an attempt or two at a trial. It has not been long since two boys drove up behind two others and killed them on the pike, and for that they received six months each in the workhouse for each boy killed. I do not say that these boys were guilty of murder; but I do say that if they were not guilty of murder as charged, they should have been cleared of the charge; and if they were guilty, they should have had some punishment commensurate with the crime. I know a man that was assaulted on the streets of the city by a drunken man and rendered almost blind for life. This criminal was bound over to the court in a two-thousand-dollar bond, for which he paid one hundred dollars and walked off, and no one knows of much effort ever having been made to bring him back, but the bond has never been collected. I have been told that very few bonds have ever been collected in the courts, and I have about decided that the officers do not know how to collect a bond after it has been forfeited. If they ever catch the members of this mob, I can tell them how to get out of the trouble, provided it is bailable, and that is to give some irresponsible man about one hundred dollars to make a bond and walk off. Unless there is a change in matters around the courthouse, it will never cost their bondsmen one cent.

I would have the Governor also remember that nearly every criminal, especially among the white people, has influential friends who will go to his assistance and, if possible, help him out. It has not been so very long since the Governor himself left the State and his duties to get a friend out of trouble. The average man gets wonderfully sympathetic for a friend who is before the courts. I am afraid that this is only a spasm we are having over this mob. We are a wonderful people to have "spasms" and then get over them.

I close this article with a quotation from the word of God: "Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God. Therefore he that resisteth the power, withstandeth the ordinance of God: and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment. For rulers are not a terror to the good work, but to the evil. And wouldest thou have no fear of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise from the same: for he is a minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is a minister of God, an avenger for wrath to him that doeth evil." (Rom. 13: 1-4.) The individual is not able to protect himself, and, therefore, God has permitted society to organize and make laws for the protection of itself. No one has the right to take these laws into his own hands even in order to exacute them; but society has the right to demand of its public servants that they execute these laws, and it is the duty of the rest of us to submit to them.

GOOD BOOKS.

We recommend to our readers the following good books: ROBIN. By Frances Hodgson Burnett.

"The Head of the House of Coombe;" "The Lost Prince;" "T. Tembarom."

First Lessons in Child Training. By Zelia M. alters. Price, postpaid, 85 cents.

A handbook for mothers. Walters.

A romantic story of Robin, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Gareth-Lawless, now grown to womanhood, and Donald Muir, heir to the House of Coombe, who meet at a party and renew a childhood romance. A love story of unusual charm.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Nashville, Tenn., 3811 Elkins Avenue, December 6, 1924.

—Mr. E. A. Elam, editor "Query Department," Gospel Advocate.—Dear Brother Elam: A sister came to me and asked if it would be scriptural for the sisters to meet and sew and sell the work of their hands, and put the money in the building fund at this place. I answered this way: That it would be scriptural for her as an individual to sew and sell her work and contribute the money to the building fund, but that I did not know about a group of them meeting for that purpose. Please answer in the "Query Department." Yours in Christ, J. S. LARKINS.

In the multitude of questions every question cannot receive a prompt answer. The answer to a question, however, may do as much good as if it came out in the next issue of the paper after it is received.

In replying to the above question, it may be well to consider first the authority and design of work.

God appointed it for man's good. God placed man in the garden to dress and keep it. After man's fall and God had cursed the earth for man's sake, he said to man: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground." This law remains in force so long as men shall live on the earth. Hence, the Lord says: "If any will not work, neither let him eat." (2 Thess. 3: 10.) God teaches men to be houest and honorable, and. therefore, to make an honest living. He says Christians take thought for things honorable in the sight of all men. Jesus followed for a number of years the useful employment of being a carpenter. Paul learned when a boy the craft of tentmaking and worked at it frequently while an apostle. The idle, lazy, gluttonous, and lying Cretans (Tit. 1: 12, 13) were taught to learn honest occupations for necessary "wants." (Tit. 3: 8-14-margin, American Revised Version.) The Thessalonians were charged to work with their own hands that they might have need of nothing. (1 Thess. 4: 11, 12.) The Ephesians were taught to make a living, not by stealing or fraud, but by working at something useful and good. (Eph. 4: 28.) One design of work, then, of hands and head and heart, is to make an honest, comfortable living.

Other designs of work are to be useful, or "not unfruitful" (Tit. 3: 14); to "walk becomingly toward them that are without," or the world (1 Thess. 4: 12). While a preacher Paul worked to set a good example (Acts 20: 34, 35) and to make something to give to the needy (Acts 20: 35; Eph. 4: 28).

From the above designs of work we see that Christians not only have the right to work at something honorable and useful to make money to give to the weak and needy, but they are commanded to do so—that is, in so far as they are physically and mentally able. Children and grandchildren, nieces and nephews are commanded to work in some useful way in order to care for their parents, grandparents, and other helpless relatives. Those who do not do this deny the faith and become worse than unbelievers. (1 Tim. 5: 3-16.) Dorcas was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did, one of which was to make garments for poor widows. (Acts 9: 36-43.)

With this general outline of work and its designs before us, we can see the answer to the above question. Sewing is an honest and useful work. This can be done for one's self, for the needy, or for the purpose of making money to give to a worthy cause. Since building this church house is a worthy cause, these sisters can do the honorable work of sewing in order to make money to contribute to it. They can do it singly or in groups. Being in groups does not affect it one way or the other. Several together sometimes can accomplish more than one.

One other thing should be considered, and that is that in their sewing they do not interfere with the work of some poor women in making an honest living. Of course it is understood also that they do honest work and give worthy value for the money received. No church should be placed before the public in any way as a beggar.

***** * *

Boaz, Ky.—I have been dissatisfied with your reference to Matt. 28 where my book says, "Go teach," etc., and you say, "Go make disciples." I am left to guess you possibly quote from the Revised version.

Do you know of a book Yours in love, W. E. PRYOR.

I do quote from the Revised Version. Consult the Revised Version. To make disciples is to make learners of Christ. To teach is to make disciples.

I know nothing of the book mentioned.

0 0 0

Dear Brother Elam: Our mail carrier sometimes reads my Gospel Advocate, and he says that a Presbyterian preacher helps to print the Advocate. Is this true? I have always believed that all the staff are members of the church of Christ. Yours truly, M. F. Floyd.

A printer is a mechanic. I ride in cars made by members, it may be, of the various denominations of the land, or by men who belong to no religious party whatever. I preach in church houses such mechanics have helped to build, and I preach from Bibles which such mechanics have helped to print. It is no more harm to read a paper whose printers are Presbyterians, or members of any other denomination, than to ride ou trains whose engineers and conductors belong to these denominations. In fact, when I start ou a journey, I do not ask if the engineer and conductor are Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, or Catholics, etc. That is, I commit no sin in riding with such men, regardless of whether or not they be saints or sinners. Paul traveled on ships whose captains and sailors were idolaters.

Yet I do not know of any printer engaged by the Gospel Advocate who is a Presbyterian preacher. But should such be the case, what of it?

There is a vast difference between a printer and an editor. One man may be both; but as a printer, he is a mechanic; as an editor, he is a teacher. The editorial staff of the Gospel Advocate is composed of men who claim to be Christians only and who teach vigorously that denominational names and doctrines are divisive and wrong, destroying, therefore, the unity and peace which should exist always among the people of God.

I trust the man who made the above statement did so in ignorance and may learn the facts in the case. From him let some who claim to be Christians only, and to be governed in all religious practices by the Bible only, learn to be sure that all the statements they make concerning others are absolutely true.

0 0 0

Lubbock, Texas, December 8, 1924.—We find in studying the lesson of "The Good Samaritan," as recorded by Luke, the conversation between Jesus and the lawyer is not given as recorded by Matthew and Mark. Please explain the seeming contradiction, that I may be able to enlighten my pupils.

Faithfully, Mrs. J. T. STANFILL.

There is no conflict, or seeming one. Luke is the only one who records the story of the good Samaritan; therefore, no other story can conflict with it. Different questions were asked Jesus by different persons on different occasions and in different places, and which were prompted by different motives; some were to tempt him, or to put him to the test, and others to learn the truth. The lawyer whose questions brought out the story of the good Samaritan was a different one from the lawyer in Matt. 22: 34-40 and Mark 12: 28-31, and the time and places were different. The questions were similar, but differently put. I do not know what the "seeming contradiction" is; but there is none.

OUR MESSAGES

- W. L. Karnes preached at Rich Pond, Ky., last Lord's
- N. Trice preached at David Lipscomb College last Lord's day.
- F. B. Srygley preached at Leiper's Fork, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- H. Leo Boles preached at Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Sunday.
- F. W. Smith preached at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day to splendid audiences.

The editor of the Tennessean says that the objection to silver tongues is that they don't get down to brass tacks.

We have on hand a great number of obituaries and shall try to have them appear in the Gospel Advocate as early as possible.

- E. N. Glenn, San Diego, Cal., January 3: "We had a full house here last Lord's day, and prospects are bright
- G. W. Jarrett, Kenton, Tenn., January 8: "I am located near Keuton. I hope to do a greater work for Christ than in any previous year."
- S. D. Green, 1419 Lytton Avenue, this city, is representing the Gospel Advocate, and we will appreciate any assistance the brethren may extend to him.

When you get your neighbor to read the Gospel Advo-cate, you have done him good. One of the best ways to do missionary work is to put the Advocate in the homes of

Dr. Powell recently preached on the subject, "The First Three Minutes After Death." Brother Srygley says that people had better be giving their attention to "the last three years before death."

David Thompson, Mayfield, Ky., January 5: "We had two good services here yesterday, with one added by mem-bership at each service. I was with the Mount Olivet con-gregation in the afternoon."

C. T. Netterville, Wilkinson, Miss., wishes all who may be interested in securing splendid South Mississippi land to write him. These lands are well watered and are on a good government gravel road.

Every "victory" the transgressives "win" leaves them less anxious to "win" another. They claim that mechanical music in the worship is scriptural, but they do not have a man who really enjoys trying to prove it.

The wedding of Mr. Otis Pope and Miss Eva Bailey was solemnized at the Corinth church of Christ, near Athens, Ala., on December 27, at 11 o'clock A.M., Brother Pepper officiating, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. Both are members of this church. We avtend congratulations extend congratulations.

M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., January 5: "Since writing I have preached at Milan, Belle Plaine, and Monmouth, all in Kansas, and at Butler and Eldorado Springs, in Missouri, with good results at all places. I expect to be back in the field not later than April 1, and will have time for meetings in late fall or spring."

William F. Ethridge, 2403 Stuart Street, East Chatta-nooga, Tenn., January 5: "Two were restored and a fine young man came from the Baptists demanding baptism. The new year started well. We had one hundred and ten in Bible study and large crowds at both services, with the Tyner congregation in the afternoon."

A. G. Freed preached at Charlotte Avenue Church, this city, last Sunday. There was a very gratifying report in regard to the debt on the building, and there were about two hundred at the prayer meeting on Wednesday night before last Lord's day. The Sunday-morning Bible-study classes have reached an enrollment of three hundred.

We want a responsible young man or young lady to act as agent for the Gospel Advocate in every congregation. We want to put the Advocate in the home of every member. This would not only double the Christian activity of every congregation, but would assist the Advocate in pleading for the advancement of primitive Christianity. Who will assist us?

G. A. Dunn, Jr., Gainesville, Texas, January 5: "Since my last report there have been five additions to the Cen-tral church of Christ here, with which I am laboring at the present. Two of these were added at our services yesterday. Also, we have raised enough money to assure us of a permanent meeting place soon. We are hoping for great things in 1925."

Allen Phy, Brownsville, Tenn., January 7: "My work with the church in Brownsville started very pleasantly last Sunday, with two sermons to good audiences. Two took membership with the congregation at the morning service. Last night we were the recipients of a shower of groceries, etc., from the members of the congregation. We appreciate this very much."

J. S. Newman, San Antonio, Texas, January 1: "The church of Christ at 3432 South Flores Street, San Antonio, held the last service for 1924 on last Sunday evening.

Everything points to a good start for the new year, and we hope to do a great work for the cause of our Master this year. Peace prevails in our congregation. We wish for all the faithful a happy and a prosperous work in the Lord for 1925."

E. E. Shoulders, 1324 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York, N. Y., January 6: "Our work is moving along very nicely, possibly as well as could be expected, as we are laboring under adverse circumstances. Excepting a bit of slackness in attendance due to bad colds and cold weather, we have had some very fine services in the past two months. This is a time, no doubt, when many churches and individual Christians are discussing the propriety of adding other mission points to their support list. If you are, let me urge that you do not forget the New York work. We are needing it. I am sure you could not turn your attention to a more worthy mission."

Lucas North, Ethridge, Tenn.: "I will be eighty-six if I live until the twenty-third day of March, and have been a reader of the Gospel Advocate most of the time since it began to be published, as my father, Ira North, was a subscriber when I was a boy. So I want to express my admiration of the present management as being well worthy of the support of all who love God's truth and feel an anxiety to see it proclaimed that it may take the place of the doctrines of men. I feel truly thankful that the paper is in the hands of brethren who are keeping it fully up to the standard set by William and David Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell seventy years ago. May our Father's blessing rest and remain upon you in your work of faith and labor of love." faith and labor of love.

D. N. Barnett, Quanan, Texas, January tral and southern portions in Mississippi, as a whole, have tral and southern portions in its purity. While Nashville D. N. Barnett, Quanah, Texas, January 7: "The central and southern portions in Mississippi, as a whole, have never heard the gospel in its purity. While Nashville congregations are having fruit to their credit in Mississippi, it does not lift the responsibility from other congregations. If each congregation would select a place to start a congregation and mother the same until they could live alone, we would soon have congregations, not only scattered throughout the counties of each State, but foreign fields would soon be ours. How the members of any congregation can live their time here without an effort to establish other congregations, as plain as the Scriptures are that churches should be the pillar and support of the truth, is beyond my comprehension—that is, if they expect to go to heaven. I hope that all preachers will renew their efforts to teach the churches their duty on sounding out the gospel." Any congregation wishing to assist Brother Barnett in holding mission meetings in Mississippi may address him at Quanah, Texas.

W. E. Morgan, Senatobia, Miss., January 5: "We want

W. E. Morgan, Senatobia, Miss., January 5: "We want to get in correspondence with some church that owns a good, large, gospel tent. W. G. Klingman and I have good, large, gospel tent. W. G. Klingman and I have agreed to hold a real mission meeting at Clarksdale, Miss., the first half of next June, provided some church will furnish a good tent for the meeting. Lester Samuels, manager of the King-Anderson plantation, near Clarksdale, is very anxious to have the cause of primitive Christianity established in Clarksdale. He and his brother, Willard Samuels, who is also manager for the Chism plantation at Friar Point, Miss., will pay shipping expenses both ways, if some church or individual Christian desires to have fellowship in the undertaking by furnishing a tent suitable for the meeting. Brethren, here is a splendid opportunity to do some real mission work, and one that will result in planting the church of the New Testasplendid opportunity to do some real mission work, and one that will result in planting the church of the New Testament in the thriving little city of Clarksdale. Those who feel interested in our prayers and who are equally interested in the proclamation of the gospel to the whole creation may address William G. Klingman, care of the Williams Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.; Lester Samuels, Dickerson, Miss.; or W. E. Morgan, Box 191, Seoatobia, Miss."

The address of T. B. Larimore is 1311 Euclid Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

F. C. Sowell preached to a houseful of attentive hearers in the First Church at Columbia, Tenu., on the first Lord's day in January. Sunday-school pupils present, one hundred and seventy-six. Offering for the Tennessee Orphan Home more than for any other one thing last quarter's report."

Married, on December 23, at the home of S. H. Hall, 800 Shelby Avenue, this city, August K. Buchser and Miss Leona Grimes; on January 5, at the home of S. H. Hall, Wallace H. Brumfield and Miss Majorie Tureck; on January 8, at 3811 Central Avenue, this city, Orman H. Gilmore and Miss Lillian Lee; S. H. Hall officiating.

Vernon Rozar, Meridianville, Ala., January 5: "I went to church yesterday for the first time in eight weeks. I preached for the first time in nine weeks. I am improving now, but doctors say that I must go to Florida to regain my health. I am determined to do more for the great cause of Christ this year than ever before, God being my helper. I pray that I may regain my health."

H. F. Oliver, Austin, Texas, January 7: "The Hyde Park church of Christ, at the Oliver Tabernacle, 4312 Avenue D, Austin, is at work with all the energy possible. We are determined to build up a strong church in the Hyde Park addition to the town of Austin, the Lord being cur helper. We ask the prayers of all true lovers of the great cause of our blessed Redeemer that we may succeed."

C. Maynard, Muskogee, Okla., January 9: "Two were baptized last night and two were added last Sunday. The work for the new year is starting out nicely. Brother Allen preached for us last Sunday and Sunday night, and gave us two very good lessons. We extend a cordial invitation to members moving into and passing through the city to meet with us at the corner of C and Kankakee Streets."

A. S. Reynolds, Tipton, Okla., January 5: "We are in the midst of a good meeting in Tipton. Brother Bushy, of Fort Worth, Texas, is doing the preaching, with Brother Acuff leading the singing. Four have identified themselves with the church. I am expecting to do more for the cause of Christ in 1925 than I have done for years. One of God's noble sons here has bought and paid for a Ford car for me. The Lord be praised!"

B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., January 5: "I am inclosing another new subscription to the Gospel Advocate, and hope to send more soon. The West End Avenue congregation began the new year with the greatest interest and attendance, for the time of year, in its history. We are looking forward to Brother Hardeman's meeting in March. May this be your happiest New Year—and it should be—and the most prosperous year for the Gospel Advocate."

Tice Elkins, Arlington, Texas: "Much longer than I have been in the world has the Gospel Advocate been carrying sunshine and gladness to the gloomy and sorrowful haunts of men, and for more than ten years it has not missed my humble home half a dozen issues. My regard for the men who fill its pages from week to week cannot be told in terms of human understanding. I commend it to every Christian, and would urge that every subscriber read it and then give it to people who know not the truth. You can preach the gospel in this way where the pulpiteer cannot reach the lost."

J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., January 4: "We have had a splendid start for 1925 to-day at C and Kankakee. Two splendid audiences, with much interest manifested. Two brethren cast their lot with us at the morning service, and a man and wife made the good confession at the night service, bringing the number of new additions to the congregations since August to forty-nine. We all feel very much encouraged over future prospects. I will have some time this year for meetings in Oklahoma, and I would be pleased to correspond with any who may need my services. Address me at 1412 Baltimore Avenue."

Address me at 1412 Baltimore Avenue."

J. A. Darnell, Lewisburg, Tenn., January 1: "Inclosed find check for two dollars to renew my subscription for another year. I think that 1924 has been the best year of the Gospel Advocate, when its sound teaching is considered. Especially have I enjoyed Brethren Srygley and Allen. The first page cannot be improved on. Keep on hitting them, Brother Jim; 'let no man take thy crown.' I have been preaching in Marshall County for six years, and I want to do more work in 1925 than any year of previous life. I would like to hold some meetings in June, July, and August, at small places or missionary points in Middle Tennessee or North Alabama."

George W. Farmer, Cleveland, Tenn., January 8: "We have at Niota a good location for a physician, and we would like very much to locate one there who is a good, dependable member of the church. It is also a good point for a drug store. There is only one dector there, and he is not an up-to-date doctor. There is no drug store of any consequences. This town is in McMinn County, seven miles from Athens, the county seat. There are about seven hundred people there and good country around there. We are anxious to get good, dependable members of the church. The 'digressives' and other denominations are working very hard to hold this section. We hope to do a greater work this year than we have ever done before."

J. W. Chism, Texarkana, Texas: "There is to be a ten-days' debate between R. B. Key (Baptist) and myself, held in Texarkana, at the Pine Street church of Christ, to begin at 7 P.M., Tuesday, January 20. We are expecting a splendid discussion. Brethren and all interested are invited to come and be with us. Scripturalness of doctrine and practice will first be affirmed by each, and the last two propositions are: 'Baptist churches are human institutions, and originated with uninspired men since the personal ministry of Christ and his apostles.' Chism affirms; Key denies. 'The church with which J. W. Chism and his brethren are identified (known as the church of Christ) originated with Alexander Campbell and his associates in the United States of America in the nineteenth century.' Key affirms; Chism denies."

nineteenth century.' Key affirms; Chism denies."

A. A. Bunner, 3553 West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, Cleveland, Ohio, January 5: "Both wife and I are real poorly at this writing. Wife has been bedfast for two weeks, but is up to-day. I am writing because I have before me the Gospel Advocate of January 1, and because of this statement in it: 'The first number of the Gospel Advocate was issued in July, 1855.' I was three years old then on October 1. But to the point. We have a sister who meets with us who says her father took the Advocate as long as he lived. She says he stood by when the first issue of the paper came from the press and saw it printed, and got it, and then took the paper from that time on until his death. I do not remember whether she said he got the first copy or one from the first issue. But my recollection is it was the first copy. In my house I gave her a copy of the Advocate which she had not seen in a long while, and it was then that she told me this. I thought this one of the peculiar circumstances."

Samuel H. Austin, Munfordville, Ky., January 4: "I have just been reading the current issue of the Gospel Advocate, and I enjoyed it greatly. It seems to grow better all the time. I had to miss my monthly appointment at Beckton, Ky., to-day, and my third Lord's-day appointment at Railton, Ky., last month, on account of the serious illness of my wife and her brother. This makes it pretty hard on me financially, inasmuch as we have to depend upon what our brethren do te help us to some extent. I preached at three mission points regularly most of the year 1924, with no more than expenses paid, although I was promised outside help if I would do this mission work. Brethren, I am in need of help financially, and would appreciate any assistance brethren may give. I have never asked for help before, and only necessity demands it now. Pray for me that I may still keep preaching the truth." Why won't churches deal generously financially with our preachers? Still, we hope the preachers are not idle the six days a week they are not engaged at a mission point.

engaged at a mission point.

H. N. Mann, Riverside, Tenn., January 10: "The year 1924 is past, and the sowing and reaping for that time is over. The Lord blessed me with health to go to some place of worship fifty-two Lord's days. I preached for the following places one or more times: Riverside, Lomax Cross Roads, Grinder's Creek, Brown Schoolhouse, and at one home for a sick man, in Lewis County; Morrow Valley, Kelly Schoolhouse, Mount Hope, Topsy, Walker House, and Jackson and Davis homes, in Wayne County; Ethridge and County Line, in Lawrence County; Marcello Falls, in Giles County; Schocoh, near Adairville, Ky., two services, with one addition. I conducted short meetings at the Fanning Orphan School, near Nashville, Tenn., and at County Line, in Lawrence County: Morrow Valley, in Wayne County; and Walnut Shade, in Macon County. I preached twice for the Salem congregation, in Franklin County. I preached to more people this year than in any previous year of my work, and I am hoping it is the best. For the year I note thirty-one baptisms, seven restorations, fourteen funerals, and nine marriages. The Gospel Advocate is growing better as the days go by, and ought to be read by every family in all the world. Lord, help us all to do more and better work, for time is swiftly passing."

ORETHROAT Gargle with warm salt water -then apply over throat-VAPORUB Over 17 Million Jars Used Yearly

Whooping 👺 Cough

Asthma, Spasmodic Croup, Bronchitis Coughs and Influenza.

The most widely used remedy for whooping cough and spasmodic croup. The little lamp vaporizes the remedy while the patient sleeps.

duced 1879

"Used While You Sleep Send for descriptive bookint 43A. Sold by druggists Vapo-Cresolene Co., 62 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

OFFICE Hours 10 to 12-2 to 5

PALMER

R. H. BENEDICT, D. C. CHIROPRACTOR

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES

Office 176 Eighth Avenue, North

NASHVILLE TENN.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick. Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredients. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick relief assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago said to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 79c and $1.00.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

From the Brethren

Booneville, Miss., January 1 ing a long way from my family and having spent the year working in the vineyard of God, I hand to the brotherhood my report for 1924. My labors have been in the destitute fields of Mississippi, Florida, Texas, Kentucky, and Tennessee. I have spent the whole year and have had splendid success in holding sixteen meetings. I have baptized two hundred and ninetynine persons and established two new congregations, one in Florida and one in Mississippi. I held a meeting in Lawrenceburg, Tenn., which resulted in two debates. The brethren were satisfied with the way I handled them. Four precious souls were baptized and the old work was resurrected. Brother Carter confessed his wrongs and was restored back to the fellowship of the church and died in a few days. I held a meeting in Tishomingo, Miss. Brother and Sister King took great interest in this meeting. One precious soul obeyed the gospel. I held a debate with G. C. Perkins in Henderson, Tenn., and baptized some of his people. I also held a debate in Corinth, Miss., with Burns. I also held a debate in Illinois with Bowns, and baptized some of his people. I also held a debate in Birmingham, Ala., with a the old work was resurrected. Brotha debate in Birmingham, Ala., with a great scholar, on the design of baptism, and defeated him. I challenged H. B. Taylor, of Murray, Ky., while I was there in a meeting, but he refused to meet me. The good white people in to meet me. The good white people in Murray, made arrangements for me to hold their meeting next year. I am now in Booneville, preparing for my work for 1925. We have a good work here. Brother Cox and Brother Kee have arranged for me to begin a meeting here in April. At New Site, Miss., I conducted the largest meeting I ever held in a grove. I appreciate the help given by those who have con-I ever held in a grove. I appreciate the help given by those who have contributed to my needs. All who wish to assist me may send in care of Brother Claud Hall, Freed-Hardeman College, Henderson, Tenn.—R. B. Lee.

Ashland City, Tenn., Route 5, January 1.—Thirteen years ago we built us a meetinghouse here at Petway, and we have had services every Lord's day to date. The weather was a little cold last Lord's day, but we had a very nice audience; but several of the members were out of place, as on lots of other Lord's days. Wife and I have missed only two Lord's-day services in the thirteen years. We are the only ones that can say this here, and we both are sorry that we missed those two services. We have a nice little country church, and are missed those two services. We have a nice little country church, and are glad to have such. We have had good teaching from such men as Brethren R. C. White, I. B. Bradley, William Oakley, T. C. King, J. W. Ballard, S. E. Templeton, H. H. Miller, and many young preachers from the Bible School, who, I notice from reports in the Gospel Advocate, have made good School, who, I notice from reports in the Gospel Advocate, have made good in the Lord's work. The church here has had its "ups and downs," as the old saying is, but is on a good footing at the present time. Those out of Christ here have taken good interest with us. The Lord has blessed me personally and my family. I am very well pleased so far with my family. We have two boys (one married) and

Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a won-der for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

 Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs. ter coughs.

ter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concen-

Pinex is a special and highly concen-trated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the mem-

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly re-funded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne,

HERE IS YOURS!

An opportunity to engage in a dignified position selling Coggins Monuments. Intultion bids you act now. Territory is being assigned daily.

COGGINS MEMORIALS, executed in EL-BERTON BLUE GRANITE, "The Stone Eternal," or GEORGIA MARBLE, are unexcelled for beauty and durability. What more fitting tribute can be pald a departed

Mr. Palk, of Oklahoma, writes us: 'Inclose the fifth order from Mr. Crenshaw, and the Gamble order inclosed was unsolicited." He speaks from ten years' experience, and says further: "Your monuments have always been better than we have expected."

For spare or full time. Write for par-Heulars and confidential contract.

COGGINS MARBLE COMPANY 24 Main St., CANTON, GA.

McShane Bell Foundry Co. BELLS Memorials a Specialty

School Desks. Opera Chairs, Folding Chairs Kindergarten Chairs,

Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nausealess Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv. One or two Calotabs at bed time with

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jorsey, Charleston Wakefield, Fiat Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market. Postpaid, 390, 75c; 500, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B. Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000. $4.50; 10,000 up, at 80c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price. Satisfaction guaranteed.

D. F. JAMISON, Summerville, S. C.

666

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

The Remedy That Has Passed The Test

It has been before the public for more than fifty years-

It is a scientifically compounded prescription

It has healed thousands-

It is of special value in diseases of catarrhal nature-

Catarrh is inflammation of the mucous It manimembranes. fests itself in the nose, the throat, the stomach, the bowels and other parts of the body.

PE-RU-NA

will prove helpful wherever and whenever there is catarrhal inflammation.

Sold Everywhere

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

two girls (one married). Two girls and one boy have obeyed the gospel. I have enjoyed this Christmas (being forty-six for me) by helping one of my colored brethren whose house burned up with about everything in it. He obeyed the gospel under Brother A. Campbell some five or six years ago, but had quit meeting on Lord's days; but he came back a few months ago and was doing good work. There is always something for us to do, and I enjoy helping the needy around me. Love to all the brethren.—O. E.

Fort Worth, Texas, January 1.— I have been very busy during the year just closed. I have entered every new field that called for me, of which I received just a little above my railroad expenses, and yet I feel safe in saying that I discharged my duty as a faithful minister of the gospel while there. I am not my own—that is, as a Christian and a minister of the gospel of Christ. I owe my ter of the gospel of Christ. I owe my ter of the gospei of Christ. I owe my all to Him and deserve no honor or praise for any faithfulness I may have shown as a servant of the Lord. Since March 3, 1924, I have done evangelistic work in the city of Fort Worth, under the direction of the Glenwood church of Christ. When I began, we had no congregation; now we have a regular place of meeting, with eleven members. Eight of these meet regularly, one is off attending school, and two are inactive because of school, and two are mactive because of age, being seventy-one and seventy-two years of age, and one of them having also lost his eyesight. The church is helping to care for them. They are worthy of all we do for them. I have established two churches this year, one with twenty-two members. They are faithful. I hope to accomplish much more this year than in 1924, if it be the Lord's will. I held a very good meeting in Houston, this being the first time the gospel of Christ was ever preached to the colored people in that great city of over one hundred and sixty thousand I am sure that that some good one. The four white churches of Christ helped mightily in the meeting, and paid me well for my services in preaching the gospel to my race.— T. H. Merchant.

Arlington, Texas, January 2.—I would like space to give a report of my work for the year 1924. Beginning with the New Year, I held short meetings at Portsmouth, Ohio; Indianapolis, Ind.; and Kennett. Mo., as I returned from the East to my former home in Texas. I held a short meeting at Stringtown Texas in February home in Texas. I held a short meeting at Stringtown. Texas, in February, then preached a day or two at different places for a few weeks. Beginning with a week's meeting at Grand Prairie in May, I then held twelve meetings in Texas, Oklahoma, and Louisiana, making fifteen for the year. I kept no record of sermons preached or number added to the church, but there were a great many by baptism and restoration. I received by way of remuneration all the way from twenty to one hundred and forty-five dollars per meeting, hut my support reached that figure only once. In all, I received eight hundred and seventy-five dollars for the year's work. I have paid out three hundred dollars on debts which I owed at the beginning of the year, and after de-ducting traveling expenses from the remainder and paying twenty dollars per month house rent since June 1, we have little enough to live on, but

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day by Use of Virex, Formerly Known as Rattlesnake Oil

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattleanake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Fey, a Nebraska resident, sixty-seven years old, says: "I have used the treatment for only two weeks, and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous, and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years' standing, is impreving won-derfully."

Mr. Ben Jackson, who lives in Indiana, says: "Before I used Virex I could hear nothing. After ten days, I could hear my watch tick."

watch tick."

Angeline Johnson, a Mississippi resident, had been stone deaf for eighteen years. She says: "Virex has stopped my head noises, and I can hear the train whistle three and one-half miles away."

Roy Fisher, lowa man, says: "I hadn't heard a watch tick for eleven years. Now I can lay my watch on the table and hear it plainly."

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Okinhome says:

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says:
"After being deaf thirty-eight years, I used your treatment only a few days, and hear fairly well."

Mr. Anthony Chapman, of Michigan, says: "The terrible head noises have stopped entirely, and my hearing is practically back to normal."

Deaf Baby Now Hears

Mrs. Ola Valentine, of Arkansas, says:
"My little boy, now five years old, had been deaf since about four months of age. Now he hears very well, and is learning to talk."
Mr. Mather Pelleys says: "My young son, deaf for years, has used Virex for only three days, and he hears almost as well as ever before."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and Canada. The prescription, which is known as Virex, is easily used at which is known as Virex, is easily used at home, and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory, the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—bust your name and ad-

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 1659 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of ten days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be re-funded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write to-day and give this wonderful compound a trial.

SOUTHERN INSURANCE CO.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Writes all forms of Ordinary and Industrial Life Insurance

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

FIGARO SMOKED MEAT tastes better keeps better

If you have never used Figaro for smoking meat you have never tasted the sweetest, most delicious hams and bacon in the world.

Figaro is pure wood smoke-condensed and put in bottles-with burnt sugar added. It smokes your meat just as thoroughly and just as perfectly as any smoke-house fire. But what a difference in time and work. Figaro takes 20 to 30 minutesa smoke-house fire takes 20 to 30 days. And Figaro makes your meat sweeter, more tasty and more delicious. It absolutely keeps out skippers and keeps meat from becoming strong or rancid.

[Liquid Smoke]

Dallas, Texas.

Please send me, without obligation, full information about Figaro.

Name

R. F. D.

Town

State

have not gone hungry. Last year was an off year with me, for the rea-son that I had no work arranged when the year began. I took what-ever was offered, mostly in mission places, and have done my best. I had three meetings canceled. But now face 1925 with better prospects. have ten meetings arranged for the ear, but have open time in February, March, and April, time for one meet ing in summer, and time in the fall. I shall be glad to receive calls for meetings, and will make the best arrangements with each place that I can. One thing is certain, I will be busy day by day, call or no call, and I do not intend to wait to know how much money will be paid before booking the work. If any place wants me for spring, summer (one meeting), or fall, write me.—Tice Elkins.

Bradentown, Fla., January 6.—I filled my regular appointments with the congregations in Manatee and Sarasota counties during the month of December. We had good audiences and the best of interest manifested at all the services. Two were added to the congregation at Bradentown—a man and his wife for the Barting. man and his wife, from the Baptists. The work with the new congregation The work with the new congregation at Sarasota is progressing nicely. There are new faces in the audience at nearly every appointment and every one seems to have a mind to work. The work seems to be taking on new life, and we thank God and take courage. At this writing Brother Wright is in a meeting with the congregation at Cortez, and we are working and praying for a good meeting.—A. C. Traylor.

GOLDEN THOUGHTS.

Love never turns its microscope on our faults.

He alone succeeds in life who lives it unto God.

Only the hungry heart can taste the bread of life.

Spiritual indifference is often only mental indolence.

Every real prayer touches the universe to the quick.

The trumpet of fame assembles more foes than friends.

Obedience to the known will of God is the highest evidence of sincerity and belief.

Some people are careful of their words; but words take care of themselves for those who are careful of their thoughts.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Saits Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve, or your money refunded it contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatments; and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubthe viriue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists; price, 50c; or by mall on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

MARRIED TWELVE YEARS BEFORE BABY CAME

Gladly Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Nebraska.-"I was married twelve years before my boy was born. I had a lot of female troubles and had been treated by a physician for them but they continued much the same. Then I read your adver-tisement in the others, why not me? I have taken 36 bottles of the medicine and am never without it in the house. My baby boy is three years old now and I sure am happy since I got relief from my troubles. When any one has troubles like mine, or any ways like mine, I am always glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound so that they will get the right kind of medicine." — Mrs. Joe Novak, Box 662, Louisville, Neb.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

COMMERCE-UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

CHURCH OF CHRIST

921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00.
Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:46 P.M.
(Eastern time.)
A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address
W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North.
Phone, 1523-R.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

DRONCHITIS

Leaves a bad cough; so does "flu." But you can stop these lingering, weakening, sleep-disturbing coughs with

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

Used and recommended since 1872, it has relieved the coughs and colds of both children and grown persons everywhere.

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

Mrs. W. C. BURRESS

Are You An Ailing Woman?

Here's Something Worth Reading

Greenville (Brandon Mill) S. Car.

"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an excellent medicine for women who suffer with functional disturbances or to build them up when in a rundown state of health. Each month I would be 'all in,' would get very weak and nervous and suffered from backaches. I got to be a physical wreck when I saw Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription advertised and decided to give it a trial and just a few bottles relieved me of all suffering and made me feel well and strong. 'Favorite Prescription' did me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken."—Mrs. W. C. Burress, 3 Short Traction St. Get this Prescription from your Get this Prescription from your nearest druggist, in tablets or liquid, or write Dr. Pierce, President Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free confidential medical advice.

LEG SORES

ARE CURABLE. If you suffer from Leg Sores or Varicese Ulcers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous hook that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my remarkable, palaices treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over thirty-five years' specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 979, 421 East Eleventh Street, Kansas City, Mo.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

THE LAWYERS.

BY R. C. BELL.

"If any of the brethren should inquire about our financial status, tell them it is very low; however, we feel that we shall be taken care of."

This sentence is found at the close of a letter from the Lawyers, dated December 5. It was written after they landed at Capetown, South Africa. They still had fifteen hundred miles to travel by land in order to reach Bulawayo, the end of their long journey.

The sentence, in the first place, sets forth their pressing need. There is absolutely no probability, brethren, of their getting more money than they need to erect a house, set up house-keeping, and get things started. The impending danger is that they will fall short of their actual need.

The sentence, in the second place, sets forth their splendid faith and confidence. "However, we feel that we shall be taken care of." This confidence in their God and in his people should appeal to the best and the noblest within us and stir us to cooperation. Theirs is indeed a magnificent faith. Let us see to it, Christians, that their faith in ns is not shattered. They have trusted us. How can we betray the trust?

But why say more. What words can add to the gravity and urgency of the case? It is not words that are needed.

"If a brother or sister be naked and in lack of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Go in peace, be ye warmed and filled; and yet ye give them not the things needful to the body; what doth it profit?"

Brother Lawyer and his wife are on their way to Bulawaye, North Rhodesia, Africa, to preach the gospel. They are backed by no board, no human society operating as a missionary trust, but are backed by faith and trust in God and confidence in God's people. There are many churches in the United States any one of which is financially able to assume the responsibility of their support. Any church so disposed may address Brother F. B. Shepherd, 420 Euclid Avenue, Abilene, Texas, for any information desired.

We must evangelize, or we perish. We have the Word of Life, and we must hold it forth; the truth, and we must preach it. The early disciples "went everywhere preaching the word." The early congregations "sent once and again" to evangelists in the field. We are of the opinion that any church with as many as twenty-five wage-earning members should be ashamed not to have an evangelist in the field the year round, going from place to place and from town to town, establishing other churches, which, in their turn, should send out other evangelists to assist in saving those who are lost and in covering the earth with the knowledge and glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

J. A.

BOILS

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x5½ inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living.— R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound.—N. B. Hardeman.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits.—H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me.
-Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IN CONSTIPATION, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

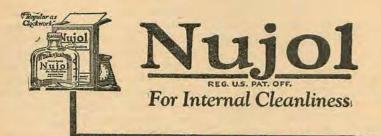

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is barmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per single copy____$0.40 | Per 50, per copy___ Per dozen, per copy .38 | Per 100, per copy__

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy____$0.30 | Per 50, per copy____ .27
Per dozen, per copy .28 | Per 100, per copy___ .25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

HELP NEEDED AT NIOTA, TENN.

BY NELLIE MAY FORREST.

We are meeting in our new church, although it lacks lots of being done. We owe some borrowed money also. Will you please ask the brethren and sisters to help us raise money to finish our house of worship? If each sister in Tennessee would give one dollar and each brother would give two dollars, we could pay off our debt and finish our house. And we haven't any seats or furniture. Cleveland loaned us some chairs until we could get money to get seats. So we are badly in need of help to finish our house. We have only a few members, and none able to do much. Address me at Niota, Tenn.

OUR INDIAN MISSIONARY. BY W. F. LEMMONS.

Brother Scott Sherdee will soon be ready to return to his home in Montana to work as a missionary among his people. He will graduate at Abilene Christian College this term. The college has boarded him and donated his tuition during this term. It was left up to me to raise the funds necessary to get him back to his field, as well as to Abilene. I promised to do my best. We succeeded in raising one hundred dollars to get him to Abilene and have raised some incidental funds.

It will require about one hundred dollars to get him back to Montana. The time has come to raise this fund; therefore, I am calling on the churches to assist with this emergency fund. What is the use to educate a man for that work and not encourage him? He was a Presbyterian when we sent him to Abilene. He is now a Christian. They had half educated him in a college. We have finished him up to the A.B. degree and made a Christian of him.

Undoubtedly the church of Christ is too large an institution to fall down on the job now. The work before us is too great. Our influence is too wide to flicker now. It would be discouraging to Brother Sherdee, who has labored hard for an education that he might enlighten his people on the Government Reservation in Montana, for the church to fail him in this great

For the first one hundred dollars to get him to Abilene I am chiefly indebted to Sister E. F. Woodward, Houston, Texas; Sister Ida Greir, Rock Springs, Texas; and Brother A. M. Burton, Nashville, Tenn.

If more funds come as a result of this call than is necessary to meet this demand, I shall use it in mission work. Do not wait until to-morrow, but send your check now and let us have it ready. We will be thankful to the churches and to any individual who will help in this noble work. You either do or do not believe in mission work. Will you lend the Lord this money? Send all contributions for this fund to the writer, at Nashville, Tenn., General Delivery, or to the Gospel Advocate.

HELP BROTHER YOHANNAN. BY J. W. GRANT.

Who wants to send Brother Yohannan a donation right soon? I shall send one for myself, and I have on hand a small amount sent in by a sister and one by a brother, both of Tennessee. He received, finally, all that I sent him last year. The last remittance of one hundred and twenty-six dollars reached him on September 22, making, in all, two hundred and ninety-three dollars sent by me and re-ceived by him in 1924. But he still needs more. He found his home at Charbash a completo wreck when he got back with his two motherless children after an enforced absence of eight years. He needs help to rebuild and rehabilitate. Who will help him further? If you wish me to forward your donation, send it to me promptly, and I will receipt to you by card. Address me at Box 10, Largo,

The Psalmist said: "I said in my haste, All men are liars." Why do you suppose he was in a such a hurry? Had he lived in this day and generation, he might have taken his time and said it. Is it not remarkable the way church members lie to the minister when asked why they did not attend church? Think of the excuses they give, and yet these excuses do not keep them from attending the baseball game, the show, the basketball game; in fact, anywhere and anything they want.

Florida.

TREMENDOUS VALUE FOR FIFTEEN CENTS.

The Pathfinder, the Leading Weekly Magazine of the Nation's Capital, Makes a Remarkably Attractive Offer.

Washington, D. C.—Special.—People everywhere are hurrying to take advantage of the Pathfinder's wonderful offer to send that splendid illustrated review of the whole world thirteen weeks on trial for fifteen cents. It costs the editor a lot of money to do this, but he says it pays to invest in new friends; and in spite of the high cost of his greatly improved paper, he makes this rare offer to bring its circulation up to a million a week. You will like this paper. It is thirty-one years old and is now better than ever. No other publication like it anywhere. Try it. Only fifteen cents, in stamps or coin, mailed at once to the Pathfinder, 116 Pathfinder Building, Washington, D. C. It will keep your whole family informed, entertained, helped, and inspired.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 1½ inches deep, 9¼ inches in diameter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

CROSWELL-BLACK DEBATE.

BY H. G. BARNETT.

I recently moderated in a discussion at Hilltop, a railroad stop half-way between Clavin and Stuart, Okla. State Evangelist F. J. Croswell, of the Adventist Church, and Brother Bynum Black were the disputants. The kingdom, immortality, and the plan of salvation were discussed. Mr. Croswell is said to be the strongest debater his people have in the State.

Brother Black showed that the kingdom of Christ was fully established on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of the Savior. Croswell, like other Adventists, said that the kingdom would be set up at the second coming of Christ. Brother Black made the usual arguments to prove that the kingdom was set up on Pentecost, and then introduced a number of passages from the New Testament to prove that the early Christians were in it. (See Heb. 12: 28; Rev. 1: 6; Col. 1: 13.)

Mr. Croswell denied that Matt. 13: 31, where Christ said, "The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed," had reference to the kingdom. Brother Black had pressed him to tell how the kingdom could grow if not established until the second coming of Christ. He also denied that the little stone of Dan. 2: 35-44 had reference to the kingdom. In both instances he declared the mustard seed and the stone had reference to Christ. Brother Black's attack on Croswell's position with reference to these passages was so withering that Croswell and all the Adventists present showed that they felt it.

After they had put in six hours on the kingdom and were about to close that subject, Brother Black asked Croswell several times to get up and name one point that he thought he had made against his position, but Croswell sat as still as a tombstone.

Then Mr. Croswell affirmed that "man is wholly, entirely mortal." He made all the arguments that materialists use on this subject. Brother Black made the strongest negative fight on this that it has ever been my pleasure to hear or read. He answered each argument made by Croswell, and then submitted more than twenty negative arguments founded solidly upon the word of God. Surely none who heard that proposition, who believe the Bible, went away doubting that man has a spirit, or soul, in him which does not die at the death of the body, but will live in some state through all eternity. It must have been clear to the most obtuse that Croswell was denying the many plain teachings of prophets, apostles, and Jesus Christ.

Croswell denies the birth of the Spirit and has a plan of salvation to

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Headache Pain Toothache Neuralgia L Neuritis R

Lumbago Rheumatism

Safe

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions.
Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets
Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

save the sinner at death, provided he obeys here. He affirmed that the sinner comes in contact with the blood of Christ before baptism. This Brother Black denied. Then Brother Black set forth the plan of salvation from alien sins and made a strong defense for the gospel plan.

The brethren were all happy and delighted at the results. The debate was a most pleasant affair throughout. At the conclusion, as calls had come from as far as Philadelphia, Pa., it was agreed by both disputants to repeat the discussion at some place where both churches want it, and have it reported and published in book form.

PROGRESS AT AKRON, OHIO. BY RUSSELL DAVIS.

On January 2 the church of Christ at Akron made a three-thousand dollar payment on the lots which we had under option, and on which we plan to build a house of worship in the future. How near that time is depends on many things. We still owe nineteen hundred dollars on these lots and must meet this payment on February 2. We received only forty-six dollars and fifty cents from those outside of Akron in response to our other appeal, and we are making this statement in order that if there be any who may desire to help in this good work they may still do so. However, we are not going to beg the Christian public for money. Nay, rather will we sacrifice more and give ourselves until we have no more to give, and then wait until we have some more and give that, too, than to beg others to give against their will. We mean to have this lot and then to have a house on it, even though it may take some time to get it. We feel that we have lain dormant as long as the pleasure of the Lord will allow; and we have made the start, and, the Lord willing, the faithful few here will go on till the work is completed. We thank the few who have helped and trust there are yet others who will aid. Send any money to me at 282 West Miller Avenue.

At the time of writing there remains about five hundred dollars not yet pledged or paid in. These figures mean that all the past debts against the church have been paid off.

Following is a complete report of the outside aid received so far: Sisters Emma and Margaret Kirk, Brazil, Ind., $20; Sister J. B. Swannack, Lamont, Wash., 50 cents; Brother E. E. Joynes, Philadelphia, Pa., $1; church at Shadyside, Ohio, $25. We thank these in the name of King Jesus for this help.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reade?

of this paper, Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper,

Volume LXVII. No. 4.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JANUARY 22, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT	73
CUR CONTRIBUTORS
OUR MESSAGES	8.0
EDITORIAL Preachers to Be Avoided—Some Things Hopeful as Seen by Another—The Rich Man and Lazarus (No. 4)—Word from Washington.
How Division is Brought About	86
"Christmas"	87
FROM THE BRETHREN	90
The Swinney-Beeson Debate	91
OBITUARIES	92
Sundale Sermons (No. 2)	9.4

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

The Baptist and Reflector says:

We advocate a Baptist program in every community around the world. We believe that Baptists should give themselves to their own New Testament principles and doctrines, unhampered by any outside entanglements. Certainly this should ever be done in the spirit of Christ. We advocate the recognition of the District Associations in our cooperative programs. They are the first and the oldest units in Baptist cooperation apart from the local churches. Any program that ignores these associations, we believe, is doomed to failure.

we believe, is doomed to failure.

"We advocate" a Christian program, instead of "a Baptist program," "in every community around the world." "We believe that" if everybody would adopt a Christian program and "give themselves to their own New Testament principles and doctrines, unhampered by any outside entanglements" in the form of human denominations and the traditions of men, that such a thing as "a Baptist program" and such a body of people as "Baptists" would be unknown. No apostle ever announced such a program, and there was no such body of people in New Testament times. Nobody ought to announce anything to-day that was not announced by the apostles, and no religious body of people ought to exist now that did not exist then. "Certainly this" will be duly recognized by all who "advocate" the New Testament as an alone-sufficient and all-sufficient rule of faith and practice.

"We advocate the recognition of the" apostolic order of things as "the first and the oldest" order of religious work and worship existing in the world and as the only one that has any divine sanction. "Any program that ignores" the New Testament and establishes anything not taught by inspired men "is doomed to failure."

0 0 0

Down in Brazil, at the town of Oliveira, a Catholic priest conducted a Bible burning. H. C. Tucker, secretary of the Brazil agency of the American Bible Society, says:

I do not know where he got the Bibles, but I know that he went from house to house looking for them.

I have been told that the priest offered money to those Thave been told that the priest offered money to those who would bring a Bible or Gospel, or any evangelical literature, to the fire. Of course he said that he did it because the Bibles were false. He was very proud of his act, and boasted of it on the train a few days afterwards. My wife just now told me that the children said that they received indulgences for bringing in books.

Most Protestant priests, serving as "pastors" for manmade churches, have about as little use for some parts of the Bible as that Catholic priest has for all of it. They would consider it a misfortune to have a man appear in their pulpits and read, without comment, certain chapters contained in the Bible. This sort of thing is a public calamity, and there is no Christian charity in winking at it or in condoning with the guilty men. We are aware that some consider it a sort of sacrilege to mildly insinuate that certain prominent "pastors" are not preaching the gospel. But, are they? Then what is to be done about it? Are we to sit supinely by and see thousands of souls going out into the great beyond depending upon sprinkling for baptism, for fear we may incur the displeasure or wound the popularity of some "big" preacher? It would be better for all these "pastors" to lose all their popularity and to remain angry until nearly sundown than for a single soul to go down to ruin.

There is something horrible in the thought of burning a Bible. But what of the man who accepts just parts of the Bible? There is something horrible in the thought of a man's rejecting the word of God, whether he burns the paper on which it is written or not. Yet this very thing is done by many who are laboring under the delusion that they believe the Bible. Language that was used by Jesus and the apostles, telling sinners what to do to be saved, is never heard from many pulpits. Should a Christian acquiesce in such a thing by remaining silent for fear somebody will think he is a fire-eater, or should he utter a word of warning in an effort to avert the calamity impending on those who have their hopes for all eternity based upon the sand? The sermon Peter preached on the day of Pentecost has been vetoed by most of the "pastors" of this town; and if a man wants to know what Peter said, we regret to advise that he cannot depend upon them to tell him.

The Gospel Advocate entertains the kindliest feelings toward everybody. When we regretfully call attention to the fact that a man is not preaching the gospel, endeavoring to give him warning and escape his blood's being required at our hand, we do not intend any personal criticism or disparagement. On all such things the Advocate is much more interested in presenting what the word of God teaches than it is in presenting something that will tickle the ears, lull the conscience, and prove popular with a thoughtless and fastidious public. It recommends that every intelligent person cease to worship at the shrine of "big" preachers and popular "pastors," take the word of God into their hands in an honest and candid effort to learn what it teaches, and firmly determine that they will obey God rather than men. In this way "the wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err" in learning what they must do to be saved. The Advocate makes this sort of recommendation because of the general aversion entertained by such preachers against imparting this vital information to men and women who are away from Christ and in their sins.

Our good Baptist friend, John R. Clark, who is one of the editors of the Diagram of Truth, which paper was formerly the American Baptist Flag, deserves a lot of sympathy in the long-standing trouble he has had with "Campbellism," and he should have the encouragement of all good men and women in his brave efforts to exterminate the "Campbellites" by trying to be funny. Under the heading, "A Glorious Condition," Brother Clark, in The Diagram of Truth, exults exceedingly in the happy discovery that some of the counties in the mountain regions of East Tennessee "have no anti-organ Campbellite church." Avowing that "the good Lord has been very kind to these twenty-one counties for nearly a century, in keeping Campbellism out of them," Brother Clark further avers that "the condition that these twenty-one counties are now in is the same condition that the whole world was in until about a century ago, for there was not one Campbellite church in the whole world until Campbell started that sect." Brother Clark then philosophizes thus:

Are there no saved people in those twenty-one East Tennessee counties? If Campbellism is true, there are no saved persons in those counties. Neither were there any saved souls in all the world before Campbell organized his new society, for Campbellites teach that no one can be saved outside of the Campbellite denomination. But since there are saved folks and churches of Christ (Missionary Baptist) in those twenty-one East Tennessee counties, and as there were both saved people and true churches before Campbell's day, there is no excuse or use for the existence of Campbellite churches in East Tennessee or anywhere else on God's footstool. Communities, towns, counties, States, nations, and the whole world is better off without them. The God of heaven ran his business on earth until 1827 without even one Campbellite church on the earth, and he is still running his business in spite of the various brands of Campbellism. And when Jesus comes and plucks up every tree that the Father has not planted, during the entire millennial reign of our Lord on the earth he will govern the whole earth, with not even one Campbellite organization in the world.

Of course, all intelligent men and women recognize that by the use of such a term as "Campbellism" Brother Clark means to designate that position religiously which embraces the teaching and practice of inspired men in New Testament times as faithfully recorded in the Bible; and that by the use of the term "Campbellites" he means to stigmatize that body of people who reject all human creeds, such as the "Philadelphia Confession," and all human denominations, such as the Baptist denomination, in their effort to restore primitive Christianity as it was taught by the church of Christ before "the falling away" from the apostolic order led to the birth of the various denominations.

The mere fact that all the denominational world combines to ridicule and nickname this position shows it to be the true one. History repeats itself. People who occupied this same position, claiming identity with the same church and wearing the same name, and who preached the same things word for word, in New Testament times, constituted "the sect everywhere spoken against." In those days they were nicknamed "Nazarenes," and Paul was called "a ringleader." To-day the same people, teaching the same thing, still bear the stigma of a nickname and suffer misrepresentation and abuse of the same kind. Then they were slanderously represented as teaching that we should do evil that good may come; to-day they are misrepresented as teaching that a sinner may be carried into the water and be brought out a saint.

Brother Clark imagines that because this body of people object to wearing the name "Campbellite" they are ashamed of Mr. Campbell. He uses the name only because they object to it, not because it is any worse to be a "Campbellite" than it is to be a Baptist; and this shows that a course in good manners was not included in his education. Benedict, in his Baptist history, records that John Smyth established "the first Baptist church of which we have any account." The John Smyth church was established thirty years ahead of the first regular Baptist church. There is no trace of a Baptist church in all the records of history before A.D. 1607. If Brother Campbell started a "Campbellite" church, as Brother Clark asserts, it would be as scriptural to be a member of it as to be a member of the Baptist Church, started by John Smyth. Neither of them could be the church of Christ; and to be either a Baptist or a "Campbellite" is to be something more or less than a Christian. Lutherans glory in the name of Luther, and the followers of Wesley, Calvin, and others are proud to wear their names. Neither of these men was the equal of Alexander Campbell, whose gigantic mind, great learning, personal purity, and stupendous talents, in the opinion of his brethren and of the scholarship of the world, left him without a peer since the days of inspired men. But with all of this, he was only an uninspired man; and his brethren, while feeling that if they were going to wear the name of any fallible man, they would prefer his to that of any other, in laboring for the restoration of primitive Christianity in doctrine and practice, wish to be called by no name except the name worn by those who "were called Christians first in Antioch."

If Brother Clark is as intelligent as a Baptist editor ought to be, and as conscientious as any good man must be, he will withdraw his slander about Alexander Campbell's starting anything. Otherwise, to be honest, he will be specific enough to put his finger upon some definite thing started by Mr. Campbell which was not preached by the apostles eighteen centuries before Mr. Campbell was born.

The world needs to get away from men and to get back to Christ and the apostles. It needs to get away from human denominations and to get back to the church that Christ founded upon the Rock. It needs to abandon the creeds and traditions of men and to get back to the word of God as it was once preached by holy men inspired by the Spirit of God. When this is done, there will be no church but the church of Christ, of which every Christian is a member, and nobody will preach or practice anything that was not preached and practiced by inspired men in New Testament times. Will Brother Clark give us his hand on this kind of proposition? If not, why not?

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once. Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"Salvation from Sin," by David Lipscomb, is a most excellent book. This book contains the cream of his editorials, and will be found helpful to all who read it. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

"The Gospel Plan of Salvation," by Dr. T. W. Brents, is a book that does not wear out with age. All who have read it say that it is a great production and the best book of a master mind. Price, $2.50.

Order from Gospel Advocate Company, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

REDEEMING THE TIME.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE CHRISTIAN USE OF TIME.

This is a "movie"-trained generation in which we live. And the world's speed mania has affected us as Christians, because, although we are not of the world, yet we are in the world. We ought, of course, to have an appreciation of time; for the time of our sejourn here below is brief, and our days, as Job said of his, are swifter than a weaver's shuttle. We ought to use time wisely, redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

The world's life has progressed to the point where time seems to be the most valuable asset that men possess and use. Multitudes to-day so value material advantages that they count it a waste of time to worship God, and they have taken away his day that they may use it in the devices of lustful pleasure. It is quite true that most of our offices and factories close on the Lord's day, but that by no means signifies that the worship of God is guaranteed on that day. The actual condition is that men -Christians among them-have so filled their six days of toil with strain and worry, and so crowded their six nights with thrills of pleasure, that the power to worship on Sunday has been squandered before Sunday arrives. It has been said that Sunday "desecration" begins on Saturday night. That is quite true for many, but for still more it begins much earlier in the week. There are literally thousands who deliberately squander their strength with the view of "catching up" on Sunday. . The result is that Sunday morning finds them in bed instead of in the house of God. The pathos of it is that they are caught in the swirl of a consuming greed and have discriminated against the things worth while in favor of that which has no permanency.

It is pitiful to think that we as Christians should join in this "mad rush" for material things. Instead of joining the panting treadmill throng, we should by a proper use of time rebuke the world for its improper use of time. With a sober view of the matter, we ought to act wisely, not foolishly, redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

"REDEEMING THE TIME, BECAUSE-"

Paul lived in a busy day, and it was crowded, as our day is crowded, with excesses and abnormalities. Therefore, he admonished at least two of his congregations—Ephesus and Colosse—to "redeem the time." He asked the Ephesians to "walk circumspectly, . . redeeming the time." Let us look at the quotation as it reads in both versions. "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the times, because the days are evil." "Look therefore carefully how ye walk, not as unwise, but as wise; redeeming the time, because the days are evil." In substance he said the same thing to the Colossians: "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time." Let us consider, first, what it means to redeem the time, and, second, the importance of it.

"See that ye walk circumspectly, . . . redeeming the time." The original Greek for this expression signifies looking around before making a choice. To walk circumspectly is to look on every side, to look carefully how we walk. Only thus can we walk wisely, and only thus can we redeem the time. "Redeeming the time." The Greek for this phrase is "buying up the opportunity." How are we to buy up the opportunity? How can we buy time? Not literally. It is a Pauline metaphor. It is easily understood when we conceive it as a commercial figure. Merchants and traders diligently seek merchandise, and in this they are wise. Just so it is a great part of Christian wisdom to seek time, to redeem the time, to buy up the opportunity. We buy opportunity by giving up present enjoyment, by giving up our pleasures. We redeem the time when we save it from trivial employment and use it wisely in doing God's service.

I have said that ours is a day of excesses and trivialities. It will ever be so as long as we are in the world. Time, therefore, must be saved or bought up from a multitude of cheap pleasure and mean things. Here, I think, are what might be termed essential and nonessential things. Life is so embellished that the essentials are for the average person difficult to determine, but Christians ought to be sober-minded enough to seek them out. Our everyday life should be reduced to the minimum of simplicity, that greater time may be had for doing good in the world. We are to redeem the time from the nonessentials—the excesses, the abnormalities, the trivialities.

What are some of the things to be eliminated? One example will suffice. A popular advertisement has divided a day of twenty-four hours into several segments. One large portion has been shaded heavily and marked "worry." Then the advertiser has asked: "How much of our day is worry?" None of a Christian's day should be worry. And there are many other elements of waste that need not enter. Since Christ has redeemed the Christian from worry and other waste, he is, in turn, able to redeem his time from them.

And we save time little by little—a moment here, an hour there, and somewhere a day. We ought to redeem every moment we can. Moments make hours, and hours make days, and days are important sections of our life. The greatest gold findings in the world are not in large nuggets, but in "dust." Just so do we redeem the time by picking up the moments along the way.

A Christian can, if he takes thought, save up many precious moments which otherwise would be wasted, or worse than wasted, and convert the saving into opportunity for serving the Lord Christ. Times of ceaseless and indifferent reading, thinking, conversing, can be turned to constructive Christian uses.

"HIGH TIME TO AWAKE OUT OF SLEEP."

A word anent the importance of redeeming the time. Paul says we are to redeem the time "because the days are evil." This is enough to emphasize the need. We do not want to be swallowed up in the evils of an evil day. To prevent this, we are to save up our time from the base and mean employments of the world and to use it for Christ.

Let us quote Holy Writ again. "We must work the works of him that sent me," said Christ: "the night cometh, when no man can work." What is this but redeeming the time? Paul warned the Romans to awake out of sleep, to be roused to work every waking hour in view of a salvation which draweth nigh. "And this, knowing the season, that already it is time for you to awake out of sleep: for now is salvation nearer to us than when we first believed." The Common Version says "it is high time to awake out of sleep." It is indeed high time to rouse from carelessness and indifference—to redeem the precious time given us. Many other scriptural admonitions of like import could be cited.

We ought to redeem the time because our time is not unlimited. What we do here below must be done quickly. We ought to be urgent in season, out of season. "The King's business requireth haste."

And yet the King's business requires time also. The fundamental requirements of the Christian life call for time. That is just why we should save up our time from trivial things. The speed of the day in which we live should not deceive us here. The processes of growth and development are not quickened one whit. The stars move and the trees grow as they ever have. Likewise it still requires the same time for prayer. Elijah was a man of like nature with us, and he prayed fervently; and so did Daniel, and so did Jesus; and so must we. Character growth, too, is yet as dependent upon long periods of contemplation and Bible study. The deep things of God are not learned in a moment. The principle of the Golden Rule, the duty we owe our neighbor and fellow man, require whole sections of our time. We ought, therefore, to redeem the time from the trivialities that we may have it for the fundamentals of our spiritual life.

May we redeem the time and rightly appropriate it. May we enter the consciousness of eternity that rightly belongs to us as we redeem the time. In that consciousness we shall see that the supreme question in life is not, "What is your speed?" but, "What is your direction?"

RESPECTABLE SINS.

BY S. H. HALL.

It is not always the case that I am satisfied with the heading that is given to my articles. There may be a better term than "respectable" to associate with "sin" in this heading. But I think I can make myself under-

There can be no doubt that there are many sins that are not, as a rule, thought to be sins. With just a little thinking, we can soon see that we should not hold to some things that we do; but, due to our failure not to be more thoughtful and careful in all that we do and say, we sin unconsciously, and may be found actually defending ourselves in what we have done, not knowing it is sin.

But you will better understand the lesson that I am trying now to give when you shall have read the following clipping from a paper that fell into my hands;

THE DEVIL'S BEST TOOL.

It was once announced that the devil was going out of business and would offer all tools for sale to whomsoever would pay his price. On the night of the sale they were all attractively displayed, and a bad-looking lot they were. Malice, hatred, envy, jealousy, sensuality, deceit, and all the other implements of evil were spread out, each marked with its price. Apart from the rest lay a harmhigher than any of them.

Some one asked the devil what it was.

"That's discouragement," was the reply.

"Why do you have it priced so high?"

"Because," replied the devil, "it is more useful to me than any of the others. I can pry open and get inside of man's consciousness with that when I could never get near him with any of the others; and once inside, I can use him in whatever way suits me best. It is so much worn because I use it with nearly everybody, as very few people yet know it belongs to me."

It hardly need be added that the devil's price for discouragement was so high that it was never sold. He is still using it.

Had you ever thought seriously of "discouragement" as the most-used tool of the devil? And had you thought of its being the most used just because we are not in the habit of thinking it a sin or contrary to our Lord's will, to be discouraged? I cannot think of "discouragement" as a sin in the sense I do of stealing, lying, and murdering. And I feel quite sure that our Lord has never had a disciple that has not been discouraged, more or less, along life's way. There is another word that we must be careful not to confuse with the one we are studying-viz., "dissatisfy." I have allowed myself to feel that God has, at times, been discouraged, that Christ became discouraged, and that the apostles also oftentimes were discouraged. But the question comes: May it not be that we sometimes take statements of Jehovah's dissatisfaction with his people as discouragement when it is not necessarily the case. It must be true that our Lord felt discouraged and that his apostles knew all about this feeling. Christ was tabernacled in a body of clay like ours and knows every feeling that belongs to our fleshly nature. But I think it correct to say that our Lord never allowed Satan to sell to him the "tool" of "discouragement," nor did any of the apostles ever buy this "tool."

Turning to the dictionary, I find the following definition of "discourage:" "To dampen or destroy the courage or depress the spirits of; lessen the self-confidence of; dispirit; dishearten; deter. . . . To destroy or attempt to destroy confidence in; try to bring into disfavor; attempt to repress or prevent; oppose; obstruct; as, to discourage an enterprise."

"Discouragement" is a wonderfully beneficent thing in our lives when it is applied to any and all things that are wrong. We are blessing our friends and loved ones when we can discourage them in anything that is wrong. Here is discouragement's place in our life, and we should be full of it. But when it comes to anything that is right, you very well know that it is the devil's whole desire to discourage us; and if we let ourselves become discouraged in anything that is right, we are allowing the devil's will to be accomplished in us, and not the Lord's will. Or, to put this matter fully, yet briefly, it is correct to say that the work of the Christian is to discourage and oppose every evil thing under the sun, and that it is the devil's business to discourage every good thing. The devil would like to have us stop opposing the evil and discouraging people in any wrong course in life, and he would also like to have us become discouraged in every righteous undertaking. He even causes us to become discouraged in our efforts to oppose evil and makes us fold our hands and quit and say: "What's the use?" How deceitful he is! How continuously he works to accomplish his purpose in us! How timely the admonition: "Be sober, be watchful: your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour!" (1 Pet. 5: 8.) Paul's fears for the church at Corinth are in order here: "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve in his craftiness, your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity and the purity that is toward Christ." (2 Cor. 11: 3.)

In closing, I think it safe to say that a child of God should never allow himself to become discouraged in any good thing, in anything that is right, and in forever trying to accomplish anything he knows his Lord wants done. Here I believe the apostles never knew discouragement, nor did our Lord allow himself to even let such a thought enter his mind. The purpose of Satan in putting into our hands the tool of discouragement is to get us to stop trying. Here we should see to it that never in a single thing is his purpose accomplished. Be certain to know what the will of the Lord is. Be certain to prayerfully think what is right and just to all concerned, then set your heart on doing it, even unto death. You may not accomplish, in your day, many things you put your hands to; but if it is right and should be done, keep trying. It seems to me that "Be thou faithful unto death" covers the ground here. Never surrender the flag to the enemy. Die with it in your hands, held aloft; and if it must fall, let it fall upon your dead body.

It seems, when we think of the God who is with us in all that is just and right, that we should be strangers to discouragement. When Jehovah told Israel to "go up, take possession" of the land, it was added: "Fear not, neither be discouraged." (Deut. 1: 21.) The point of their courage, or the thing in which they should have courage, should not be lost sight of. Read it: "Only be strong and very courageous, to observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest have good success withersoever thou goest. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth, but thou shalt meditate thereon day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success." (Josh. 1: 7, 8.) Read, also, verse 5: "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life; as I was with Moses, so will I be with thee; I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee." But you will note that they were to be "very courageous" to live in Jehovah's law, to abide in his directions, and they were to leave victory in his hands. The one who so lives is never defeated. Even death is success and victory.

But how often we allow Satan to discourage us in what we know to be right, and encourage us in a course along life's way that is either unjust to our fellow man or contrary to his teaching to aliens and the work and worship he approves in his church!

Yes, indeed, "the devil's price for discouragement was so high that it was not sold. He is still using it."

IN FLORIDA.

BY S. F. MORROW.

Mrs. Morrow and I left Nashville on Friday before the second Lord's day in December, and arrived in Tampa, Fla., on Saturday night. We met with the Gary Street congregation, and I spoke for them both morning and night. We were somewhat surprised to see as many present as were. We had the pleasure of hearing Brother Wright the following week at Nebraska and Twentieth Avenues. His teaching was very good, and he had fairly good crowds. We were at Mango on the third Sunday. A good Sunday school and a reasonably good crowd. Brother Price Billingsley is in a meeting at Mango now, and is preaching the truth so all can understand their duty. He made it plain that Christ began to do, then preach. He showed that a godly life is first necessary, then followed by declaring the whole counsel of God.

Churches should go to work in sending the gospel to poor and neglected fields where the gospel has not been heard. If elders and preachers of the gospel would teach them their duty as "it is written," I feel certain we could more than double our conversions and establish many more congregations yearly. One of the main points in this work is to continue the meeting until we gather the harvest after sowing the seed of the kingdom, which is the word of God. We should teach every member his or her duty to teach their neighbors the plan of salvation. The greatest thing that poor, sinful mortals can know is how to become a member of the church of God, when and where it was established, and on what day, so they will have no doubt about it. I find that the best way is to read it to them out of God's word or have them to read it for themselves. We should teach them the proper division of the New Testament. Paul says: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 16.) Forty years ago this was among the first things our preachers taught the people. They put them to reading the word, and churches were greatly multiplied in those days. I never heard of one of our members leaving the church of God and joining a denomination.

Where is our trouble to-day, and who will be held responsible in the great and notable day? It certainly will be laid at the door of our elders and preachers mostly. A fearful responsibility rests on our preachers. They should not fail to declare the whole counsel of God on all Bible subjects. A good sister said to me last year she would give anything in reason if she could hear some preaching like we had years ago. My prayer to God is that all will preach the word and leave results with God, and give him all the glory and honor, and we may rest assured he will care for us.

Before leaving the Gospel Advocate office, I asked

Brother Leon B. McQuiddy for a list of the subscribers in Florida, which he promptly gave. The Lord willing, I want to visit every congregation possible, that we may greatly increase our list. May we with full assurance ask all of our elders and leaders to see that we have an active member to canvass each congregation for this grand old paper? All who read the Advocate will read their Bibles more, and will be blessed here and hereafter.

We appreciate the interest Brother Morrow is taking in extending the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Elders of congregations are realizing that one of the best ways to increase interest and activity in Christian work is to get the members to reading the Advocate. No one could estimate the good that would be accomplished if every member of every congregation would subscribe, and then, when his family is through with it, pass it on to their unconverted neighbors. Thousands could be brought to Christ in this way. We urge elders to suggest to their congregations the good to be received by subscribing for the Gospel Advocate.

And Brother Morrow wants the old-time preaching! Well, we intend, the Lord being our helper, for that to be about all any one can get out of the Gospel Advocate. The Advocate was established on that issue in 1855 and has been faithful to its calling ever since. The public is recognizing more to-day than ever before that nothing is of any value that cannot be substantiated by a "Thus saith the Lord." And while we recognize the sin of wrangling and vain jangling, we also wish to subscribe to the policy of Jesus and the apostles, as revealed in the New Testament, that false teaching must be personally and definitely pointed out, condemned, and warned against. The man who condemns error privately or in a vague and indefinite way is an enemy to truth. We request our readers to assist us in the efforts we are making for the J. A. advancement of the truth.

RECOGNITION OF BROTHER SMITH'S GOOD WORK.

The following letter addressed to Brother F. W. Smith indicates the appreciation others feel in the good work he has been doing. Such a letter from such a man as Brother M. C. Kurfees is very acceptable, not only to Brother Smith, but to all who are interested in holding up the hands of men who are firm in their determination to abide in the word of God, let the consequences be what they may.

Louisville, Ky., January 3, 1925.—Dear Brother Smith: Permit me, my well-beloved comrade, to rejoice with you. I refer to what the Franklin church did for you at Christmas, 1924, as finely reported by Brother Allen on page 5 in the Gospel Advocate of January 1, 1925. It was a generous and gracious thing on the part of that church, and the spirit of genuine friendship and fellowship prompting the brotherly deed is vastly more than the beautiful and useful present with which you were so handsomely and properly remembered. The whole thing is "a crown of beauty" for both church and minister as resplendent as that placed by Solomon on the brow of Wisdom and emitting a brighter radiance than the crowns of kings and queens.

May the good Lord bless both you and the church.
Yours most fraternally,
M. C. Kurffees.

Unquestionably the cause of Christianity is suffering from the lack of constant, individual study of the Bible among the people in general and among church members in particular. The only way to promote a knowledge of the Bible among the people in general is to encourage constant, daily, and prayerful study of the Bible itself by each individual.—F. D. Srygley.

Only those who read and study the Bible can learn the will of God. Man's highest happiness and usefulness is found in such a course.—James A. Allen.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 10. BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter I .- Continued.

NOT THE WORLDLY-WISE AND PROUD CONVERTED, BUT THE HUMBLE AND LOWLY. (Verses 26-31.)

26. Ye see your calling, etc. Observe the manner of men whom God called. "Not many wise men after the flesh. Opposite the class the world would have called. "Not many mighty, not many noble, are called. Men of power and authority. Paul shows the weakness of the human instrumentality, chosen by divine wisdom, to convert the world. Not the wise, not the mighty, not the noble, such as the world would have chosen, and yet the work goes on with great success. God did not choose the learned, the mighty, and the noble ones to preach the gospel and convert the world. The apostles, who were commissioned to preach the gospel and convert the world, were not of the learned, but illiterate and weak men, and men of low birth; and by making them successful in reforming mankind, he put to shame the legislators, statesmen, and philosophers among the heathens, and the learned scribes and the doctors among the Jews.

27. But God hath chosen the foolish things, etc. Doubtless two things are included—(1) the gospel, which the world called "foolishness," and (2) the apostles, whom the wise called "foolish." (Acts 4: 13.) Evidently Paul imitated the contemptuous language in which the philosophers spoke of the Christian preachers. The first preachers of the gospel were chiefly a few poor fishermen of low parentage and education, of no learning or eloquence, of no reputation or authority, despised as Jews by the rest of mankind, and by the Jews as the meanest and worst of themselves. What improper instruments were these to contend with the prejudices of the world, the superstition of the people, the interests of the priests, the vanity of the philosophers, the pride of the rulers, the malice of the Jews, the learning of the Greeks, and the power of Rome! But the weaker and more insignificant the instruments and means used in converting and redeeming the world, the greater is the display of the wisdom and power of God.

28. Base things. Those of low parentage and birth. Which are despised. Looked upon by the wise as beneath their notice. Things which are not. In the Eastern phase, dead ones are those who, in comparison with others, are, to the purposes for which they are chosen, as unfit as if they were dead people and things that the world counts nothing. These lowly things are selected by the wisdom of God to bring to naught things that are. The existing things which were considered of high esteem, such as the pagan religions and governments—all these were to be overthrown by God's ministers and the influence of the gospel.

29. That no flesh should glory, etc. These weak and foolish things ordained of God shows that the power is of God, and hence no reason for man glorying in his own wisdom and strength. Note (1) the singular favor which Paul calls upon the Corinthians to eye and considernamely, their effectual vocation and calling out of heathenism into Christianity-" you see your calling, brethren." Such as are exalted by God in anything should call to mind their former station in life, and especially those called by God out of a state of nature ought frequently to observe and consider the worth and weight of that mercy and the freeness of that divine favor. "Brethren, see," and take notice of "your calling." (2) That God has in all ages called some of all ranks and degrees of men, of the wise and great, the rich and noble, to the knowledge of himself and Son. "Not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble, are called." Paul does not say "not any," but "not many." Lest the world should think that Christians were deceived through their simplicity and weakness, one rich Joseph of Arimathea, one honorable Nicodemus, and one Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, were called. As a rule, men of high standing are too proud to stoop to the simplicity of the plain, simple gospel and the humbling, self-denying terms of it. This is why so few of this class embraced the gospel then, and the reason now. Yet some of this class are called, lest anything in man should seem too hard for the grace of God; yet not many, lest worth and worthiness in man should be thought the motive that rules God. Had not the gospel the power to reach the heart of at least a few of this class and humble them to its claims, this would have overthrown the apostle's argument that the gospel is all-powerful. Men of the greatest fame and renown in the world have been and are the fiercest enemies against Christ and Christianity. Galen, the chief physician; Porphyry, a chief philosopher; Lucian, a chief orator-these, with many others, were professed enemies of the Christian religion. (3) That although God called some of the wise, rich, and noble, among the Jews and Gentiles, to espouse Christianity, yet the greater number of those who hear the gospel and obey its call are poor and low, and in the world's esteem weak and foolish, base and despisable. That God selected "foolish things to confound the wise, and weak things to confound the mighty," is verified in the choice which God made of the apostles, who first planted Christianity, and through illiterate fishermen confuted and confounded the wisest among philosophers; and also in the choice God made of the primitive Christians, who first entertained the gospel, who were a poor, despised company. (James 2: 5.) For this choice Christ thanked his Father. (Matt. 11: 25.) For the wisdom of God herein seen we should give our highest praises, because (a) by it God demonstrates that Christianity needs no earthly props to support and hold it up. As it was first planted and propagated by weak and contemptible means nad instruments, so it is still upheld and supported without human policy or riches. God did and can outwit the wisest men by fools and overpower mighty men by those that are weak. The apostles and primitive Christians are proof of this. (b) God, by his choice of the weak and foolish, of the base and despised, pours contempt upon those things which are most admired among men-namely, the internal endowments of the mind, strong reason and sharpness of wit; and the external gifts of providence, nobility of birth, riches, and honors. What shame and confusion of face will cover the noble and honorable, the great and mighty, the rich and wealthy, in the coming world, when they shall see those poor Christians whom they despised for their poverty and scorned for their lowness of birth, and whom they regarded as unworthy to come into their presence, highly exalted in the favor of God and proclaimed the heirs of his kingdom! For as here God has more rent and is better paid (as the great Landlord of the world) from many smoky cottages than from divers great palaces where persons wallow in plenty and corruption and forget God; so will God own his faithful though despised servants at the great day, and make it evident to angels and men that he accepteth not the person of princes nor regardeth the rich more than the poor, nor the poor more than the rich; but every one, both rich and poor, that here feared him and wrought righteousness shall be accepted of him and rewarded by him. Thus God will demonstrate that he shows no partiality to either the rich or the poor.

30. Of him, etc. Out of God's grace and mercy we are engrafted into Christ. Who of God is made unto us wisdom. "Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God" (verse 24), is wisdom to us who are engrafted into Christ. The scheme of redemption which the wisdom of God introduced for man's salvation is wisdom to the world. And righteousness. The sole ground of our justification and right doing. And sanctification. Separated from the world by obedience to the gospel and set apart for a holy and righteous use. And redemption. Complete deliverance from sin and eternal bliss of both soul and body. This is called the "redemption of our body." (Rom. 8: 23.) Christ is all these to us.

31. As it is written. Recorded in Jer. 9: 23. Let him glory in the Lord. Not in himself, not in the flesh, not in the world. Since Christ bestows every grace and blessing, there is no ground for glorying in Paul, Apollos, or Cephas. We should glory in the Lord alone. Observe that in this chapter Paul has shown the Corinthians how low their outward condition was in the world. He tells them that the world looked upon them as "weak" and "foolish," and, as such, despised and disdained them; but, as a superabundant recompense for the despicable lowness of their outward condition, he tells them what they are in Christ, how rich they are as Christians. He enumerates the Christian's privileges, received by virtue of his interest in, and union with, Christ. To relieve them and us of our ignorance and blindness, he tells them that Christ is "our wisdom," the fountain of divine illumination, enabling us to see both our sin and our danger. To discharge us from the burden of our guilt and obnoxiousness to divine wrath, he is our "righteousness," the Author of justification, procuring for us remission of sins and acceptance with God. To free us from the pollution and power of sin, he is our sanctification, purging us by his Spirit, as well as pardoning by his blood. To set us at liberty from captivity and thralldom to sin and Satan, he in made "our redemption"—that is, the blessed Author of a beloved redemption, not from Egyptian bondage or Babylonish captivity, but from the dominion of sin and servitude to Satan, from the wrath of God, from the curse of the law, and from death. God stored up in Christ all that we want, a suitable and full supply for every need, and made it communicable to us. He is our wisdom, our righteousness, our sanctification, and our redemption-our all in all.

BURRITT COLLEGE.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

The second semester had an auspicious beginning on January 6. The enrollment was about two hundred, and this number is being increased by the coming of late students. I think the average spring enrollment is about two hundred and twenty.

Including Tennessee, six States are represented—Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Oklahoma, and Ohio. Several counties in Tennessee are represented, among the rest the following: White, Warren, Coffee, Dekalb, Jackson, Fentress, Davidson, Bledsoe, and Hamilton. Van Buren, which happened to be the county in which Burritt College was founded in 1848, though the smallest Tennessee county in population, has the largest enrollment, of course. Three pupils come from Pall Mall, the Alvin York community, in Fentress County. There are ten preaching boys, destined, I think, to make good soldiers of the cross.

At a meeting of the board of trustees on January 10 a building committee was appointed and authorized to begin the quarrying of limestone for the foundation of the boys' dormitory, the actual work of construction to begin in April. It is proposed to lay the foundation for about two-thirds of the proposed building and to finish forty rooms for use at the opening of the fall term. Herbert E. Winkler, Nashville, who drew the plans for the building, will also make the blue print for the foundation, and in all probability construct the dormitory also. If funds are available, the entire building will be hurried to completion during the summer and fall. The necessary funds will depend upon the success of the building and improvement campaign which is now in progress and which is all the time growing. It seems to be the sensible thing to build no faster than the funds are raised, with the hope that this keeping faith with the donors will stir others up to even greater liberality. Funds are available for laying the foundation and starting the building, and it looks now as though the campaign will gather such momentum as will permit of the work going on until the job is finished. Surely this thing ought to be done. More facts will be published later.

I hesitate to mention another matter, and yet I cannot forbear to mention it. I have reference to the need of more religious books in Burritt College. This is not an appeal for money; it is an appeal for books-good books, books for the preaching boys. Let your money gift go to the building and improvement fund, where there is great and urgent need for it. But send your book gift to the Eurritt reading room. Do you have a good religious book that you do not use? If so, send it here and let it be put to use. Do not be afraid you will duplicate some one else's gift; we have two or three copies of some books, and often they are all being read at the same time. We have two sets of Johnson's Commentary on the New Testament, and oftentimes we could use another set. Just so with reference to Smith's Bible Dictionary, Elam's Notes, "The Old Paths" (sermons), Lipscomb (any of his works), Larimore, and Hardeman. Even a Testament (just a trifle, one would say) can be used in Bible classes. Price Billingsley sent us one, and it is in use to this day.

The three or four hundred volumes we have were contributed. F. L. Rowe gave a hundred or so; the lamented McQuiddy gave another hundred or so; Price Billingsley gave all the books he had. And there were others whose names I do not recall.

Other Christian schools have good religious libraries. Why not Burritt College?

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us for sample copies of Bible Lesson Helps.

Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

Every church should know its membership. In order to keep informed as to the residence and membership of your church, you should have a church record. Our Church Record is the very thing you need. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

If you are wanting a first-class hymn book, send us your order for "Choice Gospel Hymns." We publish only first-class music books, and books that are filled up with inspiring hymns. We are very much opposed to this jazz music that is destroying the spirituality of the churches.

The second edition of "Travels in Bible Lands," by Andy T. Ritchie, is selling fast. It is pronounced by all who have read it as being the best book ever written on travels in the Holy Land. It is illustrated and contains 335 pages. Cloth bound. Price, $1.50, postpaid, to any address. Send for your copy to-day.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

Kindly conduct is kingly.

When a man is idle, he is busy serving Satan.

A millionaire is usually a pauper before God,

A good start has led to many a winning finish.

A man is weakest when he thinks he is the strongest,

J. L. Hines preached at Adams, Tenn., last Lord's day. Leslie G. Thomas preached at Franklin, Ky., last Lord's

F. B. Srygley preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

H. Leo Boles preached at Reid Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

It does not change a "pastor" into an "evangelist" to call him such.

Religious partisanship is the smallest and meanest of all partisanships.

F. W. Smith preached to a packed house at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day.

A. G. Freed preached at the Waverly-Belmont Church, this city, last Lord's day.

The devil is a regular attendant at church. He excels in preaching flowery sermons.

H. S. Lipscomb delivered two excellent sermons at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day.

With the great number of unsaved people all around them, Christians have a great field in which to get busy.

P. W. Stonestreet, Chattanooga, Tenn., January 11: "I highly appreciate the Gospel Advocate, and I am reading it closely."

Brother Srygley says that he does not see why people should address a man as an "evangelist" when he is simply a "pastor."

B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., January 12: "I am inclosing two renewals to the Gospel Advocate. Two fine services at West End Avenue yesterday."

S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day, to two large audiences. There was one restoration, one by statement, and two baptisms.

E. A. Elam preached at the Chapel Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Elam will preach at Old Union, in Sumner County, Tenn., next Lord's day.

John R. Williams, Hornbeak, Tenn., January 16: "One thing I can truthfully say: The Gospel Advocate is getting better all the time, for which I thank God and take courage."

Guy Matthews and Martha Elizabeth Thompson were quietly married at 1206 Broad Street, Monday, January 12, at 6 P.M., A. B. Lipscomb officiating. They will make their home in Lynnville, Tenn.

T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., January 5: "With a record crowd at Bible study on Sunday, we have increased almost three hundred per cent since the first Sunday in October. There were five additions at the morning service."

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., January 12: "Herbert E. Winkler, of Nashville, preached an able sermon here yesterday. Brother Winkler came to Spencer with J. E. Acuff to attend a meeting of the board of trustees of Burritt College."

E. C. Coffman, Houston, Texas, January 15: "The First Church started the new year right. The auditorium overflows at each service. Five additions so far this year. Two were baptized last Sunday evening. Fifty have been added since last June."

Brother Elam states that a few queries have been misplaced, and he says that if any one who does not see a reply in the next few weeks will kindly send in a duplicate, he will be glad to attend to it. Also Brother Elam requests that all questions be written out in a plain, open hand, on one side of the paper, or else be typewritten, and that questions be brief and to the point.

James D. Smith, Cumberland City, Tenn., January 12: "H. R. Daniel, of Elkton, Ky., preached two sermons at Cumberland City, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Daniel is an excellent preacher of the word. We also had with us on the same date A. W. Jobe, of Clarksville, Tenn. He preached at 3 P.M., and presented us a contribution of fifteen dollars from his home congregation, to be used in the construction of our new meetinghouse, for which we heartily thank them."

W. P. Lowe, Indianapolis, Ind., January 13: "The South Side church of Christ, meeting in an abandoned storeroom at 1430 East Raymond Street, has purchased of the Church of God its lot and building, located at 1201 Cruft Street. We held our first services at this place on January 11 at 10:30 A.M. and 7:30 P.M., with a full house at the morning worship and a fair crowd at night. Take a Shelby car, get off at Cruft Street, and go east one block to 1201 Cruft Street. Note the change."

Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky., January 5: "S. H. Austin, of Munfordville, Ky., recently came from the 'digressives' and earnestly desires to be loyal to the teaching of Christ and the apostles. He has been preaching some in Southern Kentucky, and has done acceptable work. I wish the brethren would use him. He is a good man and a good preacher. I firmly believe he is strictly loyal to the truth. He has some time open for monthly preaching, and should be used in protracted-meeting work through the summer and fall."

Will J. Cullum, Livingston, Tenn., January 16: "The work here is growing in interest and the new year starts off encouragingly. We are now having a drill on Thursday nights, using 'Sound Doctrine,' by Nichol and Whiteside. We are much pleased with this work, and ultimately expect good results. We had one addition from the 'Christian Church' at our last lesson. We hope to complete each volume of their work in study. I am preaching three times each Lord's day—twice here at home and once at a mission point in the afternoon."

Price Billingsley, Mango, Fla., January 11: "The Mango meeting now near two weeks old, turns more and more into something grand for the cause of the Lord. Some ten souls have already been baptized, and among the number are leading people of the community. Our attendance and interest, both day and night, are fine and hopeinspiring. We continue here at least another week; then I go to Brooksville; thence to Plant City. Both meetings are in this State. The people appear to turn to the simple word of the Lord, and surely a better day dawns. May the gospel run and have free course."

John T. Smith, 1565 Race Street, Denver, Col., January 12: "Yesterday was an excellent day for the church here. Besides good attendance and interest, one was added to our congregation by membership, and two souls were added to the church by obedience to the gospel. In the last eight months the congregation has grown in numbers from about eighty to one hundred and fifteen. To those not acquainted with this field our growth may seem small, but to those who have been with the work for years it is extraordinary. All the meetings are quite well attended, and we are at peace with one with another."

A. R. Holton, Thorp Spring, Texas, January 10: "R. C. Bell will begin a series of special lectures at Thorp Spring on Tuesday night after the first Sunday in March. All of our friends are invited to visit us during this meeting. All preachers are especially invited to visit us at this time. E. M. Borden, editor of the Herald of Truth, Oklahoma City, Okla., has been secured to preach at the encampment at Thorp Spring on August 2-9. We are urging brethren everywhere to begin now to plan for their vacation and spend it with us the first week in August at Thorp Spring. We are running this year to full capacity."

w. F. Lemmons, Nashville, Tenn., General Delivery, January 15: "During the last quarter of 1924, J. O. Golphenee, of Elmdale, Montana, received from all sources one hundred and eighty-six dollars and fifty-five cents. This is the lowest amount I have reported during any three months in more than two years. This is wrong. Brethren, we should not neglect this work. In this report only Texas, West Virginia, Iowa, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, and Montana are represented. Fort Worth, Texas, is the only large city in the South that is represented. I would like to shift the responsibility of raising the funds for this Northwestern mission work to some brother or church or some one of our religious journals that is in position to raise more funds and to put more workers in that field. Who will take the responsibility? Let me hear from you."

Bynum Black has changed his address from Stuart, Okla., to Sixth and Comanche Streets, McAlester, Okla.

Married, on December 25, at the residence of R. C. White, 1403 Sweetbrier Avenue, this city, Willis Jonte and Mary Johnson, R. C. White performing the ceremony.

- N. B. Hardeman, Lakeland, Fla., January 16: "I have been here in a meeting since Sunday. Every one speaks highly of the Gospel Advocate, and especially of your good work on the first page."
- T. H. Bass, Lufkin, Texas, January 8: "The cause of our Lord is making some progress in this part. Interest in the work in general is better. We hope for the best year that has ever been ours. It is our aim to do more mission work and give more to worthy causes than before."
- R. C. White, Nashville, Tenn., January 10: "I filled my appointment at Bellbuckle on last Lord's day, with good audiences and interest. While others are commending the Gospel Advocate, I must say it is very fine indeed. Keep it on a high plane, free from bitter personalities, but never cease to condemn error in high places."
- places."

 W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn., January 10: "Our work in Putnam County continues. I preached at Smyrna last Lord's day and at Baxter on Thursday night. I will also preach at Baxter to-morrow, and will be at Fairview, this county, on the third Lord's day. The Lord willing, we shall make 1925 our best yet. Success to the Gospel Advocate. It gets better each issue."
- Ira C. Moore says he has a private letter from Brother Boll stating that the church and kingdom are not the same. Brother Boll, over his signature, publishes: "There is no kingdom of God on earth, save the church. All that are in the church are in the kingdom." Now, brethren, they say the Gospel Advocate does not understand Boll. Well, with these two statements before us, who is to blame for it?

James C. Dixon, Elkmont, Ala., January 10: "I have time for two meetings in May, the first one to begin on the second Sunday. Any one desirous of my services should write me at Elkmont, Ala. I am glad to say that our work here and elsewhere in the county is improving. I am busy all the time with my school work, our Fridaynight Bible class, and trying to preach three times on Sunday."

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, January 12: "The church of Christ in Wellington continues to grow. One addition yesterday by renewal and membership. The people realize that there is such a church, and they are feeling its influence. Everybody is talking about our progress, and our crowds continue to increase. The members love each other, and we expect to report some great results soon."

Mrs. Tenne Benton, Boise, Idaho, January 10: "Any one wishing to send donations to help us hold a mission meeting in this city may address Miss Ruth Day, 1018 West Jefferson Street, Boise, Idaho. I have received five dollars from Brother Dupuy and wife and daughter and mother, and Mrs. Annie Laws, all of Hickory Flat, Miss., who constitute the church of Christ at that place. All donations will be reported by Sister Day through the Gospel Advocate."

- J. F. Chambers, Sheffield, Ala., January 10: "The church in Sheffield is starting the new year by purposing to do more for the cause of the Master than in any of the years gone by. We have let the contract for remodeling and somewhat modernizing our building. I have planned to do more for foreign and home mission work. Our Lord's-day crowds are the largest in the history of the church. We have no contests or other modern 'claptrap' schemes to draw them. People are anxious to hear the simple gospel as delivered by the apostles. I baptized two at the regular services in December."
- F. D. Srygley said: "There is nothing wrong about 'the pastor system,' so far as I can see, except that it is not in the New Testament. Anything else that is not in the New Testament is as bad as 'the pastor' or 'the pastor system.' If people deliberately decide that they will not follow the New Testament in religion, I do not know that it makes any difference where they go or what they do. It is rebellion against God to determine not to follow the New Testament, and there is nothing worse than that. Unless the effort to follow the New Testament is entirely abandoned, there will be serious trouble in many unexpected places within the next few years."

- C. E. Wooldridge, 2018 Cullen Street, Dallas, Texas, January 20: "Your work for some months has been strong and good. I like your shots and jabs at Billy Sunday. Surely such efforts are effective. Brother Borden is treating Boll and Armstrong by the same method. I feel that he is doing good. He is showing up the inconsistencies of those who claim not to believe Boll's doctrines, but support him as a good man. Borden has forced some to attack Boll's heresies and others to support them, and has Armstrong hopelessly 'entangled in his talk.' I think Brother Elam's recent visit to Morrillton, his published report of the visit, and the three articles on 'Questions to Be Avoided' will do great good."
- L. E. Carpenter, Port Arthur, Texas, January 8: "We are starting the third year's work here with the best all-round interest we have had since I came here. We are planning a new building for 1925. There have been about two hundred additions to this congregation since I came here. We have missed but one Sunday since the fall of 1923 having new pupils in our Bible study. The average of new ones for each Sunday was five, regardless of heavy rains and opposition. I appreciate the many good letters I have received since my wife's death. These help much in such sad hours. I plan to evangelize this next summer. If you need my services, write me. May we all work and pray for greater things for God in 1925. Our zeal should equal our knowledge and our practice should equal our teaching. Is this true in our mission work and in our work in general?"
- W. C. Phillips, Cleveland, Tenn., January 13: "On the first Lord's day in January I exchanged pulpits with E. Gaston Collins. He preached for the congregation on Cowart Street, Chattanooga, and I preached for his congregation in Bridgeport, Ala. Both report good audiences at both morning and evening services. I was favorably impressed with the people of Bridgeport. The congregation seems to be in good condition. I was with the little congregation in Englewood, Tenn., Thursday and Friday nights, January 8, 9, and in spite of the fact that it was raining right down and the very muddy route we had to go to get to the little millhouse, which they have recently bought and arranged for meeting purposes, we had a very good audience at both services. From Englewood I went to Copperhill, Tenn., where I met with, and preached for, a very enthusiastic audience at both morning and evening services. At the morning service there were five confessions and one restoration. The work there looks hopeful for the future."
- O. F. Shearer, Monticello, Ky., January 15: "At Monticello, beginning on May 5 and continuing four days—May 5, 6, 7, and 8—C. R. Nichol (Christian) will engage H. B. Taylor (Baptist) in discussion. H. B. Taylor affirms that 'Missionary Baptist churches, of one of which I am a member, are scriptural in doctrine and practice.' Brother Nichol affirms that 'the churches of Christ, of one of which I am a member, are scriptural in doctrine and practice.' Monticello is a very fine inland town of about two thousand people. The cause here is young, having been started only a few years ago, under a tent, by J. D. Walling and others. We have grown rapidly the past two years, so the sects feel that something must be done. I think they aim to do something in May. You should come. The Baptists are strong here. To reach Monticello, buy a railroad ticket to Burnside, Ky. Taxies meet all trains for Monticello. Those coming from a distance should write in advance to either the writer or A. I. Rankin, Monticello. Ky. Lodging places will be arranged for all that attend."
- W. N. Abernathy, Route 2, Westport, Tenn., January 15: "I wish to call attention to an opportunity I am giving those who may be interested in systematic Bible study, but do not have the privilege of attending a regular Bible school. The fact that this course may be given by mail to individuals or in oral drills to classes makes it doubly practical. Including the trial lesson and the general review, there are eight lessons in the course. The lessons are by no means exhaustive, but are intended to be fundamental. At first I had no thought of offering the course to preachers of experience, but I now believe that many who have not had extended opportunities could be benefited by the three hundred and fifty research questions included in the course. Thus far I have been giving these lessons in type form, but as the enrollment grows and means become available I am having them printed. The review lesson, which contains fifty research questions on the New Testament, may be taken separate from the entire course, but is rather deep for beginners. The oral drills may be given daily, weekly, or monthly. Address me at Westport, Tenn."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order when changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is chazged, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter.

Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

PREACHERS TO BE AVOIDED.

BY E. A. ELAM.

While endeavoring to obey God in avoiding certain questions, which he specifies and which we have considered, we should put forth the same effort to avoid, and to teach the church to avoid, all teachers of whom God says we should beware and from whom he says we should turn away.

Not to beware of false teachers, not to turn away from them, and not to teach the church to do so, is as much disobedience to God as to refuse or even to fail to avoid all questions which he teaches must be avoided.

Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

Therefore by their fruits ye shall be a shal eth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. . . Therefore by their fruits ye shall know them. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven. . . Every one therefore that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them, shall be likened unto a wise man, who built his house upon the rock. . . And every one that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, who built his house upon the sand. (Matt. 7: 15-27.)

Since we are to beware of and to turn away from false prophets, how can we tell the difference between the false and the true? By their fruits. There can be no mistaking the difference. The difference is as plainly seen as the difference between thorns and grapes, thistles and figs.

What is the fruit? The good fruit is obedience to the will of God, or hearing and doing the words of Jesus. The evil fruit is disobedience to God, or not doing the words of Jesus. Disobedience to God, or transgression of his will at any point, is corrupt fruit.

God is the only rightful Judge of false and true teachers. His standard is perfect and unchangeable.

It matters not what a preacher's education is, how much worldly wisdom he has, how many degrees follow his name, what his eloquence is, and how great is his power over an audience, if he in any way lessens the importance of faith in Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ, the Son of the living God and Savior of the world, and of full trust in God and implicit obedience in all things to his will, he is a false prophet. The true prophet or teacher obeys God himself first, and, second, teaches all others to do the same. He has no standard but the will of God and no guide but the words of Jesus.

Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Christ, but their own belly; and by their smooth and fair speech they beguile the hearts of the innocent. (Rom. 16: 17, 18.)

We cannot mistake here that which God commands to be done. It is as much God's command to mark such teachers and to turn away from them as it is to do anything else which he commands to be done. Not to do so is as much disobedience as not to do anything else which he commands.

It may not be so easy for some to tell that a man's teaching is contrary to that of Christ and that this is the occasion of divisions and stumbling, because, while all should know, all do not know what the teaching of Christ is. Simply because a man's teaching is contrary to the notions, conceptions, conceits, and prejudices of some, it does not necessarily follow that it is contrary to the teaching of Christ. The man's teaching must be contrary to the doctrine learned from the apostles. If so, he must be marked, and from him the whole church must turn away. Regardless of his smooth and fair speech, beguiling eloquence, and bewitching manners, the church must mark him and turn from him.

In the first place, then, it is absolutely necessary for the church, especially the elders and older ones, to know the teaching of Christ, and, in the second place, to know that teaching contrary to this doctrine is causing divisions and occasions of stumbling. It is a fatal mistake for men to erect a standard of their own notions, speculations, wisdom, and prejudices as the teaching of Christ. It is also a woeful mistake, and sin in God's sight, not to mark and to turn away from the ones who are causing divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the teaching of Christ.

Let no man deceive you with empty words: for because if these things cometh the wrath of God upon the sons of disobedience. (Eph. 5: 6.) disobedience.

The only way to prevent this deception is to know well the teaching of the New Testament. The only way to prevent being carried away with every wind of doctrine is to know well the doctrine of Christ.

Take heed lest there shall be any one that maketh spoil of you through his philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ: for in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. (Col. 2: 8, 9.)

The church to-day must heed these admonitions, or else conclude that there are no men who would deceive the children of God through empty words and vain philosophy.

Beloved, believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits, whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world. . . We [the apostles] are of God; he that knoweth God heareth us; he who is not of God heareth us not. By this we know the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error. (1 John 4: 1-6.)

Here again is the divine standard set before us. The Holy Spirit speaks through the apostles. The apostles "preached the gospel unto you [and to us] by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven." (1 Pet. 1: 12.) Every one who teaches in faith and firmness, grace and love, only that and all that which the Holy Spirit teaches through the apostles of Christ, is a true prophet and a worthy teacher. No other one, as John teaches, must be believed. All are forbidden to believe any others, and, hence, to encourage any others in their teaching.

If any one cometh unto you, and bringeth not this teaching, receive him not into your house, and give him no greeting: for he that giveth him greeting partaketh in his evil works. (2 John 10, 11.)

Again our duty becomes very plain. We are not to receive into our homes and not to give greeting to teachers who bring not the teaching of Christ. Yet we are not to set up our own ideas, notions, prejudices, and conceits as the teaching of Christ. The teaching must be some other than the teaching of Christ, God's teaching of Christ—that he is the Son of God, "the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth," the Messiah, the Savior of the world, "the way and the truth and the life," and the author of eternal salvation unto all who obey him. (Heb. 5: 7-9.) We are not forbidden to entertain a man who differs from us concerning some particular thing Christ teaches; if so, Aquila and Priscilla could never have taught Apollos "the way of the Lord more accurately."

With many other qualifications of an elder so clearly stated, he must hold "to the faithful word which is according to the teaching." This is the teaching of Christ. An elder must do this in order to "be able both to exhort in the sound doctrine, and to convict the gainsayers." This shows that elders of the church should know the teaching of Christ "on all things that pertain unto life and godliness," and should exhort the church in this healthful teaching, and also convict the gainsayers. This shows, too, that there are gainsayers whom elders must convict of their false teaching.

For there are many unruly men, vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision, whose mouths must be stopped; men who overthrow whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake. (Tit. 1: 10, 11.)

Let us note that Paul declares there are "many unruly men, vain talkers and deceivers," and that he makes it the duty of elders by the sound teaching of the New Testament to stop their mouths—that is, to convict them of false teaching and to rid the church of them; and this must be done because they overthrow whole houses, teaching things contrary to the truth for the sake of money.

Who can doubt that, if every church in the land were blessed with scriptural elders who would dare to do their duty in this as well as in other respects, there would be far less strife, contention, and divisions? But the sad fact is that many so-called "elders" seem not to know the teaching of the New Testament in regard to such teachers; and if so, they do not have the faith and courage to reduce it to practice. On the other hand, when elders, in many places, endeavor to carry out the teaching of the New Testament in this particular, these vain talkers and deceivers, place hunters and money seekers, have so beguiled the hearts of many of the members that they will turn against the elders in favor of their deceivers.

A factious man after a first and second admonition refuse; knowing that such a one is perverted, and sinneth, being self-condemned. (Tit. 3: 10, 11.)

By studying the prophecies of Isaiah, Jeremiah, and others, we learn that both the downfall of the kingdom of Israel and the Babylonian captivity of Judah were largely due to the covetousness, immorality, and general profligacy of prophets and priests and their failure to teach the truth to the people. And who can doubt that the strife, bitterness, and unrighteous divisions which in various places curse the church to-day have arisen from its failure to obey God in dealing with false teachers and immoral preachers as he has commanded?

"What you do thunders so loudly in my ear that I cannot hear what you say." How is it with you, my brother?

—Exchange.

SOME THINGS HOPEFUL AS SEEN BY ANOTHER. BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

Brother J. F. Smith had an article on the above subject in The Living Message, in which he gets comfort out of some conditions which I had overlooked as being proof of real progress in the divine life. The brother prefaces his remarks with the following introduction:

Despite the fact that brethren in Christ have had strife and sometimes division over hairsplitting interpretations, and that in some localities there have been cliques and parties (even though we have bravely opposed any kind of human creeds or tests of soundness based on human interpretations), there has been more advance for simple New Testament Christianity in the past few years than in any period since I have known the activities of the Lord's faithful pepole.

This is a rather sad note to begin the tune the brother proposes to sing, "Some Things Hopeful." The first sentence in his opening remarks says that we "have had strife and sometimes division over hairsplitting interpretations." I do not know what the brother refers to as having caused "strife and sometimes division." I remember that sometime ago one of the editors of this same paper said that those who advocate the foolish theory that the kingdom of Christ has not yet been set up in its fullness had caused no division. According to Brother J. F. Smith, some one has sometimes caused division over some interpretation which he calls "hair splitting." If those who say that Christ is not yet on David's throne are not the hairsplitters referred to, I wish the brother would name them.

But the brother says that, notwithstanding this strife and sometimes division, with the "cliques and parties" all thrown in, "there has been more advance in New Testament Christianity in the past few years than in any period" he has known. It is to be hoped that the brother is right about this, and I have no interest in proving he is not, but I must say that some of the things he offers as proof do not prove it. The brother says:

We have done more in the past five years in caring for the motherless children and more for our schools, where hearts are trained as well as heads, than in fifty years previous. There have been more comfortable and convenient meetinghouses built by groups of Christians who contend for the 'Thus saith the Lord' in the past three or four years than in twenty-five years previous.

How does the brother know we have done more in caring for the motherless children in the last five years? I would judge that he means there has been more money given to build orphan homes in the last five years, but this does not prove that more has been done for the children. When there were no orphan homes, many orphan children were taken into Christian homes. While they may have been homes of poverty, yet they were Christian homes where the children were taught to work and where they had the restraints of home around them. I remember a poor widow that was left alone in the world with two little boys and five girls. These children were all kept together with the mother. The Christian people assisted them in many ways by helping them work theirlittle crop and in preparing wood for the winter. All these children grew up to be good, Christian men and women, and all seven of them have raised large families, and there are many Christian men and women as a result of the mother's training in sacrifice and the assistance of the faithful Christians of the community. As I write this I can recall four or five such broken families who wereassisted by the few faithful Christians of the community. when, if everything that was owned by that church had been sold, it would not have built one wing of some of the orphanages the brother has in mind.

But there has been more given to our schools "where hearts are trained as well as heads." I do not know whether many of these hearts or heads, either, have been benefited by the training here mentioned. Brother Smith thinks they have. But his point is that there has been more given to these schools. Likely he is right in this, because the brethren have had more to give; but how does that prove that New Testament Christianity has been advanced? Brother Smith should understand that schools, like farms, are individual matters and do not come under the head of the growth of the church. When will Christian school-teachers learn that they have no more right to call upon the churches for support than a Christian farmer has?

But the brother's last proof in this quotation of the growth of New Testament Christianity is about the weakest one of the bunch. "More comfortable and convenient meetinghouses" have been built. He could have added to this the further statement that there have been more fine meetinghouses built. This might show a growth in wealth, or it might show a growth in pride, but how it can show a growth in New Testament Christianity is more than I can see. To what part of the meetinghouse is New Testament Christianity stuck, that it grows so beautifully? To be perfectly frank with our dear brother, I must say that he is making too much of the material prosperity of the church and not enough of the spiritual. In his opening remarks he talks about the advance of New Testament Christianity, and yet he does not go to that book for a single principle in which to show advancement. He here refers to three things-orphanages, schools, and meetinghouses-neither of which is mentioned in the New Testament as a part of Christianity. He had as well try to prove that measles is worse in the neighborhood because all the children have the whooping cough.

The brother further says:

There has been more active mission work, both home and foreign, among the Lord's faithful in the past five years than in any ten years preceding. The facts are, the churches that are doing things—mission work, orphanhome work, supporting our Bible-school work, etc.—are not the churches that draw lines of soundness on interpretation.

I think this extract brings us down to the main point. The other quotations I have given were only preparatory to this one. This is the main thing that was on the brother's mind. This is the old cry of the man that would force us all to let up on our interpretations. churches that are really doing things . . . are not the churches that draw lines of soundness on interpretation." I have heard that same tune from my transgressive brethren all my life, but it has not deterred me. I am to judge from the article I am reviewing, Brother Smith has such a poor conception of New Testament Christianity that such a bold statement as this does not frighten me. I would dislike to be in a condition that my brethren cannot preach the truth on the establishment, the nature, and the duration of the kingdom of Christ, without feeling that some one was drawing lines of interpretation upon me. Even if Brother Smith is right (which I do not believe) when he says that the good churches do not draw the line of soundness on interpretation, I would say, this they ought to do and not to leave the other undone. The Living Message is a paper that is published and partly owned and controlled, if I understand the matter, by one of the many "Bible schools" that has grown up in the country. I may be wrong, but this impresses me with the idea that young preachers must be a little soft on the kingdom of Christ or the best churches will not encourage them. My reason for thinking this is, this quotation is followed by this significant statement:

If I would demand that my home church (one of the best churches in Texas) should subscribe to any one of two or three interpretations that have been placed on Dan. 2: 44, I would have a factional fight on my hands immediately.

What does this mean, if it does not mean that there is an element in that fine church in Texas that believes the Adventist-Russellite doctrine that Dan. 2: 44 has never been fulfilled and will not be till Christ comes again and sets up a world kingdom and rules the earth with a rod of iron? Brother Smith does not commit himself to this doctrine, but he is evidently trying to shoo everybody off of it by making them afraid to preach against it. All the good churches are letting it alone. If Brother Smith is correct in what he says of that good church in Texas, he will have to get him up a fourth interpretation on Dan. 2: 44 or have a factional fight on his hands, or wash his hands of the whole business and have nothing to say about it. It may be a good church, but they sure are scrappers. If I were Smith and knew the truth, I would preach it on Dan. 2: 44 and on the subject of the kingdom of Christ and fight it out with them. I judge he is needlessly agitated over the matter. If the church he mentions is like my brethren generally, it will stand for the truth on this subject. I am wonderfully afraid the brother is mixed up on the subject, for further along in his article he savs:

I do not consider myself a Methodist just because I often accept the comments of Adam Clarke on some texts that are hard for me. I do not consider myself a Baptist because I fully subscribe to Dwight L. Moody's interpretation of Dan. 2: 44. I do not think I should be called an Adventist because I fully agree with their teaching on the design of baptism.

No, I do not consider Brother Smith a Baptist because he fully accepts Dwight L. Moody's interpretation of Dan. 2: 44, but I consider both Brother Smith and Dwight L. Moody Russellites or Adventists in their interpretation of that passage. The brother says: "I do not think I should be called an Adventist because I fully agree with their teaching on the design of baptism." I do not suppose any one has ever called the brother an Adventist on that ground, for they preach just what all the other sects preach on the design of baptism. They teach on that subject that the sinner is saved by faith before and without baptism. No, beloved, the design of baptism is not the point on which you agree with the Adventists, but you agree with them at the same place you do with Dwight L. Moody. I suppose you both got it either directly or indirectly from the Adventists. Honor to whom honor is due.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. No. 4. BY F. W. SMITH.

We now come to examine the closing chapters in the history of the two men we have had before us, and we note

ANOTHER FRUITLESS PRAYER.

"And he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house; for I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment." The once rich man seems to have had a strange idea regarding the ability of Abraham and Lazarus to help either the dead or the living. He had been told that it was impossible to send Lazarus to him, but he still thought that Lazarus could come back to this world with a warning message.

Abraham's answer to this prayer, as we shall see, should be enough to forever disprove the doctrine of "spiritism," or the practice of spiritualistic mediums, who claim to bring back the departed and have them to communicate with the living. It does seem that the greater the error and unreasonableness of religious theories, the more quickly will many people embrace them.

If a departed mother had any message for a child upon the earth and had the ability to communicate that message, why should she do so through some one she never knew, instead of direct to the child? Such a question, it seems to me, is enough within itself to keep sensible men and women from running to witches, wizards, and sorverers. Note what God says about seeking knowledge from the dead: "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and unto the wizards, that chirp and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? on behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead? To the law and to the testimony! if they speak not according to this word, surely there is no morning for then." (Isa, 8: 19, 20.)

Tiose of whom we have an account of having died and come back from the regions of the dead gave not one word of information regarding the other world. Samuel simply told Fing Saul that he and his sons should be with him on the merrow. For men and women to spend time listening to the deception and falsehoods of "fortune tellers" and so-called "spiritualistic mediums," and giving their money to perpetuate such an abomination in the sight of God, is to discredit the word of God and to cast reflections upon his goodness, love, and power. "The secret things belong unto Jehovah our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law." (Deut. 29: 29.) God has revealed to us all he desires that man shall know of his origin, duty, and destiny, and one is wasting precious time in trying to fathom the unknown and unknowable.

ABRAHAM'S REPLY.

"But Abraham saith, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them." We are now entering upon the main lesson in this historical sketch. While I have tried to gather up suggestive thoughts and impress some of the incidental lessons growing out of this history, I now wish to impress the primary or paramount thought embodied in what Jesus here teaches. The characters before us lived under the law of Moses and the prophets, which contained all the teaching and warning necessary for that age to prepare people for the world to come. See the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, and note what the ancients accomplished by faith in and obedience to God. Even the patriarchs had enough revealed to fit them, when Jesus shed his blood, for a place in the everlasting kingdom of God. "And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 8: 11.) From such passages we at once are impressed with the force of Abraham's words in reply to the request to send Lazarus back to this world with a warning to men; for, if they had needed additional warning to that given by the teaching of Moses and the prophets, God would surely have given it.

No Change in His Respect for God's Law.

"And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one go to them from the dead, they will repent." This man had no respect for God's word while he lived, but disobeyed it every day, and even death and torment did not cause him to respect it. Although God had sent angels from the other world with messages of instruction and warnings to the children of men, here is one who would not believe and obey, but is pleading for one who died to come back and warn his brothers. Well, the rich man was not the first nor the last to disbelieve God's word and demand some other evidence. There are multiplied thousands today that are not satisfied with what God has revealed on the subject of salvation or the pardon of sins. They desire and plead for some additional and direct testimony in the matter of pardon. Although Jesus says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) they say: "Lord, that is not enough; give us evidence besides your word. Send thy Spirit to make us feel that you have done what you said you would do."

ABRAHAM SPEAKS AGAIN.

"And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, if one rise from the dead." That settled it; but even if one had gone from the dead by the authority of God, he would have said exactly what Moses and the prophets did. Hence, it would, in any event, have been altogether useless to have sent Lazarus, even if Abraham could have done so. Paul says: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, should preach unto you any gospel other than that which we preached unto you, let him be anathema." (Gal. 1: 8.) Christ has arisen from the dead, but he only emphasized his message while in the flesh. If men will not hear that, they need not expect anything more.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

On Seventeenth Street, overlooking the President's Park on the east and Potomac Park on the south, not far from Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, is the home of the Pan-American Union, last but not least beautiful, of the four handsome public buildings in that section, three of which I have recently described. The Pan-American Union, established in 1890, is, as its name indicates, Pan-American, meaning all-American—an international organization established and maintained by the twenty-one American Republics: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican, Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, United States, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

The purpose of the organization is to develop friendship, commerce, good understanding, and peace among the republics that compose the greater part of this Western Hemisphere. It is supported by annual contributions from all the Americas, based upon population. Its affairs are administered by a Director-General and an Assistant Director, elected by, and responsible to, a Governing Board composed of the United States Secretary of State and the Diplomatic Representatives in Washington of the other American governments. It employs a staff of international experts, editors, statisticians, commercial specialists, translators, librarians, clerks, and stenographers. It publishes three monthly bulletins, in English, in Spanish, and in Portuguese, these bulletins presenting a record of the general progress, commerce, laws, etc., of the various republics in the Union.

The Union has done much good in demonstrating to both North America and South America the possibility and desirability of more extended commerce and a fuller understanding among the Pan-American republics, and it is exerting a powerful influence in educating the world relative to the resources and possibilities of Latin America, and also in allaying the fears entertained by our neighbors to the southward that the United States might try to dominate the Western Hemisphere.

The Pan-American building ranks as one of the most beautiful public structures in the world. The building and grounds represent an outlay of $1,100,000, of which the American republics contributed $250,000 and Andrew Carnegie $850,000. The corner stone was laid May 11, 1908, and the building dedicated and occupied April 26, 1911. In a certain sense the capitol of all the American republics in the capital city of the United States, it is fitting that it should combine beauty and practical usefulness, being at once the home of the great principle of Pan-American unity and a practical office for the development of Pan-American commerce and friendship.

It is a combination of classical and Spanish architecture. On each side of the front, or eastern, approach to the building is a slightly sunken garden, surrounded by a marble coping and the plaza, or driveway, is ornamented with a marble balustrade. To the right and the left of the three great doors of bronze and glass is a heroic piece of statuary, the one to the right, or north, representing North America, and the one on the south representing South America. Above the North American group is a panel representing Washington's farewell to his generals. The corresponding panel on the south represents the meeting of San Martin and Bolivar, the liberators of South America. Over the northern panel is the eagle of North America, and over the southern panel is the condor of South America.

Within the entrance is a lofty vestibule, ornamented by four bronzes typifying Enlightenment, Love of Country, Law, and Concord. Through three great portals the vestibule opens upon a typical Latin-American patio, or courtyard, nearly sixty feet square. This courtyard is the most striking feature of the building, with its finely sculptured fountain in the center, the tiled flooring with Aztec and Incan figures representing the floorings of old palaces and temples of Latin-America, and its tropical plants and flowers, transporting visitors in a moment to the heart of the tropics. On the left of the entrance to the patio is the "peace tree," planted by President Taft and Mr. Carnegie when the building was dedicated, and which has grown and flourished luxuriantly since that time. The glass roof above the patio, operated by electricity, is closed in winter for the protection of the plants, but is open in summer. Around the wall, under the cornice, are the names of twelve of the most famous men of Pan-American history, and between the names of these heroes of the Americas are the coats of arms of the various American countries, including Canada.

In the rear of the patio is a wide corridor, used to exhibit products of the South American countries, and back of that is the main reading room and reference library of the Union. In that room also is a relief map of Latin America which gives an excellent idea of the physical characteristics of the southern republics. On the northern and southern sides of the building are comfortable, well-lighted offices for the workers. On the north side is the Columbus Memorial Library, containing fifty-five thousand volumes relating to history, travel, descriptive narrative, and statistics of the republics that may be consulted, free, by responsible persons.

On the second floor, which is reached from the vestibule by two grand stairways on either side of the patio, is a broad corridor in which hang the flags of the American republics and containing busts of heroes and patriots of the Pan-American nations.

This corridor opens upon the "Hall of the Americas," one of the most imposing rooms I have ever seen, and said to be the most beautiful room of its kind in the United States. It reminded me of the East Room in the White House; but it is much larger and more impressive, being one hundred feet long and about seventy feet wide, and containing very little furniture. This room is used for international conferences and other ceremonies and functions. One thousand persons can easily be seated within its limits. The windows on the western side, which look out on the terrace in the rear, are draped with curtains of royal purple, and bear the coat of arms and colors of the various American republics.

At the southern end of this hall is the room of the Governing Board of the Union, with twenty-one tall chairs grouped about a most beautiful oval mahogany table. Here the representatives of the twenty-one republics composing the Union gather once a month to consider affairs pertaining to the organization.

At the northern end of the hall is a similar room which is used as a committee room, or a dining room when necessary, there being near by a serving room connected with a kitchen in the basement. In the south corridor is a reception room opening into the Director General's office.

In the rear of the building is a beautiful Aztec sunken garden and pool, and presiding over the pool an enlarged figure of the famous "Sad Indian" of Azter mythology. Back of the garden is the Pan-American Annex, the Union having already outgrown its original quarters and built an annex for additional office room.

The building is open to visitors each week day, except Saturday from 9 A.M. till 4 P.M.

HOW DIVISION IS BROUGHT ABOUT, (David Lipscomb, in "Christian Unity.")

The great curse of the church of Jesus Christ is division. Christ foresaw that strifes and divisions would be the weakness of the church and the curse of the world. The church of Christ is the light of the world, the salt of the earth. Whatever weakens its power and destroys its influence, injures the world and ruins man. Jesus Christ foreseeing this, in the prayer in which he poured out his soul to God, besought earnestly that his disciples "might be one," that all who believe on him through the words of his apostles "may be one, even as we are one." He prayed that they might be one, "that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." It is clear that without that oneness among his children the world could never believe that he was sent by the Father-that is, that he was the Christ, the Son of God. Without this belief that leads to the acceptance of him as Lord and Savior, and the obedience to God through him, no man can see God in peace.

The apostles in their teachings, everywhere and at all times, condemned and warned against division and strife within the churches as the cause of weakness and inefficiency, of corruption and defilement, that unfitted them for temples of the Holy Spirit, that disabled them from saving their own members and from proving a savor of life to the world.

Christ warned: "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Paul said: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) He asks: "Is Christ divided?"

The church is the body—the spiritual body of Christ; and if Christ is not divided against himself, the members of his body cannot be. When his people divide and strive, they divide the body of Christ himself; they rend his spiritual body and sever its members from each other, and serve his spiritual body worse than his murderers did his fieshly body. His enemies pierced that body, but his children sunder the spiritual body in twain and sever it, member from member, part from part, and leave it torn and lifeless without power to save itself or others.

In every letter written by the apostles the sin of tivision is condemned; the danger is signaled and Christians forewarned against it as the sure premonition of death, The Master and the apostles not only warn against a danger so threatening and so fatal and fearful in its results, but they give directions how to avoid division and the way to promote and maintain unity. The Savior prayed that his disciples might be one, and he gave clear directions as to how they should remain one: "For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee. . . I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. . . . Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth. . . . Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." (John 17: 8-20.) The apostles also admonished them to speak the same thing; and the oneness of the word, which guides and directs all, secures the unity of the body, growing out of and guided by the word of the living God.

Notwithstanding the prayer and warning of the Savior, the entreaties and expostulations of the apostles, and the specific directions of Jesus and the Holy Spirit to maintain unity, the professed followers of Christ have been divided into striving parties from the beginning, often resulting in war and bloodshed. Many efforts, through the centuries, have been made at union, which have proved abortive.

About the beginning of the present century an effort was made to find ground on which all sincere worshipers of God could stand in unity and work together in harmony and love, for the honor of God and the salvation of man. The ground or fundamental basis of union was that all should lay aside all theories and practices based on human authority and standing in the wisdom of men, and in all religious service take the word of God as the only guide, and do only the things required in the teachings of Christ and the apostles. It was expressed in the adage: "Where the Bible speaks, we will speak; where the Bible is silent, we will be silent." If they were not to speak in matters of religion without Bible authority, much less could they act without Scripture direction. This meant that no one could teach or practice anything in religion not clearly taught in the Bible. All would do what the Rible required, and would ask of no one to do or submit to what it did not require. This bound all to the word of God-to what was commanded by the Lord. It bound them to do all that was taught, it bound them to reject everything in religion not taught, in the word of God. This would bring unity through the word of God, as the Savior taught it must come. For a time the effort at union on this basis seemed to work well. Men and women from all churches of Christendom and from no church came together on this basis, and, laying aside all theories and practices not required by the word of God, diligently sought to learn what that word required, and, guided by the things taught in the Bible, they walked in harmony and love, and success without precedent in modern times crowned their labors in calling men and women to Christ.

Of late years this unity of faith and harmony of action have been much disturbed. Divisions and discords, threatening the disruption of church and Christian fellowship, have entered in and have well-nigh destroyed the peace, and much weakened the effort of those seeking to unite all worshipers of God in the unity of the faith and in the bonds of love. This is a dire and fatal disaster to befall an effort so full of promise of good to man and of honor to the Lord and Master. Can we find the cause of this disaster?

From the beginning there have been two classes in the One class is disposed to strictly construe the church. Bible and to cling close to its teaching. This class, in all questions that arise, ask, What does the word of God re-And they restrain their practices and service within the requirements of the divine word. The other class, interpreting the word of God more liberally or loosely, ask, Is it forbidden? And what is not forbidden, they claim the right to practice. A little thought will show that one class walks by the requirements of the Bible, while the other walks in the wisdom of men. These do the things suggested by that wisdom, unless it is specifically forbidden by the word of God. The practices of one class necessarily spring from God and his holy word. No practice can be accepted with this class that does not come from God and that is not required by his holy word. God is the author of all religious service with this class. The other class looks largely to its own wisdom and the wisdom of men for authority and for guidance in things of religion, and anything man's wisdom approves may be used in religion unless specifically forbidden in the word of God. These paths rapidly diverge, and those walking in these diverging paths cannot walk together. They cannot live in unity and harmony,

These diverse ways of regarding the services of religion led to the first division among Christians. They have in all ages of the church led to divisions. In the days of Luther the question of infant baptism was raised. He asked, "Where is it forbidden?" and because not forbidden he retained it. The same question came up with the Campbells, father and son. They adopted the rule to practice only what was required. The son said to the father: "Infant baptism is not required in the Scriptures." He responded: "It must go, then." Under Luther's rule, he and Melancthon were forced to advise Philip of Hesse that bigamy is allowed because not specially pro-

Under this rule, many gross and hurtful perversions of the truth, as well as many sinful and corrupting practices, may be brought into the church because they are not specially prohibited in the Scriptures. This principle of interpretation releases men from a close adherence to the will of God as revealed in the Bible, and gives wide license to the introduction of human wisdom as the rule in the church and the life of a Christian. The substitution of human wisdom for the will of God subverts the church from the ends for which it was instituted.

"CHRISTMAS."

Dear Brother Allen: As there are various ideas exist-ing concerning Christmas, I desire to have some informa-tion concerning it. Even some of my brethren believe it to be the anniversary of the birth of Christ. I understand to be only a custom, and that we have no reliable autho be only a custom, and that we have no reliable authority to say what day Christ was born. I further believe that God in his infinite wisdom has purposely withheld this from man, knowing there would be those who would keep that day instead of the day which means so much to us—the first day of the week, the day of the risen Lord.

George T. Eubank.

We answer Brother Eubank's question with a few extracts taken from a sermon preached by Brother J. B. Nelson to the Johnson Street church of Christ, Greenville, Texas, on Lord's day, December 21, and reported in the Morning Herald of Christmas Day:

The word "Christmas" means a mass day for Christ. We learn from the Encyclopedia Britannica; "In 1644 the English Puritans forbade any merriment or religious services, by Act of Parliament, on the ground that it a heathen festival, and ordered it to be kept as a fast."

services, by Act of Parliament, on the ground that it was a heathen festival, and ordered it to be kept as a fast."

By many, Christmas is a festival of the nativity of Christ, and observed by many of the so-called Christian nations yearly on the 25th day of December. The beginning of Christmas was on this wise: Augustine considered the fact of Good Friday, and the festivals, Easter, Ascension, and Whitsuntide, as the only holy days which had an apostolic origin and the sanction of a general council. He deemed Christmas to be of later origin and lesser authority. When efforts were first made to fix the birthday of Christ, there were advocates of the 20th of May, 20th or 21st of April, and the 6th of January. The people (or Christians) of the Orient were strong for January 6.

We learn from New Scaff-Herzog Encyclopedia that Julian, the first Pope of Rome, who served A.D. 337-352, contended and fixed the 25th day of December as the birthday of Christ. The Eastern churches ultimately came to the teachings of the Western Church. The Western churches adopted the teachings of the Eastern Church that the baptism of Jesus was on the 6th of January. With the Western Church, or Roman Catholic, the observance of Epiphany, the coming of the Magi to Bethlehem to see the newborn babe, Christ, is so closely allied with Christmas that with many it is confusing.

The 25th of December was first observed as the birthday of Saint Nicholas, Bishop of Myra in Lycia (native of Patra in Lycia), Asia Minor. December 6 was first fixed as his festival day, but was later changed to December 25, which day was later fixed by the Pope as Christ's birthday.

We have already learned that the 25th day of December 25 birthday.

We have already learned that the 25th day of December was first observed as Christ's birthday in the third century, and substituting Christ for Saint Nicholas, the Bishop of Myra. By examining the Universal, Chambers', Britannica, and International Encyclopedias, we gather the following concerning old Saint Nicholas: "Santa Claus" is a corrupted name for "St. Nicholas." The Dutch in New Amsterdam celebrate Santa Claus holiday. St. Nicholas was called "Patron saint of Russia, seaports, children, poor maidens, and traders." His followers made great claims for him when he was born. One writer said: "On the day of birth he stood up in his bath with folded hands." Wonderful if it were so, but I am not ready to believe he did. He further says of him: "He ate only once on Wednesdays and Thursdays." Saint Nicholas must have been a very charitable man, but from what I have gathered he was not at all times very docile. At the council of Nice, 325 A.D., he struck the ear of Arius during a fit of temper. It is claimed that he worked miracles, quelled storms on sea, multiplied loaves, raised the dead, etc. He is the father of the pawnshop. He put up the three balls golden as an emblem because he gave clandestine gifts (secret gifts) to three penniless girls who had been sold into shame by their father. By his secret gifts he redeemed them from shame, slavery, and disgrace. So really the three balls golden stood as an emblem to the one who redeemed fallen characters and not for the redeeming of goods in pawn as used to-day.

Saint Nicholas died on December 6, 326 A.D. After he died, many of his dupes believed that his spirit came back each year on December 25 and would leave gifts to the poor. In order to perpetuate the deception, many of his followers of means would go from house to house of the poor and leave gifts on the doorsteps. Finally fathers and mothers took up the deceptive practice and would rush their little ones off early to bed, and telling them that if they had been good, old Saint Nicholas would come while they were asleep and leave them a gift.

Christmas giving has gone beyond the mere giving to the poor and has

Christmas giving has gone beyond the mere giving to the poor and has taken on the custom of exchanging gifts. There can be no wrong in exchanging gifts or giving to the poor, but I have never been able to see the wisdom of lying about it. Why tell your children a falsehood? Fa-thers and mothers should teach their children honesty, and to do such you must set the example.

I have never taught my children that Santa Claus I have never taught my children that Santa Claus would come down the chimney or through the keyhole and leave a gift. I have taught that their mother and I would play the part of Santa Claus and that during the night they would get a secret gift. They would be just as happy over their secret gift the next morning as the neighbor child that had been told something that was not so. When will our people throw off all the deceptive and deceitful practices of Rome? Make your gifts, but be honest in all you do and say.

Not a living man knows when Christ was born. The deceitful practices of Rome? Make your gifts, but be honest in all you do and say.

Not a living man knows when Christ was born. The Bible does not tell us just what month, week, and day Christ was born. We know what year he was born, but we cannot prove the exact month, week, or day. God never did intend for us to observe Christ's birthday, or else he would have been a little more explicit as to when he was born. I feel sure he was not born on the 25th day of December, because Luke 2: 8 tells us: "And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flock." Those who are acquainted with the history and geography of Palestine know that this was not in December.

Under the New Testament we are taught that those who are day observers are weak in the faith. (See Rom. 14: 1-5.) We are taught at this time, under the New Testament, not to observe days, months, or moons religiously, but to observe the body of Christ upon the first day of the week. (Col. 2: 15-17; Gal. 4: 8-12; Acts 20: 7.)

The Calvinists in Northern Europe discard all days except Sunday. To the child of God, one day is no more holy under the New Testament than any other day. We should refrain from as much secular work as possible and give ourselves over to working for the Lord, and that day is Sunday, the first day of the week, and not Saturday. The old Jewish Sabbath came to an end when Christ died upon the cross. (See Col. 2: 14; 2 Cor. 3: 1-12; Gal. 4: 21-31.)

We are here to preach the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, and not his birthday. It is rather strange that some people can tell the day Christ was born and the day he will come again, and cannot see the plainness and clearness of Acts 2: 38 and Rom. 6: 4; but such is the state of things.

I do not object to keeping a national holiday as set state of things.

I do not object to keeping a national holiday as set apart by our country, but I am not willing to keep days as religious holidays or in memory of some mortal man as some one divine. I am willing to respect and revere the memory of such men as Washington, Lincoln, Wilson, and others, but I am not willing to pay them any religious homage whatever. I will not worship the spirits of dehomage whatever. I will not worship the spirits of departed men. Only the Christ will I worship. (See Acts 17: 5.)

Man has ordained many days to be observed religiously, but the God of heaven does not give his stamp of approval to them.

Let us not drift from the good old book of God. read and learn its precepts and commands and follow them.

I am sure that will be the infallibly safe ground.

THE MANY-SIDEDNESS OF CHRIST.

Jesus challenges the attention of the world by his manysidedness. He meets the needs of all classes and conditions of men. As deep answereth unto deep, so does he respond to the movings of each soul of man.

Call the roll of the world's workers and ask, "What think ye of Christ?" Their answers amaze us by their revelation of the universal appeal of Christ. Some one whose name has been lost has collected the following examples of this universality.

To the artist he is the One Altogether Lovely. To the architect he is the Chief Corner Stone.

To the astronomer he is the Sun of Righteousness.

To the baker he is the Living Bread.

To the banker he is the Hidden Treasure.

To the biologist he is the Life.

To the builder he is the Sure Foundation.

To the carpenter he is the Door.

To the educator he is the Great Teacher.

To the farmer he is the Sower and the Lord of the Harvest.

To the florist he is the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley.

To the geologist he is the Rock of Ages.

To the horticulturist he is the True Vine.

To the judge he is the Righteous Judge, the Judge of all men.

To the jeweler he is the Pearl of Great Price.

To the lawyer he is the Counselor, the Lawgiver, the Advocate.

To the newspaper man he is the Good Tidings of Great Joy.

To the philanthropist he is the Unspeakable Gift.

To the philosopher he is the Wisdom of God.

To the railroad man he is the New and Living Way.

To the preacher he is the Word of God.

To the sculptor he is the Living Stone.

To the servant he is the Good Master.

To the statesman he is the Desire of all Nations.

To the student he is the Incarnate Truth.

To the theologian he is the Author and Finisher of our Faith.

To the toiler he is the Giver of Rest.

To the sinner he is the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world.

To the Christian he is the Son of the Living God, Savior, Redeemer, and Lord.

What is he to you?—Selected.

You are unable to explain the wonderful union of God and man in the nature of Christ; but are you more perfectly able to explain the wonderful union of matter and spirit in your own? Are you able to explain how it is that matter seems to be affected by the laws of spirit, so that the hands beckon, the feet walk, and the lips have language in obedience to the determinations of the intellect and will; or how is it that the spirit seems to be affected by the laws of matter, so that an afflicted body will sometimes make a clouded soul? In both cases you must believe, not on the ground of your ability to explain the thing in question, but on the ground of its support by appropriate evidence.-Stanford.

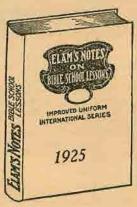

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market, Postpadd, 360, 75c; 550, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B. Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.50; 10,000 np, at 80c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, came price. Satisfaction guaranteed.

D. F. JAMISON, Summerville, S. C.

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x51/2 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complets cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living .-R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound.—N. B. Hardeman.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits.-H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to ma. -Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

HUNTER-SLOAN DEBATE.

BY D. H. KNIGHT.

The debate between Brother Willie Hunter (Christian), of Tompkinsville, Ky., and Elder A. J. Sloan (Baptist), of Lafayette, Tenn., closed on January 2, after continuing four days. The general church question was discussed, with Sloan affirming the first two days and Brother Hunter in the lead the last two days. The debate was held in the Baptist Church at Gamaliel, Ky.; and although the weather was very unfavorable, overflowing crowds were in attendance each day.

Many expressions were given in behalf of the victory for the truth that was gained in the debate. Many of the Baptists manifested and expressed dissatisfaction and defeat on the part of their man.

Sloan seemed to weaken from the first day, and floundering hopelessly from one foolish thing to another, boasting and blowing about his great ability as a debater, using their old sugar stick of slurring about "Campbellism," the old goat pen at Brush Run, Va., etc.

Brother Hunter pressed Sloan hard with many scriptural arguments put in a logical way and set forth in chart form on the board, many of which Sloan never attempted to answer. He was pressed throughout the debate to tell what baptism saves us from as mentioned in 1 Pet. 3: 21, but he never did answer. On the work of the Holy Spirit, he asserted that every time the Holy Spirit operates it makes a good old Missionary Baptist. Brother Hunter introduced to him Balaam's ass (Num. 22) as one of his brethren according to his own statement. And in many other awkward positions did he place himself during the discussion. But the blow that knocked him clear out was made the last day when Brother Hunter pressed him on apostasy; and, with many other scriptures on that point, he introduced Num. 25: 8; Gal. 5: 19; 1 Cor. 10: 8. Sloan said with much emphasis that if a child of God were to commit fornication and be killed in the very act, as shown in Num. 25, he believed he would go straight to heaven. The audience clearly manifested their disapproval of his statement. Even his own people were very much vexed at him for this assertion, and said that Sloan was tearing up the Baptist Church just as fast as he could.

Things went off very orderly, and we feel sure that much good was done. Elder C. B. Massey moderated for Sloan, and I moderated for Brother Hunter. Brother Hunter and I made our home with Brother S. B. Harlin, and we were very hospitably entertained by the brethren of Gamaliel and the visiting brethren.

I visited Tompkinsville over Sunday after the debate closed and preached on Sunday and Sunday night to large crowds. The church seems to be doing a good work there, and they seem pleased with Brother Hunter's work among them.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at homs at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, or gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

COMMERCE-UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

DEEP-SEATED

Need attention NOW or may remain all winter. Use the old and time-tried guaranteed treatment that has given satisfaction to millions of women for over 16 years, and rid yourself of these homely spots. Ask for

Othine-Double Strength

We recommend Othine Complexion Scap for use

At all Druggists and Department Stores. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds

Headache

Pain

Neuralgia

Toothache

Lumbago

Neuritis

Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions.

Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets—Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylleacid

MRS. WINSLOW'S

The Infants' and Children's Regulator

Formula on every label. Write for free booklet containing letters from mothers.

At All Druggists.

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., 215-217 Fulton St., New York

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

From the Brethren

Cordell, Okla., January 10.—The year 1924 was the banner year of my whole life's work. I begin the work for the year 1925 with a meeting in Weatherford, Okla., and I see another busy year ahead. I shall do the work the best I can. At the age of forty-seven years, with thirty years spent in the work of an evangelist, I feel that I am learning faster and growing stronger than at any previous period in my life. I thank God and take new courage. May he bless every faithful disciple and every righteous effort being made for man's redemption. May we all live closer to God and to each other.—J. Will Henley.

Clay, Miss., January 9.—Our church house burned down on January 4. This leaves us without any place of worship, except the private homes, in which we are going to meet till we can build another house. We have about forty members in our fellowship, and most of them are women. We are poor people in this world's goods, but we are going to build another house. We have met for worship every Lord's day for the last four years. We are now at work on the new house, and we feel that many congregations will help us some. We are just asking for a small contribution from each one. We have a deed with the restrictive clause in it. Please send your help at once to Brother Charles Nichols, Clay, Miss.—Billie Johnson and N. J. Rich, alders.

Decherd, Tenn., January 13.—I was with the Ridgedale congregation, in Chattanooga, on the first Lord's day in this month, and preached to two large crowds. One took membership. I preached for this congregation again last Lord's day, morning and night, and was also with them in the Bible drill on Friday night before. One lady was baptized and two took membership at the morning service. In the afternoon I was at Rossville and I had the pleasure of preaching to a large audience. I was glad to meet Brother Flavil Hall in this meeting. He preaches for the Rossville congregation twice a month. I also said a marriage ceremony at five o'clock the same afternoon. Brethren, let us work while it is day; for the night will come, when no man can work.—R. E. L. Taylor.

R. E. L. Taylor.

Stephenville, Texas, January 5.—
The last Lord's day in December closed my first year with the church here. I will not say it was the greatest year of the church, for I do not know, and it would appear that I was trying to call down on myself some earthly glory; but God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of Christ. Whatever success we have attained this year in Stephenville is attributed to the gospel of Christ. During the year there were between forty and fifty baptisms, some restorations, and some to take membership. We have had three meetings. In the first one I did the preaching in the second, Brother Lyle Price; and in the third, Brother R. E. L. Taylor. We are praying that 1925 may be a greater year than the one wants attention but a coughing child needs attention.

CRYING CHILD

Used and recommended since 1872

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

stops alarming croup coughs, eases stuffy, wheezy breathing, raises choking phlegm easily, allows restful sleep. Benefits both children and grown persons.

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day by Use of Virex, Formerly Known as Rattlesnake Oil

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattlesnake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

is meeting with water country.

Mr. D. Fey, a Nebraska resident, sixty-seven years old, says: "I have used the treatment for only two weeks, and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous, and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case many years' standing, is improving wonof many years' standing, is improving won-derfully."

Mr. Ben Jackson, who lives in Indiana, tys: "Before I used Virex I could hear nothing. After ten days, I could hear my watch tick."

Angeline Johnson, a Mississippi resident, had been stone deaf for eighteen years. She says: "Virex has stopped my head noises,

She says: "Virex has stopped my head noises, and I can hear the train whistle three and one-half miles away."

Roy Fisher, Iowa man, says: "I hadn't heard a watch tick for eleven years. Now I can lay my watch on the table and hear it plainly."

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says: "After being deaf thirty-eight years, I used your treatment only a few days, and hear your treatment only a few days, and hear your treatment only a few days, and hear

Mr. Anthony Chapman, of Michigan, says:
"The terrible head noises have stopped entirely, and my hearing is practically back to normal."

Deaf Baby Now Hears

Mrs. Ols Valentine, of Arkansas, says:
"My little boy, now five years old, had been deaf since about four months of age. Now he hears very well, and is learning to talk."
Mr. Mather Pelicys says: "My young son, deaf for years, has used Virex for only three days, and he hears almost as well as ever before."

before,"
Such amazing reports come from all over this country and Canada. The prescription, which is known as Virex, is easily used at home, and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.
So confident are we that Virex will restore so consident are we that virex will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory, the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and ad-dress to the Dale Laboratories, 1659 Gatedress to the Dale Laboratories, 1659 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of ten days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write to-day and give this wonderful compound a trial.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

just closed. I will have some time for meetings. If any one would like to have me assist in a meeting, please write me at once.—J. L. Pummill Clovis, New Mexico, January 8.— On the fourth Lord's day in December I preached my farewell sermon at Burkburnett, Texas, where I had been laboring with the church. I have a son who contracted tuberculosis right after the war, and his wife has con-tracted it from him. I closed my work at Burkburnett in order to look out a place that would be the best for them. place that would be the best for them. I am now at Clovis, and shall radiate from this point and preach the gospel of Christ where I have the opportunity of doing so. Sunday was a busy day with me. I preached in Clovis both morning and night and conducted funeral services thirty miles in the country in the afternoon. The church here at Clovis is having a hard pull just now, as they own some hard pull just now, as they owe some on their house of worship. There are but few members here, and all are poor laboring people. I was called but few members here, and all are poor laboring people. I was called over to Texico this afternoon to conduct a funeral, and I find that the little band of brethren there have no house at all. The brethren here at Clovis want to keep me in this field, and it can be done if all the churches over the State will help.—D. S. Ligon.

THE SWINNEY-BEESON DEBATE.

BY JOHN W. HEDGE,

Beginning on Monday, December 29, Brother Ulrich R. Beeson, of Waldo, Ark., engaged Mr. S. C. Swinney (Baptist) in a six-days' debate at Millville, Ark. There were two sessions each day. The design of baptism, salvation by faith without further acts of obedience, establishment of the church, how the Spirit operates in conversion, and apostasy were the subjects discussed. The attendance and interest increased from the start, and the Baptist meetinghouse soon proved to be too small to accommodate the audiences. I have attended a great many debates, but I have never seen a greater interest manifested than in this one. A fine spirit prevailed, not only on the part of the disputants, but the people in general.

This was Brother Beeson's first religious discussion, and the brethren were well pleased with his defense of the truth. Mr. Swinney has conducted ten religious discussions and is on a par with the average Baptist polemic.

During the debate Mr. Swinney was constantly heard to say: "Beeson preaches that one must belong to his church in order to be saved." This he did in order to enlist the sympathy of those belonging to other churches. After he had paraded this statement for four days, I put the following proposition before him: "The Scriptures teach that salvation is in the New Testament church." He signed it, and we met in discussion Sunday afternoon and at night. Hundreds of people heard the discussion.

RUN-DOWN WEAK, NERVOUS

Benefited by First Bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lancaster, Pa.—"After I was mar-ried I became terribly run-down and was weak and nervous. My sister-in-law told me to tree vous. My sister-in-law told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-pound. My husband got me a bottle at once, and it did me so much good that I kept on taking it. I began to feel well andstrong again and was able to do my housework up to the time my baby was born-a nice fat little girl in the best of health. I surely an recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends when they have troubles like mine, and I am perfectly willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial."

—Mrs. Frank H. Chimm, 533 Locust Street, Lancaster, Pa.

Women should heed such symptoms as pains, backache, nervousness, a run-down consisten and irregularity, as they indicate some form of female

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for all these troubles. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick. Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredients. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick rellef assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago sald to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 70c and $1.00.

MAYO'S SEEDS

Send us only 10c and we will mail you postpaid one packet each of the following:

Early Scarlet Turnip Radish Seed, White Spine Cucumber Seed, Mayo's Blood Turnip Beet Seed, Southern Giant Curled Mustard Seed, Black Seeded Simpson Lettuce Seed, Mayo's Special Mixture of Sweet Peas, with our illustrated catalog of Seeds for the South.

Or we will be glad to mail you our catalog and price list of Farm Seeds free on request. 45th year in Seed business.

D. R. MAYO

KNOXVILLE :: TENNESSEE

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

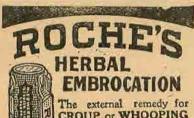

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Gas, Sourness, and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indi-gestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of bydro-chloric acid in the stomach, and not, as some believe, to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed, and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases, and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and, instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid, and there is no sourness, gas, or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take, and the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion. Artificial digestants are not needed in such

The external remedy for CROUP or WHOOPING COUGH that several generations of mothers have used successfully (since 1802). Roche's loosens the phlegorelieves quickly and safely. Equally effective for bronchitis and colds on the chest.

Always keep a bottle handy. All druggists or E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc. 90-92 Beekman St., New York

APPRINTED TO SAME

DO

mo

GOSPEL TENTS

Twenty-four years' experience, no hire, no overhead expense, and a burn-ing desire to aid the spread of the gospel are reasons why you can save so much money by ordering your tent from

W. G. WHITE, Nashville, Tenn. 1220 McChesney Ave.

CABBAGE PLANTS NOW READY—Early Jersey and Charleston Wakefield, Succession, and Flat Dutch. Prompt shipment. $1.50 per 1,000, postpaid. Porto Rico Potato Plants April I. Special prices made to dealers on large quantities.

W. L. MCCLELLAN, R. R. S, Adel, Ga.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

OBITUARIES

MOON.

On April 3, 1924, the sweet spirit of Mrs. S. A. Moon passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. J. Berrier. It was the chief joy of her life to tell others of her Savior. Only life to tell others of her Savior. Only a few months before, her beloved son, Earl Moon, went on before. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. T. J. Berrier; two sons, Dr. Moon and Ownus Moon, both of Birmingham, Ala. All that loving hands could do was done for her comfort, but God had need of just such a flower to plant in his garden. ONE WHO LOVED HER.

MOUNT.

MOUNT.

Miss E. J. Arnold was born on April 8, 1853, in Rutherford County, Tenn.; was married to J. B. Mount on December 14, 1869, near Murfreesboro, Tenn.; obeyed the gospel about the year 1877; and passed away on the morning of April 4, 1924. She leaves a husband, three sons, two daughters, and eight grandchildren to mourn their loss. One daughter passed away on January 3, 1924. She obeyed the gospel in her youth. Brother Hassell said words of consolation at both funerals. lation at both funerals.

J. B. MOUNT.

OWEN.

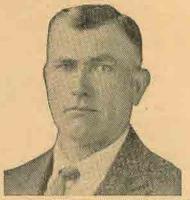

On August 12, 1924, the Lord saw fit to call away from this world of sorrow the sweet and gentle spirit of Sister Ethel Burris Owen, the beloved wife of Henry Owen, of Jefferson-ville, Ind. We sorrow over the departure of this dear one, but not as others who have no hope, for we believe that she is safe in the arms of Jesus. She was a good women, a lieve that she is safe in the arms of Jesus. She was a good woman, a good wife, a good mother, and though she was called in the bloom of life, at the age of thirty-five, she did many, many things to prepare herself for that rest which remaineth to the people of God. She leaves behind a husband, three stepchildren, seven small children of her own, besides her father, mother, six brothers, four sisters, and a host of relatives and friends. After a splendid talk by Brother Todd at the home of her mother, the body was carried to its final resting place to await the resurfinal resting place to await the resur-rection morn. MABEL BURRIS.

CHASTINE.

CHASTINE.

On October 21, 1898, there was born to Jim Chastine and wife a son, Vadus Chastine. He was born and reared in Marion County, Ala. To his parents he was at all times obedient and submissive. On the fourth Lord's day in July, 1917, under the preaching of A. D. Dies, he was born into God's family, and it can truly be said that he walked in newness of life until death. He attended the Marion County High School, mastered his lessons, and won to himself a host of friends. He next attended school at Auburn, Ala., and would have graduated in 1925; but having an attack of appendicitis, he started to Montgomery, Ala., for an operation, but was forced to stop at Opelika, where

Culberson's Studio

How's Your Stomach? -and Your Liver?

Here's Advice for You

Greenville, S. Car.—"To those who suffer with stomach trouble and liver ills I would say, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets if you wish to get rid of these ailments. For a long time I suffered with gastric stomach time I suffered with gastric stomach trouble, my digestion was bad, gas would form and cause distress. I was constipated and my liver was sluggish and inactive. I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and they relieved me of all these conditions. They are the best regulator of the stomach, liver and bowels that I have ever taken."—J. M. Key, 35 Burdette St.

Obtain the "Pellets" now in small Obtain the "Pellets" now in small glass vials from your druggist, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg.

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00.

Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)

A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North Phone, 1523-R.

Send for our beau-L tiful illustrated new SEED CATALOGUE FREE Tucker-Mosby Seed Co., Memphis, Tenn.

MAKE $40 TO $60 WEEKLY

also cash bonus and prizes—taking orders for our low priced, toop quality, tailored-to-measure suits and topcoats in $18.50

TAILORED and Suits and Overcoats
All-wool fabries; choice $28.50 of 125 paterns; "Lar $28.50
of 125 paterns; "Har $28.50
of 125 paterns; "Har $28.50
of 125 paterns; "Har $28.50
of 125 paterns; "Ar $28.50
of 125 paterns; "Har $28.50
of 125 paterns; "Ar $28.50
of 125 pa

FREE selling outfit to qualified sales-

WHOLESALE智慧 Dept. 513, 83-89 Ellicott Street, BUFFALO :: :: N. Y. he died on May 8. He was buried at the White House, ten miles southwest of Haleyville. A large crowd of friends and relatives were present.

Brother W. R. Wilcut, of Bear Creek, and the writer conducted the service.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

TIM WALKER.

DEAN.

DEAN.

John Granville Dean was born near Caney Spring, in Marshall County, Tenn., on June 9, 1854. He was married to Miss Lillie Mai Dodson on September 19, 1877. To this union were born six children, four boys and two girls. All survive him. He obeyed the gospel at Riggs, and lived a faithful Christian for over forty years till called to come up higher on July 21, 1924. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Elder E. P. Watson, assisted by A. C. Williams and J. W. Darnell. His remains were laid to rest in the Caney Spring cemetery. The community has lost a good citizen. There is a vacant place at Cedar Dell, where he attended church, and another home is a vacant place at Cedar Dell, where he attended church, and another home is made void by his departure, but he will be missed most by his loving companion. To the bereaved ones we would say that there is a bright star of hope shining behind the dark cloud of sorrow. Dear children, let each of you try to follow his example as a Christian, and try to so live that you may meet where there is no sorrow known.

MRS. G. H. WALKER.

YOUNGBLOOD.

YOUNGBLOOD.

Charles Youngblood was born on May 6, 1882. He was married on February 16, 1908, to Savannah Washburn. To this union two boys (Gaston and Kenneth) were born. While visiting Sister Youngblood's parents, Brother Youngblood suddenly died, on August 26, 1924, of heart failure. All thought him in the best of health, and it was an awful shock to his family and other relatives and friends when word came that "Brother Charlie Youngblood is dead." Brother Youngblood obeyed the gospel in May, 1922, under the preaching of Brother Z. D. Barher. He enjoyed so much his privilege of attending the services of our Lord. Brother Youngblood was a loyal Christian, a kind and loving father, and was loved by all who knew him. Sister Youngblood, with her two boys and Brother Youngblood's father, are making their home at Little Rock, Ark., where they lived at the time of Brother Youngblood's death. May God's richest blessing rest upon them.

A. SISTER. est blessing rest upon them.

A. SISTER.

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

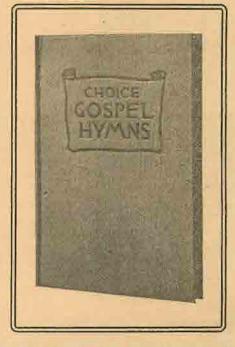

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When an-swering their ads, mention this paper.

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding ____$0.40 Per copy, cloth binding $0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy.....$0.80 | Per 50, per copy......27
Per dozen, per copy 28 | Per 100, per copy.....25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

For the treatment of non-contagious chronic allments by improved naturo-pathic methods. Neuritis, neurasthenia, high blood pressure. Excellent cli-mate. Pleasant surroundings. Good food and care. Moderate charges. Write us about your trouble. Pamphlets free.

No Home Treatment, Nothing to Sell but Service

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid.

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

The clearest and simplest book of its kind published Price, 20 cents single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid SUNDALE SERMONS. No. 2. BY W. N. ABERNATHY.

ELDERS' DUES AND DUTIES.

This is the conclusion, in brief, of an unfinished sermon delivered for my home congregation on November 23. As the heading is arranged with regard to euphony, I prefer to reverse the order and first discuss the duties of the elders.

As shepherds, they are to feed the flock. No more can a congregation of Christians thrive without pure spiritual nourishment provided in a regular, systematic way than a flock of sheep can thrive in a dry pasture overgrown with noxious shrubs. So the elder must "be apt to teach." Not only must he be well informed in the Scriptures, but he must have adaptability for the work. There are different methods of teaching, and he should be able to adjust himself to the ones that may be most practical in his particular case.

Again, the wise shepherd leads his flock in preference to driving them. The elder is not to "lord it over God's heritage." He is an example, and not a master. It is true that he is spoken of as ruling, but it is with a guiding hand rather than a scourge. He must deport himself so that the flock will have confidence to follow him. He must have "a good report." His life must be an open book, for sheep will not follow a stranger.

As "pastors," they must be watchful, vigilant, ever on the lookout for an enemy or a straggling lamb. "Grievous wolves" are on the alert, ready to scatter and devour. Silly lambs will wander away, and sometimes older ones will become entangled in sinful meshes. Sometimes heretical diseases will break out, and skill may be required to administer the proper remedies. It is dangerous for those who have the care of God's precious ones to lie down in the shade of idleness. They should watch the skies for signs of approaching storms of infidelity and be prepared to lead the flock to shelter. Lucrative streams are often enticing, but they usually lead into miry bogs and dismal swamps where spirituality cannot survive. Hence, the elder must not be "greedy of filthy lucre." Of course, this does not mean that he should shun the verdant plains of thrift and economy where usefulness can be augmented by honest possessions.

As "overseers," they must manifest executive ability and business talent. The church is God's workshop, and all hands must be kept employed to the best advantage. An idle hand means discontent among the workers. Those unskilled in the work of the Lord must be trained, or there will be loss on spiritual capital.

Duties to the Elders. "Rebuke not an elder, but exhort him as a father." (1 Tim. 5: 1.) In Heb. 13 we are commanded to be in submission to those who are watching over our spiritual welfare. Those who ostracize themselves from the care of the eldership are living in rebellion against the great Shepherd and Bishop of their souls. They are prodigals to the spiritual family. They imperil their own spiritual welfare and bring disrepute upon the family name. They are wasting their inheritance, but do not realize their condition. They are feeding with the swine, but do not know that their souls are perishing. They are poorly clad, yet they care not for the precious robe of the loyal-saint.

We are to regard those appointed to our spiritual guardianship very tenderly for their work's sake. We should not look up to them in an idolatrous way, but respect them with parental reverence. The more genuine respect we show a devout, Godgiven elder, the more humble he will feel. The devoted parent never feels despotic toward a dutiful child.

Paul, in giving instructions to Timothy, commanded that the elders who give their time continually to the oversight and teaching of the congregation should be supported in a financial way. Any industrial or business enterprise that does not have constant supervision will suffer. The church is no exception. If those who are appointed to direct its affairs are compelled to give their time to secular employment to support themselves and families, much of the work of the church will be neglected. Just think of what would be the result if each and every congregation of disciples had one or more scripturally qualified elders giving their entire time to the work! Let us pray the Lord of the harvest that he may send forth laborers.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Nurture your mind with great thoughts.

Hatred is as dangerous to the soul as smallpox is to the body.

I account the Scriptures of God to be the most sublime philosophy.

Heaven does not send in the bill every Saturday, but the bill is sent in.

We have to know a good many people to become well acquainted with ourselves.

God pardons like a mother who kisses the offense into everlasting forgetfulness.

What this country needs is more paint on the old place and less paint on the young face. To educate a man without the Bible is like placing a repeating rifle in the hands of a savage.

Be careful to land little fish first, and by and by a big fish will bite; then all your experience with the little fish will come in handy.

When the other fellow storms, you remain silent. When trying circumstances confront you, you smile and think hard. These thoughts will help you out of many difficulties.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

No Cold Fever headache or grippe

Colds break in a day for the millions who use Hill's. Headache and fever stop. La Grippe is checked. All in a way so reliable that druggists guarantee results. Colds are too important to treat in lesser ways.

All druggists WILL'S Price 30c

CASCARA QUININE

Get Red Box COMIO with portrait

A FOUNTAIN PEN

Almost every one wants a first-class Fountain Pen. It is a great convenience and a timesaver. It is always ready to write the right thing. We have bought at a bargain a Self-Filler Fountain Pen—one with a clip for men and one with a ring for women. These Pens are as good as any $2.75 Fountain Pen. We are furnishing this Pen with the Gospel Advocate for one year at the exceedingly low price of $3.65. This is by far the best Fountain Pen we have ever offered to the readers of the Gospel Advocate. The value of the Pen with the Gospel Advocate for one year is $4.75. Our price to you, $3.65. The Pen is guaranteed. Specify whether a lady's or gentleman's Pen is wanted. Mabie-Todd Co., the oldest Fountain Pen manufacturers, make the Pen.

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Gospel Advocate Company,

Nashville, Tenn.

BRETHREN: Inclosed you will find $3.65, which will pay my subscription for one year to the GOSPEL ADVOCATE and entitle me to the Fountain Pen.

entitle me to the Fountain Pen.
Name
Post Office
Route	State

192

PLEASE DO NOT OVERLOOK PLACING YOUR MONEY IN THE ENVELOPE WITH YOUR ORDER

ORDER BLANK

FOR

BIBLE LESSON HELPS

Please enter the follow	wing order to be s	ent to the address below:	er semma
Formonths, from		192, to	, 192
Name
P. O
County		_ State
Remittance inclos	sed in payment of	this order, $
NO STAI	NDING OR	DERS TAKEN
ELAM'S NOTES FO	R 1925 ve or More to One A	@ 85 cents per copy, ddress, Each)	$
ADVANCED QUART	FERLY, 64 pages we or More to One A. (Single Copy, 20c Per	@ 12 cents per quarter ddress, Each) r Quarter)	,$
INTERMEDIATE Q	UARTERLY, 32 power or More to One A	ages @ 6 cents per quarter, ddress, Each)	$
PRIMARY QUARTE	CRLY, 32 pages we or More to One A	@ 6 cents per quarter ddress, Each)	, $
LITTLE JEWELS (F	mailed quarterly) ive or More to One A (Single Copy, 20e Pe	@ 12 cents per quarter ddress, Each) r Quarter)	, $
OF	ve or More to One A	hly) @ 15 cents per quarter, ddress, Each) eign, 30c Per Quarter, $1.00 Per	ereconnic
LESSON LEAVES	ve or More to One A	@ 5 cents per quarter, ddress, Each)	, $
SETS LESSON PIC	TURE CARDS	@ 4 cents per quarter, ddress, Each)	$
LESSON PICTURE	CHARTS	@ $1.00 per quarter,	$
CLASS BOOKS (7 ce	ents each)	@ 75 cents per dozen,	$
SUNDAY-SCHOOL I	RECORD (for ent	ire year) $2.50 per copy,	$
COLLECTION ENVI	ELOPES	@ 75 cents per dozen,	ş
Total			$
**************		**********************
******************	***********
	9 9

Literature should be ordered to expire with the end of the quarters. Quarters begin January, April, July, and October; expire March, June, September, and December.

Remit by Post-Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or Express Money Order, otherwise at the sender's risk.

CAREFULLY EXAMINE YOUR ORDER BEFORE MAILING
Cut Out Order Blank and Mail To-Day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criticism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fall of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)
- "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use," (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartly recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sundayschool literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly commend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)
- wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

 "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, scriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Querteries for years."
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

Volume LXVII. No. 5.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JANUARY 29, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT OUR CONTRIBUTORS A Great Meeting—Hall L Calhoun's Statement of His Position—Notes from West Tennessee—Commendatory —"The Seven-Day Christian"—An Explanation—An Agreement Made, but Broken—The Open Door.
OUR MESSAGES EDITORIAL Pharisaism—Speculation Gone to Seed—When Was the Law Abolished?—Notes from Washington.
HOME READING QUERY DEPARTMENT-
Located in Mississippi—The East Tennessee Mission Field OBITUARIES Johnson—Kirk—Wilson—Roberts—McCorkle.	112
Public Workers . Work Among the Colored Brethren . A Latter from Brother Unbernan	117

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

A. S. Landis, of Macon, Ga., sends us a clipping containing an announcement of the subjects of a series of sermons by Dr. William Russell Owen, "pastor of the First Baptist Church," of that city, that betrays a morbid effort to attract notoriety by trying to be sensational, thus:

It is expected that Dr. William Russell Owen, pastor of the First Baptist Church, this city, will return Saturday night from Owensboro, Ky., and on Sunday evening he will deliver the first of a series of sermons that has been announced by him. The series of sermons will relate to the life of loved ones after death.

It is announced that the first of the series of sermons will be on the theme, "What Happens After the First Ten Minutes After Death." Owing to the peculiar nature of the sermon and that a great many people are interested in this question, it is possible that a large congregation will gather to hear Dr. Owen's discussion. It is announced that scriptural truths will be presented to support all the statements made in the sermons.

The remaining series of sermons will be delivered on the following dates:

January 25: "How Shall We Spend the First Day After Death?" February 1: "What Will Be the First Week's Program After Death?"

February 8: "What New Things Will Our Loved Ones Learn the First Year After Death?" February 15: "Do Our Loved Ones Know Anything About Hell? Is There a Purgatory?" February 22: "How Will the World Come to an End?"

It seems that preaching on sensational things concerning the first few minutes after death is getting to be worse than an epidemic among Baptist "pastors." Baptist "pastor" Powell, of this city, recently took a fling at "The First Three Minutes After Death," and this caused Brother Srygley to very appropriately remark that people had better be giving their attention to "the last three years before death."

The Gospel Advocate will heartily indorse everything that any of these "pastors" can read word for word in the Bible on any of these subjects. But they must read it. We indorse anything on any subject that anybody can read. We want no comments, theorizing, guessing, speculating, exegesis, or elucidation. Bible ideas can be expressed in Bible words; and if the words are not there, the idea is not. We accept just what they can read in the Bible, nothing more, nothing less. Nothing else is worth the time it takes to tell it.

But the very advertisement of such subjects betrays an anxiety to do something that will attract notoriety and put the "pastor" in the spot-light that is at once comical and pathetic. Big men lean to that which is practical and that has an application to the realities of life. But then big men do not hunt the spot-light; the spot-light has to always hunt them.

A "pastor" who is smart enough to tell what is going to happen "the first three minutes after death" ought to be smart enough to tell sinners what to do to be saved. Still, it does not work that way. The things upon which Jesus predicated the salvation of "every creature" are presented in the Scriptures with such simplicity and plainness that "the wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." If preachers would cease speculation and sensationalism and preach the gospel as it was preached by inspired men, untold thousands would "go on their way rejoicing" in the forgiveness of their sins, to live the life that makes this world happier and brighter and that leads to life everlasting in the world to come.

0 0 0

J. C. Tuley, of the Lindsley Avenue congregation, Nashville, Tenn., calls our attention to an Associated Press dispatch from New York, published in a Nashville daily, as follows:

Arthur Nash, clothing manufacturer—"Golden Rule" Nash, of Cincinnati—diagnosed the Christian church's ailment as "denominational cussedness," rather than "consciousness," and subscribed to a proposed fund to be spent in "making the churches Christian."

He was one of the speakers at the Universalist laymen's He was one of the speakers at the Universalist laymen's dinner, where a campaign for a fund of $1,000,000 was opened. This fund, to be subscribed over a five-year period, is to be spent in rehabilitating the church's property in Japan, augmenting the superannuated pastors' fund, and in the construction of a National church in Washington, D. C.

Putting his check for $1,000 on the table, Mr. Nash said he would add $99,000 to the amount at the rate of $20,000 a year for five years if other churchmen of any denomination would raise $900,000. He purposed that this fund be spent in the advancement of the brotherhood movement throughout the United States, irrespective of creed or denomination.

While we wish to commend the business conduct of any man who endeavors to practice the Golden Rule in his dealings with his fellow men, we beg to kindly observe that Mr. Nash does not seem to have a clear conception of what constitutes the Christian religion. And while we cannot approve, from a standpoint of Christian purity of speech, such expressions as "denominational cussedness," at the same time we very heartily wish to approve the statement that the denominations are a curse to the world. The church that was founded by Christ cannot be a denomination of anything, as it alone stands upon the divine foundation "that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God," and exists by divine authority. This church, of which we read in the New Testament, is the body of Christ. "And gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1: 22, 23.) "And he is the head of the body, the church." (Col. 1: 18.) "For his body's cake, which is the church." (Col. 1: 24.) Christ has but one body, or church. "So we, who are many, are one body in Christ, and severally members one of another." (Rom. 12: 5.) "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of the body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ." (1 Cor. 12: 12.) "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as also ye were called in one hope of your calling." (Eph. 4: 4.) All Christians are members of this one body, or church, and have no scriptural authority to be members of anything else. This one body, or church, is the house, or family, of God. "That thou mayest know how men ought to behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." 1 Tim. 3: 15.) The same thing that makes a man a Christian, or child of God, makes him a member of the family, or church, of God. All of God's children are members of God's family. The church includes all Christians. Any religious body that does not include all Christians is not the church of Christ and is unscriptural and sinful.

For considerably over half a century the Gospel Advocate has been interested in "making the churches Christian." The Gospel Advocate recognizes it as a good sign when men like Mr. Nash come to realize "that the churches are not Christian." Few, if any, professional "pastors" of popular churches have ever been guilty of preaching a gospel sermon. The Christianity of the New Testament is unknown and unheard of among their churches. What sinners must do to be saved is never told with their consent from their pulpits. No man is a Christian preacher who refuses to preach what Christ and the apostles preached, and no religious body of people is Christian that teaches or preaches more or less than what was taught and preached by inspired men.

But Mr. Nash himself does something unchristian in attempting to propagate Universalism, as Universalism and Christianity are separate and distinct things. No man can be a Universalist, a Baptist, a Methodist, or anything else not known in the New Testament, without being something more or less than a Christian. Christianity existed before Universalism, Baptistism, Methodism, and such like, and will continue to exist when they have passed away. Mr. Nash errs again in thinking the gospel can be preached by money. Starting a campaign to raise a fund of $1,000,000, or any other amount of money, is one of the best ways available not to make the world Christian. And while we wish to commend the liberality of Mr. Nash in "putting his check for $1,000 on the table," and promising more on a back-fire condition, we regret that so smart a man knows so little about how to preach the gospel. Any effort to put preaching the gospel on a money basis breeds corruption by attracting men who are more interested in being paid than they are in doing the preaching. "Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together," and any man who can be hired to preach can be hired to quit preaching. Any man who is not moved to preach by a burning desire to do God's will and to save souls, feeling that "woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel," will greatly assist in "making the world Christian" by stepping out of the pulpit and never entering it again until he feels that he is compelled to preach, money or no money.

There can be no doubt that drives for huge funds hinder instead of help the advancement of the gospel. Such a fund, in its very nature, constitutes a sort of boodle and breeds corruption by building up an ecclesiastical "pie brigade" on the hunt for easy jobs with big salaries and high honors. And it is also true that when the emphasis is thus put on money, instead of on men, the invariable tendency is toward a corporation that stifles individual effort and personal responsibility, and to build up mannade institutions that rob the churches of their power and leave them nothing to do but to pay. The early Christians did their work simply as members of the church, "in the name of the Lord Jesus;" and Christians to-day cannot do their work scripturally in any other way. Any organization larger than a local congregation stifles that individual effort, personal consecration, and that sense of personal responsibility by which godly men and women have preached the gospel from the beginning. Million-dollar funds, big salaries, costly edifices and moneyed institutions and corporations do not harmonize with the spirit of the Man of sorrows and Friend of sinners, who had not where to lay his head, and cannot be successfully employed in the work of preaching his gospel to "every creature."

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us for sample copies of Bible Lesson Helps.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once.

Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"Salvation from Sin," by David Lipscomb, is a most excellent book. This book contains the cream of his editorials, and will be found helpful to all who read it. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

"The Gospel Plan of Salvation," by Dr. T. W. Brents, is a book that does not wear out with age. All who have read it say that it is a great production and the best book of a master mind. Price, $2.50.

Every church should know its membership. In order to keep informed as to the residence and membership of your church, you should have a church record. Our Church Record is the very thing you need. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

If you are wanting a first-class hymn book, send us your order for "Choice Gospel Hymns." We publish only first-class music books, and books that are filled up with inspiring hymns. We are very much opposed to this jazz music that is destroying the spirituality of the churches.

The second edition of "Travels in Bible Lands," by Andy T. Ritchie, is selling fast. It is pronounced by all who have read it as being the best book ever written on travels in the Holy Land. It is illustrated and contains 335 pages. Cloth bound. Price, $1.50, postpaid, to any address. Send for your copy to-day.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

A GREAT MEETING.

BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

At the request of the president and other members of the board of trustees of Freed-Hardeman College, I am giving an account of a meeting held at Henderson, Tenn., on January 1, in the interest of this school. Although the weather was exceedingly unpleasant, the second largest number of brethren we have ever had at a meeting of this kind assembled on the above-named date. The following States were represented: Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama. All eleven members of the board of trustees were present, except one who was detained on account of sickness in his family.

This meeting was called for the purpose of planning greater things for the school. In a very strong and forceful speech, Eph. P. Smith, of Martin, Tenn., president of the board of trustees, reviewed the history of the school since it was turned over to a board of trustees five or six years ago. He told of obstacles it had encountered, of hardships it had endured, of the opposition it had met, and then of its success in spite of these difficulties. He warmly indorsed the administration of W. C. Hall and C. P. Roland for the past two sessions, spoke of the sacrifices they had made for it, and of their unselfish devotion to its interests. He then declared that the purpose of the meeting was to plan for bigger and better things for the school and to take advantage of some great opportunities that were before it. He stated that there was a demand upon the part of members of the board and others that Brother N. B. Hardeman, whose name the school bears, should again be connected with it if he could be induced to do so. He then called upon Brother Hardeman to take the floor and tell them how he felt in regard to this proposition, and also to set before the assembly another matter of great importance and interest to the school and brotherhood. Whereupon he arose and in his smooth and polished manner began a speech which thrilled the hearts and brought tears of joy to the eyes of those present. He mentioned his former connection with the school, of how he had labored for its upbuilding, of the sacrifices he had made for it, of how he had given it in dollars and cents a large part of all his possessions; that when he went out of it nearly two years ago he promised to be its friend and work for its interest; that he had faithfully kept that promise, being more interested and working harder for it, if possible, than while he was in it. He then said that while it would mean another great sacrifice in freedom, money, and other things, yet he was willing to return to the school if the brethren thought it was best for the cause we love.

Brother Hardeman then told of a visit that was made him last September while in a meeting with Brother F. W. Smith at Franklin, Tenn., of Brother Hall L. Calhoun, of the Bible department of Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va., the school founded and built up by Alexander Campbell. In their conversation, Brother Calhoun expressed his desire to become associated with those of us who are trying to preach and practice those things, and those only, that are expressly taught in the New Testament. The brief conversation they had on this occasion was followed by a correspondence from which it was soon learned that Brother Calhoun had fully decided to sever his connection with Bethany College, and with those who practice instrumental music and use human societies to spread the gospel, and take his stand with those who oppose them. Knowing of his great scholarship, his profound knowledge of the Bible, his ability as a teacher, and his years of experience in the schoolroom, it occurred to Brother Hardeman that it might be possible to get him to come to Freed-Hardeman College. He mentioned this in a letter to Brother Calhoun, and found that he was willing to take the matter under consideration. So a conference was arranged between them, and they met at the Watterson Hotel, Louisville, Ky., on December 22, with Brother M. C. Kurfees present, and went over the whole situation. The result of it all was the calling of the meeting of which I am writing to consider the matter. As I have already said, there was present at this meeting a large delegation of representative brethren, including several preachers, from five different States. As Brother Hardeman told them of Brother Calhoun's determination to leave the "digressives," read to them his clear and simple statement of faith in God and his word, and of his willingness to become connected with Freed-Hardeman College, tears of joy and gratitude to God filled their eyes and ran down their cheeks.

President Smith, of the board of trustees, then called upon Brethren Hall and Roland, who have been at the head of the school for the past two years, to express themselves with reference to the proposed change. Whereupon both of them, with wonderful unselfishness and magnanimity, declared their approval of it and their willingness to occupy any position which the board thought best for the school, whether in it or out of it, and pledged their loyal support and hearty cooperation. The assembly then voted unanimously to request the board of trustees to engage H. L. Calhoun and N. B. Hardeman to be connected with the school in the future. The president then called an executive session of the board and passed a resolution to turn over the school to Hardeman and Calhoun to run, with the understanding that they were to retain Brethren Hall and Roland in the faculty. Those present subscribed several thousand dollars to guarantee all necessary expenses connected with the running of the school for the next session.

The joy, zeal, enthusiasm, and unity that characterized this meeting was worth going miles to see. One brother said it was "the greatest day" in his life. The meeting adjourned with every one happy and feeling like Peter on the mount of transfiguration: "Lord, it is good to be here."

Read Brother Calhoun's statement.

HALL L. CALHOUN'S STATEMENT OF HIS POSITION.

(Letter from H. L. Calhoun to N. B. Hardeman.)

I believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God, true in its statements of facts, authoritative in its commands, and that it is our only and all-sufficient rule of faith and practice; that it needs no additions and allows no subtractions; that it is sufficient in its teaching to perfect a man and to thoroughly furnish him unto all good works. I believe that the Christian religion is a matter of faith, and that faith comes by hearing the word of God, and that the Christian walks by faith, and that in Christianity whatsoever is not of faith is sin. I believe that in the church of Christ the worship is prescribed inclusively and exclusively; that we are told what to do in our worship, and that these are the things we must do, and that we may not change them either by addition, subtraction, or substitution. I do not believe that instrumental music is any part of the ordained worship of God or that it is permissible to use it as worship. My observation of its use leads me to believe that it tends toward formalism and show, and that it leads away from and hinders rather than helps the true and spiritual worship. I believe that humanly organized missionary societies lead to ecclesiasticism and human authority in religion, and that their use is not a help but a hindrance to the progress of the truth. I believe that destructive criticism and evolution are trying to overthrow Christianity, and that instrumental music and humanly organized missionary societies are seeking to corrupt it. For some years my associations have been such as to afford me excellent opportunities to observe the workings of all these forces. was a time when I hoped that these things might be put away from among us, and that as a united brotherhood we might go on together in our work and worship; but these hopes have been disappointed, and I have reached a point where I desire to be associated with those only who are content to work and worship as the New Testament directs. I have always believed and preached the simple gospel to the best of my ability. It is my earnest wish to spend the remainder of my days working for pure New Testament Christianity among those who are of similar faith and practice. My heart has ached many times over departures and divisions which I was powerless to prevent, however hard I tried. For some years I have not felt at home, nor have my associations been congenial. Hence, I have reached the point where I am resolved to associate myself with those who are standing for those things only for which we can give a plain "Thus saith the Lord."

I have been free during all these years to teach and preach just what I have believed, and I have the strongest possible personal assurances that I could continue to be as free in the future, and that my services are desired. My financial support has been liberal. I am seeking to fulfill all promises and agreements, so that my change may not be subject to just criticism. I can truly say that, "with malice toward none and charity for all," I am humbly seeking to do what I believe Jesus would have me do. I am seeking to make my change without occasioning any strife, believing that the servant of the Lord should not strive, but be gentle toward all men, in meekness instructing those who oppose themselves.

Brother M. C. Kurfees and I have known for more than a year of this contemplated step on the part of Brother Calhoun, and have encouraged him in every way we could. We recognize in Brother H. L. Calhoun one of the ablest preachers and ripest scholars to be found anywhere, a man who believes the word of God, and who has done valiant service in battling against the "destructive" critics. The school at Henderson, Tenn., should be congratulated on procuring the services of Brother Calhoun.

Brother J. C. McQuiddy, who also knew of the course Brother Calhoun intended to pursue, offered him a position on the Gospel Advocate, knowing his ability as a writer and teacher of God's word. I most heartily extend to our brother my best wishes and pledge my coöperation in standing for the simplicity of the gospel against all F. W. SMITH. human inventions.

"THE SEVEN-DAY CHRISTIAN." BY S. H. HALL.

The following words by Leander Christian, under the heading, "The Seven-Day Christian," are so very good that they should be passed on for a larger reading:

Sunday Christians are numerous, who seem to forget that they are Christians when there is business to be transacted in the six days between Sundays. The witness of their lips is good, but it is not borne out by that of their lives. These belong to the class of whom Jesus spoke when he said: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?" But he will bid them depart, because they work iniquity. Their religious profession is good, but they do not live lives to back it up and give it power. Sunday Christians are numerous, who seem to forget

There are a still greater number of half-Sunday Christians, who attend one religious service, and are then off for the day about pleasure seeking of some sort. Some of these go to Sunday school only; others, to the young people's meeting only; some to the morning worship and sermon; others, to evening worship only. They gravely argue that one service is "enough," as if it were an unargue that one service is "enough," as if it were an un-pleasant ordeal, to which one should add nothing above the smallest requirements. Such attendants never build up a congregation; such members never do much to strengthen a church. There has to be constant interest and a certain eager appetite for the things of God to build up a Christian; without this desire, one will remain weak and sickly in spiritual things.

weak and sickly in spiritual things.

The seven-day week Christian is the one that has influence. He is living a Christian life all the time, and not when in church only. He keeps his temper and holds his tongue on Monday as well as on Sunday. He tells the truth at all times. He keeps his appointments. He can be trusted in money matters. If he has made an engagement, he will not cancel it to take up a better. He carries his religious faith into all that he does in his daily occupations.

Such a Christian, if youthful, keeps away from the seductions of sinful or questionable amusements. He does not yearn for Egypt, with its leeks and onions, because he is not only a Christian for all seven days, but in all the faculties of his mind. He chooses the friendship of his life among the Christian young people, because his instincts lead him to choose them. He is planning a Christian, not a worldly career, because he has his imagination directed and his ambition fired by Christ's own purposes. If older, this seven-day Christian is not devoted to laying up for himself treasure on earth, but is busily occupied with securing treasure in heaven. He does not forget the land of his citizenship which is in the securing treasure in heaven.

ing up for himself treasure on earth, but is busily occupied with securing treasure in heaven. He does not forget the land of his citizenship, which is in heaven. He is gentle, peaceable, helpful, and the friend of every man. He is a prayer-meeting Christian. He feels the need of the fellowship in prayer and worship of that meeting with his fellow Christians. He is a sacrificial Christian, which means that he is willing to do hard tasks for the sake of the cause of Christ, and that he is willing to share every financial burden in the same cause. He is a giver. He regards his life as one of stewardship, and thinks of himself as a steward of the riches of God's grace. He is willing to speak up for Christ, to offer the sacrifices of his lips. Everybody knows where he stands, for his life is an example to all. an example to all.

The strength of every Sunday school, every church, and every missionary undertaking is furnished by the seven-day Christians in it. Those who are trying to be Christians for part-time service are exhorted to make a full surrender to God—all their powers, in all ways, all

To further the thought so well expressed in the above, is it not in order to suggest that we should ever remember that the man or woman who claims to be a disciple of our Lord should make it his and her business to do right at all times and under all circumstances? And is it not true that a sure-enough disciple has no other business? "Or know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have from God? and ye are not your own; for ye were bought with a price: glorify God therefore in your body." (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.) This is not a one-day affair. Christ did not purchase us with his blood for just one day, but for all the time. How well we should remember this: "Let every one that nameth the name of the Lord depart from unrighteousness!" (2 Tim. 2: 19.) This puts it as strong as it could be well said. Just remember that you belong to Christ-your time, talent, tongue, brain, muscle, and money. "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed"at home, in business, or in the assembly of the saints-"do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (See Col. 3: 17.)

Such living will cause us to be a blessing and a help to all and a curse to none, and to glorify our Lord in all our words and deeds. Let us have more and more " seven-day Christians."

One's ability to wait for what is coming to him is no more a sign of inherent greatness than of magnanimity. A small man will not be magnanimous. The spirit of petty vindictiveness, of brooding over real or fancied wrongs, is a hall mark of littleness of character. A big man never does it.

AN EXPLANATION.

BY E. A. ELAM.

In combining the book of Bible lessons known as "Elam's Notes," the "Senior Quarterlies," "Junior Quarterlies," and "First Steps" with the series of such lessons furnished by the Gospel Advocate Company, it was mutually agreed that I shall continue to edit in full "Elam's Notes," that Brother F. W. Smith shall continue to edit the "Advanced Gospel Quarterly" and the Bible lessons for "Little Jewels," and Brother F. B. Srygley shall continue to edit the "Intermediate Quarterly" and the "Primary Quarterly."

By conferences from time to time, Brethren Smith and Srygley and I are endeavoring, by study, prayer, and the grace of God, to give thoroughly the teaching of the Bible on every lesson. And we conscientiously request that if in any particular our lessons are not the teaching of the Bible, our teaching should be discarded and the Bible accepted.

According to my agreement with the Williams Printing Company for 1925, that company had already printed "Elam's Notes" and had them almost ready for delivery when this combination was made. The Gospel Advocate Company by mutual agreement all around purchased the books from the Williams Printing Company and is now delivering them most cheerfully.

Furthermore, before the book was made, in order to shorten the lessons some, I agreed with the Williams Printing Company to cut out the poetical quotations and to allow the lessons to begin on the same page on which the preceding lesson ended. But I am now ready to promise that in the book for 1926 each lesson shall begin on the top of the page and the poetical quotations shall again appear—all, if God so wills.

I appreciate most sincerely the continued kindness shown me by Brethren Fletcher and Roy Williams and their unstinted interest in getting out "Elam's Notes," and with the Williams Printing Company I appreciate most heartily the liberal patronage it has received from its beginning until now—a patronage which far exceeded our expectation—and now I furthermore appreciate the increasing patronage it is at present receiving.

NOTES FROM WEST TENNESSEE.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

My work for 1924 closed with the meeting in Caruthersville, Mo. During the year there were one hundred and forty additions, ninety-seven by baptism. One new congregation was established with seventy-one members, who are meeting once a week to worship God "as it is written." I preached nineteen funerals and married four couples. I hope I did much good otherwise in addition to the above visible results. Being my seventy-third year on earth, I am well pleased with what I did.

For the present year I am planning to try to hold what has been started and establish another congregation in a new field. I certainly enjoy the work in new fields. It seems that I am better adapted to this work than preaching to old, established congregations. In the effort to establish the congregation in a new field, I am promised the help of the congregation at Jones Chapel in personal work. It was by the personal presence, song, prayer, and interest of the Jones Chapel congregation that the congregation in Madrid Bend, Ky., was established. In a financial way, many individuals and several congregations lent a helping hand. Backed by a live, energetic congregation, a preacher can go into almost any new field and establish a congregation in one meeting.

It is not my place or business to criticize or lambaste other preachers, but in some cases it seems to me that money is the main consideration. An old brother said to me the other day: "Brother Williams, the great trouble with most of the young preachers is that they want to start in where you old ones have to stop." This remark caused me to think of many young preachers I have known in the past. With some of them, the old brother was right. When I hear a young preacher say more about what they did not pay than he does about the salvation of souls, it causes me to think he is after the pay more than anything else. Just now I have in mind a young preacher who had just started out, and accepted a call to preach once a month for an old congregation. The result was that in less than six months the members would not go out to hear him. He, of course, was discouraged, and he had a right to be. We should not forget that a child crawls before it can walk; and when it begins to walk, it needs to be watched and supported, so as to keep it from falling. There are many falls, jars, and bruises that belong to the childhood age in every walk or calling of life. So, young brethren, arm yourselves for the bumps, for they are sure to come. Old preachers can be of great help to young preachers, if you could only get the young ones to believe it.

The fourth Lord's day in July of this year will end forty years that I have spent along the shores of Reelfoot Lake preaching the gospel of God's only Son. If there is a people on God's green earth that I dearly love, it is the people of Lake and Obion counties, where I have done the most of my preaching. Not long ago I had a call to go to Richmond, Va., to hold a meeting. What a shock! From Reelfoot Lake to a city of nearly two hundred thousand inhabitants-more people than I have preached to in all my life, perhaps. Some of my good brethren advised me to go, but I am too busy near the Lake to go among people who have never heard of a Lakeite preacher. Brethren, I am perfectly contented to work on the balance of my days among the people in the regions of Reelfoot Lake, and leave an open field for better preachers in larger places. One thing wrong with some preachers is, they cannot find a place big enough for them. Any place is big enough for me when the people are anxious to hear the old gospel, believe it, and obey it.

I have had more calls already for 1925 than I can possibly accept. Brethren, pray for me that I may succeed in establishing a new congregation this year in a new field.

COMMENDATORY.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Since the Bible so clearly and abundantly provides for the proper care of widows, orphans, and other needy persons, I heartily commend the efforts of not a few brethren and sisters to establish a Christian Home in Nashville, Tenn., for such persons, and to provide, not only for their temporal and physical comfort, but also for their spiritual welfare by furnishing daily correct instruction from the word of God as the need of each may require, and, also, to furnish the young proper domestic training.

This work is plainly set forth in the charter and by-laws of this Home.

The board of directors, being Christian men, will carefully guard this gracious work and will amend its bylaws, when necessary, so as to protect this Home against any unscriptural procedure.

Brother R. V. Cawthon, who is soliciting funds for this most worthy work, is an exemplary, upright, trustworthy, and generous man and faithful preacher of the gospel, as all who know him will gladly so testify. I have known him from his boyhood.

A good way for one to ruin his own life is to harbor animosity in his heart. As a cancer eats away the vitals of animal life, so it destroys the vitals of spiritual life and growth. The man who hates his brethren cannot grow in grace with the Lord.

AN AGREEMENT MADE, BUT BROKEN. BY H. LEO BOLES.

The readers of the Gospel Advocate will recall that several months ago the advocates of instrumental music promised to "thrash" the instrumental-music question out in every nook and corner of Tennessee. At that time they appeared to be eager for discussions on this question. They were so eager, apparently, that they were going to force a debate upon every community in Tennessee until the question was settled. The readers will recall that a letter from John B. Cowden was published in the Gospel Advocate of July 13, 1922, in which he said: "After advising with the brethren in convention at Ovoca and others interested, the Commission on Unity accepts your challenge and proposition to discuss the church-music question on two essential conditions-namely, that the discussion be in every way fraternal and becoming Christians, and that it be thorough and carried into every community where either party thinks it wise to have it, the choice of place to alternate, until the field is covered, or both parties are satisfied to close the discussion."

The reader will see from this letter quoted above, which was written to Brother Srygley, that the advocates of the instrumental-music question had the indorsement of the State convention. The Commission on Unity accepted the challenge and the proposition, so that there was nothing left but to find a place. Only two conditions were imposed. The first was that the discussion be "in every way fraternal and becoming Christians;" the second was that the question be discussed "in every community where either party thinks it wise to have it." The last condition was modified and understood that it was to be held in every community "where there was already an open division on the music question, and both sides of that community were to invite the discussion." The advocates of the music question very reluctantly yielded to the modification, but did so and began trying to find places or churches which used the instrument in worship to invite the discussion. I am not informed as to how diligently they have sought an invitation. I fear that they have fallen down on the job.

It will be noted further that these discussions were to be continued "until the field has been covered, or both parties are satisfied to close the discussion." Now I respectfully remind the Commission on Unity that the field has not yet been covered, neither are both parties satisfied to close the discussion. There are a number of places which have invited the discussion, but the friends of instrumental music will not respond. One party may be satisfied, and I take it that it is satisfied, and that is the party which is represented by the Commission on Unity, composed of John B. Cowden, J. J. Walker, etc.

After this agreement, all who know the facts know that there have been but three discussions in Tennessee, and the friends of instrumental music have done their best to keep out of the discussion of the question. I may say that these three discussions would not have been held if the friends of instrumental music could have in any way escaped having them. The first discussion after Brother Cowden's letter was held at the Russell Street Church, in Nashville, Tenn., beginning on October 2, 1922. debate was between J. J. Walker and S. H. Hall. It was four months after the convention met at Ovoca-four months after they had agreed to "cover the field" with discussions and to continue "until both parties are satisfied." Any one who knows the preliminaries of this discussion knows how hard J. J. Walker squirmed and twisted in order to get out of that discussion. The next discussion was held at the Ryman Auditorium on May 31, 1923. This was nearly one year after the agreement to "cover the field" and continue "until both parties are satisfied." This debate was held by Ira Boswell and N. B. Hardeman. I was one of a committee of brethren to arrange for this discussion. It was very difficult to press the advocates of instrumental music into it. The next discussion was held at Shelbyville, Tenn., the last of July, 1924. This was more than a year after the Boswell-Hardeman debate, and more than two years after they had agreed to cover the State with debates. It was held between J. J. Walker and S. H. Hall. It is the only debate that was held at the invitation of a church that uses instruments of music in worship in Tennessee. It took many months to arrange for this debate. The other side was determined not to have the debate if they could get out of it. There was a debate held between J. J. Walker and S. H. Hall at Montgomery, Ala. We simply had to force the advocates of instrumental music into this discussion.

All of the above paragraph is now history, and those who are acquainted with the facts know that the advocates of instrumental music do not want a discussion on this question. They have published in their little paper that each discussion was a victory for the instrumental-music side. I believe that they were not very loud in claiming a victory in the Boswell-Hardeman debate. Occasionally now they publish in their paper the great good that was derived from the debates which they have had. It will be recalled that I charged them with insincerity a few weeks ago in the columns of the Gospel Advocate. I have not heard one word from them in regard to that challenge. I reminded them that Clarksville, Tenn., and Selma, Ala., were still waiting for a discussion of this question, but they have not responded to this.

In the Gospel Advocate of January 1, 1925, Thomas J. Wagner, of Rockwood, Tenn., has added Rockwood to the list of those towns which are inviting J. J. Walker to meet S. H. Hall on the music question; and now Brother Will J. Cullum, of Livingston, Tenn., adds that town to the list. Brother Cullum writes as follows: "When S. H. Hall and J. J. Walker go to Rockwood for a discussion of the music question, if Hall is not too weak over the victory won by Walker, we will be glad to have them stop over at this place. The board has a man in this territory who claims that he is too busy to debate, and that he has very little respect for a man who wants to settle our differences that way. I suggested to him that J. J. Walker has respect for those who debate, and urged that he get him to come and meet a representative of the church of Christ whom we will select. We have already selected S. H. Hall. Bring on J. J. Walker and let us have another debate on the music question, and keep it up until some one says 'nuff.' Do not forget Livingston. I will see that Hall is cared for, and Walker, too, if necessary."

Shall we have another discussion on the music question? The Commission on Unity ought to be functioning. We now have four places waiting for the discussion: Clarksville, Tenn.; Selma, Ala.; Rockwood, Tenn.; and Livingston, Tenn. It has been more than two years since the agreement was made to cover the State with discussions on the music question and to continue them until both parties were satisfied. We have had only three, with other places calling for a debate. Will the friends of the music question meet the issue and keep their agreement?

THE OPEN DOOR.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE KING'S RIGHT TO OPEN OR SHUT.

The church in Philadelphia and the church in Smyrna alone of the seven escape censure. There are words of complaint in each of the five other epistles. To the church in Smyrna, suffering amid persecution and tribulation, the Lord had spoken words of encouragement to inspire endurance. To the church in Philadelphia, possessing a little power, but much zeal and loyalty, he has nothing save commendation and the announcement of preservation from the period of calamity and trial which was shortly to come upon the whole world.

To this church of little power, but of unswerving fidelity, Christ comes as "he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth and none shall shut, and that shutteth and none openeth." This is the Lord's descriptive title to Philadelphia, and it is indicative of the tenor of the epistle that was to follow. Mark the descriptive terms characterizing the author of this letter. In character, he is holy and true; in kingly prerogoative, he has the key of David; in power of administration, he opens and no one shuts, and shuts and no one opens. Note especially that it is his sole power to open and shut without human molestation or interference. This is significant in view of the fact that the Lord had opened a door of opportunity for the church in Philadelphia, which she had made bold to enter.

A LITTLE POWER, AN OPEN DOOR.

The Lord finds nothing to condemn in this church, but much to commend. "I know thy works (behold, I have set before thee a door opened, which none can shut), that thou hast a little power, and didst keep my word, and didst not deny my name." In examining this sentence (the Lord's commendation), a little care must be taken to notice the structure. Here we have a statement within a statement, a sentence within a sentence. The words, "Behold, I have set before thee a door opened, which none can shut," being in parenthesis, must be omitted from the statement as a whole. And yet they cannot altogether be omitted, neither would it be wise to place them anywhere else but where the inspired pen placed them. Omit the parenthesis, and there remains this statement: "I know thy works, . . . that thou hast a little power, and didst keep my word, and didst not deny my name." Now, in the parenthesis in the midst of the statement comes the declaration concerning the open door. question arising is as to whether the Lord meant to say that because they had kept his word, and not denied his name, he had opened a door; or that, having opened the door, they had kept his word, and had not denied his name. Was the open door a reward for fidelity or an opportunity in which this church has proved her faithfulness? I think the latter is the true meaning. The Lord opened the door in front of them, and they passed through it and filled the opportunity. He opened the door, and they, though having but little power, were yet true to his word and loyal to his name. The statement of reward comes further on in the epistle.

What this open door was locally, it is impossible to state. There is no explanation; the inspired pen set down no details of the peculiar opportunity granted. In all probability, however, it was some special opening for missionary enterprise. The open door in scripture means, usually, peculiar opportunity granted, generally for preaching the gospel. The expression occurs several times in the New Testament. Paul, in making a cheering report of his first missionary journey, declared that God had "opened a door of faith unto the Gentiles." Once, lingering at Ephesus because of success in the gospel, he said: "I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost; for a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." "A door was opened unto me in the Lord," he said concerning a gospel opportunity at Troas. He asked the Colossian brethren to pray for him and his colaborers that God might open "a door for the word." Elsewhere, then, the open door means, generally, an opportunity for preaching the gospel, for converting the heathen. In the letter to Philadelphia it probably means a way opened to convert the Gentiles.

"Behold, I have set before thee a door opened, which none can shut." The Common Version has it: "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." What the particular opening for the church at Philadelphia was, we have no means of knowing. The fact of value revealed is that there came to a church which was neither great nor strong an opportunity which the church recognized and filled. Is there no lesson here for us?

Turn for a moment from the immediate and local application of these words. Let us think of them as a statement of a great principle. How wondrously does God set before each local church, however poor and wanting in endowments, and each Christian, however humble and weak, the open door—the door of opportunity! In spite of human opposition and human hatred, in spite of poverty and weakness, he has flung wide the door for his faithful people. Are there many adversaries? So was Paul beset at Ephesus, but he tarried on that account. The Lord openeth, and no man can shut, and the Lord gives the victory. It is ours to enter the open door. Though we have but little power, we can keep his word, we can be loyal to his name. And thus, and thus only, shall we be able to enter the door opened before us.

LOYALTY TO WORD AND NAME.

But who are these that enter through the open door? Mark well the description. "Thou hast a little power." he said-not that they were strong. "Thou hast a little power, and didst keep my word, and didst not deny my name." They were faithful to the opportunity in that they kept his word and did not deny his name. That is the true principle of success in Christian service. We must make full use of the talent or talents given, of the opportunity granted. Our task is measured to our proportioned strength. The greatest rewards that will ever come to churches or to men will be bestowed, not according to the greatness of the strength they had or the greatness of the opportunity as it appeared to men, but according to fidelity to opportunity and full use of the measure of strength possessed. The measure of strength was small, but, entering the open door, the church made use of all in loyalty to his word and in maintaining the honor of his name. The key to their success was keeping the word, adhering to the name.

What is your power? And what use are you making of it? The degree of power, whether much or little, determines nothing with reference to entering the door. Infinitely better to have a little power and use it to enter the Lord's open door, in loyalty to his teaching and adherence to his name, than to have much power and employ it basely or unwisely. Remember the Lord's "inasmuch." "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

We lay much stress, it is true, on Peter's Pentecostian sermon (Acts 2), not as if the method of salvation "were wholly developed there," or in the Acts of the Apostles, but because the gospel is fully preached and the method of enjoying this salvation first fully developed there. Peter, to whom the Lord gave the keys of his kingdom, first announced the gospel to the Jews and to the Gentiles; and as he had the power of remitting and retaining sins, we go to the Acts of the Apostles to learn how Peter remitted and retained sins. "The word of the Lord went forth from Jerusalem," as said the prophets; and to that word we do, indeed, call the attention of all men who wish to know what the apostles taught. If any one will read the Acts of the Apostles regularly through at one sitting, without note or comment, and repeat it for only a few times-say, one week-if then he is not convinced that the apostles' doctrine of conversion and remission differs very essentially from the Presbyterian and all who have descended from the "Rev. J. Hughes' Holy, Apostolic, and Catholic Church," then I say to that man, be a Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Catholic, or what you please .- A. Campbell.

HOME READING

You cannot buy a home; you have to make it.

The man who knows least does most of the talking,

The man who never makes any mistakes never does anything.

The mountain does not look near so large after you reach it.

J. D. Jones changes his address from McMinnville to Monterey, Tenn.

Praying will make a man leave off sinning, or sinning will make him leave off praying.

Some men seem to think their slates are clean as long as folks cannot prove anything on them.

Carlyle said: "Show me the man you honor, and by that, better than any other, I know what kind of man you are."

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75 each. Mail us your order at once.

Brother Srygley says that when a man undertakes to mock God, he may rest assured that he will have to suffer the consequences.

S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Hall reports that there were five added by statement.

We have just printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order to-day for a copy of this splendid book.

C. A. Norred, Florence, Ala., January 22: "There were two baptisms on last Lord's day at the Poplar Street Church. One of them was formerly a Methodist."

William F. Ethridge, East Chattanooga, Tenn., January 19: "There have been two baptisms since my last report. One hundred and nineteen were in Bible study yesterday, with good crowds at both services."

A minister in Paris delivered a sermon in Esperanto. But then the audience had about as much chance to learn what the gospel is as most of the preachers in this country generally offer.

The per capita wealth of the United States is $2,864. We can account for about thirty cents of our part. Perhaps we had better write to our Congressman and demand an explanation.

A. B. Lipscomb preached at Charlotte Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day. There were three hundred and eleven in the Bible study. The interest and attendance at prayer meeting is increasing.

A fuss among brethren ought to be quarantined. When a thing like that comes up between two brethren, it should be settled in the congregation of which they are members. Why should dirty linen be washed in public?

The Nashville Banner says: "Another bit of scripture one doesn't hear much quoted nowadays is that part which sets forth the theory that women shall not be allowed 'to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man."

The women made speeches at the transgressive convention held at the Vine Street Christian Church, this city, last week. Paul said: "Let the women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak." (1 Cor. 14: 34.)

J. M. Hottel, Franklin, Tenn., January 22: "The work here is now in the best shape for years. We are teaching a weekly Bible class on Tuesday afternoons, and have a cottage meeting each Monday evening in the Henry Addition. We plan to have a song drill weekly for a while."

Will J. Cullum, Livingston, Tenn., January 20: "I just want to add a few words to the many commendatory things that have been said in reference to the Gospel Advocate and the great work that it is doing. I am sure that there has never been a time since William Lipscomb and Tolbert Fanning began publishing the Advocate when it was quite so good as now. I have all of the issues of the Advocate for 1859, containing some excellent articles by Tolbert Fanning, William Lipscomb, and others."

Miss Ruth Hailey, Hailey, Mo., January 19: "Elder George W. Miller, formerly of Barry County, Mo., but who now resides in Chandler, Okla., held a successful meeting at Cato, Mo., early in the winter. There were seven conversions and one restoration to the church. He is an able teacher of the gospel, and any church can profit by his preaching. His address is Chandler, Okla., Route 7, Box 52."

A. B. Barret, Fayetteville, Tenn., January 7: "Many deaths have taken place among us. The saddest, perhaps, was that of Mary Crowder, a sweet girl only thirteen. She was stricken of smallpox in its worst form and lingered only a few days. It was so sad to all of the friends of the family that we were so helpless; and when we carried the remains away from the home, leaving the family under quarantine, it was most heart-rending. This is one more Christian family made sad by the death angel."

A. B. Gunter, New Philadelphia, Ohio, January 16: "It can be said of a truth that on last Lord's day another congregation was born here in Ohio, for I went down to Urichville and called them together. There were seventeen present—all good, honest, enthusiastic workers. I assured them that the work would go right on, if we all do our part. Gilmore financed the work. We at New Philadelphia furnished songbooks and Testaments and a man for every Lord's day to help conduct the services. Pray for us."

Mrs. B. W. Davis, Nashville, Tenn., 939 Delmas Avenue, January 24: "Mr. Davis has suffered another relapse, which will necessitate another amputation, also an operation on the upper part of his stump. This will require about six weeks' treatment, during which time his tonsils and teeth will be removed. Mr. Davis is still in good spirits and expects to come out and be able to engage in the Master's work again. We desire the prayers of the faithful, and extend our thanks to those who have had fellowship with us in our afflictions."

E. D. Martin, Eagle Lake, Fla., January 23: "My labors during the winter months are being confined to the church here and the church in Winter Haven. The cause in this field seems to be healthful and prolific. More preaching is being done and greater efforts are being made for the advancement of Immanuel's kingdom now than ever before in this great field, and all bids fair for the future. N. B. Hardeman closed a successful series of meetings at Lakeland last evening, and Price Billingsley continues his protracted program at Mango until next Lord's day."

J. H. Hines, De Land, Fla., January 20: "I am at present in De Land, trying to strengthen the few brethren and establish a congregation. I preached three sermons yesterday to attentive audiences, and will continue here all the week and a part of next week. I have succeeded in getting the brethren here to agree to support a man. The church is willing to give one hundred and fifty dollars a month to some preacher who is willing to preach the whole counsel of God and work in behalf of souls. If you would like to locate at De Land, write E. S. Parrish, De Land, Fla., or J. H. Hines, 715 Highland Avenue, Montgomery, Ala."

H. D. Jeffcoat. Ackerman. Miss., December 31: "The Montgomery, Ala."

H. D. Jeffcoat, Ackerman, Miss., December 31: "The work at Duffee, Kitchener, and Hillsboro is doing very well. A great work can be built up near Hillsboro. They have only four members, but they have many friends. I will, the Lord willing, spend one week there every two months. Jesse E. Owen, of Lavergne, Tenn., sent Sister Miller twelve dollars and eighty-five cents to help support the work there. This is right. If more work of this kind were done, it would not be long till we would have congregations all over Mississippi. I recently went to Crandall, where we had a good meeting. J. F. Tomson and family live there and are loved by all the church."

A new meetinghouse is soon to be built in Florence. Ala.

A new meetinghouse is soon to be built in Florence, Ala. In October, 1923, several members of the Poplar Street church of Christ resolved themselves into a body, forming the first membership of the Sherrod Avenue church of Christ. This was the result of the feeling that North Florence needed a congregation. Under the leadership of A. Smith Chambers this congregation has grown until they feel the need of a building in which to worship and preach the gospel. They have purchased a lot on the corner of Sherrod and Royal Avenues. Something like half enough to complete the house has been subscribed. These brethren should have the encouragement and help of the brethren around them to firmly establish the work in that part of the city. The way to build up the church in any city is to start as many congregations as can be self-supporting. In this way more preaching will be done and more brethren will be developed as leaders and Christian workers.

- F. B. Srygley preached at Reid Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.
- F. W. Smith delivered a splendid discourse at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- Why is it that when one "pastor" addresses another "pastor," he always addresses him as "evangelist?"
- Mrs. W. B. Walker, Wartrace, Tenn., January 19: "The Gospel Advocate has been in our home for nearly fifty years."
- James E. Laird, Tulsa, Okla., January 19: "Five new members at the morning service yesterday. The church is at peace and has a bright future."
- J. K. Bentley, Wewoka, Okla., January 20: "All of the faithful seem determined to overcome all the difficulties and to be more faithful and more devoted during 1925 than in 1924. One placed membership Sunday."
- Mrs. Prentiss Wright, Beulah, Miss., January 21: "The Gospel Advocate grows better with each issue. The front page could not teach the truth plainer, and yet it is kind and courteous. We wish the paper a successful year."
- Earl E. McCord, Palatka, Ark., January 19: "I am a singer for the church of Christ, and am arranging my time for spring, summer, and fall work as singer in meetings. If you need anything in my line, please let me hear from you."
- W. D. Black, Sweetwater, Texas, January 20: "Five have placed their membership with us in the last two weeks. Last Sunday, in the face of a snowstorm which lasted nearly all day, we had a goodly number at the services and never missed a meeting."
- O. H. Tallman, Montgomery, Ala., January 20: "I have just returned from a ten-days' trip in Florida. I preached twice at Jacksonville and at Clearwater. We baptized one good woman in the Gulf of Mexico. We enjoyed many motor trips among the orange groves, also a swim in the gulf."
- A. R. Hill, Avon Park, Fla., January 22: "I preached here last Lord's-day morning to a splendid audience. There was one confession. I. A. Douthitt preached in the evening to a packed house. L. L. Brigance, of Henderson, Tenn., is to assist us in a meeting at this place, beginning on the second Lord's day in February."
- We are glad to advise that David Lipscomb is rapidly recovering from his very serious illness, and that his family and friends are rejoiced to feel that he will soon be restored to his former health and strength. Brother Lipscomb is now able to be up and leaves to-day for Florida, where he expects, the Lord willing, to spend the remainder of the winter.
- S. F. Morrow, Tampa, Fla., January 22, sends in two subscribers, promises to send more, and says: "People who have friends in Tampa will find a loyal church of Christ on Nebraska and Twentieth Avenues. Take Nebraska car. Also, on Gray and Thirty-sixth Streets, take the Gary car and go to the end of the line, then one and one-half blocks north.
- Our transgressive brethren recently closed what they call "a midwinter conference" at Dr. Carey E. Morgan's church. We sincerely regret their stubborn determination to "go beyond the things that are written." With the organ going, the various societies exalted above the church, and the women making speeches, no man with a New Testament in his hand could feel at home.
- David Thompson, Mayfield, Ky., January 22: "The church in West Kentucky and Tennessee suffered a great loss in the death of A. L. Wilson, which took place in El Paso, Texas, where he had recently gone for his health, on January 14. The burial took place at Mayfield, Ky., on January 18. Claude Hall, of Henderson, Tenn., preached a good sermon for the church here last Sunday. Two additions by membership."
- J. G. Malphurs, Blackwater, Mo., January 23: "The church here has divided over digression, and the loyal brethren are liable to be drawn into a lawsuit or give up the meetinghouse. We are in the majority and are in possession. It seems that we should hold it, though the property is deeded to the Christian Church. Can you give me the address of an able brother who is an excellent lawyer to help these sectarian lawyers?" Our transgressive brethren talk long and loud about what great things they do. Still, it is a fact that about the greatest of these consists in enticing disciples away from the apostolic order and taking houses from those opposed to their heresies.

- H. A. Brown, Gainesboro, Tenn., January 20: "The church at Gainesboro begins the year with much promise. The past year closed with good results, and we enter the new year with brighter prospects than ever before. The attendance is large and the church has a mind to work, so we are looking forward to greater things for the Lord."
- Mrs. W. T. Marshall, Nashville, Tenn., January 23: "I want to give a word of commendation and encouragement. I glory in your faith, courage, and unswerving fidelity to the gospel of our Lord and Savior, and pray, if it is God's will, that you may live many years to fight for 'the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.' I have heard two sisters say in the last few days that the Gospel Advocate is better than it has ever been."
- D. C. Elliott, Tillar, Ark., January 23: "Please advise where I can secure a good tent that will accommodate about four or five hundred people. We want to have a tent meeting in the town of McGehee, Ark., beginning on Friday night before the first Lord's day in June and continuing through the second Lord's day in June. Also advise what we would have to pay for same complete with poles. Also give shipping weight." Will some of our readers kindly reply?
- Lester E. Samuels, Dickerson, Miss., January 18: "I wish to emphasize the appeal made by W. E. Morgan, of Senatohia, Miss., for a tent to be used in a meeting at Clarksdale, Miss. He and William Klingman came here this winter to hold a meeting in a digressive house, but after the first sermon we were closed out. There are only four loyal members here. We are meeting in our home on Lord's days. Brethren, please help us teach these delta people the truth."
- R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., January 20: "On Sunday, January 11, Tom Jett and Tulabelle Gibbs, of Ridgedale, Chattanooga, were quietly married, at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of a few friends and near relatives, the writer officiating. I preached at Ridgedale last Lord's day. Seventeen have been added to this congregation, some of them being baptized, since I began preaching for them. I shall leave this week for Bradentown, Fla., where I am to begin a meeting on January 25."
- J. W. Chism, Texarkana, Texas, January 24: "The church meeting at Pine and Nineteenth Streets is doing as well as could be expected. In fact, we have here a band of as faithful brethren as it has ever been my lot to mix with. They are not afraid to have the gospel in its fullness preached. The discussion which was announced to begin on January 20 has been set to begin on February 9, owing to sickness in Mr. Key's family. The discussion will continue ten nights. We anticipate a pleasant time and a profitable discussion. Mr. Key is a Missionary Baptist."
- Sister U. G. Wilkinson, Dallas, Texas, "The doctors say that I may take Brother Wilkinson home as soon as he is strong enough, but we do not know when that will be. We meet many old friends here, and they are all so good to us. We certainly thank each and every one of our friends from the depths of our hearts. Their many kind and helpful letters have been such a comfort to us in our trouble. We would be glad to answer each one personally, but Brother Wilkinson is weak and I am too busy with him to do this. Always address us at Comanche, Okla., Box 592."
- J. N. Armstrong says that R. H. Boll believes that the kingdom of Christ now is the same as the church of Christ. Ira C. Moore says Brother Armstrong does not understand Boll, as Boll wrote him a private letter and told him that he believed the church and the kingdom are different. While Brother Armstrong is watching the Gospel Advocate to see that it does not misrepresent Brother Boll, would it not be well for him to watch his own steps and see that he himself does not misrepresent Boll? I myself rather think that Brother Boll believes the church and the kingdom are the same, or else he believes they are different.
- J. C. Mosley, Whitwell, Tenn., January 18: "We had a fine meeting at New Liberty yesterday. W. W. Bates is the minister for this field at present. He had me to preach for him yesterday, as all the Mosley family were present at the Lord's-day service. Brother Bates has done a great work for this settlement. The young men like him and are willing to take hold of their part of the work when called upon. He has baptized many here that are showing good works. I will start for South Carolina on January 28. I will be between Brother Gibbs and Brother Burton, in Moore, S. C. I wish the Gospel Advocate success in its good work. It has brought comfort to many."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2,50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries. $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mictakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gespel Advecate, 110 Beventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

PHARISAISM.

BY E. A. ELAM.

The Pharisees were the most numerous and most "orthodox" religious sect among the Jews. They believed in angels, spirits, and the resurrection, and in this were opposed to the Sadducees. They were scrupulous and punctilious as to outward forms, but paid little regard to purity of heart and life. They, with the Sadducees, strongly opposed Christ. They tithed "mint and anise and cummin," and "left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith." They should have done the former, but should not have neglected the latter. As it was, they were "blind guides;" they strained out the gnat and swallowed the camel. (Matt. 23: 23, 24.) They were great critics, fault finders, and exacting in telling others what to do; but they said, and did not. They presented a beautiful outward appearance, made long public prayers, and great pretensions. but in heart were full of extortions, excess, and rottenness. They were filled with all uncleanness, corruption, iniquity, and hypocrisy. They split hairs over theories, liked chief seats in meetings, sought to be considered the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, and loved religious titles. With all this, they were zealous for their own righteousness, while living in disobedience to God, and were intensely missionary, compassing sea and land to make one convert, making him at the same time "twofold more a child of hell [Gehenna] than" themselves.

Study Jesus' exposition and denunciation of the hypocrisy and corruption of the Pharisees. (Matt. 23.)

A LESSON FOR US.

There is such a thing now as being church members nominally, on pretended Christians, and even professed guides of the blind, lights to those in darkness, teachers of babes, and instructors of the ignorant (Rom. 2: 17-23); and yet, with all these pretensions and professions, there is such a thing as being "lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, implacable, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God;" and yet "holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof." These, says Paul, are "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth," "take captive silly women laden with sins, led away by divers lusts." (2 Tim. 3: 1-7.) What can be the difference between these and the Pharisees, except the Pharisees may have been more moral? One person cannot be all these things at once; but any one of them is bad enough in a pretended teacher and leader.

Let us give particular attention to the expressions, "holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof," and "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth."

There can be nothing more pharisaical than to split hairs over various theories and to neglect justice and mercy and faith; than to make laws where God has made none, while disobeying some God has made; than to hold "a form of godliness" while denying the power thereof.

The "power of godliness" is the transformation it makes in one's own heart and life-godlikeness in one's own character-mercy, justice, uprightness, purity, truth, and love, and also hatred of evil and wrongdoing anywhere and in any one. Jesus loved righteousness and hated iniquity. (Heb. 11: 8, 9.)

The Bible must be studied and must be taught regularly and earnestly. It must be received into good and honest hearts. These are the only hearts which are permanently benefited by it, as stated in the parable of the sower. (Luke 8: 15.) The psalmist expresses this as follows: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." (Ps. 119: 11.)

The Bible must be followed in all things of daily lifeassociations and dealings with men, in the home, and in the public worship of God—as a lamp to one's feet and a light unto one's path. (See Ps. 119: 105.)

It is right for people to meet together at certain times on certain days or nights in the week to study the Biblethat is, to have at these times Bible classes of men, women, or children, and of all together; it is right to preach the Bible as often and wherever there can be found an audience of one or many to hear it; but if all of this is not consummated in the daily practice of the will of God, what does it amount to but to condemn the more surely and sorely those who know to do good, but do it not? This reminds one of the declaration, "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.' When those who thus meet to study the Bible refrain from all kinds of gossip, scandal, and slander; return home to become better mothers and fathers and neighbors, better workers at home, more helpful husbands and wives, and, as children, more dutiful sons and daughters; and to be more determined by the grace of God to treat all men according to the Golden Rule and to more humbly serve God in private life and public worship, then their Bible readings are most beneficial. But until our daily Christian lives in private and public keep apace with our preaching, teaching, and study of the Bible, at least, until our constant efforts and prayers are such, we can be classed with those who are "ever learning," but never being "able to come to the knowledge of the truth." Certainly we cannot hide the deformities of Christian characters behind our attendance upon our Bible readings and

Their "logical deductions" are far more binding on some than the teaching of the New Testament. Pharisees by some process of logic had drawn the conclusion and had made the law that to "swear by the temple" is nothing, but to "swear by the gold of the temple" is binding; and to "swear by the altar" is nothing, but to "swear by the gift" upon the altar is binding. But Jesus says they were blind and fools.

Are not some theories and contentions to-day as foolish? Are not some who make such contentions as blind?

I cannot undertake and am not able to specify various instances of phanisaism. But saying, and doing not, is one; binding burdens upon others, while doing nothing to lighten them, is another; forever criticizing and finding fault, while not setting a proper example, is another; seeking religious titles of any sort is another; seeking prominence, and boasting, and self-exaltation are still others.

A vast amount of pharisaism can be sifted out by studying and especially practicing 2 Tim. 3: 1-7. Let us think a while on "lovers of self," "lovers of money," "boastful," "puffed up," "haughty," "slanderers," "no lovers of good," "without self-control," "silly women laden with sins," "lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God;" and yet all these are pretending to learn and to teach the truth! In some places such seem more popular than the humble, meek, modest, truly pure and sincerely godly. But the Lord knows all who are his!

REJECTING THE COMMANDMENTS OF GOD.

In Matt. 15: 1-20 and Mark 7: 1-16 is an account of an attack of the Pharisees and scribes made upon Jesus. They went from Jerusalem unto Galilee to counteract the influence of Jesus in that section. No doubt they were the shrewdest men who could be sent for that purpose. They openly charged Jesus with transgressing "the tradition of the elders." In reply, he charged them with transgressing the commandments of God. He admitted that he and his disciples did not keep these traditions, because they were the precepts and commandments of men, saying they were hypocrites, as Isaiah had said. He applied to them the following: "This people honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." He added further that they had left the commandments of God and were holding "fast the tradition of men;" he made his charge stronger still by saving they rejected the commandments of God in order to keep their tradition.

While there are different interesting and instructive features of this discussion, I am emphasizing here the one fact only that the Pharisees rejected the commandments of God in order to keep their theories or traditions. They rejected the counsel of God against themselves in refusing to submit to the baptism taught by John the Baptist. (Luke 7: 29, 30.) For the same reason they rejected Christ and his teaching altogether. With all their forms, ceremonies, theories, scrupulous exactions, and self-righteousness, they were denounced by Christ as

But it is not necessary to go back to the scribes and Pharisees of Christ's day to find men who reject the commandments of God in order to keep their tradition-that is, notions, theories, and opinions. Who can doubt that there are brethren in the church of God to-day, refusing to wear any denominational names and denying that they are in any way sectarian, who reject the plain teaching of Christ in order to keep their theories and notions? The bitter strife, unholy contentions, and unrighteous divisions among many claiming to be the children of God prove this. All these spring from something not the word of God. God commands his children to give "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." He shows, too, that this can be done only by all speaking the same thing, "speaking as it were oracles of God," holding fast "the pattern of sound words," "even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ," and being "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." He commands that all untaught questions, fables, and certain other things be avoided, because they gender strife. Yet, who can doubt that if this commandment had not been disregarded by some, unity and peace would prevail. or that disobedience to God here has produced strife, contentions, and divisions?

Let us add, then, that not one word of men can be added to that which God teaches on "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," and not one word of all that God teaches can be left off. So I repeat, no man can preach his theories and speculations, notions and opinions, concerning any unrevealed thing or on anything which God has revealed, without disobedience to God.

SPECULATION GONE TO SEED.

BY F. W. SMITH.

One false theory usually begets other false theories until the false teacher has a perfect brood of false and inconsistent theories on hand to nurse and feed. A false theory about what some term the "second coming of Christ," as if only two comings were mentioned in the Bible, necessitated, in order to make the false theory look plausible, a number of other false theories. For instance, note the following:

AFTER THE THOUSAND YEARS.

AFTER THE THOUSAND YEARS.

Now comes the final act in the drama. During all this time these nations have enjoyed the most exceptional, wonderful opportunities and privileges. Satan has been chained, powerless to deceive them. They have had every opportunity to know right and truth. Mankind has lived in happiness and prosperity. It ends with a failure, like every other dispensation. At the close of this dispensation God sees fit that Satan shall be loosed for a little season. This people, who have enjoyed such advantages under the reign of the saints—this people must now have a chance to see and choose the other way, if they prefer. So Satan is loosed, and what does he accomplish? He goes about to deceive the nations, and with considerable success, because it says: "And they went up over the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city" (evidently situated on the earth). The Lord deals with him in half a sentence: "And fire came down out of heaven, and devoured them."

When a man has a "hobby" about the "final" coming of Christ, based upon some wild flights of a fervid imagination, he thinks he sees proof of his theory on every page of holy writ. "But," says one, "does not the author of the above clipping quote scripture to prove his teaching?" To be sure he does, and so does every religious teacher of every religious sect in the world do the same thing; but what does that prove? Does the mere fact of a man's quoting even much scripture to prove any given doctrine prove that the doctrine is true? He who so contends knows precious little about the proper division and application of God's word. Hence, in the light of handling God's word aright, let us try the teaching under the heading, "After the Thousand Years."

Now, as a working basis, we shall take the words of Peter at the house of Cornelius: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons." (Acts 10: 34.) If Peter is not here announcing a universal truth, then language can have no meaning at all; for he applies it to all nations-viz., "but in every nation he that feareth. him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him."

What, let me ask, becomes of this universal principle of divine truth that God is no respecter of persons, if what the theorist claims regarding what he terms the "thousand years' reign" is true—viz.: "During all this time these nations have enjoyed the most exceptional, wonderful opportunities and privileges. Satan has been chained, powerless to deceive them. They have had every opportunity to know right and truth." Why should a merciful God, a kind and loving Father, through all the ages past let the devil have full sway to deceive and tempt to sin the children of men, and then for a thousand years fix the devil so he could not tempt or deceive a single soul? God permitted the devil to deceive and lead men into such sinful corruptions as necessitated the flood to destroy all, save eight souls, from the face of the earth. He permitted the devil to so befoul and corrupt the cities of the plain that they had to be destroyed, and in the days of Job the devil was roaming the earth, deceiving men and women. (Job 1: 6-21.) Where was Satan in the days of the apostles? Let Peter tell: "Be sober, be watchful: your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." (1 Pet. 5: 8.) If Satan is not engaged in the same business now, he never was since the world began. But now comes an exceedingly "wise" man to tell us that the people on this earth will, for a thousand years, have no fear of Satan, for he will be "chained" so that he cannot deceive any one!

Another application of the passage under consideration reflects upon the goodness and righteous character of God—viz.: "Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall come forth to deceive the nations which are in the four corners of the earth." The "theorist" teaches that God actually and literally binds, chains, and imprisons Satan for a thousand years, and then turns Satan loose for the purpose of "deceiving" the nations! What would be thought of an earthly father who, having a lion chained so that he could harm no one, would then deliberately turn the lion loose among his children to devour them? If this application of the passage we are considering does not contradict what James teaches, "For God cannot be tempted with evil, and he himself tempteth no man," then contradictions do not exist.

"But," says one, "what do such passages mean?" I do not know, and am perfectly sure of the fact that no one can make an undoubted application of them. But of one thing we all may be sure, and that is, any application of scripture that reflects upon the goodness and righteous character of our God is wrong and to be rejected. All the power that God has ever put forth to fortify man against the temptations and wiles of Satan is that resident in his word, and any theory to the contrary is directly opposed to the teaching of God's word and is a claim of either direct spiritual operations or the use of physical power in the salvation of man.

Gentle reader, do not fall out with the theorist, for this foolishness had to be in his plan in order to bolster up another false theory—viz.: "Christ is not now, and never has been, on David's throne," but is "coming back in a body of flesh and bones to sit on David's literal throne in Jerusalem." These are among what a college professor terms, "a few harmless guesses."

I unhesitatingly affirm that he who teaches that "Christ is not now, and never has been, on David's throne," flatly contradicts an inspired apostle, and knocks the very foundation from under the whole scheme of man's redemption, the college professor to the contrary notwithstanding.

One of the most inconsistent and indefensible attitudes, to my mind, is to condemn and publicly combat men who contend for instrumental music in Christian worship and human societies to do the work of the church, while at the same time encouraging and fellowshiping a man who teaches the doctrines under consideration. As for myself, I have as much sympathy and fellowship for the organ and society man who causes division by his innovations as I have for the men that press their speculations and false theories to the disruption of the body of Christ. Furthermore, men who will not speak out in clear and unmistakable terms against such speculative teaching leave themselves open to the suspicion that they either indorse or wink at such teaching.

We have never known a preacher who preaches the gospel to try to keep from saying anything about baptism.

WHEN WAS THE LAW ABOLISHED?

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I am in receipt of the following question:

Brother Srygley: Please explain, through the Gospel Advocate, the status of the people living during the fifty days between the death of Christ and Pentecost. If under the old law, why say the testator's death puts the testament in force? And if under the new law, how could the people obey it, inasmuch as the apostles themselves did not fully understand it until Pentecost?

I know you have explained this in the paper before; but the question came up with some members of the church here, and none of us have the explanation at hand; therefore, I will greatly appreciate your answer. X.

The brother appears to think that he has met quite a difficulty; but if he has, it is with the Bible. He presents his difficulty in these words: "If under the old law, why say the testator's death puts the testament in force?" I do not say that; in fact, I have never said anything like that. If the brother asks why the apostle said that, if he did say it, I would answer, because the Holy Spirit, which was in him, inspired him to say it. It is not my province to get an inspired man out of trouble. If he says a thing, I believe in sticking to it without asking why he said it. I suppose the brother has in mind what the apostle Paul said, which is this: "For a testament is of force where there hath been death: for it doth never avail while he that made it liveth." (Heb. 9: 17.) This passage does not say that death puts a testament in force, but it says a testament is of force where there hath been death. Instead of death putting the testament in force, the death must come before it. But the brother brings up another difficulty with the Lord by saying: "How could the people obey it, inasmuch as the apostles themselves did not fully understand it until Pentecost?" That seems to pin the basket, so to speak, on the Lord from that angle; that is, if the law or the gospel, one must be in force all the time. I reckon the Lord would let the old law hold over till the new went into effect. That is the way man does when he repeals a law. He lets the old one hold over till the new one goes into effect.

But what great blessing could the law bestow upon the world during those fifty days? It was only for the Jew, anyway, and the remission of sins under it was only for a year at a time; and if the faithful Jew had complied with the law, the pardon would last, anyway, till the year was out. "Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year. The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep: seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, at the time appointed in the month Abib (for in it thou camest out from Egypt); and none shall appear before me empty: and the feast of harvest, the first fruits of thy labors, which thou sowest in the field: and the feast of ingathering, at the end of the year, when thou gatherest in thy labors out of the field." (Ex. 23: 14-16.) I shall not insist that the feast of Pentecost was the feast that came at the end of the Jewish year, but we do know that Pentecost came fifty days after the Passover; and if the faithful Jew had made his sin offering as he was required to do under the law, his sins would have been forgiven for a year, which certainly would have lasted fifty days. "For the law having a shadow of the good things to come, not the very image of the things, can never with the same sacrifices year by year, which they offer continually, make perfect them that draw nigh. Else would they not have ceased to be offered? because the worshipers, having been once cleansed, would have had no more consciousness of sins. But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance made of sins year by year. For it is impossible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins." (Heb. 10: 1-4.) Therefore, the faithful Jew would have needed no further forgiveness till the year was out.

From Smith's Bible Dictionary, on "Pentecost," I quote

the following: "The Pentecost is the only one of the three great feasts which is not mentioned as the memorial of events in the history of the Jews; but such a significance has been found in the fact that the law was given from Sinai on the fiftieth day after the deliverance from Egypt. (Comp. Ex. 12 and 19.) In the exodus the people were offered to God as living first fruits; at Sinai their consecration to him as a nation was completed. The typical significance of the Pentecost is made clear from the events of the day recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. (Acts 2.) The preceding Passover had been marked by the sacrifice upon the cross of the true paschal Lamb, and by his offering to his Father as the 'first fruits of them that slept.' The day of Pentecost found his disciples assembled at Jerusalem, like the Israelites before Sinai, waiting for 'the promise of the Father.' Again did God descend from heaven in fire, to pour forth that Holy Spirit which gives the spiritual discernment of his law; and the converts to Peter's preaching were the first fruits of the spiritual harvest, of which Christ had long before assured his disciples. Just as the appearance of God on Sinai was the birthday of the Jewish nation, so was that Pentecost the birthday of the Christian church."

The first Pentecost after the death of Christ wound up the old law, for one was given on that day that was founded upon better promises with a better sacrifice and a better hope. This Pentecost day was the beginning of a new and living way. "What then is the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise hath been made; and it was ordained through angels by the hand of a mediator." (Gal. The law was added to the promise made to Abraham that "in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." When the law, the thing that was added, was taken out of the way, then only the promise remained. The law of Moses was, so to speak, a parenthesis thrown in because of transgression, and was only intended to last till the "seed" should come, which Seed is Christ. There was an addition also made to the law, "The law and the prophets were until John: from that time the gospel of the kingdom of God is preached, and every man entereth violently into it." (Luke 16: 16.) This does not mean that the law and the prophets ended with John, but from John's day the kingdom of God in its preparatory state was preached in addition to the law. The ministry of John was preparatory, and it contained a law of pardon. He preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, and it evidently held over till the gospel of Christ was fully proclaimed on the day of Pentecost. I suppose that people could have been baptized for the remission of sins under John's ministry during the fifty intervening days.

I do not believe it is necessary for us to worry about how God saved men during the fifty days between the death of Christ and the day of Pentecost. All should be able to know how he saves men now, and, knowing the conditions upon which he saves now, it is of the greatest importance that we accept these conditions, and thus be in a condition to be saved ourselves. God will take care of his part of the matter, not only during the fifty days, but through all the days.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

So far as Washington City is concerned, 1925 "came in like a lion," if the coming in of a lion is blustery, stormy, and snowy; for there was snow on the ground and on the wings of the wind when the New Year dawned here. We have been "snowed under" all the time since the new year reached us, and to-day (January 12) we are "frozen up." These are minor matters, however, and my mind is in too serious a mood to consider them now.

News of the death of Dan Deakins has just reached me from Jasper, Tenn., where he lived and where he died. Dan was born February 24, 1843, four months and sixteen days before I was born. He was a worthy member of a worthy family-a family prominent, if not, indeed, dominant, in Sequatchie Valley, when Dan and I were boys, some seventy years ago. In those dimly remembered days we were classmates during free-school time, about ten weeks each summer. We sat on the same seat-a rough bench with no back-in the log schoolhouse when in the house, "ciphered" in the shade of the same tree when allowed to "cipher" out of doors, and helped each other just as interestedly and diligently. I am sure, as we helped ourselves. During one entire session one of us had a book the other did not have and could not get. We considered that rather fortunate than otherwise, because it made it necessary for us to sit close together.

But those days are gone—forever gone! The old schoolhouse is gone. That beautiful shade tree is gone. Ab Deakins, our teacher, is gone. Dan is gone, and I am nearly gone.

When the shadow of war fell upon our country, Dan and I hastened to enlist in the Confederate Army; he, in the infantry; I, in the Cavalry. Thus we were separated, being in different branches of the service and in different parts of the country. Dan served from the beginning to the end of the war, making a brilliant record all the way through. With that exception, he lived, I think, all the days of his life between the mountains that separate Sequatchie Valley from the balance of the world.

After the war I returned to the Valley—Sequatchie Valley; but I lived at Dunlap, twenty-six miles up the valley from Jasper, where Dan lived; hence, we seldom saw each other.

To me, that does not now seem to be a satisfactory reason for our having seen each other so seldom, and I would have it otherwise if I could. But that is impossible. Malachi (3:16) tells us: "Then they that feared the Lord spoke often one to another." Those who love each other now should speak often one to another. Neither difference in age nor in position should prevent this, dotage excepted. Judge M. H. Meeks, Nashville, Tenn., is a great man and a great lawyer, and is always busy; but he never lets a year pass without visiting his children, his sisters, and other loved ones in different and distant parts of our country. I am glad he thus makes them glad every year, and I hope the memory of it may make him glad even in the twilight of a long, long life. So mote it be.

Reverting to Dan Deakins, once I was with him in dreamland. He was troubled because he thought I had ceased to love him and was no longer his friend. Embracing him as tenderly as I could, I said: "No mortal shall lose an enemy when I die." That seemed to soothe and satisfy him.

Good-by, Dan, good-by. You have crossed the river. I am at its brink. I hope to meet you over there.

This searching, examining, comparing, and ruminating upon the Holy Scriptures in private, in the family, in the congregation, cannot fail to make us learned in the knowledge of God and in the knowledge of man. The Bible contains more real learning than all the volumes of men. It instructs us in all our natural, moral, political, and religious relations. Though it teaches us not astronomy, medicine, chemistry, mathematics, architecture, it gives us all that knowledge which adorns and dignifies our moral nature and fits us for happiness. Happy the person who meditates upon it day and night! He grows and flourishes in moral health and vigor, as the trees upon the water-courses. His leaf never fades, his fruit never fails.—A. ('ampbell.

HOME READING

EARLY EMPLOYMENT OF FAMOUS AUTHORS.

It is true, however little known, that many brilliant writers are men who have failed in some other calling. To the cold entertainment of the bar we are indebted for at least a score of writers whose names are household words to-day—from Blackmore, who was wearing wig and gown when Lord Horschell, late Lord Chancellor, was struggling with Horace at school, to Anthony Hope, who was going the barren round of the Middle Circuit long before he showed promise of becoming a "man of mark" in 1890, and Rider Haggard, who wasted many weary hours in Elm Court in waiting for briefs which seldom came.

Baring Gould was an obscure country parson for sixteen years before he charmed the world with "Mehalah; and who, outside the parish of Penicuik, ever heard of Samuel Rutherford Crockett until the author of the "Stickit Minister" blossomed into fame as a writer?

The "world of schoolmasters" has rejected at least a score of men who have enriched our literature, from Leslie Stephen, Assistant Tutor of Trinity Hall, to Quiler Couch, who years ago showed that a prophet had risen in Cornwall. Hall Caine was a comparative failure as an architect, Richard Le Gallienne as an accountant, William Le Queux as an artist, Eden Phillpots as clerk and actor; while Conan Doyle was quick to recognize that he could win fame more speedily by writing books than by writing prescriptions.

All roads seem to lead to the land of letters, but many writers have not found their promised inheritance until after years of wandering through bypaths which promised to lead them nowhere.

Few writers have found their way through such a complexity of paths as Morley Roberts, the author of a score of clever novels. He has worked on Australian railroads and herded cattle in the Lush; he has worked for years "before the mast," and spun his yarns in the "forecastle;" he has earned a scanty living as a writer in government offices, and has done "a little bit of everything" in every part of the world, from Texas to California, and from Canada to the South Seas; and yet this man of many careers was only thirty when he found his true vocation in writing "The Western Avenues" a number of years ago.

Dr. Robert Wallace, M.P. for Edinburgh East, is perhaps the only man living who has attained eminence in five distinct spheres of work. For nearly twenty years he was one of the ablest ministers in the Church of Scotland. He won fame as editor of the Scotsman and University Professor of Theology before he commenced to practice at the bar. He has now added to his laurels the distinction of being one of the cleverest speakers in the House of Commons, and one of the ablest writers of political and economic articles in the leading reviews.

Few men have unwittingly prepared themselves for writing by a wider range of experiences than Robert Barr and Jerome K. Jerome. Only Mr. Barr himself knows in how many ways he has earned the means of living. "I've split rails in my time," he confesses, with a pardonable pride; and, if report be true, he has mastered most arts, from wielding an ax in the backwoods to wielding a cane in a Canadian school, and from bricklaying to qualifying as an Iroquois chieftain. Mr. Jerome gave little evidence of genius when he was a railway clerk or in his subsequent changes of profession from tutor to shorthand writer and from actor to solicitor's clerk, and yet he was only thirty when he "awoke to find himself famous" as author of "Three Men in a Boat."

Mr. H. G. Wells, the clever opener of the new vein of scientific fiction, was even quicker in finding his meter. He was clearly not born to be a draper's assistant, or even a teacher of science or "crammer" for examinations; and his efforts in "black and white" were a leap in the dark. He struck the right track at last when, at the age of twenty-eight, he abandoned his lectures on education and gave himself to journalism, which led him by natural stages to the "fairyland of fiction."

Max O'Rell had reached the age of thirty-five before he drifted into letters, by which time he had served a strange apprenticeship as cavalry officer during the Franco-German War, Prussian prisoner at Sedan, French master for eight years at Saint Paul's school, and globe trotter extraordinary.

Rolf Boldrewood was sixty-two before his "Robbery Under Arms" proclaimed to the world the magic that had so long lain dormant in his pen, although nearly half a century earlier he had won the prize for English composition at Sydney College. The intervening lifetime he was content to spend as squatter in the backwoods of Victoria, and miner and magistrate in the gold fields of New South Wales.

W. L. Alden, the humorous writer of nearly a score of books, had passed his half century before he knew that he could turn his pen into profit. He practiced for five years as a barrister in New York, and for three years figured as United States Consul General at Rome.—Selected.

0 0 0

THE OLD-FASHIONED VIRTUES.

In the midst of much high-sounding terminology with its psychological undertones and its new-thought overtones, we are apt to lose the whisper of the still, small voice speaking in the ordinary language of old-fashioned virtues. In our youth we read books on thrift and industry, honesty and truthfulness, temperance and purity, patience and fidelity; and these virtues were set forth to be the stones upon which any permanent superstructure of character must be built. The idea of personal responsibility was dinned into us until we came to believe that we were responsible for our own personal character and conduct, and that to be lacking in the virtues that go to make character worthy and conduct respectable was to be disgraced in the community. That, however, was long before the glands were said to control the emotions, the intellect, and the will. We were taught that personality is self-determining; that man is a free moral agent; that he is responsible for his thoughts, motives, and actions; and that he must answer for his conduct according to these standards.

But now all this is changed. Man is the creature of circumstances, the product of environment, the reagent of glands. The moral appeal has been lost in mental immaturities, and the sense of obligation is swallowed up in emotional complexes. The pituitary gland has taken the place of the conscience, and the "Thou shalt nots" of the decalogue have been choked in the gases of a poisonous philosophy lacking in moral sanctions. The majesty of the law has been dethroned and courts have become medical clinics to determine after a physical examination at the hands of psychiatrists whether men charged with a brutal crime shall be operated on for the removal of parathyroid glands or sent to a hospital for the feeble-minded.

Something prevents us from accepting this new philosophy. It may be that our early education biased us in favor of the old-fashioned idea of personal responsibility or we have a peculiar "mind set" which forbids the entrance of new fangled ideas. At any rate, we still believe in the old-fashioned virtues and in the old-fashioned way of planting and cultivating the old-fashioned virtues in the lives of the young.—The Baptist.

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Fulton, Ky., December 4, 1924.—Dear Brother Elam: Here are some plain, simple questions that I would like to have answered through the columns of the Gospel Advocate:

cate:

1. With reference to the third chapter of St. John, verse 2, do you believe that Nicodemus told the truth when he said to Jesus: "We know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him?" (Please answer "yes" or "no.") It occurs to me that Jesus wanted to establish faith with the people; in fact, it is written elsewhere in the Scriptures: "Many other signs truly did Jesus, ... which are not written in this book: but these are written, that ye might believe," etc. Not the knowing!

2. Is verse 8 a comparison of two souls or characters, and both ignorant as to where the wind comes from, or and both ignorant as to where the wind comes from, or shall we conclude that Nicodemus at the time Jesus was talking to him was already one that was truly born of the Spirit, and only needed telling that the wind and the Spirit maneuvered in the same way?

3. Shall we infer or conclude from verses 9 and 10 that Nicodemus was such a great knower as he proclaimed he was in verse 2?

4. Shall we infer from verse 11 that Nicodemus had any faith, since Jesus in that verse declares, "Ye receive not our witness," and, hence, necessarily implies that he (Nicodemus) was not born of the Spirit at that time? In verse 11, does not Jesus tell who has the right to know? Can we infer from the reading of verse 13 that Nicodemus had the right to know, as he had already proclaimed in verse 2 that he did know?

John is no more a saint than any other Christian. All Christians are saints. (See 1 Cor. 1: 2.)

1. Yes.

2. No. Verse 8 does not teach that the wind and the Spirit maneuvered in the same way. The Spirit influences people by teaching them the word of God through inspired men. The comparison is between the wind and the real man-that is, the inner man, who is born again.

3. Nicodemus knew what he claimed to know-that Jesus was a teacher sent from God. He defended Jesus later on before the Pharisees (John 7: 50), and helped Joseph to take his body from the cross, wrap it in linen cloths with a mixture of one hundred pounds of myrrh and aloes, and bury it (John 19: 38-40).

4. He had as much faith as he manifested. Joseph was a secret disciple of Jesus. (John 19: 38.) Nicodemus had not been born again. There is only one birth, and that is " of water and the Spirit." We have no record that Nicodemus did any more than the New Testament states.

Every one has a right to know the will of God (John 6: 44, 45), but some close their eyes and stop their ears and will not learn (Matt. 13: 14-16).

Elkton, Ky., December 6, 1924.—Please explain Matt.: 22. What "days had been shortened?" Also explain 2 Thess. 2: 3.

I enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate, and think it better than ever before.

Your brother in Christ,
H. R. DANIEL.

1. The "days" were the ones between the time of this declaration and the destruction of Jerusalem, as the context shows.

2 Thess. 2: 3 means that the church should not allow any man to deceive them in any wise concerning the second coming of Christ, "either by the spirit [or by one claiming inspirationl, or by word, or by epistle as from us [pretended as an epistle from Paul], as that the day of the Lord is just at hand." Some were teaching then that "the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our gathering together unto him" (verse 1) were imminent-"just at hand." Paul wrote this part of the epistle to counteract this error. The verse in question states that Christ will not come except the apostasy or "the falling away come first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition," described in the following verses.

From the days of Paul until now there have been men who have taught that Christ will soon come the second time. We know that he will come, we know that his second coming is nineteen hundred years nearer than when he left the promise to come again, and we know that every year brings this wonderful and glorious event that much nearer; but that is all we can know. Anything beyond this is vain speculation, against the deception of which Paul warns all Christians, because "of that day and hour knoweth no one, not even the angels of heaven, neither the Son, but the Father only." It is sin to disturb churches over trying to tell that which men, angels, and Christ, in the wisdom of God, do not know.

Springtown, Texas, November 21, 1924.—Dear Brother Elam: Please answer the following questions:

1. Since the Scripture says, "Let the women keep silence in the churches," is it a violation of this when they answer questions in Sunday school?

2. Why did Jesus command the apostles to keep secret the "things" of Luke 9: 36?

3. Why is the risk page called "Direct". When it the

3. Why is the rich man called "Dives?" Where is the scripture for this, and what does "Dives" mean?

H. B. MCCULLEN.

1. "The church," in which women should "keep silence," as 1 Cor. 14: 20-39, is not a church house, but the congregation of saints as a whole. In this congregation of the whole church, this mixed audience of saints and sometimes sinners (verses 23-25), the women must "keep silence." "Keep silence" means here just what it means when applied to a prophet who must "keep silence" while another prophet speaks—that is, must not address the audience while another prophet is addressing it. Since women are not permitted "to speak"-that is, to make public addresses, as the prophets were doing-they should "keep silence;" "for it is shameful for a woman to speak in the church." To "speak in the church" means, as the entire passage shows, to make a public address in the way of instructing and edifying "the whole church," or congregation. While this is true, it does not follow that women should not answer questions in a class in a Sunday school, or a Monday school, or any other school. The two things are entirely different.

2. The "things" of Luke 9: 36 embrace the glorious vision of Jesus' transfiguration. Read Matt. 17: 1-9; Mark 9: 2-10; Luke 9: 28-36. The apostles were forbidden to tell this vision for only a short while. They must be more fully instructed and must understand more clearly the mission and work of Jesus as the Christ, and, therefore, the gospel in fact, before they could be sent out to preach it to the whole creation. Matt. 17: 9 says: "Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen from the dead." Then this prohibition was lifted and they were commanded by Christ to go "into all the world" and to tell it to "the whole creation."

3. The rich man of Luke 16: 19-31 is called "Dives" by men, not by the Bible, because "dives" means "a rich man," a rich man of the world. I cannot understand why men use such words instead of the plain words of the Bible, unless they desire to make a show of learning. really educated, wise, and good men use the simplest and plainest words. Consulting an ordinary dictionary or some Bible dictionary would save the time and trouble of asking and answering some questions.

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. The type is large and clear and is easily read. The size—5x734.

inches—is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps; 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

$6.00

In ordering, order Bible No. 102—Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

The clearest and simplest book of its kind published Price, 20 cents single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

LOCATED IN MISSISSIPPI.

BY J. D. TANT.

For many years there have been many calls from N. L. Clark and others to send gospel preachers to Mississippi. With few exceptions, it seems to be a neglected field.

After living in the Ozark Mountains of Arkansas for six years, I have traded for a farm near Greenville, Miss., and am now moving to that place.

Greenville is in the delta, and I have never found a finer farming country. Around Greenville lands are producing one bale of cotton, fifty bushels of corn, and eighty bushels of cats per acre, respectively. We have fine water and health in Greenville, with cement roads and good schools, with trucks to carry children from all directions. Many of these large farms are being cut up and sold, and I hope to settle at least twenty Christian families around Greenville this year to help build up the Master's cause.

Greenville is a city of fifteen thousand people, and there is no church of Christ in the city. Not only is Greenville void of gospel teaching, but one hundred other towns in Mississippi also.

On account of my financial condition, I shall not be able to do much preaching for a while, as I must work on the farm until I get my debts under control. If I can manage to get a tent, I hope to hold three or four meetings in this part of Mississippi this year. When I get able to own a car, I can reach out into regions beyond. I now have calls unanswered from Virginia, Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Illinois, Kentucky, and Oklahoma. I would much rather spend all my time in Mississippi, if my work is desired in that part.

I will be glad to get in touch with all Mississippi preachers and churches, and also with brethren who intend to move to this section.

THE EAST TENNESSEE MISSION FIELD.

BY G. W. FARMER.

After having called attention several times to the great need of gospel work in this section, I wish now to state that we are planning a program for more extended activities in this field for the present year than ever before. In addition to our watching vigilantly and cultivating more diligently where we have already done work, we want to do some work in new territory. In the section above Knoxville we are hoping to be able to do more work, and work in new localities.

In some localities a few isolated brethren and sisters can be found doing little or nothing, and I believe by some one's going among them and holding meetings and talking up an interest that they can be got together and put to work. Then, in the most of this section we have no members; but, to my mind, many people would give a hearing to the gospel, through curiosity at first, if nothing else, and I am confident a great work can be done. In doing this, the church will be working much more in accord with the divine order -instead of sounding in the word, as the custom is, so much to old, established congregations that have heard it over and over until they have actually tired of it, sound out the word to new people and in new territory, making new conquests for the truth. Now, to do this, may I suggest, and urge it, that we employ two good men with good ability, one to preach and the other to lead the singing and be a helper in a general way? In addition to their holding meetings, they could circulate tracts, sell good books, and interest the people in good, sound, religious papers. Now, to do this well, these brethren must be good mixers, affable, and agreeable among the people, and they must be indus-

Now, in this field they would get but very little support. We would not expect much, and, therefore, we will not depend upon it. But their support must come mainly from elsewhere. In view of this fact, I suggest to the brethren and sisters throughout East Tennessee, regardless of whether you have a congregation with which to meet or whether you are isolated—the responsibility is just the same, anyway-that you each one purpose in your heart to help in this work to the extent of your ability and lay by in store regularly for this purpose.

trious and energetic.

To the brethren, sisters, and congregations out of East Tennessee, I must insist that we must have help to do this work. Will you please consider this and help us to carry out our program for this work? In the Merchants Bank at Cleveland, Tenn., we carry an account, styled "The East Tennessee Mission Fund," and all funds sent to us for use in gospel work in this field we deposit to the credit of this fund, and it is drawn on as the needs demand.

Let every congregation or brother or sister who purposes in his heart to help in this work write to me at Cleveland, Tenn., and tell me what you plan to do, whether you are ready or not to make remittance. We must have some definite idea about what we can do before we can perfect our arrangements. Now, I am not claiming that this is a perfect plan, but I see nothing in it or about it con-

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they went to now and it does not both. want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri,-"For four Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydis E. Pink. men who had taken Lydia E. Pink-ham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. Mary E. Sandy, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydin E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

OFFICE Hours 10 to 12-2 to 5

PALMER GRADUATE

R. H. BENEDICT, D. C. CHIROPRACTOR

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES

Office 176 Eighth Avenue, North

trary to the teachings of God's word, and it seems to be the most feasible and certain of any plan of which I have thought. Does some one know of a better way or plan? If so, suggest it. We shall be glad to have it. But, my dear brethren, remember that this is the Lord's work, and we should meet it bravely and prayerfully.

Write me at once or very soon what you will do. Have fellowship with us in this work. The Lord blesses his people when they do their

McShane Bell Foundry Co. BELLS Memorials a Specialty

The Companion is packed full of entertaining and informing reading. For Boys, for Girls, for all the Family. To get the opening chapter of Beloved Acres your order should be sent to us at once.

TO GET

Cut out this advt. and mail it TODAY with 25c, for 10-weeks trial subscription, or $2.50 for a full year.

The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried, Č

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly carn it a permanent place in your home.

your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how guickly.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma. ness, cr asthma.

asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45; Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00. Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00. Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)

Mulid Boulevard care stop in front of the door, For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

OBITUARIES

JOHNSON.

Sister Kittie Perdue Johnson was born on December 8, 1846, and departed this life on November 2, 1924. She was the faithful wife of J. H. Johnson, senior elder of the West End Avenue congregation, Atlanta, Ga., and a mother, in every sense possible, to his four children who were left motherless by the death of his first wife. In addition to her immediate family, she is survived by John P. Perdue, Albert Perdue, Mrs. J. B. Johnson, Mrs. I. C. Suttles, and Mrs. R. Y. Lysle, besides a host of more Johnson, Mrs. I. C. Suttles, and Mrs. R. Y. Lysle, besides a host of more distant relatives and friends. More than sixty years of her life were spent in the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. She loved the church, and attended all the services of the West End Avenue congregation on the last Sunday she spent on earth. She loved to help the weak and console the distressed and troubled. She admonshed the careless and commended the faithful. Her gentle spirit disliked strife and sought peace. In her passing, the church has lost a saintly servant and a mother in Israel has gone home. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

B. C. GOODPASTURE.

KIRK.

KIRK.

Oscar Matthew Kirk was born on June 9, 1875, and departed this life on June 9, 1924; hence, he died the day he was forty-nine years of age. He obeyed the gospel about twenty years ago, and he had been a faithful Christian since. When I visited Patterson, Cal., soon after I came to the State in 1917, I met Brother Kirk, and we were good friends from that time till he passed away. After his health failed, he moved to Graton, Cal., hoping that he might regain his health, and also that he might have his children in the Pacific Christian Academy. His death occurred while Brother J. N. Armstrong was in Graton, and he conducted the funeral. Brother Kirk was buried in the ceme-Brother Kirk was buried in the cemetery at Graton, and his wife and four small children are still living in Graton. He suffered much during his last illness; but with the aid of his brother, Walter Kirk, a number of physicians, and the good brether nos the community, he received every possible attention. The community, the church, and the home will miss Brother Kirk; but we "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope."

W. HALLIDAY TRICE.

WILSON.

The funeral services of Sister Frances Wilson were conducted by Dr. J. S. Ward and the writer on November 12, 1924. "Frances," as she was affectionately called by her friends, was born in Franklin, Tenn., but the greater part of her life was spent in Nashville, where she taught in the city schools until failing health necessitated the giving up of a work she loved dearly. The writer was closely associated with Sister Frances and her family during his ministry at the Lindsley Avenue Church.

Be Quick-Be Sure

Get the right remedy—the best men know. So quick, so sure that millions now employ it. The utmost in a laxative. Bromide Quinine in ideal form. Colds stop in 24 hours, La Grippe in 3 days. The system is cleaned and toned. Nothing compares with Hill's.

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat
Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market. Postpaid, 399, 75c; 500, $1.09; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B.
Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.50; 10,000
up, at 80c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, eame price. Satisfaction guaranteed.
D. F. JAMISON,
Summerville, S. C.

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick, Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsleum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredients. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick relief assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago said to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 70c and $1.00.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

TICKLING THROAT

is always an annoyance; worse when it afflicts you in the night, preventing sleep. You can stop it quickly with which puts a soothing, healing coating on the dry, inflamed throat and stops the irritating mucus that causes the tickle.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

HERE IS YOURS!

An opportunity to engage in a dignified position selling Coggins Monuments. Intuition bids you act now. Territory is being assigned dally.

COGGINS MEMORIALS, executed in EL-BERTON BLUE GRANITE, "The Stone Eternal," or GEORGIA MARBLE, are un-excelled for beauty and durability. What more fitting tribute can be paid a departed loved one?

Mr. Palk, of Oklahoma, writes us: "Inclose the fifth order from Mr. Crenghaw, and the Gamble order Inclosed was unsolicited." He speaks from ten years' experience, and says further: "Your monuments have always been better than we have expected."

For spare or full time. Write for par-Uculars and confidential contract.

COGGINS MARBLE COMPANY 24 Main St., CANTON, GA.

COMMERCE-UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

Sure Relief

When her health permitted, she was at her place of duty on Lord's day. She always manifested a great interest in the congregation of which she was a member. Sister Frances was summoned from life comparatively young, but perhaps her mission had been fulfilled and God called her up higher to the reward which we feel she so richly deserved. Born into God's family at the early age of thirteen and faithfully walking in his ways until death, we feel that our loss is her eternal gain. Sister Frances is survived by her father, R. M. Wilson, and one sister, Mrs. Allene Johnston, to mourn their loss. "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." (Phil. 1: 21.)

J. LEONARD JACKSON.

ROBERTS.

On September 12, 1924, I went to Mercer County, Ky., near Harrods-burg, to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing relatives and friends at the funeral service of Sister Marat the funeral service of Sister Martha Roberts. She was born on February 2, 1848, and her spirit left its earthly dwelling place on September 11, 1924. Sister Roberts was the wife of John Roberts, who preceded her in death a few years. As a heritage of Jehovah, there were born to them fourteen children, fifty grandchildren, and forty-eight great-grandchildren, and forty-eight great-grandchildren. I have never seen a family more devoted to their mother and more deeply grieved over her departure than the Roberts family. Besides her children, Sister Roberts leaves behind four brothers and three sisters. She became obedient to the faith early in life, and was true and faithful to the end. I believe that the loss to the end. I believe that the loss to the end. I believe that the loss to the family in her going is very greatly outweighed by her eternal gain. "Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints," and to depart this life and be with Christ is very far better. Her children, who should rise up and call her blessed, should not servey as many who have should not sorrow as many who have no hope. One of her sons suggested no hope. One of her sons suggested that I read and emphasize at the funeral the description of a worthy woman given in the last chapter of Proverbs. He assured me that much of this was very applicable to his mother. With much tenderness the body was buried close by the Berea church house, where the service was conducted.

THOMAS D. ROSE. conducted. THOMAS D. ROSE.

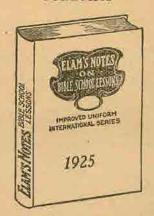

McCORKLE.

McCorkle.

Born into this world on February 9, 1843, Joe S. McCorkle lived, moved, and had his being amidst its joys and sorrows, successes and failures, for eighty-one years, six months, and one day. This one day was on the first day of the week. Brother McCorkle served as an elder of the church of the Lord Jesus Christ for twenty-five years, having served part of this time at Newbern, Tenn., and a long time at Yorkville, Tenn. His faith and loyalty to the cause of Christ were put to the acid test at different times during these years of Christian experience, but he endured that he may some day reign with Him who said: "He that believeth in me shall never die." Brother McCorkle was one of my best friends in this world. I preached for the church at Yorkville for quite a while and held one summer's meeting there. I have attended services there when others were preaching, and it was always an in-

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x534 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teacaers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living .-R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound .- N. B. Hardeman.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits.-H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me. -Price Billinguley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid_____$1.50

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate spiration to see the love and light and life of his soul beaming from his countenance while he sat at his place near the Bible stand. What a heritage he has left to Walter, Robert, and Sister Annie, his three children, who loved him unto the end! They are all three Christians, and may God bless and keep them in like precious faith of their father for a little while yet, and soon the grand reunion in that sweet home of the soul will be theirs to enjoy; and in this glorious reunion with departed loved ones, without doubt, there will be their sister, Mrs. T. M. Karnes, who over a year ago dropped earth's weary burden to enter into that endless rest awaiting all who trust and obey to the end.

EUGENE V. WOOD,

PUBLIC WORKERS.

BY H. M. PHYLLIPS.

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." "Be thou an example of the believers." "Abstain from all appearance of evil." "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." "That he might . . . purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." "Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself?"

These are but a few of the many statements which exhort to a holy life, a good example before others. Especially does such teaching apply to public workers in the church, because all are looking at them, but it also applies to all who claim to follow Jesus. It is evident from the study of the Bible that to keep one's self pure is demanded. We all make mistakes; but when we do, it is bound on us to correct them, confess them, turn from them, and pray to God for forgiveness.

It is a dangerous thing to play with sin, but many are so doing who are acting as leaders and public workers. This is surely wrong, and much harm often comes from such. A public worker or leader in the church with a bad influence will soon cause confidence to grow less and less till only a few will uphold the work. An elder who drinks, wrangles, uses bad language, goes to places of worldliness, talks mostly foolish talk, and is close and stingy, and is mixed up in worldly organizations which sometimes keep him from church services, or any other thing which is not becoming one who professes godliness, will soon cause less spirituality by his actions. A preacher who goes to picture shows, ball games, theaters, and uses vulgar language, tells smutty yarns, and uses suggestive talk in his preaching, and who has a stain of immoral conduct with the opposite sex, surely is badly handicapped in his influence for good. A young man who is not pure in life will surely cause some bitter remarks to be made and lower the cause as he publicly works and keeps up the immoral life. Women who are not pure in thought, word, and deed, who try to encourage others to duty, certainly hinder the cause, and often cause some weak one to stumble.

We cannot serve two masters. We are for Christ or against him. We need to make our choice as to whom we will serve or what kind of a life we will live. God wants all our service. He wants people who give themselves to him. He must have those who are his to deny themselves and present their bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to him. He accepts only those who forsake all and follow him, who abound in his work, follow in the steps of Jesus, and are busy about the Father's business, do-his commands.

What the church of Christ is in need of now is a thorough cleansing, then a continual purifying by the word in obedience to it. Till such is done, it will never have the influence it should. Its leaders need to lay aside every weight and the sin that besets, and run with patience the race. Corrupt workers mean corrupt churches. We often wink at sin which God surely would have us to clear ourselves of. Leaders who claim to be Christians, acting in the same way as sinners and going to places of the world, surely will drag the cause down. Let the church demand of its workers that they live as God says, and let all the members do likewise.

WORK AMONG OUR COLORED BRETHREN.

BY M. KEEBLE,

I closed my year's work for 1924 at the Jackson Street Church, in Nashville. While here, I. J. Terry, a Baptist preacher, challenged me for a debate. Two nights were enough for him. He claimed to have had fortyone debates up to that time, and he was highly educated; but the Word settled it with him.

When Brethren S. W. Womack and A. Campbell started the Jackson Street congregation, there were but a few loyal colored brethren in Nashville; but Brother Lipscomb encouraged them to press on, and they did, and a great work has been done by them. Brother Womack is dead and Brother Campbell is failing in health, but the works they have done will follow them.

I started my year's work for 1925 at home by preaching the first Sunday in the year at the Jackson Street Church. I have been blessed with the privilege of being with this congregation the first Sunday in the year for over twenty years. Just a few days before Christmas Brother A. M. Bur-

A FOUNTAIN PEN

Almost every one wants a first-class Fountain Pen. It is a great convenience and a timesaver. It is always ready to write the right thing. We have bought at a bargain a Self-Filler Fountain Pen—one with a clip for men and one with a ring for women. These Pens are as good as any $2.75 Fountain Pen. We are furnishing this Pen with the Gospel Advocate for one year at the exceedingly low price of $3.65. This is by far the best Fountain Pen we have ever offered to the readers of the Gospel Advocate. The value of the Pen with the Gospel Advocate for one year is $4.75. Our price to you, $3.65. The Pen is guaranteed. Specify whether a lady's or gentleman's Pen is wanted. Mabie-Todd Co., the oldest Fountain Pen manufacturers, make the Pen

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO
GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Gospel Advocate Company, Nashville, Tenn.

BRETHREN: Inclosed you will find $3.65, which will pay, my subscription for one year to the GOSPEL ADVOCATE and entitle me to the Fountain Pen.

Name
Post Office
0	NI-1

ton sent me a check for twenty-five dollars. Brother Burton for years has helped me in my work. I have never had to ask him to help me in my work; he just sees what I am trying to do. I also thank the white congregations that have called me to labor with my people, and I thank the colored churches also, which have assisted me much.

My first evangelistic work for this year began at Terrell, near Union City, Tenn., in a little schoolhouse. I spent a week here, but was rained out two nights. I preached four nights to a people that seemed hungry for the truth, and I tried to feed them. This four-nights' effort resulted in five precious souls obeying the truth. Three families, from Henderson, Tenn., that I baptized, moved to this section, and they began right away to teach the people around them, and then they called me to come and labor with them a few days. Now there is a new congregation of Christians there, and I am to return when weather conditions are better.

I am now in Birmingham, Ala., where I was called by the West End Church (white). A little over three years ago a new house costing something like two thousand dollars was built by the colored folks in Birmingham, and they are out of debt. The West End Church never stopped assisting them until the house was built and paid for, and even now they come and see how they are getting along. This church has continued to look after the colored work better than any that has called me to labor with my people. Nearly three hundred persons have been baptized since this work began, and the best part of it is that several preachers have developed in the congregation, and they have baptized twenty-five or more. This is a working church.

PLEASE DO NOT OVERLOOK PLACING YOUR MONEY IN THE ENVELOPE WITH YOUR ORDER

ORDER BLANK

BIBLE LESSON HELPS

Date	, 192
Please enter the following order to be ser	nt to the address below:
For1	92, to, 192
Name
P. O
County	State
Remittance inclosed in payment of t	this order, $
NO STANDING ORI	DERS TAKEN
ELAM'S NOTES FOR 1925	@ 85 cents per copy, $
(Five or More to One Ad (Single Copy, 9	0e)
ADVANCED QUARTERLY, 64 pages (Five or More to One Ad (Single Copy, 20c Per	@ 12 cents per quarter, $ dress, Each) Quarter)
INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY, 32 pa	ges @ 6 cents per quarter, $dress, Each)
PRIMARY QUARTERLY, 32 pages (Five or More to One Ad	@ 6 cents per quarter, $ dress, Each)
LITTLE JEWELS (mailed quarterly) (Five or More to One Ad (Single Copy, 20c Per	dress, Each)
THE YOUNG PEOPLE (mailed month (Five or More to One Ad (Single Copy, 20c Per Quarter, 80c Per Year—Fore	ly) @ 15 cents per quarter, $
LESSON LEAVES (Five or More to One Ad	@ 5 cents per quarter, $ SETS LESSON PICTURE CARDS (Five or More to One Ad
LESSON PICTURE CHARTS	@ $1.00 per quarter, $
CLASS BOOKS (7 cents each)	@ 75 cents per dozen, $
SUNDAY-SCHOOL RECORD (for enti	re year) $2.50 per copy,$
COLLECTION ENVELOPES	@ 75 cents per dozen, $
Total
Literature should be ordered to expi	re with the end of the quarters

ary, April, July, and October; expire March, June, September, and December.

Remit by Post-Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or Express Money Order, otherwise at the sender's risk.

CAREFULLY EXAMINE YOUR ORDER BEFORE MAILING Cut Out Order Blank and Mail To-Day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

"I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)

"We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)

"I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)

"We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no critt-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)

"I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Com-pany. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

"The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)

"Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)

"I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)

"The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartfly recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)

"A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently, Having examined it carefully, I am giad to say I consider it excellent, and giadly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)

"As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McOutsian) McQuiddy.)

"It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of hie life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

"Brother E. A. Elam's Notes as nub-

"Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, soriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pulliss.)

"At the Central church of Christ in Fort "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-propared mon in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

"I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Soriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes, I compare them weekly. I do not heeltste to say that Blam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.) "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years.

A LETTER FROM BROTHER YOHANNAN.

BY J. W. GRANT.

Since writing the appeal for Brother Yohannan that appeared in the Gospel Advocate of January 15, I have received a pathetic letter from him that I will give entire, almost verbatim. He says:

November 27, 1924—Prof. J. W. Grant.—Dear Sir and My Beloved Brother in Christ Jesus: I send greeting and grace, and I am hoping, from our Father and Lord Jesus Christ, this my small letter will find you well and quite happy. Give my best regards to my dear Sister Grant, and to my dear brother in Christ, A. B. Lipscomb, and to my Prof. S. P. Pittman, and to all brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus. Please, brethren, remember me in your prayers, as I am in great, great necessity, without help. My lines are passing in great bitterness—why, I will tell you: I have lost one of the greatest of wives. I do not know what to do. My lines are passing bitterly after the death of that noble wife. From my thinking after her, I have been sick. I was not trying to write to you any more. I thought we will meet on the other that noble wife. From my thinking after her, I have been sick. I was not trying to write to you any more. I thought we will meet on the other side; but now I am better. Possibly He spares me for His good cause.

Now, we have not any wheat to sow, nor land, nor money to build us a place of shelter. From necessity our children are very [nearly] much naked. I am revealing all my secrets like to my own brethren. I am in great need. I need your encouragement and your prayers.

Dear Brother Grant, I have received your welcome and kind letters with three checks, for which I thank you very much. Indeed, the goodness of the brethren can never be forgotten, whatsoever they have done for us in our great and great necessity. Please, brethren, remember us with good encouragement.

Still I am doing my Christian duty as before, preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ to the poor sinners. Besides this, I am teaching. If you brethren will help me concerning the school, to hire some more teachers, I shall be thankful.

Excuse my irregular letter. I am not very much strong. I am your brother in Christ Jesus, ALEXANDER KH. B. YOHANNAN.

I have not sent the remittance yet that I mentioned in a recent issue of the Advocate. I will not send it until all who wish to respond to this appeal and wish me to send their donations have a chance to send them to me. I will gladly forward all that may be intrusted to me for him, and will send card receipts to all who send funds to me. Let us not make it too long off. Address me as early as you can, at Largo, Fla., Box 10.

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820

Gray's Cintment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

"BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST! SAY

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Pain

Headache Toothache Neuralgia Neuritis

Lumbago Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets Also bettles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per dozen, per copy ... Per 60, per copy... .87 Per dozen, per copy .88 | Per 100, per copy... .85

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy.....$0.30 | Per 50, per copy......27
Per dozen, per copy .28 | Per 100, per copy......25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKE

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 11/2 inches deep, 91/4 inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

GOOD BOOKS FOR YOUR LIBRARY

BOOKS WRITTEN BY D. LIPSCOMB AND	RELIGIOUS DISCUSSIONS
E. G. SEWELL Civil Government. By David Lipscomb. Cloth.	Brents-Herod Debate. Paper bound. Price, postpaid
158 pages. Price, postpaid	Debate on the Roman Catholic Religion. Cloth. New edition. 360 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75
Sewell. (Edited by M. C. Kurfees.) Cloth. 700 pages. Price, postpaid	The Evidences of Christianity, Cloth. New edition. Price, postpaid
Commentary on Acts. By David Lipscomb. Cloth. 250 pages. Price, postpaid	Cayce-Srygley Discussion. Cloth. 352 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Salvation from Sin. By David Lipscomb. Cloth. 440 large pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Sal- vation. Cloth. 350 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
SERMONS, SERMON MATERIAL, COMMEN- TARIES	Why the Baptist Name. Cloth. 320 pages. Price.$1.50
Gospel Sermons. By Dr. T. W. Brents. Cloth. 440 large pages. Price, postpaid$2,00	Stark-Warlick Debate, Paper, 186 pages. Price_$0.50 Boswell-Hardeman Discussion on Instrumental
Letters and Sermons of T. B. Larimore. (In three volumes. We have only Volumes II. and III.) By Mrs. Emma Page Larimore. Price, per volume, postpaid	Music in the Worship, Cloth. 239 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons, Volumes I.	FOR TEACHERS AND SCHOLARS Outlines of Bible Study. By G. Dallas Smith.
and II. Cloth. Price, per volume	Price, single copy, postpaid $0.75 Per dozen, postpaid $8.25
Biographies and Sermons. By F. D. Srygley.	Sermon Outlines. A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines. Price, post- paid$1.00
The Gospel Plan of Salvation. By Dr. T. W. Brents. Cloth, 8vo. Price, postpaid$2.50	Handbook on Baptism. By J. W. Shepherd. Revised Edition. Cloth. 486 pages. Price,
The Jerusalem Tragedy. By A. P. Stout. Illustrated. Price, postpaid$1.50	postpaid$1.50
Christian Treasures. By A. B. Lipscomb. Two volumes. Price, per volume	SPECIAL GIFT BOOKS Ailenroc's Book. (Poems and Stories.) By
The Christian System. By Alexander Campbell, Cloth. 12mo. 383 pages. Price, postpaid$1.75	Mrs. Sarah Cornelia Alexander. 205 pages. Bound in cloth. Price, postpaid
Christian Baptism. By Alexander Campbell. Half leather. 12mo: 444 pages. Price, post- paid $1.75	Sunshine; or, Uncle Minor's Stories. 256 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
Evidences of Pardon. By C. E. Holt. Paper cover. 105 pages. Price	Character; or, The Making of the Man. By Edward W. Carmack. Leather ooze. In box. Price, postpaid$1.50
Instrumental Music in the Worship. By M. C. Kurfees. Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid_$1.50	Old Limber; or, The Tale of the Taylors. By DeLong Rice. Price, postpaid$1.00
Travels in Bible Lands. By Andy T. Ritchie. Price, postpaid$1.50	BIOGRAPHICAL
Price, postpaid$1.50 Adventism and the Bible. By J. Henry Monk. Cloth. Price, postpaid$1.25	Larimore and His Boys. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. Price, postpaid
The New Testament Church. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50	Seventy Years in Dixie. By F. D. Srygley. Cloth, 400 pages. Price, postpaid$1.50
The Word of Reconciliation. By J. D. Floyd. Cloth. 231 pages, Price, postpaid$1.00	Gospel Lessons and Life History. By E. G. Sewell. Cloth. 338 pages. Price, postpaid$1.25
FOR ELDERS AND DEACONS The Model Church. By G. C. Brewer. Price,	Life of Elder John Smith. By John Augustus Williams. Cloth. Price, postpaid$1.50
Price $1.00 Around the Lord's Table. By A. B. Lipscomb. $0.25	Life Work of Mrs. Charlotte Fanning. By Mrs. Emma Page Larimore. Cloth. 12mo. 201 pages. Price, postpaid

ORDER TO-DAY

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Volume LXVII. No. 6.

NASHVILLE, TENN., FEBRUARY 5, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT OUR CONTRIBUTORS Spiritual Surgery—"He That Winneth Souls is Wise" —Reminiscences of the Past—What Does It Mean?— The Work at Russell and Ninth—"And This They Did" (No. 3)—Prayer (No. 1)—My Prospective Debats.	121 122
OUR MESSAGES	128 130
	134 135 136 137
Whitfield—Seay—Key—Hardeman—Young—Bingham, Report of New York Work	138 141 142

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

The editor of the Baptist and Reflector, writing on "The Main Thing," says:

There can be no question that evangelism is the main line of Christian action, since it was the Master's avowed business in the world. A decline in soul-saving is a serious symptom and should be alarming. Since 1922, says Dr. Scarborough, Southern Baptists have fallen off in the number of baptisms from 241,000 to 195,000 last year. There may be "evangelistic waves" which means an ebb and flow of soul-winning enthusiasm which may not be especially ominous; but where there is any sign of having actually gone backward, it behooves us to look for and remove the hindering cause.

We think that "the main thing" for any man to do is to determine to obey God. This is "the one thing needful, "the good part," without which life is a failure. The primary reason that caused Jesus to come to this earth was to rescue man from the dominion of Satan and to bring him again under the rule of God, his Creator. Hence, the principal object of the advent of Christ was not to make men religious, as men were religious before he came; nor to make men moral, as men are moral who refuse to accept Jesus and submit to his authority.

Underlying all religion is that love of God that leads to obedience to God. "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.) Without this love which prompts to an implicit obedience, as a little child, with no preference or will of self, all religious service and worship is "become sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal." To be able to "speak with the tongues of men and of angels" is a great thing in a secondary way; but if the man able to preach thus does not have that love that prompts him to magnify implicit obedience to God, as God's will and commandments are revealed in his word, his preaching will never redound to the glory of God nor to the salvation of a single soul. If a man be so philanthropic as to give all his "goods to feed the poor," yet is not willing to do all that the word of God teaches, "it profiteth" him "nothing." If he goes so far as to make the greatest sacrifice possible to man and gives his "body to be burned," but presumptuously does things that God, in his word, does not command him to do, or willfully refuses to do anything that God commands him to do, "it profiteth" him "nothing." Without obedience, all singing, praying, preaching, giving—all is empty and vain and "profiteth me nothing."

All Christians should be engaged in the work of preaching and teaching the gospel. Every congregation should be a center of activity, as "a city set on a hill." In New Testament times all disciples of Jesus "went everywhere preaching the word." They did it simply as Christians and as members of the church. Anything got up to preach the gospel, or to do any other Christian work, which is larger or smaller than a local congregation of Christians, is a hindrance and not a help.

But our Baptist friends ought not to complain that since 1922 "Southern Baptists have fallen off in the number of baptisms from 241,000 to 195,000 last year." They are teaching the people that baptism is nonessential and that a man can be saved from his sins, live the Christian life, and go to heaven when he dies, without it. So they ought not to complain because the people are refusing to be baptized. They teach that Methodists, Presbyterians, and others who refuse to be baptized are saved and are Christians. Why should a man want to be baptized, if he can be saved and be a Christian without so doing?

Of course, Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) But Baptists think that Jesus surely could not have meant to say such a thing as that. Still, there it stands in plain words, and there is no way to get it out of the Bible; yet, according to the Baptists, it ought not to be there. They think that Jesus evidently meant to say, "He that believeth and is saved should be baptized," but still it does not read that way; and the simple fact that it reads, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," has given the Baptist denomination, and Baptist preachers, no little trouble in their anxiety to prevent the people from believing that Jesus meant exactly what he said.

The Western Recorder (Baptist) thinks that big drives for money have been overshadowing things that are more important than money and makes a most important point in these words:

in these words:

In our effort last week to clarify the situation into which Southern Baptists have come, we called attention to the unfortunate lack of prayer and deliberation and meditation on our going into the Seventy-five Million Campaign. By the blessing of God, we shall endeavor to find our way back from whatever mistakes may have been made in that campaign to a "center of gravity" in which we shall officially and unofficially seek to emphasize everything taught in the word of God, humbly depending upon the Holy Spirit for guidance and direction.

It is with no spirit of criticism or faultfinding that we refer again to the lopsidedness of the emphasis which placed financial objectives on the center of the stage and so intensified our preoccupation in urging the support of them that no time seemed to be left for us officially to give an equal prominence to those spiritual commitments of Southern Baptists which are our very lifeblood.

While Gospel Advocate readers understand that we

While Gospel Advocate readers understand that we think it scriptural to be a Christian instead of a Baptist, and that we plead for "those spiritual commitments of" Christianity as they were "committed" by inspired men and recorded in the New Testament, rather than for "those spiritual commitments of Southern Baptists," as originated and propagated by men, at the same time we most heartily wish to indorse the good point thus made by the editor of the Western Recorder. There can be no doubt that the disposition to magnify money has made the religious world "lopsided" and that great drives for funds to capitalize almost any kind of project that almost anybody takes it into his or her head to start has put things "on the center of the stage" that ought not to be on "the stage" at all. Whenever "our preoccupation in urging the support" of "financial objectives" becomes "so intensified" as to make us think that the "financial objectives" constitute the main thing, "we" have got too far away from the teaching of Jesus Christ to have any proper conception of the enormity of "our" sin or to have any clear idea of the real work of the church.

Why can't people be satisfied to work simply as members of the church? The church is the only divine organization on earth. God established the church to do every good work in which any good man or woman could possibly participate. The church is God's "missionary society" to "preach the gospel to every creature," and it is God's "relief society" "to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." All of this work can be better and more efficiently done by every local congregation in its own neighborhood. Whenever anybody starts anything larger than a local congregation, it is too large to be scriptural; and whenever anybody starts something smaller than a local congregation, it is too small to meet God's approval. Why this mania for "starting" things, anyhow? God has already "started" the church, and it covers the case entirely. Why not every member of every congregation go ahead in a quiet and unpretentious way and do the work, each in his own neighborhood, that God had already "started" by establishing the church? With that done, they may then reach out into "the regions beyond" as they have opportunity. Still, this simplicity of God's way does not appeal to those imbued with worldly ideas. They are not satisfied to work humbly and quietly, simply as members of the church. It must be recognized as a curious fact that those who are the least sound in word and doctrine and who never do anything as members of the church are generally the ones to "start" something that causes trouble ever afterwards, and that chokes the work of the church by "starting" a human cooperation to monopolize the work of all the churches in a consolidation larger than a local congregation. The elders of our congregations, whose duty it is to rule well, should put a stop to this sort of thing.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

We are at work now on a new and enlarged edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachmon.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

"The Gospel Plan of Salvation," by Dr. T. W. Brents, is a book that does not wear out with age. All who have read it say that it is a great production and the best book of a master mind. Price, $2.50.

Every church should know its membership. In order to keep informed as to the residence and membership of your church, you should have a church record. Our Church Record is the very thing you need. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

SPIRITUAL SURGERY.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE OFFENDING EYE AND HAND.

When our Lord said, "If thy right eye causeth thee to stumble, pluck it out," and, "If thy right hand causeth thee to stumble, cut it off," he was not advocating the pagan practices of self-mutilation by which millions of people have sought peace of mind and heart. He was uttering a new truth which Christianity alone can claim. If any think there can be propitiation for their sin through some personal self-effacement or sacrifice, they miss his meaning. "He is the propitiation for our sins," and there can be nothing added or taken from it. And it was the concern of the Savior that all should appropriate the redemption which he provided.

After the Master had condemned the lustful look as the root of the sinful deed, he added: "And if thy right eye causeth thee to stumble, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not thy whole body be cast into hell. And if thy right hand causeth thee to stumble, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not thy whole body go into hell." Here we have the offending "eye," which is to be plucked out, and the offending "hand," which is to be cut off. Here also is mentioned "hell"—Gehenna—for the offending body, the body which will not be ruled. Apropos to these terms as here employed I shall have somewhat to say.

REMOVING THE AFFECTED MEMBER.

The offending eye or hand is to be removed in order that the whole body shall not perish. This, Jesus says, is "profitable" and "good." It is not difficult to see why this is so. If one affected member is kept, the rest of the body will suffer because of the affected member. If by keeping the affected member the whole body is to be cast into hell on that account, it is better to part with the offending member. It is a sharp medicine which the Great Physician prescribes, but it is needful, and it is sure of results.

An analysis of our own experience shows us that sin has a tendency to get a fruitage through some particular avenue of our lives. Each has his "besetting sin," or, as some one has named it, his "upsetting sin." Such a sin is so characterized because it makes an especial appeal to the individual, causing him to forget for the time all the provisions of divine grace provided to save him from that sin. It may be an inherited weakness, an inordinate ambition, or some sensuous thrill to which evil appeals, making its victim condone and excuse that particular sin in his own life. Many a man in his sober moments sees the error of that which he has no power to control in temptation. Therefore the advice of Jesus that he should pluck out the eye or cut off the hand that furnishes the occasion for the sin. This does not mean that Jesus proposes to save us by the amputation of our faculties, or that he does not approve of the use of all faculties, but it does point to the absolute necessity of self-mastery and self-direction over all of them in the interest of righteousness. All our members must be brought into subjection to the obedience of Christ. It was necessary that even Paul should buffet

Let us weigh these words of our Lord. In them there are two very outstanding convictions of thought. First is his terrific aversion to the very thought and appearance of evil. His teaching is that nothing is so deadly as sin; that sin must be thwarted at any cost. This truth is enforced with an illustration that falls in the domain of surgery. The offending member must be loosed from the body that the rest of the body may be saved. The surgeon in the study of anatomy comes to an appreciation of the mechanism of the body which other men do not have, but that very appreciation leads him to remove an affected member to save the rest of the body from the malady. So our Lord, the Creator of man, so appreciates human life that he advises the saving of it at the cost of a most vital member. There is nothing that so endangers the spirituality of Christians of to-day as the loss of this drastic aversion to sin which the Master had. We simply do not appreciate the enormity of sin as he did. If we did, there would be some plucking out of eyes, some cutting off of hands. Think of how the Father hates sinwhy, he will not so much as look upon sin! That is why for the first time in eternity he had to turn his face away from his own and only Son as that Son died with the piteous "Eloi" of the cross upon his lips. No wonder that he who was made a curse for us and our Sin Bearer should say: "Pluck out the evil eye! Cut off the evil

The second thought for our consideration is the earnestness with which Jesus would have us pursue right-eousness. Think, again, of how he died on the cross that we might partake of his righteousness. "Him who knew no sin he made to be sin on our behalf; that we might become the righteousness of God in him." He "was made unto us wisdom from God, and righteousness and sanctification, and redemption." As the sinless substitute for us, he suffered on the accursed tree that we might be forgiven of our offenses, that we might be accounted righteous. Since he redeemed us with so great a redemption, we ought to become partakers of his righteousness with the earnest of our hearts. If he yielded up his life that we might live, we ought also to yield up any offending thing that forfeits our life.

In order to a righteous life, the Master says we must control our members. He demands that we have the eye single for him. Of all the senses, that of the sight is, for most of us, the choice possession; but even it must be sacrificed rather than that we should undertake the futile experiment of enjoying the "lust of the eye" part of the time. And the right hand, the most important servant of the will of man, must be controlled or removed. The eye must be single, not lustful; the hand must be obedient, not cunning in wickedness.

THE SURGERY OF THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

Translating all this into the realm of the spiritual as our Lord evidently intended us to do, it simply means that the evil must be cast out of our lives and that all our faculties be made to serve Christ. If they cannot be made to so serve, if we cannot control them with purpose of heart, then our Lord advises spiritual surgery. The evil is the enemy of the good, and to save an evil and unruly thing is poor policy when we are sacrificing the good in order to do it. The evil thing had best be plucked out, cut off, cast away.

Paul calls this a circumcision of the heart. "Gircumcision is that of the heart," he says. "We are the circumcision," he says again, "who worship by the Spirit of God, and glory in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh." "In whom [Christ] ye were also circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, in the putting off of the body of the flesh, in the circumcision of Christ; having been buried with him in baptism," and so forth. In Christ we put off the old man, and in him we crucify the flesh.

The trouble lies with the heart. "Every one that looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." The eye that giveth a lustful look is to be plucked out. There is need of heart cleansing. "Out of the heart come forth evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, railings: these are the things which defile the man." "Each man is tempted," says James, "when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed."

Now, if an object dear as the right eye, or useful as the right hand, lead you into sin, that object you are to part with. If a man had no better way to avoid sin and hell than by yielding up his eye or hand, it would be profitable to choose this. "It is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not thy whole body be cast into hell." "It is good for thee to enter into life maimed or halt, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into the eternal fire."

THE DANGER OF HELL FIRE.

Mark how Jesus holds the justice of God before men in terms of hell fire and undying remorse. Gehenna is meant invariably. "Cast into hell," "the eternal fire," "the hell of fire," "the unquenchable fire;" "where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." The easy argument that all this is figurative, and therefore fiction, is merely the dodge of the sensualist. Men who live in sin on the sensual plane have so little appreciation of the spiritual that the moment they are told that in the world to come they have no physical consequences of sin to meet, they are immediately convinced that the cause for fear is gone. But let us remember, first, that it cannot be proved that Jesus was not speaking of physical suffering; but that even if this could be proved, then a more terrible thing faces us. If he saw in the spiritual future consequences so terrible that they could be described only in such terms as "unquenchable fire," what must the reality be! If "fire" is a mere symbol, it is none the less the symbol of the sum total of certain dreadful realities for which there are no adequate representations in human language.

The whole subject resolves itself into a single question. Are we in earnest, as the Lord Jesus Christ would have us be? If we are not, then our first and greatest task is immediately to seek and deal with the cause. Issues of life and death are involved: life, if we follow the Spirit; death, if we follow the flesh.

"HE THAT WINNETH SOULS IS WISE." BY LOULA M. ADKISSON.

No one of the many wise and beautiful sayings of Solomon is more appealing than this one: "He that winneth souls is wise." He is wise in winning souls to Christ, in that he not only saves others, but himself as well.

It has been estimated that out of the twenty million young men of America, only one million are Christians. Is not such a startling statement enough to appall the heart of every Christian? In view of this fact, it is not surprising that the world seems to be dominated by evil. Would that every one had the burning desire to win souls to Christ that the dying woman had whose one lament was:

"Must I empty-handed go? Must I greet my Savior so?"

If we had such desire, the unconverted ratio would be greatly lessened.

Recently a certain pretty hymn was sung at church. I thought as I sat and listened to the cadence of the song, what a wonderful thing it would be if every one who left that church would heed the admonition, "Take the name of Jesus with you"—take it every day in every walk of life! What an aid and inspiration that name would be in winning souls to Christ. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4: 12.) It is only through Jesus that souls can be won and saved. Great and precious are the promises to the winner of souls. "Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." (James 5: 20.) "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." (Dan. 12: 3.) It is no wonder the wise man said: "He that winneth souls is wise."

We commend both the matter and spirit of this article. It emphasizes a most important and engaging subject. It reminds me of a question a brother and his wife asked some months ago in selecting songs for service. When they came to "Rescue the Perishing," they asked; "How will it do to sing that?" I replied, "We should have been singing that all our lives," and I add here, acting it, too. Winning souls to Christ, or rescuing the perishing, is the very greatest work in which mortals can engage.

E.A.E.

REMINISCENCES OF THE PAST. BY T. C. LITTLE.

In looking over the pages of the Gospel Advocate this week (January 1), as my custom has been, the article on the first page by Brother Allen awakened memories that are very dear to me. I am reminded that with this issue is the beginning of the fifty-sixth year it has been making its weekly visits to my home [While the fiftysixth year of entering Brother Little's home, with this year it commences its sixty-seventh volume. We rejoice that the Little family have read the Advocate over half a century.-J. A.l, and I gladly give my testimony that in all these years it has stood for the "ancient order of things" in faith and practice, and that its influence has been for the advancement of the cause of Christ in this part of the vineyard. Perhaps a little of the history of the church in this county would substantiate this assertion. In giving this history, I will have to ask pardon for reference to myself and to my work.

In December, 1868, I married a young Christian woman who had been a constant reader of the Gospel Advocate from its beginning. I was a Presbyterian. We subscribed for the Advocate, and read it in connection with the Bible. In 1876 I was baptized by Granville Lipscomb. In November, 1881, I was appointed to preach the gospel of Christ by the congregation at Fayetteville, Tenn., where I am yet living. At that time we had no resident preacher in this county (and had never had), only three congregations that met every Sunday for worship, and only three houses for worship. However, we were visited occasionally by Brethren Jesse Sewell, J. M. Kidwill, F. M. Smithson, W. H. Dixon, H. F. Leonard, Granville Lipscomb, and B. F. Hart, for monthly preaching and meetings, often having from ten to seventy-five additions in a meeting. It was, indeed, a great privilege to sit at the feet of these grand soldiers of the cross and hear them preach "Christ, and him crucified," for the love of the truth and its power to save. They are all dead, except Brother B. F. Hart, of Petersburg. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Their works follow them, while they rest from their labors.

To-day we have in this (Lincoln) county twenty congregations, eighteen houses of worship, and six preachers. All these churches are not as active as they should be. Indeed, some seem to be "making haste backward," while others are pressing on to the goal. As the older members are passing away and younger ones take their places and times are so changed, it seems hard for them not to change their religion. In order to show that I am familiar with the situation, I will add that, during the forty-three years of my ministry, principally in this and near-by counties, I have preached five thousand times, conducted sixteen hundred funerals, baptized eight hundred people, and married four hundred couples. I am still at work. In 1924, besides regular preaching, I held three meetings, baptized twenty people, and conducted forty funerals. My work has not been as much as it should. But, by the grace of God, the influence of a Christian wife and of the Gospel Advocate, together with the esteem and encouragement of good and faithful members of the body of Christ and friends without, I am what I am.

May our Heavenly Father help the Gospel Advocate and all its readers to walk by faith to the end of the journey of life, to meet the Savior in peace, and hear the welcome plaudit: "Well done, good and faithful servants: enter into the kingdom prepared for you from the foundatien of the world."

THE WORK AT RUSSELL AND NINTH. BY S. H. HALL.

By request, I make a brief report of the work we have done and are trying to do at the congregation worshiping at Russell and Ninth Streets.

When 1924 closed, counting some items that did not go through the hands of Brother Dillard, our treasurer, I find that around twelve thousand dollars was put into the work last year. Some two thousand dollars went for local charity, five hundred dollars to foreign missions, five hundred dollars to home missions, and, counting what we are doing for the Fanning Orphan School and the Tennessee Orphan Home at Columbia, Tenn., we spent about nine hundred dollars toward helping to educate worthy boys and girls who need help. One of the best things that I observed, in looking over the record, was that our young people put nearly three hundred dollars into an effort to make the poor happy during the Christmas that has just passed. They seemed to be so happy as they went about this.

Everything seems to be in a better condition for work this (my fourth) year with these good people than ever before. Our men and women, boys and girls, are working as never before. There were above fifty visits made last week by our sisters to comfort the sick and help the poor, and everything is so arranged that such work will be systematically done for the whole year, and not just in spells. Next week, on Wednesday evening, some fifteen or sixteen young men ranging in age from fourteen to eighteen will conduct a study of the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, then two weeks from that night another group of young men ranging in age from eighteen to twenty-two will lead us through the study of the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians. I never saw young people more eager to work. Last Lord's day (January 25), besides the forenoon and evening services, we conducted four other services in the afternoon for our sick and aged. The number in our Bible study at 10 A.M. stood around three hundred, with four hundred in view as our goal. Seventeen have already been added to our number for the first month in the new year.

It has been said that it is not good to have large congregations; that, if we do, much of the talent in the local church will go unused. When it comes to saying how large a local church can become and remain scriptural, I am at a loss to say. We know of but one congregation in Jerusalem. If there was just one congregation there, I am forced to say that there has never been since another so large in numbers. It seems that that first church, sure enough, worked. But when it comes to getting a large congregation to work as it should these days, I am constrained to say that you have some job on your hands. This seems to be true also of the smaller congregations.

I cannot see why a large congregation should not work just as well as a small one. The one needed thing to-day is to teach every member, old and young, rich and poor, educated and uneducated, to work, and the leaders in the local church should help them find work to do. But when you once get them started, they will soon learn how to find it themselves. I believe every child of God on earth who has once seen the cross of Christ as it really is wants to work. It is wonderful to think that Christ would come here and die a death I deserved to die, and that if he had not done so I would have been forever lost, world without end. Too few in the church see this and appreciate it. Souls are going down to death and ruin, and they are going so very fast. What we do, we must do quickly, or our chance to save them will be forever gone. With such work before us, it goes beyond me when I find brethren stopping to "fuss" along the way.

A good brother in Texas recently wrote me, asking that I send him a brief report of the work at Russell and Ninth, stating just how we go about it. I could not find time to get the answer to him at the time he wished to use it. But I will say this: There is nothing to it except hard work. And when you go back to the days of the apostles, you will find that "eternally at work," and "every joint supplying, according to the effectual working," was the system that enabled them to give the gospel to every creature in about thirty-three years. Get every member to work. And we should go about this just as we do in getting aliens to be baptized—viz., because their salvation depends on their being working members, fruit-bearing branches, soul winners.

There is a matter that I hope it is in order to tell, and with this the report must close. A good brother in our congregation, owning a lot that adjoins the church lot, decided to build a home for us. He was readily joined by two other brethren, and the first thing we knew a neat, two-story, brick-veneered building stood complete, excepting some furniture, back-yard fence and garage, costing these brethren around six thousand dollars. At our first business meeting this year these good brethren agreed to donate all that they had put in it if the other members would do the rest. This was gladly accepted and the deed was made and recorded, and soon we moved in. Friday night, January 23, a "gathering together" was had at the church house; then, led by Brother Ridley Derryberry, our song leader, they quietly marched down Ninth Street, around the corner of Ninth and Woodland, and ascended the walk way until Ridley stood on the top step in front of the door, and then they burst out in singing the following words:

> Praise and thanksgiving be to Jehovah; Highest archangels, praise and adore; Let us unite our hearts and our voices, Singing the praise of God evermore.

Sing to Jehovah, Father all-glorious; Sing to the Son, our King evermore; Sing to the Spirit, high and exalted; God over all, thy name we adore.

I don't think I have ever heard words that sounded so sweet. A queer feeling came over me when the singing was first heard; but when I opened the door and saw the walk way filled with people, then the sidewalk to Ninth Street and up Ninth toward the church house, and filled, too, with souls with whom we had labored so hard for three years, the tears could be scarcely restrained. They then began to file into the house, and in they went until every room was packed on both floors, and I had to slip to the back door and press my way in. Every one had a gift of some kind. With difficulty we managed to arrange to open the gifts and call the names of the givers, after which I tried to say something, then Brother Bixler led a prayer, and we sang "In the Sweet By and By," and they quietly filed out.

They call it a "shower;" but if that was a "shower," I am wondering what a sure-enough rain would look like. It looked like a "storm" to us.

Now, I hope that you, kind reader, will find no fault in me for telling you about this. Mrs. Hall and I have never had greater joy than this brought us. I have worked hard at Russell and Ninth, and the Lord has blessed our labors, but this was such a surprise to us! May God help us, to a degree, to be worthy of such goodness from his people. One of the most beautiful things in the whole affair was the presence of Brother and Sister Bixler, seventy-five and eighty years old, and who had to come some eight or ten miles. I say again, we did not expect this, and feel so unworthy. Mrs. Hall and I certainly were made happy, but certainly we could not feel as happy as that crowd looked, and even on the Lord's day following the rejoicing continued.

May God help us to make this the best year in the history of this work and in my feeble efforts to preach only the truth and to treat each and every soul just as the Spirit of Christ led him to treat men as he came in contact with them.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

BY J. D. TANT.

I notice in the Gospel Advocate that Brother A. McGary is writing what he thinks of a gospel preacher in Tennessee who calls sectarian preachers "brother" and calls on them to lead in prayer. McGary thinks such is hypocrisy, and that preachers who do such, not believing those sectarian preachers are Christians, are hypocrites. I know of more than twenty "big" preachers in Tennessee that people tell me are guilty of the same.

For instance, Billy Sunday is not my brother in Adam, for I have come out of Adam. He is not my brother in Christ, for he has not come into Christ. There were religious churches when Christ was here. Sadducees and Pharisees were more in accord with the word of God than any of the sects of our time, yet Christ never did talk about his Sadducee brethren nor his Pharisee brethren, like many of my brethren talk about their Baptist and Methodist brethren.

In the long ago when I was in debate with J. N. Hall, he urged me to call him "Brother" Hall. But his god was not my God, even he being judge. Therefore, I could not compromise the word of God in calling him "brother."

Recently I met two Baptist preachers in a ten-days' debate; and knowing that from a Bible standpoint I could not call them "brother," I did not try. I also met John R. Clark again in debate in Mississippi, but still he was not my brother.

Paul tells Timothy to use sound speech that cannot be condemned.

Brother Hall, in the last Advocate, indorses "Paul, who said: 'Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." Those sectarian preachers who do more to pull down Christianity than infidels do are not my brethren, and I do not expect to lie nor act the hypocrite in calling them "brother." The Bible I teach knows nothing of compromise, and I shall fight it out along that line, if I have to fight alone.

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.—Kelty.

Beginning to see duty from above instead of seeing it from below—surrounding it with God—this is knowing what duty is, the opportunity that he and we have together.—G. Stanley Lee. "AND THIS THEY DID." No. 3. BY J. W. BUSH, M.D.

Please read the first two articles of this series, also 2 Cor. 8: 1-5, before beginning to read this article.

7. They were willing of themselves. (See verse 3.) They did not need to be coaxed, exhorted, entreated, or persuaded, but freely and eagerly reached out a helping hand. The life they lived shows us that the glory of the Christian life is not in possession, but in transmission; not in our capacity to receive, but in our ability to give. "The glory which thou gavest me I have given them."

Cannot the disciples of our Lord to-day learn a lesson from the Macedonian churches? "He that winneth souls is wise." The church to-day is woefully lacking in passion for the one purpose for which her Lord called her into being. The Son of man came to seek and save the lost. His church to-day seems to spend most of her strength in coddling the saints-in sounding the word in, but doing little or nothing toward sounding the word out. For this reason, the church, instead of going forward, is at a standstill, and in some instances is actually drifting from the mark of her high calling in Christ Jesus our Lord. Let me illustrate. A man in a boat is trying to row up the Niagara River. He has two cars, but he is using only one of them. Instead of making any progress, he is going round and round, and also gradually drifting with the stream toward the falls instead of going against the current. Is it not true that the car of giving has been neglected by the church? There has been much work done for the church; but this has not been balanced with wholehearted, willing, liberal giving. Instead of making the progress we should have made, we have simply been going round and round and drifting when we should have gone forward. The Master's command to his disciples has evermore been: "Go work in my vineyard."

"A hundred thousand souls a day
Are passing one by one away
In Christless guilt and gloom.
Without one ray of hope or light,
With future dark as endless night,
They're passing to their doom."

8. They prayed that their gift would be accepted. "Praying us with much entreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of the ministering to the saints." (Verse 4.) The only entreating there was in the matter was on their part; they "prayed" the apostle to be allowed the privilege of fellowship in helping their brethren. What a blessed spirit! What liberal souls they were! What devotion to the Lord's cause is here manifested! How they put most Christians to shame in these days! No wonder Paul, in calling attention to the liberality of these Macedonian churches, says it is "grace" bestowed of God. "Moreover, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia." (Verse 1.) The grace of God being bestowed upon them caused them to feel keenly the world's woe. They felt with an intensity that is little known, I fear, in our day, that they were debtors to all men, to give them the gospel message, the one and only way whereby men may be saved. It was not something that could be carelessly discharged as a matter of philan-thropy or charity. We are presented with a bill of indebtedness which it is our bounden responsibility to pay to the uttermost farthing.

If the gospel were not the message it is, the only message of salvation, the Macedonian churches would never have felt the need of their abundant liberality. But the grace of God being bestowed upon them, they were possessed with the spirit of Him who, "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." (2 Cor. 8: 9.) The Macedonian Christians being thus filled with the grace and spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, they prayed that their gift would be accepted. And the secret of it all was, "they gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God." Those who really give themselves to the Lord and his cause will be ready to give of their means, their time, their presence, and their heartbeats, sacrificially and cheerfully, for the spread of the gospel, the salvation of souls, and the relief of the needs of others, especially the brethren. In many places the pulpit only speaks for an hour or two each Lord's day, and then only to those who occupy the seats before them. In is only by sermons in shoes that the suffering and the sinning can be reached. The crying need of the times is not for more eloquence in the pulpit, but for more personal consecration among Christians, so that they, too, will give "their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God."

"If I have eaten my morsel alone!"
The patriarch spoke in scorn.
What would he think of the church,
Were he shown heathendom, huge, forlorn,
Godless and Christless, with soul unfed,
While the church's ailment is fullness of bread,
Eating the morsel alone?

"I am debtor alike to the Jew and the Greek,"
The mighty apostle cried,
Traversing continents souls to seek,
For the love of the Crucified.
Nineteen centuries since have sped;
Millions are perishing; we have bread,
And we eat our morsel alone.

And ever of them that have largest dower Shall Heaven require the more; Ours is knowledge, affluence, power, Ocean from shore to shore.
While East and West in our ears have said: "Give us, O, give us your living bread."
And we eat our morsel alone!

"Freely as ye have received, so give,"
Bade He who hath given us all.
How can the soul in us longer live
Deaf to their starving call,
For whom the blood of the Lord was shed,
And his body broken to give them bread,
If we eat our morsel alone?

PRAYER. No. 1.

BY ZELLNER ENGLISH.

THE SPIRIT OF PRAYER.

The way to learn what constitutes to God both the spirit and manner and other elements that go to make up acceptable prayer is to examine carefully the score or so passages in both the Old and New Testaments which throw the most light upon this rich, wonderful division of his law to his people. These will guide him "into all truth;" and if he seeks earnestly to know the will of God upon this, as upon any subject, he will be rewarded. Jesus makes a lesson plain on the subject of prayer in the parables of the unrighteous judge and of the importunate friend. "And he spoke a parable unto them to the end that they ought always to pray, and not to faint; saying, There was in a city a judge, who feared not God, and regarded not man: and there was a widow in that city; and she came oft unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary. And he would not for a while: but afterwards he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest she wear me out by her continual coming." (Luke 18: 1-5.) "And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say to him, Friend, lend me three loaves; for a friend of mine is come to me from a journey, and I have nothing to set before him; and he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee? I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will arise and give him as many as he needeth." (Luke 11: 5-8.) These lessons were given "to the end that they [wel ought always to pray, and not to faint;" that we should be importunate, earnest, supplicative in our prayers, that we may have answers to them.

Against this we have the word of Jesus against vain repetitions. "And in praying use not vain repetitions, as the Gentiles do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him. After this manner therefore pray ye," etc. (Matt. 6: 7-9.) The Gentiles used vain, empty repetitions in their prayers to God, thinking "that they shall be heard for their much speaking," whereas God hears and answers prayer according to the degree of humility, godly fear or reverence, importunity, supplication, steadfastness, the necessity of the requests, the purpose for which asked, and such considerations. (Eph. 6: 18; Phil. 4: 6-8; 1 Pet. 5: 6-8; 1 Tim. 2: 1-4; Col. 3: 17; 1 Thess. 5: 17; James 5: 13; 4: 3; Heb. 5: 7; etc.) The Gentiles tried to impress the Lord with words, which is the mistake we are to avoid.

Vain repetitions were, perhaps, a way of displaying linguistic or elocutionary powers; they gave opportunity for being swept away upon a torrent of fervid language. Thus the Gentiles hoped to be heard of God because of these powers. A display of such powers, for that purpose, makes impossible God's hearing or answering the prayers. Other scriptures on this point seem conclusive, besides the passage given above.

We are to avoid trying to put ourselves forward in the act of prayer or in any way. We are not to use useless or empty repetitions in making our prayers. God "knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him." He will hear us without even one repetition. Brother Mc-Garvey suggests that this forbids mentioning a request more than once in a prayer. The inadvertent repetition, or a way of expressing repentance, would seem to be harmless in the course of a single prayer. Certainly we pray ask again in subsequent prayers for the things not received from the former; we are to "pray without ceasing," "with all prayer and supplication praying at all seasons in the Spirit, and watching thereunto in all perseverance and supplication for all the saints." (Eph. 6: 18.) The word "supplication" carries with it the idea of several repetitions. It would be impossible to "supplicate," as a thing different from simple prayer, without repeating our requests several times, and this is commanded and authorized by the word of God. (See 1 Tim. 2: 1; Phil. 4: 6; 1 Thess. 5: 17.) We are to avoid vain repetitions by the spirit in which we pray. If we pray humbly, meekly, reverently, with faith, we shall not repeat in terms of bombast, redundancy, or in any sinful way.

I do not see how it can be wrong to repeat an earnest request in the course of a prayer, if it comes without trying to move the Lord by our "much speaking." Holding fast the form of sound words, we must make simple prayers in faith and hope.

If brethren will study the references to prayer in both the Old and New Testaments, they will learn more on this all-important subject than all the efforts of mortal man can give.

MY PROSPECTIVE DEBATE.

BY LEE JACKSON.

There are several Adventist congregations in this part of Mississippi, and it appears that these congregations have engaged R. L. Jackson, of West Virginia, to champion the cause of Adventism in this part of the country; at least, since coming to Mississippi, Mr. Jackson has been delivering lectures and sermons in advocacy of the doctrines of his church, and has met a Baptist preacher in debate in the town of Carrollton.

On Christmas Eve Day when I went to the office for my mail, I received a letter submitting propositions to me for discussion, and requesting that arrangements be made for the time and place for debate. As the weather was at that time very inclement, I made no haste in entering into these arrangements.

Not being willing to debate the propositions as worded by my Adventist opponent, I wrote out four propositions and mailed them to him. After some preliminary correspondence, two of these propositions have been agreed upon. The four propositions, as stated by me, are as follows:

Proposition 1. "The kingdom of Christ, as foretold by the prophets and as taught in the New Testament, is in existence, and has been in existence since the inauguration of the reign of grace, subsequent to the resurrection of Christ." Lee Jackson affirms; R. L. Jackson denies.

Proposition 2: "The inspired Scriptures teach that the reign of Christ will not begin till his second coming, and that at this time his kingdom will be set up on the earth." R. L. Jackson affirms; Lee Jackson denies.

Proposition 3. "A congregation of Christian men and women meeting together statedly for worship and mutual edification is the only sort of church for which a 'Thus saith the Lord' is found in the New Testament, either in precept or example." Lee Jackson affirms; R. L. Jackson denies.

Proposition 4. "The doctrine of soul sleeping, or the unconscious state of the dead between death and the resurrection, as taught by Adventists, is an essential item of gospel teaching that must be believed and taught in order to righteous living and final salvation." R. L. Jackson affirms; Lee Jackson denies.

Up to the present time only agreement has been reached to debate the two first-named propositions, my opponent refusing to affirm the fourth proposition as it is worded, and I will not discuss the doctrine of soul sleeping unless he affirms it as essentially a part of the faith of the gospel. If he does this, I am ready to deny with all the vigor and force that I can command. To debate a proposition which asserts something that is simply speculative opinion expressed in abstract form is not my understanding as to profitable debating. When I framed my church proposition, I felt certain that he would accept the issue and attempt to show that something as a general church institution is taught in the New Testament, judging from his style of handling the word "church," but I find him disposed to accept this proposition as expressing the truth.

It may appear a little strange that, in consideration of the fact that twelve months ago physicians thought I would probably live only a year or two, at most, I am now ready to engage in debate, but such is the case. The dectors now tell me that I am lacking in physical strength for this ordeal; but a sense of duty impels me to make an effort to defend the cause of truth against the bewitching theories that turn men away from the gospel, and so I am expecting to meet this champion from West Virginia at some time in the near future. We are both Jacksons; but if he is a close relative of mine by blood, I do not know it. He comes recommended to me as a man of integrity of character, and that is all I know. I cannot be idle. Sick or well, as long as I am able to go, I must do something.

"Two went to pray. O, rather say
One went to brag, the other to pray;
One stands up close and treads on high,
Where the other dares not lend his eye;
One nearer to God's altar trod,
The other to the altar's God."

OUR MESSAGES

Granville L. Culium preached at Cedar Grove last Sunday morning.

Brother Srygley says that he does not believe in one pocketbook, and the old lady tote that.

John L. Rainey preached at Boscobel Street on Sunday, morning and evening, to good audiences.

Brother Dorris says that churches need the whole counsel of God instead of sermonettes and soft soap.

W. S. Long, 1035 West Grace Street, Richmond, Va., January 14: "I have moved to Richmond and am doing mission work in this city."

Leslie G. Thomas preached twice at Greenbrier, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Thomas recently preached at Cedar Springs, near Louisville, Ky.

- L. L. Yeagley preached two fine sermons last Lord's day at Charlotte Avenue, this city. There were three hundred and thirty-eight in the Bible classes.
- A. D. Dies, who changes his address from Gallatin, Tenn., to Senath, Mo., January 27: "The Gospel Advocate gets better with the years. Your article alone is worth the price of the paper."

When renewing your subscription to the Gospel Advocate, send your name as it appears on the paper. When changing address give old address first, then the new address. This will save time and confusion.

W. B. West, Jr., Decherd, Tenn., January 29: "On the third Lord's day in January I preached at Sewanee. We had a good service and a good crowd. On the fourth Lord's day in January I preached at Huntland."

Clyde Gleaves has left Miami, Fla., and G. Mitchell Pullias began work there on February 1. L. H. Dasher, Thomas C. Ellis, and J. B. Cowart, elders of the church at Miami, very heartily commend Brother Gleaves.

- B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., January 27: "Last Sunday, at West End Avenue, this city, one was added from the Christian Church. You are doing some brilliant work on the front page these days. You are blazing the path around Jerusalem."
- J. H. McBroom, 447 Pulliam Street, Atlanta, Ga., January 30, sends one new subscriber and one renewal to the Gospel Advocate and says: "Fine services at South Pryor last Sunday. One from the Baptists claiming scriptural baptism since last report."

The wedding of Rudy J. Arnett and Edna Coates was solemnized at the residence of E. L. Whitaker, 120 East Davant Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., Wednesday, December 24, at 8 P.M. E. L. Whitaker officiated in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

- Will J. Cullum, Livingston, Tenn. January 19: "Increased attendance at the midweek Bible school, with one addition from the Christian Church. Good attendance at both services yesterday, and a splendid hearing at Free Communion (a mission) at 2 P.M."
- A. T. Stewart, Fayetteville, Tenn., January 30: "I like very much to read the Gospel Advocate, especially the writings of Brethren Allen. Srygley, Smith, and others. May you live long and continue the good work, which is doing great good and will bring results."
- W. S. Moody preached an excellent sermon to the young people at Twelfth Avenue, North, this city, last Lord's day. The Bible-study enrollment is now four hundred and seventy, and nearly all were present. H. Leo Boles will preach for this congregation next Lord's day.
- W. A. Schultz, Driscoll, Texas: "The opening of our new meetinghouse at Driscoll, in Neuces County, Texas, will take place, the Lord willing, the second Lord's day in February. We shall have dinner on the ground and at least three sermons during the day. Come and be with us on our opening day."

Sarah Mulliniks Bennett, Leland, Miss., January 11: "We want the readers of the Gospel Advocate to know that we worship at the City Hall each Lord's day at 10 A.M., with prayer meeting on Thursday night, so that when passing through they can meet with us and help to establish primitive Christianity in this section of the State."

J. Paul Slayden, of McMinnville, Tenn., made the Gospel Advocate office a very pleasant visit recently. Brother Slayden advised that L. K. Harding recently closed a meeting with the McMinnville church, in which Brother Harding did some splendid preaching, with more than thirty additions.

Robert E. Wright, Bradentown, Fla., January 26: "R. E. L. Taylor began a meeting with the church at Bradentown yesterday. I was with the church at Sarasota yesterday morning. I also heard from St. Petersburg yesterday, and Brother Hardeman had begun his meeting with the church there."

Horace W. Busby, Fort Worth, Texas, January 25: "The meeting at Tipton, Okla., closed on the second Lord's day in January, with sixteen baptisms and a number of restorations or identifications. J. W. Acuff led the singing. I am now at San Benito, Texas, in a fine meeting, with several confessions to date."

John R. Williams, Hornbeak, Tenn., January 29: "If any of you use charts in preaching, you will make no mistake in writing Joyce Hendrix, Yuma, Tenn. He makes beautiful, attractive charts, and is very reasonable in his charges. Send him a sketch and give him a trial to convince you that he can do what I say."

T. H. Burton, Union, S. C., January 29: "Fine crowds at all places on Sunday. Two baptized at Greenville on January 24, and one at Union last Sunday. J. C. Mosley and wife arrived to-day to take up the work. We are truly glad to have these workers with us. Brother Mosley will preach at Union next week, and then to his regular work."

- G. A. Shaver, Moultrie, Ga., January 28: "I want you to be sure to keep the Gospel Advocate coming this way. I enjoy its pages more than anything along this line, and get so much good from them. A. P. Chapman is preaching some for us. We will have C. R. Nichol, of Clifton, Texas, with us for a two-weeks' meeting, beginning on March 22,"
- J. W. Howell, Columbus, Miss., January 28: "The brethren at McLeod, Miss., want to locate a preacher with them who is interested in farming, as there are not enough brethren in this community to support a preacher full time. McLeod is forty miles south of Columbus in a fine farming section. If you are interested, write Thomas M. Chambers, McLeod, Miss."
- A. Campbell. in one of those familiar addresses so customary with him, once said to a company of college students: "Never become men of one idea, however attractive it may be. It will make you one-sided men, and break up the integrity and strength of your life. The only one idea worthy of your entire devotion is the great cause of God in Christ, not any one part of it."
- J. D. Jones, Monterey, Tenn., January 28: "On the second Lord's day in January, morning and night, I preached for the church at Crossville, and baptized two ladies; on the third Lord's day I preached at Monterey; and on the fourth Lord's day I preached at Algood. For the present I am working with the churches at Monterey, Algood, and Crossville. We pray God to bless our efforts, that much good may be done in the name of the Christ. May God bless the Gospel Advocate in the good work it is doing."

"This individual-cup question will divide the church of Christ more surely and more completely than did the organ." (Earnest C. Love.) Why wait to divide the church, Brother Love, till the individual cup comes, since you say that "the New Testament teaches only one cup?" Why not divide it when they get two cups? If the New Testament teaches only one, the church that uses two is as unscriptural as the one that uses six. Brother Love says somebody will want to pat him on the back for making this fight for one cup. It is not his back that needs patting, but his head. If there is any patting done, it ought to be done where it is needed.

Delia Rose Nowlin, Blackwater, Mo., January 26, to

Delia Rose Nowlin, Blackwater, Mo., January 26, to E. C. White, Nashville, Tenn.: "I certainly want to thank you for sending me the Gospel Advocate, and which I certainly do enjoy reading, and I think without a doubt it is the best paper published." Brother White says: "I haptized this young lady last November. She impressed me then as very earnest and sincere. It does my heart good to get this. I realize her gratitude is great and the good to her invaluable, and also that a word of praise to those who publish such a paper as the Gospel Advocate is appreciated. May this help us all to keep ever true and within the bounds of a 'Thus saith the Lord' and always teach only 'as it is written.'"

- A. G. Freed preached at Foster Street, this city, last Lord's day.
- O. H. Tallman, Montgomery, Ala., January 26: "I preached twice yesterday at Highland Avenue Church. Two splendid hearings. One addition at the evening service."

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, January 26: "Two fine crowds here yesterday. The church at O M is progressing nicely, and the little church at Shiner is also doing well."

- M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., February 1: "Since writing I have visited regular appointments. Work as usual in all places. I am now preparing for better work in 1925 than I have ever done."
- I. D. Moore, Rives, Tenn., January 29: "To-day I had the pleasure of meeting G. W. Jarrett, of Kenton, Tenn., an old acquaintance, on his way to Dyersburg. He said he was open for evangelistic work. Brethren, if you want a sound man to preach for you, address him at Kenton, Tenn. He is an able preacher."

Aruna Clark, East Lake, Tenn., January 28: "I was called home from my work at East Point, Ga., on account of the critical illness of my mother. Doctors say they think the end is not far distant. We are doing all we can to make her comfortable. These are trying hours for us. Remember us in your prayers."

- H. F. Oliver, Austin, Texas, January 26: "Our services on Sunday were good. The attendance was larger, class work very satisfactory, and all seemed to worship with the best of spirit and understanding. At the night service two more enlisted in the work of the Master with us. The Hyde Park church of Christ has a good prospect for the future."
- C. C. McQuiddy, Alma, Ark, January 26: "The new year finds the work here advancing at all points, with a greater determination on the part of the congregation to do more and greater things for our Lord. We hope to buy a tent and evangelize this county and near-by points. There was one confession at the morning service last Lord's day."

Flora Travis, Haynesville, La., January 24: "Do you know of a preacher we can get to come here and locate? The time is ripe for a great work here, if we only had a leader. The members have 'a mind to work' and to make the necessary sacrifices in order to support a man. Shreveport has a real live wire over there, and that little band is working."

W. K. Frazier, Hot Springs, Ark., January 17: "I think the Gospel Advocate is doing a splendid work. Such strong and forceful reasoning cannot do otherwise than bring forth fruit in due time. I am sure that I am one of a great many that rejoice to see primitive Christianity so ably defended. May you be spared a long time to this noble work."

Robert E. Henson, Benton, Ky., January 19: "I consider the Gospel Advocate the best paper printed, and that it ought to be read by more people. I filled my regular appointment at Liberty, in Union County, Ky., yesterday. Two were added by letter. I wish to announce that I have the fourth Sunday not taken. Any one desiring my services may address me at Benton, Ky."

J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala., January 30: "I am just back from De Land, Fla., where I held two short meetings—one near De Land and one near New Smyrna. The New Smyrna congregation will conduct a meeting in the city sometime in April. The prospect is bright for two good churches in these cities. If the brethren there will only do their duty, a good congregation will be planted there in one year."

T. Q. Martin, St. Marys, W. Va., January 31: "I was with the brethren who worship at One Hundred and Thirty-first Street and Penobscot Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, January 11-28. Eleven were baptized, four were restored, and one presented his letter from another congregation. The brethren have a neat house of worship, for which they are still heavily in debt. Without a house they were greatly hindered, as they could use the rented hall only on Lord's-day mornings. They are not discouraged. C. O. Hannahs, of Wheeling, led the singing, and W. S. Giffons, of East Mansfield, Ohio, did the baptizing, preached on two Lord's-day afternoons, and rendered other valuable service. Other preachers who cheered us by their coöperation were: A. A. Bunner, Sr.; Madison Wright; Brother Wright, Jr.; and Brother Steed. Let the church of Christ everywhere stand by the work in our great centers of population."

Oscar Jones, Golconda, Ill., January 18: "We have a few members here (near Hamburg), and we are striving to establish a permanent congregation with a view to building a house of worship later. We are trying to get all to see the importance of meeting regularly. I do not think we can do a brother any greater favor than to induce him to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate. If you will send me a few sample copies, I will do the best I can in soliciting the members here to become regular readers of this valuable paper."

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., January 26: "J. E. Acuff, of Nashville, Tenn., visited his family here yesterday and preached a strong sermon on 'Love—The More Excellent Way.' At the same time his son, Milton, who had an appointment at Billingsley, was incidentally drawn into a discussion with two Mormon elders who were 'laying' for him. The argument lasted for two hours and a half and prevented the sermon. This was Milton's first religious 'debate,' and he more than held his own. Prof. Sampson Lester preached at Doyle, in White County."

T. Park Burt, Hereford, Texas, January 27: "We are yet holding the fort at Hereford. I think we are doing well, as the congregation is small and the opposition is very strong. Sectarianism is rife and seems to be well fortified against the truth, and yet we have some of them from time to time to hear us, and we try to show them the way of the Lord as revealed in his word. I have two Lord's days in each month which I will be glad to devote to congregations in West Texas, as the church here is not financially able to keep me for full time. I also have some time open for spring and summer meetings, song drills, and singing schools. If you need my work, brethren, write me at Hereford, Texas, Box 350."

Earnest C. Love, speaking of the Lord's Supper, says:
"But somehow he [E. C. Fuqua] still thinks I am to blame for calling attention to the fact that the New Testament teaches only one cup." In the same article the brother says: "Russell Street Church, where he [J. C. McQuiddyl worshiped, has not adopted the late innovation from the 'old harlot's daughter." The Russell Street Church has had six cups for some time. If "the New Testament teaches only one cup," it looks to me like some of the "old harlot's" kinfolks have furnished five cups already for Russell Street. This is a fine church; but if Brother Love is right, it is five-sixths wrong on the cup question. Better get another witness, Brother Love, and let this one stand aside.

- T. B. Thompson, Lakeland, Fla.: "The church of Christ has just closed a splendid meeting, in which N. B. Hardeman did the preaching. We were able to secure the large High School auditorium, just across the street from our own place of meeting. There were twenty accessions to the church from all sources. Several of the brethren of the 'First Christian Church' were very much interested, and we confidently expect others to take their stand with us. One of the leaders of the Christian Church, upon being told that Hall L. Calhoun was taking his stand with the church of Christ, said: 'When men like Calhoun make such a change, it is time for others to think seriously.' There are more people interested in the truth here now than ever before in the history of the church. I expect to canvass the membership in behalf of the Gospel Advocate soon."
- Gospel Advocate soon."

 W. C. Graves, 214 South Charles Street, W. E., Birmingham, Ala., January 10: "For some time I have had in mind writing you a word of appreciation of the articles in the Gospel Advocate. They are worth their weight in gold and ten thousand times more. The Advocate can do nothing—absolutely nothing—but good. If it doesn't strengthen a Christian's faith in the Bible, then that one's faith just cannot be strengthened. It is drawing the line tight between the apostolic order of things and denominationalism. Keep drawing it. Many of its articles should be put in leaflet form and scattered by the hundreds of thousands from 'Dan to Beersheba.' Let me also state that in Birmingham the line is drawn tight between the church of Christ and the Christian Church and all other denominations. Right now the Christian Church is giving its influence (if it has any) to the big 'union meeting' in the city auditorium. J. Ellard Brown is doing the preaching. The pastor of the First Christian Church, Dr. Simpson, is one of the committeemen. This same pastor entertained the clergy of this city a few days ago, including a Jewish rabbi. 'How good it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!' was quoted by one of them in that feast. I only wish I had room in 'Truth in Love' to reprint many of your articles. May your tribe increase, and may the Lord's blessings rest upon you and yours."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and R. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries. $2.50, in advance.

Hemittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order when changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is chalged, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

PLACING MEMBERSHIP.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

In a recent issue of the Christian Standard, one Albert H. Harris, writing on the subject, " How to Promote Christian Unity Locally," has this to say:

CONSERVATION.

Sixth. The minister in his local field may seek to conerve the membership, and thus aid in the promotion of Christian unity.

At our last State Convention in Kansas, on recommendation of the Future Work Committee, the following resolution relative to transfer of members was passed:

"Be it resolved, That we repeat the recommendation of last year that churches send letters of moving members last year, that churches send letters of moving members directly to the churches in the community to which the members have moved; and that our ministers emphasize the teaching that Christians are members of the body of members have moved; and that our ministers emphasizes the teaching that Christians are members of the body of Christ wherever they are, that we may better conserve the gains of our evangelism."

Taking a copy of this resolution with us, we proceeded to visit every church member who had not placed his membership. We read the resolution, and said: "Now, we no longer give Christians church letters, but send them direct to the church in the place to which the member moves. Too, the resolutions say, 'and that our ministers emphasize the teaching that Christians are members of the body of Christ wherever they are.' According to this, your membership automatically becomes effective in the local congregation in the town to which you move as soon as you arrive. Therefore, we no longer plead for church members to come forward to place their membership. We are glad to hear that you are a Christian—a member of the church of Christ. We welcome you to our community, and the church extends you an invitation to all its services. We shall enroll your name on our church roster, and, together with your address, read it to the congregation next Lord's-day morning and evening to inform the church that you people are brethren in Christ, and for them to call and make your acquaintance."

It seems to be a kind of a fad with our transgressive brethren to talk about "Christian unity." While Christian unity on the word of God is desirable, yet, if it is to be attained by a sacrifice of any of the commands of Christ, it is not desirable, and ought not to be encouraged at any such sacrifice. No one should be encouraged to bring about union at the sacrifice of truth or even by compromising any vital truth.

In the long article in which the above clipping is found the brother quotes one verse from the Savior's prayer as recorded by John. But just before the verse quoted the Savior said: "Sanctify them in the truth: thy word is truth." In our effort to bring about Christian union, we should not forget that the truth, the word of God, should be taken into account; but here reference is made to a resolution which was passed "at our last State Convention in Kansas." If the doctrine contained in this resolution is in the Bible, I wonder why Brother Harris did not quote that document; and if it is not in the Bible, I wonder where "our last State Convention" got the authority to pass the resolution. The church is authorized to do some things, but where in the Bible did our brother learn that "our last State Convention in Kansas" has any authority to pass any resolutions for "our ministers" or the churches? The "State Convention in Kansas" has no scriptural authority for even its existence. How, then, could it have any scriptural authority to pass a resolution as to what the churches should do?

The brother tells us how he proceeded to visit every church member who had not placed his membership. "Taking a copy of this resolution with us, we proceeded to visit every church member who had not placed his membership." That may work in Brother Harris' town; but if a preacher in this town were to start out to get a member of the church to do his duty armed with such a weapon as a resolution passed by an unscriptural convention, I think one of our average members would say to him: "Shoot, for I am not afraid of that gun." Most of our members know that the weapon to use in getting people to do their duty is "the sword of the Spirit," which is the word of God, rather than a popgun from an unscriptural Kansas convention.

In describing his conduct, the brother says: "We read the resolution," and "now we no longer give Christians church letters." Why have you quit, Brother Harris? Is it because you have found out the New Testament does not teach it? No, but because "our last State Convention in Kansas" passed the resolution. I know that this shows that Brother Harris is quite loyal to the State Convention of Kansas, but what does it prove as to his loyalty to the word of God? If the New Testament teaches that, it taught it before the State Convention met in Kansas; and if it did not teach it before they met, it did not teach it after they met and passed the resolution.

The brother further says: "Too, the resolutions say, 'and that our ministers emphasize the teaching that Christians are members of the body of Christ wherever they are." I confess that it is true "that Christians are members of the body of Christ wherever they are," and I have emphasized that teaching for years; but I do not do it because the resolutions say it, but I do it because it is true. If the resolutions had not said it, I reckon Brother Harris would not have done it just because it is true. It does not appear to make much difference with Brother Harris if God said it; but just as soon as "our Convention of Kansas" says it, Brother Harris is ready to do his best. I do not know what the Lord thinks of that kind of a servant, but it occurs to me that Brother Harris is more considerate of the resolutions passed by "our last State Convention in Kansas" than he is about any resolution that God has passed. If one expects to go to Kansas when he dies and get his reward from the "State Convention," he might afford to be that loyal to it; but as it is, he had better observe the teaching of Jesus when he quoted: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." About all the brother says he did in the latter part of this quotation is right, if he had based his acts upon the authority of God, rather than the resolutions of "our last State Convention in Kansas."

Brother Harris further says:

Brethren, unification is an impossibility without conservation, and we as a people have lost hundreds and thouvation, and we as a people have lost hundreds and thousands of members simply because they entertain the idea that when they move from one community to another they are not a member of the church until their membership is "placed." I don't find anything any place in the New Testament that says anything about this "placed membership" business. What's the use, and where is the scripture for us, spending a third of our time pleading with church members to "place" their membership, when the field is white unto the harvest? I have always felt guilty of losing a lot of valuable time begging church members to "place" their membership, as well as realizing how inconsistent it all is. I am Harris in Cincinnati to-night the same as I was Harris in Kansas last week; and if I the same as I was Harris in Kansas last week; and if I expected to stay here any length of time, my home would be here. You can make the application.

In considering whether a doctrine is right or wrong, I do not take into account how many thousands of members "we as a people" have lost or gained, but what does the New Testament teach on the subject? We have preachers that worry a lot about how many they can get to "place" their membership. On this point the brother gets down to his business about right when he says: "I don't find anything any place in the New Testament that says anything about this 'placed membership' business." I like that ring. I really believe the brother is right in that statement, and I want to commend him for making it. If the New Testament says one word on the subject, I do not know it. But this will take a lot of the padding out of the preachers' reports. We have preachers in this country who try to get all the members who have moved to "place their membership," and thus greatly swell the number to be counted. These preachers count as additions some that have been Christians longer than the preachers have, and, therefore, have had membership in the church longer. The brother says: "I am Harris in Cincinnati to-night the same as I was Harris in Kansas last week." Right you are, brother, in that statement, and I can easily make the application. If you are a Christian, you are a member of the church because of that fact, and not because you have gone through with some form of placing your membership. If you are a Christian at all, you are a Christian where you are; and if you are not a Christian where you are, you are not one at all. It is impossible for one to live in Cincinnati and be a Christian in Kansas, and it is equally as impossible for one to be a Christian in Cincinnati and have membership in Kansas. Sometimes we are told that "we are only endeaving to get them to become members of this congregation;" but this will hardly explain the unscriptural practice, because to congregate means to come together, and no one can in reality be a member of a congregation without congregating. One cannot be a member of a congregation and stay at home. That being true, it appears to me that all Christians should place their membership in the congregation every time it meets according to the will of God, and every true Christian will do that every time he is able to do so. The only passage that I remember where any one ever tried to join anything religious-and it may have been a congregation-reads as follows: "And when he was come to Jerusalem, he essayed to join himself to the disciples: and they were all afraid of him, not believing that he was a disciple." Saul was evidently a member of the church at that time, but he wanted them to recognize him as a disciple. Go on, Brother Harris, with this kind of teaching; it will do good, even if it does take a lot of padding out of the preachers' reports.

When we read the inscriptions chiseled on monuments, we conclude that bad people never die. A life filled with noble deds is the best monument one can leave behind. Many sweet memories cluster about such a life.

"THE FEDERAL COUNCIL." BY F. W. SMITH.

The Christian Standard proposes to give to its readers a series of articles on the above subject. But, not waiting for said articles, it is here proposed to state the Standard's preliminaries and offer a few observations on the situation. From the Standard's issue on January 10 we have the following:

It is our purpose in a series of short editorials to dis-cuss frankly the "Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America." Such is the imposing title of a coterie of denominational leaders who set up the claim that they are "constituted by twenty-nine Protestant evangelical denominations to express their common voice.

The fifth quadrennial convention of the Council has re-cently concluded its sessions in Atlanta. It is a good time for Christian people to size up this organization extraordinary.

The Federal Council had its overt beginning in Philadelphia in 1908, issuing from and embodying the spirit of the National Federation of Churches. Its purpose as set forth in its constitution is as follows:

1. To express the fellowship and catholic unity of the Christian church.

2. To bring the Christian bodies of America into unified service for Christ and the world.

3. To encourage devotional fellowship and mutual counsel concerning the spiritual life and religious activities of the churches.

4. To secure a larger combined influence for the churches of Christ in all matters affecting the moral and social conditions of the people.

5. To assist in the organization of local branches of the

b. To assist in the organization of local branches of the Federal Council to promote its aims in their communities.

The Council is made up of four hundred members "elected by the denominational assemblies." It meets every four years and "has an executive committee meeting annually and an administrative committee meeting monthly, both of which also consist of official representatives of the churches."

The following denominations are included in the Federal

The following denominations are included in the Federal Council: Northern Baptists, National Baptists, Free Baptists, Christian Church, Christian Reformed Church, Churches of God, Congregationalists, Disciples of Christ, Friends, Evangelical Church, Evangelical Synod, M. E. Church, M. E. Church, South, African M. E. Church, Colored M. E. Church, Methodist Protestant, Moravians, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., Presbyterian Church in the U. S., Primitive Methodists, Reformed Church in America, Reformed Church in the U. S., Reformed Episcopal Church, Seventh-Day Baptists, United Brethren, United Presbyterian. It will be observed that the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Southern Baptists are not affiliated with the Council.

We have watched the developments of this organization from its inception, followed its twiddlings, and observed its gradual sophistication and growth into a sort of super-church. A writer in the Congregationalist, reporting the Atlanta meeting, says: "One was bound to feel in Atlanta that at last the Council had found itself; that it stood upon solid ground; that it was no longer an experiment, but a going concern."

What has this colossal myth, now grown into a menace, done for Christianity in the half-generation of its misrepresentative career?

Our next will deal with the hierarchal character and claims of the Council The following denominations are included in the Federal

Our next will deal with the hierarchal character and claims of the Council.

There could be no legitimate objections, I presume, to. speaking of the "Christian church" in contradistinction to Mohammedanism, Buddhism, Shintoism, or any other heathen religious establishment, provided all of God's children are included in the expression, "Christian church."

But that is not the sense in which this "Federal Council" speaks of the "Christian church," or "Christian churches," With the Federal Council, the "Christian churches" are made up of all the so-called evangelical Protestant denominations. For instance, they mean by "Christian church" one of the denominational bodies with its denominational name, creed, and church polity, or church government, that differentiates it from all other denominational bodies. But the New Testament knows absolutely nothing of such denominational institutions, and it is wholly a misapplication of the term "Christian' to apply it to any such institutions. The New Testament speaks only of churches or congregations of Christ (Rom. 16: 16), and these were all alike in faith, name, and practice, because they were all built on the same pattern.

Hence, the situation in which the "Federal Council" finds itself is due to a most radical departure from the dectrine of the New Testament Scriptures. But assuming that its aims and purpose for genuine Christian unity spring from a real desire to do away with denominationalism and get back to New Testament ground, the "Louicil" should be commended for its efforts.

But from the intimation of the Standard, which has kept an eye on the Council from its inception, we are not inclined to feel the least bit encouraged regarding its final achievements. If it is to be a union, instead of a dissolving, of the various denominational establishments into one ecclesiastical hierarchy with its doctrines of men and presiding ecclesiastics, the world will be better off if the "Council" dies the death.

The world has been cursed through the ages past with such an institution, such as it seems is proposed by this "Federal Council," and it would be better, choosing between two evils, to have the present order of denominationalism.

The program laid out by this Council, if achieved along the lines of the New Testament, would be commendable indeed; but how on earth is the Council going to work along such lines as indicated while holding to and maintaining the very institutions that prevent the object in view? To be perfectly frank, they would as well be try-ing to pitch straws to the moon. It is comparable to taking a remedy for a disease while at the same time nursing and feeding the disease.

More than a century ago some brave and consecrated men came before the world with the only possible basis or platform for Christian unity, making a plea for a return to the New Testament in all things pertaining to Christianity. The "Federal Council" and all other councils for the promotion of Christian unity may labor until Gabriel blows his horn trying to improve on that "basis," but they will never succeed.

That plea demanded the abolishing of all denominational institutions, casting into the discard all human creeds, confessions of faith, and uninspired tests of Christian fellowship, with all denominational and sectarian names, and to "speak where the Bible speaks, and be silent where the Bible is silent."

So long as men love human institutions in religion and the doctrines of men more than the church of the New Testament and the doctrine of Christ, we will have councils of some sort floundering around looking for something they will never find. Of course all the religious bodies hold more or less truth, and in getting back to the New Testament they will have to surrender only the humanisms they have acquired. But now, as in the days of Christ's personal ministry, men cling more tenaciously to the doctrines and commandments of men than to the simple word of God.

"ON THE THIRD DAY," "THREE DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS," AND "AFTER THREE DAYS" MEAN THE SAME.

BY E. A. ELAM.

New Philadelphia, Ohio, December 22, 1924.—Dear Editor: The Scripture says that the Savior was in the tomb three days and three nights; and as he was crucified on preparation day, which was the day before the Sabbath, and then rose on the day following the Sabbath, which was the first day of the week, how is it that he was in the tomb three days and three nights? Please answer through the Gospel Advocate. Your brother in Christ, R. R. HINSON.

Matt. 12: 40 says: "So shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." If this were all that has been said in regard to the time Jesus lay in the tomb, and if the Jews were as exact in counting time as we are, we could not understand how it was that Jesus was buried on Friday and arose on the first day of the week. But Matt. 16: 21 says, "and the third day be raised up." So Matt. 17: 23 and other passages state. Mark 8: 31 says, "and after three days rise again." Thus it is stated "on the third day," "three days and three nights," and "after three days." All three expressions mean the same thing. With us, "after three days" means on the fourth day, and "on the third day" means after two days.

He who sees any discrepancy here sees discrepancy in that which Jesus says, and his difficulty is with Jesus.

To be honest with the word of God and with ourselves, we must accept all that the Lord says on any subject, put all together, and in this way learn the truth. We cannot accept any one of these statements to the rejection of the other two. All three are true and mean the same thing.

If there had been any contradiction or discrepancy in these statements, the enemies of Jesus would have pounced upon it at once and would have pointed it out. But they did not, hence there is none.

In his Commentary on Matthew, on verses 39, 40 of chapter 12, McGarvey says:

chapter 12, McGarvey says:

As Jesus was buried late Friday afternoon, and arose before sunrise Sunday morning, he was in the tomb only an hour or two of Friday, all of Saturday, and between eleven and twelve hours of Sunday, counting the day, according to Jewish custom, as beginning with sunset. It was not, then, according to our mode of expression, three days and three nights, but only two nights and a part of three days. We inquire how the statement of the text can be true, and, in order to an intelligible answer, we note the following facts and considerations:

1. The time between his death and his resurrection is expressed in three different forms. Most frequently it is said that he would rise again on the third day. (16: 21; 17: 23; et al.) Once it is said that he would rise after three days (Mark 8: 31); and once in our text, that he would be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights.

nights.

2. The Jews, in all periods of Bible history, used the expressions after three days and on the third day as equivalents. Thus Moses says that Joseph put his brethren into prison three days; yet in the next sentence herepresents him as releasing them "on the third day." (Gen. 42: 17, 18.) When the people petitioned Rehoboam to lighten their burden, he said: "Depart ye for three days, then come again to me." They departed, and "came again the third day, as the king had appointed." (I Kings 12: 5, 12.) When Esther was about to venture into the king's presence, she instructed the Jews in Shushan to fast three days, night and day; yet she went in on the third day. (Ez. 4: 16; 5: 1.) Still more in point, when the Pharisees petitioned Pilate for a guard, they said to him: "That deceiver said, while he was yet alive. After three days I will rise again. Command therefore that the sepulcher be made sure until the third day." (27: 63, 64.) Now, with us, if he were going to rise after three days, it nights.

three days I will rise again. Command therefore that the sepulcher be made sure until the third day." (27:63,64.) Now, with us, if he were going to rise after three days, it would be necessary to guard the sepulcher until within the fourth day; and so, the fast for Esther should have run into the fourth day, the people should have returned to Rehoboam on the fourth day, and Joseph should have released his brethren on the fourth day. It is the peculiar and inaccurate usage of the Jews which makes the difference; and that the New Testament writers continued this established usage is proved by the fact that when Matthew and Mark report the same words of Jesus, one of them uses the expression "on the third day," and the other, "after three days." (16:21; Mark 8:31.)

3. In reality, after three days and after three days and three nights are equivalent expressions; for if you count, for example, from Friday sunset, after thee days would be after sunset on Monday, the three da's being Saturday, Sunday, and Monday. But in this perid would be included three nights—viz., Friday night, saturday night, and Sunday night. Now, it is not always true in the use of words, as it is in mathematics, that things which are equal to the same thing are equal to each other; but seeing that the expression after three days neans the same with a Jew as on the third day, and that the expression after three days and three nights, the last expression would most naturally be used as an equivalent for the first. That it was so used by Jesus is cear from for the first. That it was so used by Jesus is cear from the fact that, in speaking of the lapse of time, he sometimes says on the third day, and at least once he says "three days and three nights." The only escape from this conclusion is to suppose that on the occasion of our text he deliberately and without reason contradicted himself in the presence of his enemies. But those enemies themselves, as we have seen, understood and employed the usage as he did, and it appears that all parties among the Jews understood these expressions as equivalents. There is no contradiction, then, between this and other passages on the subject, but the appearance of contradiction arises entirely from a peculiar Jewish usage.

It may be well to remark at this point that the above-mattered facts refer the hypothesis of some that Jesus

It may be well to remark at this point that the above-mentioned facts refute the hypothesis of some, that Jesus was buried on the afternoon of Thursday. If he had been buried on Thursday and had risen Sunday morning, he would have been in the grave three nights, but he would also have been there parts of four days, and the Jewish expression would have been, he will arise the fourth day, or after four days. As proof of this, if we count the time from the appearance of the angel to Cornelius (Acts 10) till the arrival of Peter at the house of Cornelius, we find that it is precisely three days, according to our mode of counting; but it includes three nights and parts of four days, and hence Cornelius says to Peter: "Four days ago I was fasting until this hour," etc. (Acts 10: 30.)

It is a great pleasure as well as most beneficial to search the Scriptures in order to learn the full will of God on any and on all subjects, that it may be implicitly followed, that souls may be saved, and that God and not man may be glorified. This should be the supreme purpose in studying and teaching the Bible.

Let all who have had any trouble concerning the day on which Jesus was crucified and the statement that he was in the heart of the earth "three days and three nights" put all these and similar passages together, or, better still, paste this article of Brother McGarvey's in their Bibles, so that they can refer to it at any time and study this question with all these scriptures before them.

0 0 0

WHOLESOME ADVICE.

From the Fire and Hammer, edited by Sister Minnie V. L. Deck, Cleveland, Ohio, we clip the following wholesome advice:

Harsh criticism of those whose religious belief differs from yours will never win them. If you will just show them something better in a spirit of kindness, they will more readily yield to the right.

more readily yield to the right.

Those who have so good an understanding of the Bible as to condemn things that are sinful in others, while at the same time they are equally guilty, need to be told, as Nathan said to David: "Thou art the man."

To this let me add: When an honest man disavows a certain teaching or certain positions and conclusions, he should not be charged with such teaching and such positions and conclusions. It is fair and just to let every man state his own teaching, position, and conclusions in his own words. On the other hand, every man should do this in clear, unmistakable language and without equivocation. If it is the word of God he attempts to teach, he should let God state his own teaching and conclusions in his own words. This is "speaking as it were oracles of God." It is unfair, unjust, and in every way unchristian to attempt to force upon a man teaching and conclusions he does not avow.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY EMMA P. LARIMORE.

Mr. Larimore has given me his space in the Gospel Advocate this week to write something in memory of my niece, Mrs. Emily Hamilton Blake, who passed away in Nashville, Tenn., September 29, 1924—not an obituary, for I think she would not desire that, but simply to tell some things about her life that may be helpful to others and consoling to those who so sadly miss her.

A certain poetess has suggested that the human race may be divided into two classes—lifters and leaners. Emily was a "lifter" all the days of her life. She occupied in her childhood home a position that naturally develops the sense of responsibility and the habit of doing for others. She was the eldest daughter in a family of seven children—four brothers and three sisters. That was a fine training school, and, being by nature active and energetic in mind and body, Emily filled well the place of elder sister to the younger children and helper to her ever-busy mother.

The qualities thus fostered grew with her growth, nor was her helpfulness confined to her own family. She took a vital interest in all with whom she was associated. Busy all her life, she was still never too busy to help one who needed help she could give, and it was said in her circle of friends: "Mrs. Blake is always ready to take on her heart and hands the burdens of others."

She was a business woman, entering the business world in early girlhood—was stenographer, secretary, and finally office editor of a great paper. She was connected with clubs for the advancement of business and professional women, much of the time meeting also the responsibilities of wife, mother, and housekeeper; and into all these activities she carried an energy and enthusiasm that were wonderfully helpful and encouraging to her fellow workers.

Living in this world, she, of course, came face to face many times with troubles, trials, cares, and disappointments that grieved her heart and dimmed her hope, but not for long. If there was a way out of the difficulty confronting her, she sought and found it; if not, she accepted the situation and made the best of it. Being human, she made mistakes, but they did not crush her spirit or halt her forward progress.

She met death as bravely as she had met the ills of life. She earnestly desired to live here longer, there being many things she longed to see and do before going away; but, realizing that she must soon go, lying on her hospital bed, she calmly "set her house in order," making necessary arrangements in fullest detail, selecting friends and loved ones to do the last sad offices for her, and trying to comfort those she must soon leave. Knowing that her widowed mother would be almost heartbroken at the loss of her first-born, notwithstanding she had other children who would tenderly care for her, she sent for kindred and friends and urged them to try to comfort her mother when she should be gone.

I think the keynote of her life of service is shown in what she said to her devoted sister—her only sister now living—who was constantly with her as she neared the brink of the dark river. She asked Elsie's love and prayers and care for the son she was leaving—a young man in years, but to her still a boy—and then she added: "Elsie, if any of your dear ones are called away before you are, I'll take care of them till you come."

She failed to accomplish two things she earnestly desired to do—to lead her husband and her son into the church of Christ. A devoted Christian herself from her early girlhood, she longed to see them Christians, too. Her husband passed away two years before she died, and thereafter her hope was centered even more fervently on her son's becoming a Christian. In her last communion service, just the day before she passed away, she said: "O, if my boy could only join his mother in this communion!"

I do not want to eulogize her too much, for she would not want me to do that. She requested that no eulogistic sermon be preached on the occasion of her funeral, and wanted the theme of the talk to be, "There is no hope of salvation except in obedience to the law of the Lord revealed in the New Testament," and her wishes were carried out.

Many hearts were saddened by her going away, and to some of us this world can never be the same again, because we shall see her here no more; but the memory of her life will be to those who knew her best and loved her most as sweet and fragrant as the flowers her beloved little nephew and nieces so tenderly and lovingly laid on "Emmie's" grave flowers sent by kindred and friends from near and from far.

She lived not long as we count years, but she crowded a great deal of good into her span of life; and we who so sadly miss her are comforted by the thought that she has passed from this world into a better, brighter world, there to receive the reward of a life well spent in service and self-sacrifice here.

THE HERALD OF FAME; OR, HOW TO OBTAIN HONORS.

(From the Millennial Harbinger, January 2, 1832.)

Whereas, it appears from our own observation and from all past history that in the literary, political, and religious world, they who flatter the prejudices and pamper the passions of mankind, and are liberal in eulogizing the popular men and popular measures, receive and enjoy the highest fame and the largest meed of praise; and,

Whereas, we ourselves, all religious men, are solicitous to possess the largest share of human applause for our own interest and pleasure; and believing that all ends are to be attained by proper means, we, the more certainly to secure to ourselves and to our friends these enviable distinctions, do agree to confederate and cooperate under the following

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION.

1. We shall sustain every press and every preacher who sustains us; and the more effectually to secure the objects of our own association, we shall have our own presses and preachers to aid and to cooperate with every preacher and press favorable to our views and objects.

2. Our principal publication shall be titled "The Herald of Fame," and our creed shall be that most in accordance with the majority of the communities in which we reside.

3. It shall be the duty of our editors to show forth the excellency and utility of every benevolent scheme in our part of Christendom; to emblazon and extol all associations-Bible, tract, missionary education, temperance, abstinence, and each and every other association which may take with the people under any plausible pretence; to represent these combinations as the heralds of the millennial glory of the church.

4. It shall also be the duty of our editors to collect and publish all anecdotes favorable to our enterprises; and in case of the paucity of these auxiliaries, they must invent and publish such as will secure the approbation of men to our benevolent institutions.

5. Our editors shall take special care to publish at proper intervals and with all imposing conspicuity the most distinguished contributors to these projects, and to set forth in the most glowing colors the accomplishments and elevated attainments of all the prominent actors in this golden drama, and to defend us against each and every attack that might expose our craft or deprive us of any portion of our reward.

6. Our prominent managers, presidents, secretaries, and treasurers shall be chosen to office wholly with regard to their wealth, high standing, and reputation in this present world. No man, though spotless as Job, or as holy as Elijah, shall ever become president, manager, or director, if he be either poor or obscure. But by calling the wise, the noble, the wealthy, and the great men of this world to manage our affairs, we shall secure more respect, more fame, and more of that most essential of all things to success-pious donations.

7. In enrolling the names of contributors and in publishing the charities of our friends, the rule shall be (except in such cases as profound policy may make a deviation commendable) to place at the head of the list the largest contributor. In the "Herald of Fame" the virtues and attainments, real and imaginary, of all our prominent friends, whether as managers or contributors, shall be duly set forth, that their example may become more useful to our cause.

8. Our preachers shall evince a great regard for the good Book, but must always draw from it such doctrines as suit the prevailing sentiments of our friends.

9. Our presses and our preachers shall always be devoted to the colleges and theological schools: and whenever any college confers any degrees upon our preschers, it shall be the duty of that preacher ever afterwards to build up that college by inducing all under his influence to send their sons and wards to it. Our papers, too, shall eulogize its faculty and the incomparable attainments of its president; but this must be done in all prudence and as suggested by our censors of the press.

10. In getting up revivals, all means popular shall be adopted. Camp meetings, mourning benches, anxious seats, Christ's and the devil's pews, shall all be employed as far as convenient; and while we may borrow helps from those better skilled than we in working up human passions, let us take care of the converts, and pay our allies in praise.

11. The "Herald of Fame" and every member of our society shall always proceed upon the principle that fame is the summum bonum; and that to be praised we must praise, especially those whose praise can most promote our own.

12. W-T-B-, D.D.; Hon. J-T-C-, LL.D.; Major General O-P-Q-; and G-H-L-, Esq., are appointed a committee to solicit subscribers to our constitution and to our organ, the "Herald of Fame."

Done at our first meeting, Philadelphia, January 2, T. PUFF, Secretary.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us for sample copies of Bible Lesson Helps.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once-Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75 each. Mail us your order at

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25. for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

We have just printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order to-day for a copy of this splendid book.

"Salvation from Sin," by David Lipscomb, is a most excellent book. This book contains the cream of his editorials, and will be found helpful to all who read it. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Haleyville, Ala., December 12, 1924.—E. A. Elam, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Sir and Brother: Please answer, through the Gospel Advocate, the following questions: Did the Corinthians really call themselves Paulites, Apollosites, Cephasites, etc., or did Paul use those names to avoid personality? What was it that Paul had transferred to himself in a figure, as stated in 1 Cor. 4: 6? Please explain 1 Cor. 3: 4-6. TIM WALKER.

There were sore contentions in the church in Corinth. Some were claiming to be "of Paul;" some, "of Apollos;" some, "of Cephas;" and some, "of Christ." (1 Cor. 1: 10-13.) Paul did not use the expressions, "Paulites," "Apollosites," and "Cephasites;" neither were Paul, Apollos, and Cephas responsible for these divisions, but false teachers were. Paul, Apollos, and Cephas were one in Christ; but there existed such contentions and parties, as Paul states, and they were designated as Paul says. Christ is not divided, and there should have been no division in Corinth. Paul disavowed for himself, Apollos, and Cephas any desire and effort to head any party in the church. He sought to teach and to shame the church out of such sin.

Read carefully chapter 3, the last verses of which are: "Wherefore let no one glory in men. For all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."

Verse 4 declares that in such contentions they were men—that is, were "carnal," or were governed by their fleshly passions, such as jealousy, strife, divisions, and walked "after the manner of men."

Verses 5-9 declare that Paul and Apollos were only God's field hands, working together in perfect unity and peace in God's "tilled land" (margin), Paul planting, or sowing the seed, and Apollos watering the crop, while God gave the increase.

Chapter 4 begins with a request to account Paul and Apollos as only stewards of God, endeavoring in all things to prove themselves faithful. "In a figure," representing himself and Apollos as farm hands and stewards and builders of God, Paul transferred these things to himself and Apollos that the really guilty ones who would place themselves at the head and become leaders of these parties might feel the force of the truth and realize the sin of division, which they were committing.

Many congregations and not a few preachers could study with much profit these lessons emphasized by the example and teaching of Paul.

0 0 0

Bradford, Ark., December 22, 1924.—I am always glad to get the Gospel Advocate, for it contains just the sort of material that provokes thought. After all, we are educated only to that extent that we are made to think, and no further. This sort of thinking is the surest, if not the only, way to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.

not the only, way to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.

I read with pleasure the articles of Brethren McGary and Smith on the subject of baptism in the issue of December 18. I confess I fail to get a great deal out of them, as both men seem to fail to understand each other. I do not see how a man can be scripturally baptized on the confession, "I believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins." If it be not scriptural, then I cannot see how it is baptism at all. If not scriptural at all, how can one be accepted, who has had that sort of baptism, into the church of Christ, seeing that it is the Lord that adds to the church, and not man? I would like for Brother Elam to define the necessary prerequisites for a subject for baptism, and explain how this sect baptism ever gets to be scriptural baptism. Would Brother Elam baptize a man on the confession given above? A Baptist preacher would. After he has done that, then would you accept him into the church on that baptism (immersion), or, perhaps, I would better say, would the Lord accept him? The fact that he is satisfied with it—does that make it scriptural? I shall appreciate your answer.

Studying the Bible regularly as the spiritual milk and solid food of the gospel, practicing it daily in humility in all things, and drinking in more and more of the Spirit of Christ is the only way to grow in the grace and knowledge of the truth.

I do not intend to become any part of this discussion. I write this only because requested to, but especially to say that Brother Smith is teaching the truth on the subject, and that is all that is necessary.

The "necessary prerequisites to baptism" are faith in Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the living God, and hearty repentance of all sins, as all cases of baptism in the New Testament after Christ's death show. When these were manifest by word or deed, nothing more was required. These existing in the heart and manifested on the part of the subject are not destroyed by some man's requiring more.

"Scriptural baptism" is baptism into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit of one who believes with all the heart in Christ, the Savior of the world, and has turned in godly sorrow from all sin, and what such a person lacks of knowing further all the truth does not render his baptism unscriptural.

If one is satisfied upon self-examination that in faith in Christ and repentance of all sins one was baptized into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit-that is, in obedience to God-such baptism is acceptable to God. One must be satisfied that one has faith in Christ, trusts in God, and has repented of all sin; then why must not one be satisfied that he has obeyed God to be baptized, moved to do so by some scriptural motive? If that motive is the answer of a good conscience toward God, to please and obey God, to put on Christ, to show faith in the burial and resurrection of Christ (Col. 2: 12), or unto remission of sins, why is not that baptism scriptural? Or if one or two or three of these motives should be absent and the others should prevail at the time of baptism of one who has never heard the gospel before, that baptism would be scriptural.

If one should confess faith in Christ, turning in godly sorrow from sin, and demand baptism at my hands, saying that he believed that God for Christ's sake had pardened his sins, I would make an effort to teach him further the truth, but would baptize him and teach him still further the truth.

$ $ $

Haleyville, Ala., Route 2, November 25, 1924.—Dear Brother Elam: I would like for you to comment on John 10: 9. What is it to "go in and out." and find pasture? Also explain 1 Cor. 5: 8-11. Does the feast in verse 8 mean the "Lord's Supper?" Also tell us what kind of meal is referred to in verse 11, "with such a one no not to eat." Is this a common meal?

J. D. STONE.

In the parable of the sheepfold, Jesus says under one figure that he is "the door;" under another figure he is the "good Shepherd." Sheep are literally folded at night and go out to pasture in the day. They are thus both fed and protected. Under this figure, Christians are both protected and fed in the church. They do not go literally into the church and then out again.

"The feast" in verse 8 is the entire worship of God, a joyous spiritual festival. The wrongdoer referred to was the leaven which should be purged out. The church as a lump of dough should be unleavened. The meal referred to in verse 11, as the context shows, is a common meal.

ALL WOMEN . WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota. - "I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous break-down following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORD-LEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."
This means that 98 out.

This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for allments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all drugreck

OTHINE

In Use for Over 16 Years

Your freckles need attention NOW or may remain all winter. Use Othine—double strength—the old and time-tried guaranteed treatment that has given satisfaction to millions of women, and rid yourself of these homely spots.

We recommend Othline Complexion Scap for use with Othline

At all Druggists and Department Stores. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

WHEAT AND CHAFF.

BY ALFRED ELLMORE.

The Lord chastens every son whom he receives every one.

It is better to do an enemy a favor than in aggravation to tell others his faults.

Though we may sow in tears, yet, if we sow the pure seed in the proper spirit, we may reap in joy.

The boy who gets tired of a good home and leaves it well dressed and well fed, sometimes returns hungry and clothed in rags.

Men are books. If we understand human nature, we may open and read. Some are good books, and some are bad; some are back numbers, and some are out of print.

Without toil, no man can become a scholar. By honest effort men get Without toil and much prayer, no man can become a successful preacher; without toil, no man can be happy; and through patient, unremitting toil lies the road to the everlasting rest.

Even men of the world do not speak with civility, no matter what be their talents, of men who are infidels. They are often referred to as "Tom Paine," "Bob Ingersoll," etc. But speaking of men of faith, whoever heard them say "Jim Garfield," "Abe Lincoln," " Hen Beecher," " Dan Webster?"

Now, if it be thought necessary to pile up negations to disprove a thing not revealed, and, therefore, no part of any man's duty, I will add a few reasons why a Christian should take no risk of adding to God's perfect institution. (1) All things pertaining to our faith and practice God has revealed, and, therefore, has enjoined, and they must require of us a portion of our time and talents; so this leaves us no time to trifle upon outside issues. (2) The Master not having required the doing of them, they cannot possibly contain any part of our duty; and should we adopt anything that God has not required, he may reject the work done by them.
(3) For aught we know, these unrevealed things may contain more " poison fruit," which may result in death much worse than that visited upon our first parents. They were having to do with temporal fruit, and the breaking of that law took them and their posterity to the grave; but this law is eternal and must continue forever, which has consequences to the obedient and to the disobedient which cannot cease.

An educated Indian who spent half an hour in a cemetery remarked: "Uh! Guess the only good white man is the dead white man." And from the way the modern clergymen pronounce their eulogies in funerals upon

NEUMONIA

Call a physician. Then begin "emergency" treatment with

EGSORE

ARE CURABLE. If you suffer from Leg Sores or Varicose Ulcers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous book that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my remarkable, painless treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over thirty-five years' specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 979, 421 East Eleventh Street, Kansas City, Mo.

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Seventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1865

B. E. HAINS

H. S. PETTUS JOHN S. BURNETT

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

GOSPEL TENTS

Twenty-four years' experience, TIO no hire, no overhead expense, and a burn-ing desire to aid the spread of the gospel are reasons why you can save so much money by ordering your tent from

W. G. WHITE, Nashville, Tenn. 1220 McChesney Ave.

MAYO'S SEEDS

Send us only 10c and we will mail you postpaid one packet each of the following:

Early Scarlet Turnip Radish Seed, White Spine Cucumber Seed, Mayo's Blood Turnip Beet Seed, Southern Giant Curled Mustard Seed, Black Seeded Simpson Lettuce Seed, Mayo's Special Mixture of Sweet Peas, with our illustrated catalog of Seeds for the South,

Or we will be glad to mail you our cata-log and price list of Farm Seeds free on request. 45th year in Seed business.

D. R. MAYO

KNOXVILLE :: :: TENNESSEE

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nausealess Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

COMMERCE-UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

Healthy, Happy Babies

The best way to keep baby in crowing, contented health is Mrs. Winslow's Syrup. This safe, pleasant, effective reme-dy regulates the bowels and quickly overcomes diarrhoea, colic, flatulency, constipation, and teething troubles.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SYRUP

TheInfants' and Children's Regulator is best for baby. Guaranteed free from narcotics, opiates, alcohol and all harmful ingredients. Open formula on every label.

At all Druggists

Write for free bookiet of letters from grateful mothers.

Anglo - American Drug Co. 215-217 Fulton St. New York

the dead, you would think the Indian about right. It is a very solemn thing to die, and to ask of their preacher, "How did he die?" But this is a light matter when compared with, "How did he live?" How we live must settle the question for us both here and hereafter.

AN OPEN DOOR.

BY J. L. HINES.

In many destitute places and county-seat towns of Kentucky the door swings wide to the preaching of the ancient gospel. While in Kentucky last summer, it fell to my lot to preach in the courthouse yard in Carlisle to two enthusiastic audiences. As a result of this experience, I was requested to come to them next summer with a tent. The "digressives" are five hundred strong there, but their pastor said to a friend of mine: "They will have a following here." I am in receipt of a letter asking me to come to Mount Olivet, county seat of Robertson County, to conduct a meeting in the courthouse. Morgantown, county seat of Butler County, is pleading for a meeting. Hartford, county seat of Ohio County, is also begging for a meeting. And at Maysville, Augusta, Paris, Cynthiana, and Somerset the gospel door stands ajar. The "digressives" and other denominations have had full sway in Kentucky, but it seems to me that a great number of people there are clamoring for something better. The chal-lenge has been issued. What shall lenge has been issued. we do? Shall we continue "at ease in Zion?" Shall we stand idly by and see souls grope about in darkness blackened by every false way? I am not unmindful of the fact that many who say that preachers and churches ought to do missionary work were never known to conduct a mission meeting in their lives. All such must bear their own burdens at the judgment. Shall we growl and grumble and then fail to do our duty because others fail to do theirs? Let us be Christians, not in name only, but by exercising Christian virtues. Every child of God is commanded to preach the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation." There are over two thousand preachers in the churches of Christ, and there are about five thousand churches with a membership of over one hundred and fifty thousand. If each member would convert one this year, and so on for ten years, every man, woman, boy, and girl would be a Christian. It is impossible to get anything out of any business enterprise, honestly and honorably, unless one puts something into it. This is true also of Christianity.

I will conduct one mission meeting in Kentucky during the year 1925. Let every preacher who reads this, who is willing to do as much, write me, and I will put him in touch with some place so that he can make arrangements. Let every church which is willing to conduct one mission meeting in Kentucky during the year 1925 write me, and I will give all necessary information concerning the field and work.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, or gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x5% inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living.— R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound.-N. B.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits.-H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me. -Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

S. C. LEESON

Vitality and Strength Follow Good Blood and a Good Stomach

Raleigh, N. Car. — "Of all the medicines I have ever taken I have never found an equal to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for blood, liver and stomach troubles. I was all rundown in health; my liver was inactive and I had a gastric condition of the stomach, my food did not digest properly, causing sour stomach, and my blood was very poor. I lost in weight and was in a bad way physically when I began taking the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and no medicine that I ever taking the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and no medicine that I ever took gave me so much real help. It relieved me of all the annoying conditions and made me well and strong. It helped my whole physical make up. I could eat anything I wished without its causing any distress."—S. C. Leeson, 307 E. Cabarrus St. Cabarrus St.

All druggists sell this 'Discovery' of Dr. Pierce's in liquid and tablets. Write Dr. Pierce, Pres., Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice. Send 10c for trial pkg. tablets.

NO

CATIO

COUGH that several generations of mothers have used successfully (since 1802). Roche's loosens the ph'eguarelieves quickly and safely. Equally effective for bronchitis and colds on the chest.

Always keep a bottle handy. All druggists or E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc. 90-92 Beekman St., NewYork

Miller's Antiseptic Oll, Known as

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick. Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredients. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick relief assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago said to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 70c and $1.00.

OBITUARIES

WHITFIELD.

Mary Hester McKeel was born in Mary Hester McKeel was born in Humphreys County, Tenn., on March 10, 1878, and was married to J. D. Whitfield on September 3, 1899. To this union were born three boys and one girl. She also reared an orphan girl. She obeyed the gospel when about fifteen years of age, and was always a devoted Christian. She died on May 15, 1924, and was buried at McKeel cemetery, near Cuba Landing, Tenn. Brother C. M. Pullias and the writer conducted funeral services.

O. C. LAMBERT. O. C. LAMBERT.

SEAY.

Nannie L. Seay was born in Natchez, Miss., on November 15, 1845, and died in Madisonville, Texas, on September 26, 1924. Sister Seay was married to Mr. E. B. Seay on August 3, 1870. To this union five children were born—Dorah, Rella, Edward,
Sam, and Mose. Mrs. Rella Morris and Edward Seay, and also one stepdaughter, Mrs. John Tinsley, survive her. Sister Seay obeyed the gospel in early womanhood, and lived a Christian until called home. She was sick only about five minutes. She died at only about five minutes. She was sick only about five minutes. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Morris, with whom she made her home for several years. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

W. P. SKAGGS.

KEY.

It is with a sad heart that I an-nounce the passing away of Sister Lydia Ann Earnest Key. She was Lydia Ann Earnest Key. She was born on January 21, 1893; was mar-ried to Brother Floyd Key on Decem-ber 24, 1911; and passed from earth and loved ones on June 12, 1924. In early life, under the first preaching of Brother G. C. Brewer at Earnest Chapel, she confessed her faith in Christ and was buried with him in baptism. She leaves a father, mother, four sisters, three brothers, hesides a husband and five children, to mourn her death. She was loved by all who knew her. Her memory will be treas-ured. Her manner of life gives us ured. Her manner of life gives us hope to believe that she belongs to the company of those who have died in the faith, concerning whom it is written: "Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a city." JEROME MYRES.

HARDEMAN.

On Friday, August 8, 1924, at 5:25 P.M., the death angel visited our home and took from us our mother, Mrs. Eliza C. Hardeman. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Sabinal, Texas, where we had lived for many years, on Lord's day, August 10, which was the seventieth anniversary of her birth. I am sure that nothing in life could have given her more pleasure, except the hope of eternal life at the right hand of God, than the knowledge that she would be than the knowledge that she would be laid to rest upon the day which brought life and immortality to life through the glorious resurrection of Hill's stop millions of colds every winterand in 24 hours. They end headache and fever, open the bowels, tone the whole sys-tem. Use nothing less reliable. Colds and Grippe call for prompt, efficient help. Be sure you get it.

All druggists WILL'S Price 30e Get Red Box FOMIO with portrait

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat
Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market. Postpaid, 300, 75c; 500, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B.
Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.50; 10,000
up, at $0c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price. Satisfaction guaranteed,
D. F. JAMISON,
Summerville, S. O.

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

These IO Numbers

will contain 30 Stories of Thrilling Adventure, in-cluding the Great Ton-Chapter Serial Story, Be-leved Acres, beginning Feb. 12. You get all this and more in a Half-Price Trial Subscription to

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

The Companion is packed full of entertaining and informing reading. For Boys, for Girls, for all the Family. To get the opening chapter of Beleved Acres your order should be sent to us at once.

TO GET Cut out this advt. and mall it TODAY with 25c, for 10ALL THIS weeks trial subscription, or $2.50 for a full year.

The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla.

SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00.

Eyening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M.
(Eastern time.)

A Christian welcome to all visitors, All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the Goor, For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North, Phone, 1523-R.

School Desks, Opera Chairs, Folding Chairs

Kindergarten Chairs,

School Supplies, Blackboards

Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N. C.

her Lord and Savior. She was born in Marshall County, Tenn., on August 10, 1854. She obeyed the gospel in August, 1869, at Roberson Fork, under the preaching of Brother "Billie" Dixon, and was ever after faithful to the trust committed to her. Surviving her are Mrs. Jordan, four grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, all residents of Texas, and several relatives in Tennessee. several relatives in Tennessee.

WILLIAM M. JORDAN.

YOUNG.

Sister Young, wife of Brother W. B. Young, was born at Lovelady, Texas, on January 11, 1861, and died at her Young, was born at Lovelady, Texas, on January 11, 1861, and died at her home in Groveton, Texas, on July 29, 1924. She was married to W. B. Young on May 4, 1890, and to this union were born four girls—Mary, Wayne, Gleen, and Ivie Jane; two boys—Campbell, of Bronson, Texas, and Rex, of Weed, Cal. In 1883 she obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother John W. Durst, and from that time on she lived a consistent Christian life. She worked always in the interest of her home and the church. She trusted fully in Christ. She was loved by all who knew her; and not only will she be missed by the family, but by the entire community where her life was a shining light for Christ. Brother Young has been for many years an elder in the church at Groveton, and is loved and respected by the church and community. The writer conducted the funeral service in the home, where a large number of sorrowing friends and loved ones paid their prowhere a large number of sorrowing friends and loved ones paid their pro-found respect to a life that was not spent in vain. G. E. MCCALEB.

BINGHAM.

BINGHAM.

Hattie Dill Lance was born on December 25, 1875, and died on December 12, 1924. She was the only living daughter of Mr, and Mrs. Bennett Lance, both deceased, her mother having died only one week before she was called to her reward. Mother suffered with diabetes for several years. She was born in Cannon County, Tenn., but when she was four years old her parents moved near Helbuckle, Tenn., where she lived the remainder of her life. At the age of twenty-seven years she was united in marriage to R. C. Bingham. They were blessed with three daughters, all of whom are grown and members of the "one body." She was a faithful and true wife and mother. She, like her mother, looked forward to that home where there is no sorrow, sickness, nor death. She united with the church of the First-born at the age of fifteen, and lived faithful until called to her heavenly reward. She never tired of teaching her children the way of virtue and righteousness. She leaves, to mourn her death, her faithful companion, three daughters, one brother, and a host of other relatives and friends. We gently laid her to rest beside her mother in the Beachboard cemetery. We weep not as those who have no hope. Brother McQuiddy conducted the funeral.

HER THREE DAUGHTERS.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, men-tion this paper.

Teach your child Internal cleanliness,

THE mother who permits constipation in her baby or older child is risking the health, even the life, of her little one.

Fretfulness, feverishness, night terrors, grinding the teeth in sleep, biliousness, coated tongue, loss of appetite, any of these may indicate constipation. Poisons from the child's stagnant intestine are flooding the little body, and if left unchecked may lead to serious consequences.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and hastens its passage through and out of the body. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Let your infant or child have Nujol regularly, and see rosy cheeks, clear eyes and happiness return once more.

Nujol is used in children's and general hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

For Internal Cleanliness

HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 11/2 inches deep, 91/4 inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

Getting Up Nights Can Be Stopped

Often in twenty-four hours. To prove that you can be rid of this strength-sapping allment, have more pep, be free from burning sensation, pain in groins, backache, and weakness, I'll send you Walker's Frostate Specific, free and postpaid, under plain wrapper. No obligation. No cost. If it cures your prostate gland trouble, you can repay the favor by telling your friends; if not, the loss is mine. Simply send me your name, and prove that you can feel ten years younger and be rid of prostate trouble.

I. B. WALKER.

1677 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

From the Brethren

Lake City, Fla., January 25.—On the morning of January 10, in answer to an invitation from the church at Daytona, Fla., I left for that place to conduct a series of meetings in their new house of worship, where I labored two weeks with some of the best people God has ever permitted me to labor, with. Brother C. C. Brown, who ministers to the church both in and out of the pulpit, together with his faithful and untiring wife, is doing a good work there, and is loved and appreciated by the church. Brother W. A. Cameron established the work there in 1923. Five were added to the congregation during the meeting. The young folks and children were encouraged in song and attendance. The meeting closed with a full house and a fine interest. The congregation invited me to return at some future time and work with them again.—J. O. Barnes.

Oklahoma City, Okla, January 26.—I am now devoting all my time as field superintendent of the Tipton Orphans' Home at Tipton, Okla. We now have one hundred children in the Home and many others on the waiting list, waiting for the Home to be finished. This Home is by far the largest orphanage attempted by the churches of Christ. It is located in the Red River Valley of Southwestern Oklahoma, near the Texas-Oklahoma border. It has eighty acres of fine fruit and vegetable land, fifteen acres of fine orchard and vineyard, large groves and playgrounds, and a brick building with more than thirty-five thousand feet of floor space. It will be one of the largest institutions of the kind in the United States when completed. It will be heated by steam and lighted by electricity. Brother Price Bankhead is the superintendent of the Home; Sister Bankhead is the matron. Some twenty-five thousand dollars is needed to complete and furnish the north half of the building. It is finished on the outside, but the inside is unfinished and unfurnished. Do you desire some "pure and undefiled" religion? If so, send a liberal donation. Address all mail to Tipton, Okla.—J. H. Lawson.

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. The type is large and clear and is easily read. The size—5x734.

inches—is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps; 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

$6.00

In ordering, order Bible No. 102—Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

EXPERIENCE.

Experience is a book of law that is written and recorded in the life of every individual. Each day a new chapter is added to this great volume. The contents of this book are completely indexed for quick reference, and the learning it holds is of much value to its author if the bright light of memory is ever turned upon its pages. What we write to-day must be intelligently guided by what was written yesterday, if the many chapters are to be a story of progress and accomplishment.—Exchange.

The life of a true Christian is the most unanswerable argument for Christianity.—Exchange.

I THANK THEE.

For the earth and all its beauty, The sky and all its beauty,
The sky and all its light;
For the dim and soothing shadows,
That rest the dazzled sight;
For unfading fields and prairies,
Where sense in vain has trod;
For the world's exhaustless beauty,
I thank thee, O my God!
For an eve of inward seeing. For an eye of inward seeing, A soul to know and love; For these common aspirations That our high heirship prove; For the hearts that bless each other Beneath thy smile, thy rod; For the amaranth saved from Eden, I thank thee, O my God! For the hidden scroll o'erwritten With one dear name adored; For the heavenly in the human, The Spirit in the Word; For the tokens of thy presence Within, above, abroad; For thine own great gift of being, I thank thee, O my God!

REPORT OF NEW YORK WORK.

-Lucy Larcom.

As treasurer of the New York church of Christ, I submit the following report for the year 1924:

Amount on hand January 1, 1924,

Receipts: From regular contributions of the New York church, $1,-347.33; Sister R. J. Carpenter and husband, $120 (Sister Carpenter is a member of the New York church); other churches and individuals, $1,-143.78. Total balance on hand and receipts for the year, $2,742.32.

Disbursements: To E. E. Shoulders, evangelist, $2,310.24; hall rent, $312; janitor service, $46; hymn books, $53.80; Bible-study Quarterlies, $10.-62; table, $5; printing of letter heads, $3.80. Total expenditures, $2,741.46.

Cash on hand, January 1, 1925, 86

In behalf of the New York church, I wish to thank each one for his fellowship, prayers, and the interest manifested in the Lord's work here.

GEORGE M. MCKEE.

P. O. Box 15, Station N.

WORK IN HARMONY.

Every human voice has its own accent; every human body has its own gait. Each one must do things in his own natural, peculiar, and most fitting way. To criticize another's work or method of work because it is not like ours is as foolish as to condemn a pear for differing in shape and taste from an apple. The thing to be desired and sought is that all may work harmoniously for the same ends, not that all shall work alike.-Selected.

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Grav's Ointment

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid_____

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

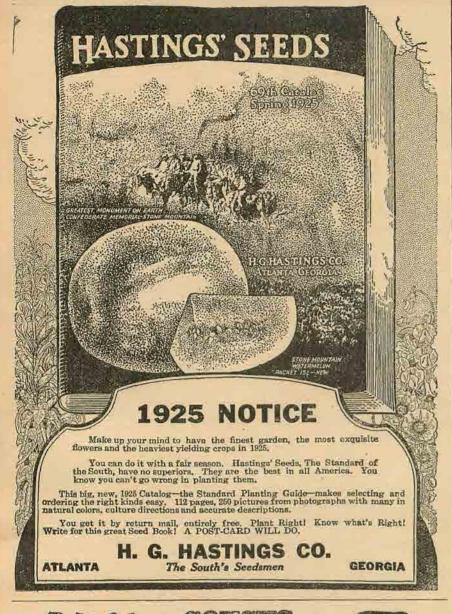

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg. In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate Nashville, Tenn.

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year "THOU ART THE CHRIST." BY H. J. PHILLIPS.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matt. 16: 16.) These are the words of Peter, spoken some two thousand years ago. Peter's words were not those of a man only, for the Christ said: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jonah: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father who is in heaven." (Verse 17.)

From the time that these words were spoken at Cesarea Philippi during the ministry of Jesus, every soul that will be saved, until time shall be no more, must make the same confession. I know that we have people today that claim to be the children of God, who say they expect to go to heaven, but not by or through the name or blood of Christ. But the old Book, the Bible, the only guide we have from earth to heaven, teaches us that there is no other name whereby we can be saved, save the name of Jesus: that Jesus is the door, and the only door, by which man can enter in; that all those that came before him were thieves and robbers. If I did not believe with all my heart that Jesus is the divine Son of God, and knew I would never believe it, I would burn my Bible and all the good books that I have that teach me about the God whom I serve.

Let us go back in the long ago and see what was said of Christ by the prophets. In Gen. 3: 15 we read about "the seed of the woman." In Gen. 22: 17, 18, God says to Abraham: "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven; . . . and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." In Gen. 28: 14 it is said: "In thy seed [the seed of Jacob] shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 49: 10 says: "And unto him shall the gatherings of the people be." Isaiah (11: 1) says: "There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots." Also read Ps. 89: 3, 4, In Isa. 7: 14 we learn that he was to be born of a virgin, and that his name was to be called "Immanuel;" and in Mic. 5: 2 we learn that he was to be born in Bethlehem. Read Dan. 2: 44; Hag. 2: 7; Mal. 3: 1. In. Ps. 110: 4 it is said of Jesus: "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." Jesus is spoken of as a Judge: "And he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness." (Ps. 9: 8.) He is also declared to be a King. (Ps. 145: 13.)

Let us now turn to the new covenant. "And thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." (Matt. 1: 21.) "Out of thee [Bethlehem] shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." (Matt. 2: 6.) "He shall be called a Nazarene." (Matt. 2: 23.) He is God's beloved Son. (Matt. 3: 17.) "What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God?" (Matt. 8: 29.) "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest." (Luke 1: 32.) "He is a horn of salvation for us." (Luke 1: 69.) Jesus is also known as the Savior, the Word, King of Israel, I AM, Prince of Life, Holy Child, Lord of All, Deliverer, Image of God, Mediator, Captain, Author and Finisher of our Faith, and Great High Priest. "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5: 9.) If Jesus is the author of eternal salvation, and you are expecting to ever be saved, then you had better put your trust in him.

Some people say they have been born of God, but not through Jesus. But read these passages: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." (1 John 5: 1.)
"Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" (Verse 5.)
"And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." (Verse 11.) No living being can claim to have the right spirit without faith in Christ. "And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God." (1 John 4: 3.)
"Thou art the Christ." "This is my beloved Son." There is salvation in no other name, save Jesus Christ.

BURY YOUR WRONGS.

In the very depths of yourself, dig a grave. Let it be like some forgotten spot to which no path leads; and there, in the eternal silence, bury the wrongs that you have suffered. Your heart will feel as if a weight had fallen from it, and a divine peace come to abide with you.—Charles Wagner.

But now the Prince of Peace has come—He of whom it was said that "in his days there shall be abundance of peace." Now "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other." Now "old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new;" and "all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself."—Selected.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Headache

Pain

Neuralgia

Toothache

Lumbago

Neuritis

Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets—Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

For the treatment of non-contagious chronic ailments by improved naturopathic methods. Neuritis, neurasthenia, high blood pressure. Excellent climate. Pleasant surroundings. Good food and care. Moderate charges. Write us about your trouble. Pamphlets free.

No Home Treatment, Nothing to Sell but Service

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per single copy....$0.40 | Per 50, per copy.....$7 Per dozen, per copy .38 | Per 100, per copy.....$8

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy....$0.80 | Per 50, per copy......27 Per dozen, per copy 28 | Per 100, per copy.....25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate

A FUNERAL SERMON OF THE MORMON PROPHET.

It was pen-preached by one who lived when the system of Mormonism was born and who was familiar with the means its advocates used to propagate it. It is found in the Millennial Harbinger, September, 1844, page 410:

DEATH OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE MOR-MON IMPOSTOR.

Joseph Smith and his brother, Hiram, have been providentially cut off in the midst of their diabolical career. They were most lawlessly and mobocratically put to death. One of the antediluvian signs of the times was that "the earth was filled with violence." From Boston and Philadelphia to New Orleans this land is filled with violence; and, analogically reasoning, some great catastrophe is coming upon the world. There is no law of sufficient authority in the hands of this government to preserve peace and safety in this country. The sword of the magistrate is worn in vain.

But the money digger, the juggler, and the founder of the golden-Bible delusion has been hurried away in the midst of his madness to his final account. "He died not as a righteous man dieth." The hand of the Lord was heavy upon him. An outlaw himself, God cut him off by outlaws. He requited him according to his works. He was not persecuted, unless to punish a traitor, a public plunderer, a marauder, be persecution! The killing of Robespierre was not murder. It was the outrages of the Mormons that brought upon the head of their leader the arm of justice. The frenzy of a fanatic cannot make out of the affair persecution. Religion or religious opinions had nothing to do with it. It was neither more nor less than the assassination of one whose career was in open rebellion against God and man. Still, the guilt of his death lies upon those who, in violation of the laws of both God and their country, dispatched him without even the form of a trial.

A. C.

Alexander Campbell, in his frank and fearless statement of facts, marked out the line of battle with Mormonism. Joseph Smith is the center and circumference of the system. He must be "shown up" before the public as he really was. The "tricks" of early Mormons must be exposed. This will be done at a greater risk now than it would have been in Campbell's day, for the delusion has grown and the organization of Smith's followers is the finest on earth for propaganda. The "elders" are in every part of the globe with hands full of tracts hastening to place them in every home.

If Smith was what Campbell proclaimed him to be, a system built on his teachings is dangerous to both church and nation. That he was, is of easy proof. Hence, Mormonism is a menace that must be fought to a finish around the earth.—R. B. Neal, in Christian Leader.

THE BETTER WAY.

The little sharp vexations,
And the briers that catch and fret—
Why not take all to the Helper
Who has never failed us yet?

Tell Him about the heartache,
And tell him the longings, too;
Tell Him the baffled purpose
When we scarce know what to do.

Then, leaving all our weakness
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden,
And carry away the song.
—Phillips Brooks.

Down-grades attract the lazy soul. It turns away from Christianity and refuses to climb the heights.

STOP ITCH Don't be annoyed or Euffer another day, WONDER OINTMENT rids you entirely and quickly. Postpald anywhere. Large $120, $2.00; small size, $1.00. Guaranteed. Druggists and dealers wanted everywhere. EVANS PHARMACY, Anderson, S. C.

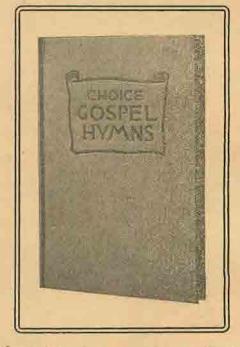

TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

Part of to-day belongs to to-morrow, as the seed belongs to the shoot, as the foundation belongs to the building. So to-day owes its best to to-morrow, for not to do right to-day may ruin to-morrow; but the reverse is not true. To-morrow cannot ruin to-day. Time's wheel does not run backward. Banish, then, foreboding and anxious forecast, and fill to-day with faithful work, with kindness and courage and hope; and so you will keep to-morrow from becoming a marplot, and make it a good, honest to-day when it comes.-Maltbie D. Babcock.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding ____$0.40 Per copy, cloth binding ____$0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Volume LXVII. No. 7.

NASHVILLE, TENN., FEBRUARY 12, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
SCRIPTURE STUDIES	145
OUR CONTRIBUTORS Bobbed Hair—In Africa—Shall We Lecture or Preach the Gospel?—General Baptist Misstatements—What Think Ye of Christ? (No. 1)—Prayer (No. 2).	147
OUR MESSAGES	152
Special Pleading—A Thousand Years of Glory for the Earth—Word from Washington—Miracles Hays	154
Ceased (No. 1). QUERY DEPARTMENT	158
HOME READING	159
FROM THE BRETHREN	160
Tribute to A. D. Thompson. The Life Worth While. Sundale Sermons (No. 3).	162 163 165 168

PLEASE PAY UP AND RENEW.

The amount you owe the Gospel Advocate is doubtless small to you, but many such amounts make a large sum to the Gospel Advocate. It is probably just an oversight that your back subscription has not been paid, for we do not believe that your failure to pay has been intentional.

The cost of publishing the Gospel Advocate is very high. It is costing fully double now what it did thirty years ago to publish the paper. Then we were hardly able to meet the cost of publication. At that time we were charging two dollars per year for the paper. With cost now double what it was then, we are still charging only two dollars per year for the paper. The cost of almost everything is double what it was thirty years ago. Four dollars per year for the Gospel Advocate would not be high, but in keeping with the increased cost of things. Any one can see this. There are only two sources of revenue for a paper—subscriptions and advertising. The amount received for advertising is less than it was formerly.

We should at least quadruple the circulation of the Gospel Advocate, so as to bring down the cost of publication.

If a hand is stamped on your paper pointing to this notice, you should look at the yellow label slip to see the date to which your subscription is paid. If the date is past due, this is a request for payment of back dues and renewal for another year. If your date is in advance, then the one stamping made a mistake in stamping, and you are requested to excuse the oversight.

Promptness in paying your subscription will be very helpful and encouraging to the management of the Gospel Advocate. The cost of the paper must be paid. Our creditors will not wait. They are insistent until paid. Prompt subscribers help; negligent subscribers hurt. Those who never pay demoralize business and make it difficult to pay for the paper.

If you will use the renewal blank and send a number of new subscribers with your renewal, you will not only lighten our burden, but you will do a good work. The paper is a blessing to all who read it.

Now is a good time for you to send the paper to some who wish to read it, but are not able to pay for it. By doing this you may save a soul. Don't delay, but mail us a check to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY.

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

By JAMES A. ALLEN

WHATEVER MAY BE SAID about a religious question, no one can deny that it is the most vital and important question that ever confronted the public mind. Whether it is true or false, it has a hold upon the human mind that no man can shake off. It connects with that which is vital to life and happiness. No man can deny it consideration. He may ignore it and allow the cares of the world to cause him to put it off to "a convenient season," but, sooner or later, necessity compels him to confront it. The "convenient season" rarely, if ever, comes; and he who procrastinates generally utters the bitter wail of being almost saved, but lost.

Competent testimony proves the Bible to be the word of God. We do not accept the Bible to be of divine origin, or to be a revelation from God to man, through bias or sentiment, but because incontrovertible and undeniable facts, substantiated by every species of evidence, demonstrate such to be true. The facts upon which the Christian religion rests are the best-attested facts in all the records of mankind. Not one of the enemies of Christianity, from its first promulgation till the present time, has ever produced one iota of counter testimony in rebuttal. Their verdict has always been: "What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been wrought through them, is manifest to all that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it." (Acts 4: 16.) Those who preach evolution, deny the virgin birth and the resurrection, have no evidence to offer in rebuttal. All they have to offer consists in mere negations. Christianity offers "many proofs," amounting to more than demonstration, that Jesus rose from the dead. Their denial of it consists of nothing but talk; they have no testimony or evidence of any kind with which to refute the testimony of eyewitnesses and earwitnesses who saw and heard Jesus after his resurrection.

0 0 0

THE BIBLE being the word of God and containing the commandments of God, obedience becomes the most important thing in life. No wise and intelligent person can recognize the Bible as being the word of God without desiring to live in conformity with its teaching. Man cannot enjoy permanent prosperity or happiness except as he does God's will as revealed therein. True religion consists in fearing God and keeping his commandments, as they are given by the Holy Spirit through inspired men, not in "every man" doing "whatsoever is right in his own eyes." Thinking a thing to be right does not make it right and does not make it acceptable to God. We can "fulfill all righteousness" only by doing the things God has commanded and designated in his word. For man to do things religiously because his own wisdom approves them is for him to walk by human wisdom, not by the wisdom of God. God speaks to man only in his word, in He is pleased with and accepts only such the Bible. service at the hands of man as his word requires. The religious world needs to be impressed with the superlatively important lesson that man must adhere to the word of God. Whatsoever cannot be done by that faith that comes by hearing God's word is sin.

This cuts off all confusion and controversy. It binds men in all acceptable service to what the word of God teaches and requires. It is impossible to get up strife and division among people who are willing to abide in the word of God. Their only desire is to read, to examine, to investigate, to "search the Scriptures," to learn what the Bible teaches. "The law and the testimony" is the end of all controversy with them. On any subject that presents itself, differences cannot arise when no man preaches or teaches anything on that subject except what he can read in the Scriptures. There is no exception. When all adhere to the word, advancing no opinions or theories of their own, then all will "speak the same thing," and there will "be no divisions among you," but all will "be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

* * *

WE FEEL a very keen interest in getting before the general public what Jesus and the Holy Spirit require sinners to do to be saved. We realize that the general public is almost wholly ignorant of the teaching of inspired men on this most important subject. Certainly a great work is before the church of Christ. Congregations and individual Christians should arouse out of slumber and get the gospel as it was preached by the apostles before the general public. We cannot depend upon human organizations and associations, upon "home missionary societies" or "foreign missionary societies." These things have been tried, and are a costly and dismal failure. We do not need a drive for some huge "fund." We need a converted membership; we need men and women with faith enough to do what God commands. This great and important work can be done only in God's way. It cannot be done in man's way. Enough time has been wasted, and thousands are going down to ruin without God and without hope.

The early church, under the leadership of the apostles, successfully did this work. They got the gospel before the general public. "Yea, verily, their sound went out into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world." (Rom. 10: 18.) Individually, every disciple "went about preaching the word." (Acts 8: 4.) "And every day, in the temple and at home, they ceased not to teach and to preach Jesus as the Christ." (Acts 5: 42.) "Teaching you publicly, and from house to house." (Acts 20: 20.) As congregations, they "sounded forth the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but in every place your faith to Godward is gone forth" (1 Thess. 1: 8); and they "sent once and again unto" the support of men who were in the field preaching (Phil. 4: 16). This kind of work done in this way to-day will have the same kind of results it had then. Any congregation to-day could quadruple its membership in a few weeks if every member had the faith and zeal to imitate the early Christians. They could preach the gospel by word of mouth to every home in the community. They could sow the community down with tracts and printed literature. They could have it said of them as was said of the early Christians: "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also."

0 0 0

THE BIBLE RECORDS that Jesus said to his apostles: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo,

I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 18-20.) "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.)

Every sane man is, or should be, most intensely interested in so vital and important a matter as that of salvation. On such a question no one can afford to be indifferent or careless, and no one should jeopardize his happiness on his own opinion or on that of others. Jesus, who is himself the Savior, lays down the terms upon which all the world may be saved and upon which the salvation of "every creature," "all nations," is predicated. The apostles were commanded to "teach all nations, baptizing them." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved,"

But more than half the religious world are led by their teachers to refuse to be baptized. On first one pretext, then another, baptism is minimized and eliminated. Professional clergymen do not hesitate to declare it nonessential. Pressed by the fact that Jesus commanded it, they contend that sprinkling or pouring water on the subject will do just as well as baptizing the subject in water.

"Baptizo" is the word used by Jesus to represent the action to which he commands "every creature" to submit. There is not the slightest confusion or doubt as to the meaning of the word. All, without an exception, recognize that the Greek word "baptizo" may be translated into English only by such words as to plunge, to submerge, to dip, to immerse. There is not a Greek-English lexicon in the world that does not so translate it. Every one at all acquainted with the Greek language so testifies. Confronted by the incontrovertible fact that the word may be translated into English only by such words as dip or immerse, as if willfully determined to eliminate this plain commandment of Jesus, those who repudiate it attempt an evasion by asserting that water is not the element. But, fortunately, the Scriptures are equally as clear and plain upon this feature of the question as they are upon the action commanded. Jesus was baptized in the river Jordan, and "went up straightway from the water." (Matt. 3: 16.) John baptized "in Ænon near to Salim, because there was much water there," (John 3: 23.) Philip and the eunuch "both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip; and the eunuch saw him no more, for he went on his way rejoicing." (Acts 8: 38, 39.) There can be no evasion. It is simply a question as to whether or not men are going to accept the authority of Jesus and obey him.

* * *

WHEN WE RECOGNIZE that great bodies of religious people are teaching sprinkling for baptism; that they are teaching infant sprinkling and infant church membership; that they have changed the order of Christian work and worship as ordained by inspired men in New Testament times; and that they are neither preaching nor practicing primitive Christianity, as it was preached and practiced by the apostles and early Christians, we think that it devolves upon the church of Christ to carry these matters before the general public. It has been done, and it can be done. It must be done through the church. Any other organization whatsoever will be a hindrance, not a Every local congregation must, under its own bishops, attend to its own community. That is God's way as revealed in the work of the early churches. To devise any other way is but to "kick against the goads" and to insure failure. Congregations may also send their evangelists into other fields or "send once and again" to the support of men who are already there. When men have faith, the money to operate will be an easy matter. "Upon the first day of the week" they will each one "lay by him in store, as he may prosper." (1 Cor. 16: 2.) Few Christians, if any, will want to give less than the Jews. The Jews gave a tenth. It would be a very small congregation to be without ample funds if each of its wage earners was giving a tenth.

We stand upon the Book, and we must get its teaching before the public. We have the truth, and we must preach it. We stand upon the only position that all the world acknowledges to be safe and invulnerable. All denominations admit that we are saved and safe. Not a thing we preach is called in question or is in debate. All the controversy is over what others have eliminated or substituted. Our position is right and cannot be wrong, all the religious world being judge. We preach the Book in the very words of the Book. Nothing else is worth the time it takes to tell it. We have no unkind feeling against any individual or any denomination. We are endeavoring simply to persuade all to lay aside " the precepts and commandments of men" and to come to the Book. In no other way can any man claim the promise of salvation, here or hereafter.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us for sample copies of Bible Lesson Helps.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once. Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

We are at work now on a new and enlarged edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachmon.

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75 each. Mail us your order at once

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

We have just printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order to-day for a copy of this splendid book.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"Salvation from Sin," by David Lipscomb, is a most excellent book. This book contains the cream of his editorials, and will be found helpful to all who read it. Price, $2.50, postpaid.

"The Gospel Plan of Salvation," by Dr. T. W. Brents, is a book that does not wear out with age. All who have read it say that it is a great production and the best book of a master mind. Price, $2.50.

Every church should know its membership. In order to keep informed as to the residence and membership of your church, you should have a church record. Our Church Record is the very thing you need. Price, $2.50, postnaid.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

BOBBED HAIR.

BY JOHN T. LEWIS.

This subject is not peculiar to itself, but, like all other vital questions, there are about as many ideas as there are people. Hence, I do not write this article to give my ideas on the subject, but to call the truth seeker's attention "to the law and to the testimony."

To get all irrelevant matters, or ideas foreign to the subject, out of our minds, I want to say there are laws or principles as unchangeable as God himself. These laws are not limited to any age, sect, creed, race, or color. Therefore, it is a confusion of ideas to liken these laws or principles to the customs of any age, ancient or modern.

To illustrate. When Adam and Eve disobeyed God's law, their eyes were opened. They were naked, and made for themselves "aprons of fig leaves;" but God evidently thought more of their nakedness should be covered. "And Jehovah God made for Adam and his wife coats of skins, and clothed them." (Gen. 3: 21.) This law is as unchangeable as God and as enduring as men and women. What law? The law that men and women should be clothed in each other's presence. It is not a question of how they are clothed, but are they clothed? The customs of the ages have nothing under the heavens to do with the real question. When men and women appear in each other's presence with nothing more than "aprons" on, they are not clothed according to God's idea. It makes no difference whether they are in a swimming pool, or on a tennis court, or in a gymnasium, at some Christian home, or school.

With these thoughts before us, we come to our subject. "But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ: and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God. Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoreth his head." (1 Cor. 11: 3, 4.) Just as long as God is the head of Christ, and Christ is the head of man, just so long will man, praying or prophesying with his head covered, dishonor his head. Custom has nothing to do with the subject. If every man in the world prayed with his head covered, I would not do it.

"But every woman praying or prophesying with her head unveiled dishonoreth her head; for it is one and the same thing as if she were shaven." (1 Cor. 11: 5.) Again, just as long as God is the head of Christ, and Christ is the head of man, and man is the head of woman, just so long will the woman dishonor her head when she prays or prophesies with her head uncovered. In order that the woman might know the magnitude of the dishonor, Paul adds, "for it is one and the same thing as if she were shaven." "The veil, which was the custom of Greek, Roman, and Jewish women to wear when seen in public," has nothing under the sun to do with how Christian women should appear before God in prayer.

There is nothing in the New Testament to show that the women who accompanied Jesus Christ and his apostles ever wore veils, "which was the custom of Greek, Roman, and Jewish women to wear when seen in public." But there is something to show that they wore long hair. "Mary therefore took a pound of ointment of pure nard, very precious, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odor of the ointment." (John 12: 3.) Imagine a bobbed-haired sister of to-day sitting at the feet of Jesus with Mary and saying to her: "Well, Mary, it was the custom of Jewish women in your day to wear long hair, but it is the custom of Christian women to-day to wear their hair bobbed." Bosh! "For if a woman is not veiled, let her also be shorn: but if it is a shame to a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be veiled." (1 Cor. 11: 6.) If this does not mean that it is a shame to a woman to be shorn or shaven, it means nothing—language has no meaning.

After preaching from these verses one Sunday, hoping to help all honest-hearted Christian women who were present to better understand what Paul was teaching, I heard of two bobbed-haired sisters saying that "Paul never said a word about bobbed hair." And indeed he did not use the word "bobbed," but he said "shorn or shaven." Shorn is the past participle of the verb "shear," and "shear" means to cut or clip; and if you clip her, she is bobbed. "For a man indeed ought not to have his head veiled, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man." (1 Cor. 11: 7.) Why did Paul tell us in 1 Cor. 7: 26, when he was giving his judgment about marrying, "that this is good by reason of the distress that is upon us?" And why did Paul tell us, when he was discussing spiritual gifts in the church, "But when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away?" and then leave it for uninspired men to tell us that what he was binding on the Christian women in the church at Corinth was nothing more than the custom of the heathen women of that day, and was only for women of that age?

"Judge ye in yourselves: is it seemly that a woman pray unto God unveiled? Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a dishonor to him? But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering." (1 Cor. 11: 13-15.) On this subject, nature and Revelation speak the same language. Just as long as woman is on earth, "long hair" will be "a glory to her." And just as sure as any truth is taught in the word of God, just that sure has woman sheared herself of her glory, and separated herself from the covering that God has given her, when she has her hair bobbed. For a Christian woman to know these scriptures and then go and have her hair bobbed is nothing short of flouting God or his word. Of course, it might be different with those who do it " in ignorance and unbelief." Will not gospel preachers be held responsible for not teaching God's word on this subject?

"But if any man seemeth to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God." (1 Cor. 11: 16.) That is, let all the long-haired brethren and bobbed-haired sisters know their custom does not belong to the churches of God, or God's people. Hence, it must be of the world, and, therefore, of the devil. "In conclusion," let me ask, why cannot we say it is a sin to thus appear in the presence of God?

Written for the benefit of those who may want to know God's truth on this subject.

IN AFRICA.

BY F. B. SHEPHERD.

I do not know of a section of the world field that offers so many possibilities for immediate results as does the South African. One of our erring brethren, O. E. Payne, has been on the Rand for little more than a year, and has almost taken the country by storm.

Brother W. N. Short, who is at "Sinde Mission" in Northern Rhodesia, a new field allotted to us by the British government, is having unusual success. He is baptizing more people than most of the preachers in this country who are settled with an established congregation. The November report, just come in, says: "Last Sunday we had a big baptismal service. Twelve were immersed. One of those baptized was an old woman so crippled by rheumatism that she had to be carried to the water; but she had been taught for years by a native worker, so I think she understood what she was doing. That is one thing I insist on. When I am satisfied the native understands, I immerse him. Some teach that he must bring forth fruits worthy of repentance before baptism, but this I do not believe the Bible teaches. This makes forty-one haptisms thus far this year. There are others who want to become Christians, but I think they do not understand as they should, so they are waiting and being taught more. Two or three of the women who were baptized live a long distance away and have to walk, starting on Saturday to get to the meeting on Sunday, then going home on Monday. There are five out of the same family now that live out there who are Christians. They come regularly, too."

Think of some of us in the United States living so far away we would have to start on Saturday and walk to services Sunday and then walk back again on Monday! Don't you reckon we would miss once in a while?

Brother and Sister Short were sent out to this field by the church at Harper, Kan. They remain amenable to that church. Their personal support, which is very small, is furnished by the Harper church, but there remains many and pressing needs beyond the mere personal ones. Houses must be built for shelter for the Shorts and Lawyers. The Lawyers will soon be ready to go on north from Bulawayo and join Brother and Sister Short. But where will they stay? This mission is thirty miles from a railroad. It is a common thing for them to go three months without seeing a white face, except their own. Brethren Short and Lawyer must superintend all the building themselves, and do a great deal of it. The funds for building and other things have to come out of a meager personal allowance. This is not the fault of the Harper church, for it is doing about all it can.

How many churches will have fellowship with this church in the matter of carrying on mission work in South Africa? I have received appointment as their "messenger to the churches," to solicit and disburse funds for this great effort. Write me at 420 Euclid Avenue, Abilene, Texas, sending something large or small to help support the Lawyers and finish the house.

The Lawyers are entirely dependent for their support upon voluntary contributions. Although indorsed and sent out by Harper also, that church was not able to assume definite support, but they went out trusting in the Lord and in his children.

SHALL WE LECTURE OR PREACH THE GOSPEL? BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

The word "lecture" is here used to mean teaching truth that does not save. Much truth there is which yet is not the truth of God. The gospel alone saves the soul. Other truth, though it be timely and helpful and to be taught and known generally, does not save. One can teach nothing but unmixed truth and be thus a public benefactor, and yet leave souls in death. One can even preach about Christ, and yet not preach Christ; can proffer helpful information about the Bible, and omit the all-important truth thereof. But is it not of the first importance that we keep in mind the difference between the truth of the gospel and truth there is no life in?

Do not gospel preachers owe it to themselves to keep this matter clear in the minds of the public, and withal that they are sent of the Lord to preach only that which saves? In these premises, ought they to concern themselves before the public with anything but the gospel? Paul would not (see 1 Cor. 2: 1-5), though likely the best-equipped man for lecturing known. Have we any more reason for lecturing than had he? Mind, I do not deny the lecture may be a good thing in its way, by proper persons and in right connections. I only urge that the men sent to save souls with the gospel should follow their Master. This is a live issue, for in several places right new brethren make such lectures the chief point of interest, emphasizing them more than anything else. The denominations do this, and see not the vital distinction between the truth that saves and that which will not. Shall we not teach them the way, and not imitate their spirit? If I am wrong in this, will not some more experienced writer, one deeper learned in the Scriptures, set me right?

But hear me further. Years ago when a brother was coming to the Bible School to preach, and also while there to give lectures upon some scientific outside matters for the school, Brother David Lipscomb said he hoped the man would first preach the gospel, giving the lectures afterwards, thus keeping the two things apart, so that the public would not be misled. What he said did not impress me at the time, for I myself was dabbling in lecturing, though, of course, incomparably poorer at it than some of our preachers at present. I wanted the world to have the gospel, but felt I might catch them with lectures. Such speeches always draw bigger crowds, and I felt flattered and fascinated. The world will hear what its degenerate curiosity craves, and will honor the man who caters to it. Even so I came no nearer them with the gospel. In shame I at last discovered that the moment such a crowd is offered the word, they resentfully stop coming. And I was ensnared by being less willing to speak that which would drive away the crowd, which verily is the primrose path to the everlasting bonfire.

If I understand the brethren giving and encouraging lectures now, it is that they present needed truth while aiding in getting the gospel before men. It is a means of drawing. Get the folks out to hear this, and they may return to hear the word. They must be caught before they can be taught; and when they are laid hold of, the word shall be duly administered! Then go in on their blind side and catch them before they know it! By all means insert the cob in the mouth before the soft corn plays out! That was my way; and if I gave a thought to how the Lord caught the crowds, I verily must have believed I could beat him! But, brethren, we know men can be drawn to the Father with nothing but the gospel; and if for any other reason whatsoever they come, they are little worth. Then I ask you, Are not these lecturings dangerous things for us?

GENERAL BAPTIST MISSTATEMENT.

BY J. L. HINES.

In the General Baptist Messenger, an "official church paper of the General Baptist denomination," of September 25, 1924, appears the following: "This is to notify all General Baptists everywhere that the presbytery of Green River Union Association while in session called for and received John Allen's credentials because he was preaching heresy. Therefore, he is no longer affiliated with us." Signed, "J. H. Tudor and committee."

Brother John Allen was a General Baptist preacher for a number of years, but upon hearing the truth proclaimed in its simplicity by the writer in a meeting at McHenry, Ky., in October, 1923, boldly and courageously took his stand for the New Testament and against denominationalism, and has since that time brought over one hundred souls to Christ. Brother Allen stated to me that his General Baptist credentials were not called for, nor did the presbytery of Green River Union Association receive them. Therefore, we conclude that Mr. Tudor and "committee" took it upon themselves to make a statement which was not true.

Why didn't Mr. Tudor and "committee" ask Brother Allen for his credentials? It is my understanding that the association was in session at a union church house in Grayson County, Ky., at which time Brother Allen had an appointment there, and that Allen preached to all Baptist preachers assembled upon the ancient order of things, personated them, and pleaded for them to take the Book, and invited criticism. But, instead of criticism, their spokesman declared that Allen had preached the truth. But in the face of these facts, Tudor and "committee" declare that Allen's credentials were called for and received "because he was preaching heresy."

There is confusion in the Baptist ranks. One (and all Baptists present assented by silence) said Allen preached the truth, but Tudor and "committee" say he preaches "heresy." Which are we to believe? Well, since Tudor and "committee" have been found guilty of perjury, they are no longer competent witnesses; so we will have to believe the one who was spokesman for the above-named association, and he said Allen preached the truth,

Now, Mr. Tudor, we are going to give you a chance to prove, if you can, the statement that Allen preaches "heresy," but you must stand convicted as to the credential charge. Will you affirm in oral debate with John Allen the following proposition: "The church with which John Allen stands identified is a heretical body?"

But, lest you forget, I would suggest that you state through the General Baptist Messenger that you and the "committee" did not ask for nor receive Allen's credentials. The presbytery of Green River Association, I understand, is composed of the preachers of said association. Did this presbytery appoint a committee to ask you for Allen's credentials? If so, did this committee report to the presbytery that their work had been done faithfully, and that Allen's credentials had been received? If the committee made such a report to the presbytery, it is false. Now, to be fair, the presbytery ought to ask for "Tudor and committee's" credentials; otherwise the presbytery of Green River Union Association is guilty of being partaker in other men's sins, and is unworthy the respect of the General Baptist denomination.

GOD'S WORD FOR IT.

Like the jailer, we "rejoice, believing in God." (Acts 16: 34.) When the believing eunuch was baptized, "he went on his way rejoicing." (Acts 8: 39.) These were wholly unlike the converts of modern times. They rejoiced in their salvation because they knew they had complied with the conditions of the proclamation. Now ask that rejoicing convert why he feels so happy, and he will tell you he is happy because he knows his sins are pardoned; ask him how he knows he is pardoned, and he will tell you he knows he is pardoned because he feels good. Thus he reasons in a circle, proving his pardon by his feelings and his feelings by his pardon.

Now, is there any room to doubt the pardon of a man who has thus complied with the conditions of the proclamation? None whatever. Can we doubt the word of Jesus and the oath of God? Can you say: "Yes, I know I did believe, and I know I was baptized in good faith, and I know the Lord says, 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved,' but I am not sure he told the truth; and I know, too, that God confirmed his promise by his oath, but I am in doubt still?" Our pen trembles when we record even a supposition of such a thought in any human heart. Have we any stronger testimony that God is, and that he is the rewarder of them who diligently seek him? Have we any stronger evidence that there is a heaven, to be the home of the righteous? Is there any stronger proof that the wicked will be turned into hell with the nations that forget God? Have we any stronger assurance that we have a soul to be saved or lost? It occurs to us that he who will not believe it would not be persuaded though Jesus were on earth and should speak to him in person. We have his word, and it confirmed by the oath of his Father. What more could we have were he here to-day? -Dr. T. W. Brents.

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?" No. 1. BY J. W. BUSH, M.D.

"What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?" (Matt. 22: 42.)

The disciples of negative criticism, called "higher criticism," would answer that he was the son of Joseph, the carpenter, and of Mary, his wife, and not the Son of God in the sense that he was conceived by the Holy Spirit and born of a virgin. But turning to the New Testament, we discover in its first pages a wonderful Child. It is a childhood that savors not of this world; it has a heavenly atmosphere about it.

Jesus at the age of twelve astonished the rabbis in the temple by his questions and his answers. He opened the secret of his divine life when he said to his mother: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" (Luke 2: 49.) During the next eighteen years of his life there hangs a thin veil through which we dimly see him guilelessly toiling at the humble, honest trade of a carpenter. The Bible says he "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." (Verse 52.)

Jesus of Nazareth was born among the poor, and he did not seek to rise above the poor. When in later years some of the dignitaries of state offered him some attention, he put on no airs, did not become "puffed up," and made no sycophantic homage to them in return. He knew that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so was he higher than the highest, yet he loved to stoop as low as the lowest.

When he entered upon his public ministry and was baptized of John in the river of Jordan, it was not preceded by any reformation of life or repentance of sin. This was not needed, for the reason that he "did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." (1 Pet. 2: 22.)

The three years of his wonderful ministry are condensed into one simple line: "He went about doing good." His ear was always open to sorrow, and to suffering he always gave his sympathetic attention; he abhorred sin with all the indignation of his righteous soul, but the sinner he pitied and loved with a matchless love. His purpose was to fulfill the law and take it out of the way by nailing it to his cross; to build his church, establish his lordship or divinity, and give us the gospel, which is God's power to save to all them who obey it, and thus lift us up to God.

As a teacher, he was original and stood alone. He spoke as one having authority, and not as the scribes. He was not educated in any great university like that of Athens, yet he floods and fills the world with light and knowledge much more profound than the philosophy of the wisest philosophers. As the ocean is deeper than the brook, so also was his philosophy deeper than theirs.

While here below ministering to the people on earth, his arm reached into eternity. Look also at his wonderful works of love, which are really no effort to him; at his miracles of restoring sight, giving health, and conquering death, all of which came as easy to him as the lifting of his finger and the opening of his lips.

What think ye of Christ, that even the winds and turbulent waters obeyed his voice? His life is The Life; it is benevolence on foot; it is divine holiness filling every nook and corner he touches with the atmosphere of the heavenly climes. Without hardening himself against sorrow, he takes the burdens of the bleeding and broken-hearted into his own heart. No petty annoyances provoke him to the slightest displays of passion; no crushing agony shakes the constancy of the hand that holds the bitter cup to his own lips. As an innocent lamb he goeth to the slaughter; and as a sheep before its shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He willingly dies, the "just for the unjust," when with the mighty power of his right arm he could have smitten Pilate and his murderous band with death and laid them low on the pavement of their judgment hall. He was willing to die that a dying world of sinners might live; and while hanging upon the cross "a drooping flower of innocence," in the glare of the sun till the torture of tender nerves in his hands and feet produced such fever and suffering in his flesh that he said, "My strength is dried up like a potsherd; and my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou hast brought me into the dust of death," so intense was his suffering that it seemed as though he had no longer a solid body—it was melted with bitter pain.

Think, too, as he hung there, how men jeered him until at last the sun could bear the sight no longer, and veiled his face; the earth could no more endure to be the stage for such a tragedy, and began to rock and reel; the bodies of the dead were stirred as though they could not slumber in their graves while such a deed was done, so tombs were opened and many arose. It was such a wondrous spectacle that a heathen soldier could not refuse the involuntary confession: "Truly this was the Son of God."

SOME TESTS FOR RELIGIOUS BOOKS. BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

A flood of religious books is pouring forth from the press upon the reading public. The problem confronting us is what to read, and yet more especially what not to read. We must choose our books with utmost care.

Manifestly, we must read a great deal these days. It is not a time when a handful of books will suffice. That day is past. It is not merely desirable that intelligent men and women read books; it is necessary. Our life has become more hurried, our time for reflection and thought less and less ample. Unless we deliberately choose stagnation of the best that is in us, we must read, and read much. If, as Pope says, "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing," surely to-day we must drink deep and drink often of the Pierian spring of good books.

Therefore, we have no time to waste on bad books. We have no time for that which is dangerous to faith or morals unless we need to be informed as to current false teaching in order to warn others against it, or for some similar reason. Life is too short to squander any moment of it without object upon that which is not the best or that which in the smallest degree is harmful. "The fables of the world," cried Michael Angelo, "have filched away the time I had for thinking on God." His experience may be avoided, if, before purchasing books, one asks certain questions and weighs carefully the answers to them. A few practical tests are here suggested.

First, we should inquire as to the author of the book. Many books can be judged with fair degree of accuracy by the author's name. There are some writers from whom uniformly good books can be expected (excluding sectarian bias and dogma), and some from whom we can expect nothing but poison. In judging an unknown author, it is well to inquire with what institution, if any, he is connected. Some institutions are known generally to be unsound, while others are noted for their defense of the Bible and Christianity.

Then we should inquire as to the publisher. The reputation of the publisher is a recommendation of, or warning against, the book he issues. Some publishing houses are very cautious and conscientious, and print only such books as are sound and wholesome. Others have no scruples, but, being actuated by mercenary motives, are anxious to publish only such books as will have a ready sale. The well-informed purchaser of books knows the reputation of the publisher he patronizes.

Next, what does the preface reveal? Do the earmarks of liberalism and modernism appear in some such characteristic statement as this: "In religion we are making a transition from the medieval to the modern point of view?" Or do we find words to this effect: "These chapters are written from the viewpoint of faith in the Bible as the inspired and authoritative record for us of God's revealed will?" Oftentimes in the preface we get hints sufficiently significant to judge of the book.

A quick survey of the contents will tell much. Does the table of contents indicate a "modernistic viewpoint" by such titles as "Traces of Primitive Beliefs in the Bible," or "Democracy Dominant in the Old Testament," and the like? Usually here we find a true index as to the character of the book in our hand. But if we cannot tell from the table of contents what the author's trend is, we may select and briefly scan some crucial chapter having to do with conversion, or the virgin birth, or the atonement, or the resurrection.

There is one book that has stood every test. I speak for the Bible, our one infallible Book. Unapproachable by any others, it comes first. It is better, if need be, to take the one Book and let go of all others. "Remember," said John Robinson to the Pilgrims departing from Leyden for the New World, "new light will ever be breaking forth from the word of God." Here is the ever-glowing light—the light that never fails—veiled to them that perish, but dawning upon us who are saved. Glorious Light, to direct pilgrim footsteps through the misty mid-region of life!

PRAYER. No. 2, by zellner english. The Manner of Prayer.

"But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee." (Matt. 6: 6.) This is explicit as to individual or private petitions to God. The Christian must avoid praying to be seen of men; he must go into the private chamber, and, having closed the door, may there make his prayer in secret. Other passages in the New Testament deal with the manner in which prayer is made. "But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed; and turning to the body, he said, Tabitha, arise." (Acts 9: 40.) "And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." (Acts 7: 60.) "And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down and prayed with them all." (Acts 20: 36.) went forward a little, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass away from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matt. 26: 39; see, also, Mark 14: 35; Luke 22: 41.) "And whensoever ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any one; that your Father also who is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses." (Mark 11: 25.) "I desire therefore that the men pray in every place, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and disputing." (1 Tim. 2: 8.) This last refers to the custom of the Jews of lifting up the hands in an attitude of supplication while kneeling and uttering the prayer. (See 2 Chron. 6: 12-14; 1 Kings 8: 22.) This seems to have been the rule among the Jews in Christ's day and before. Paul would have the men to lead in public prayers, lifting up holy hands, presumably while kneeling. Paul says: "Now I praise you that ye remember me in all things, and hold fast the traditions, even as I delivered them to you." (1 Cor. 11: 2.) It would seem to be permissible now for Christians to lead the prayers, "lifting up holy hands, without wrath and disputing." That it is binding upon Christians to follow the Jewish custom implicitly, I am not certain. The custom of raising hands may be like those of kissing and of washing the feet, which we take to be peculiar to the people and conditions, and not binding upon us. (See Rom. 16: 16; John 13.) It is often convenient and easy of performance, and is a natural way of expressing supplication. The more one thinks upon the act of raising the hands while engaged in prayer (from the knees), the more one sees the fitness and acceptableness of the practice.

The best rule is always to accustom yourself to the safe practice. The Western world is accustomed to bringing the hands together when raised for this purpose.

Paul says: "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father, from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, that ye may be strengthened with power through his Spirit in the inward man," etc. (Eph. 3: 14-17.) This with the passages quoted above has the weight of apostolic example and authority—all that there is on the subject, in fact. We have the same authority for kneeling as for breaking bread on the first day of the week. As a general thing, however, the elders and more faithful members to-day are the only ones who actually kneel, most of the congregation being content to bow their heads instead of their knees.

"And the man bowed his head, and worshiped Jehovah." (Gen. 24: 26.) "And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he bowed himself down to the earth unto Jehovah." (Verse 52.) (It was the same man.) "And the people believed: and when they heard that Jehovah had visited the children of Israel, and that he had seen their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped." (Ex. 4: 31.) "And Ezra blessed Johovah, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with the lifting up of their hands: and they bowed their heads, and worshiped Jehovah with their faces to the ground." (Neh. 8: 6.) These passages show that the "bowing the head" of the Old Testament refers to the custom of the East of bowing the face to the ground as an act of obeisance either in prayer or to a human lord or master. In view of the evident meaning of both Gen. 24: 26 and Ex. 4: 31, taken in the light of the other passages, none could hardly pretend that bowing the head while sitting was the manner of prayer of any of these occasions. The current practice of most congregations is no more than an outgrowth of the corruptions which developed in the Western Church or churches away from the purity of apostolic rule and practice.

Jesus gave an example in giving thanks for the loaves and fishes on two occasions (Matt. 14: 19; 15: 36; Mark 6: 41; 8: 6; etc), and in blessing both the loaf and the cup on the night of his betrayal (Matt. 26: 26, 27; Mark 14: 22, 23; etc). In the former instances he stood, after commanding the multitude to sit on the grass; in the latter it seems a safe conjecture that the disciples kept to their couches in any case.

We wish that brethren, whether elders, deacons, preachers, workers, or members, and sisters also, would take this matter to heart, and try to stir up the churches on this all-important subject of prayer. We know that God will accept the prayer offered on bended knees; we have little reason to think that he will pay any attention to a prayer that we do not care enough about to see that it is properly offered. An examination of the Scriptures will convince any one of the importance of this subject. If any one lacks the courage to kneel, while feeling the duty to do so, he is unworthy to be Christ's, and cannot be saved because he is ashamed of him. (Mark 8: 38.)

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

If you are wanting a first-class hymn book, send us your order for "Choice Gospel Hymns." We publish only first-class music books, and books that are filled up with inspiring hymns. We are very much opposed to this jazz music that is destroying the spirituality of the churches.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

Six persons became identified with the Lindsley Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day.

Clayton L. James filled his regular appointment at Philippi, near Hartsville, Tenn., last Lord's day. Splendid crowds are reported.

R. L. Colley, Union City, Tenn., February 1: "I can hardly do without the Gospel Advocate. It is great and loyal to the gospel truth."

George W. Miller, Jenkins, Mo., February 2: "We closed our meeting here with three confessions and baptisms, large crowds, and good interest manifested."

- I. E. Stewart, Checotah, Okla, February 4: "The churches that I have been working with are doing nicely. I have some little time not spoken for during the summer. Those desiring my services for protracted meetings may write me at once."
- P. S. Maecy, Wilmington, N. C., February 4: "We closed a two-weeks' meeting here last Sunday night, J. M. Gainer, of Winchester, Tenn., preached, and E. Gaston Collins, of Bridgeport, Ala., led the song service. There were five additions—three by statement and two by confession,"
- G. A. Dunn, Jr., Gainesville, Texas, February 2: "Our services yesterday at the Central church of Christ here showed an increase of more than fifteen per cent in attendance over the preceding Sunday. The Central congregation is having additions regularly. There was one at our service last evening."
- L. S. White, Wichita Falls, Texas, February 6: "The work here is doing fine. Seventy-seven have been added to the congregation since I began work here in October. Five of these last Sunday. Three hundred and nineteen were present in the Bible school last Sunday morning. The work is growing along all lines."
- H. Leo Boles preached two splendid sermons for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day. The attendance at the Bible study continues to increase, and it is expected that the five-hundred mark will soon be reached. There are over one hundred in the primary class and eighty-five in the adult Bible class.
- A. G. Freed preached two splendid sermons to very large crowds at Charlotte Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. There were three hundred and fifty-five in the Bible study. Plans are being discussed to build additional classrooms to meet this increase. J. E. Acuff is to have charge of the Wednesday-night prayer meeting for the next four weeks.

Robert E. Wright, Bradentown, Fla., February 4: "Our meeting at Bradentown has passed into the second week. A. C. Traylor is leading the singing. R. E. L. Taylor is preaching the gospel in its New Testament purity. To date six have confessed their wrongs, two have come from the Baptists to be Christians only, and three have been baptized."

William F. Etheridge, East Chattanooga, Tenn., February 2: "Yesterday was a fine day for the East Chattanooga congregation. Large crowds at all the services. One of the leading business men of the city came from the Baptists and demanded baptism. All were made to rejoice. The work is growing. I preached to a good crowd at Tyner in the afternoon."

- C. M. Gleaves, Bellbuckle, Tenn., February 4: "I am changing my address from Miami, Fla., to Bellbuckle, Tenn., Route No. 2. Churches needing my services in meetings may address me at the above-named place. As I expected to devote my whole time to Florida, I did not book any meetings for this year in Tennessee. But now that I am back, I have time for a number of meetings, from May to December."
- W. S. Long, Richmond, Va., February 5: "There were two members by membership last Lord's day. The faithful few are encouraged to press on in the work. The church meets in room six at the Y. M. C. A. building, corner Fifth and Main Streets, at 11 A.M. each Sunday. If any readers of the Gospel Advocate know of members living in reach of Richmond, Va., please write to Brother L. McEwan, Ashland, Va., and send him their names."

Oscar Smith, Houston, Texas, February 3: "During the month of January nineteen took membership with the Heights Church, and one was baptized. During the year 1924 this church, with a membership of about one hundred and twenty, raised for all purposes, $11,575.65. We hope to do greater things during this year."

S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day. Since last report one has come by letter, one from the Woodland Street Christian Church, and one from the Methodists. Brother Hall left on Monday to hold a meeting with the Central church of Christ, Los Angeles, Cal., which will begin, if the Lord wills, next Lord's day. Brother Freed is to preach at Russell Street next Sunday.

Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, February 2: "I was with the church at Little Elm yesterday. I will visit them once each month this spring. The year of 1924 was the busiest year of my life. Prospects are bright for a greater year in 1925. B. M. Taylor and I will begin a meeting at Hearst, Texas, real soon. It will be entirely missionary. We will need your prayers and fellowship. I am forty years old to-day, and am well, hearty, and happy. I have had some sad and bitter experiences in the past, but the future looks brighter, and I am much better prepared for the Master's service than ever before."

- O. M. Reynolds, Albuquerque, N. M., January 30: "I spent the last Lord's-day morning in 1924 at Las Cruces, N. M., where we had a good service, and was at El Paso at night, where a fine service was enjoyed, with Fred Blanchard doing the preaching. On the first two Lord's days in April, Brother Blanchard is to preach in a meeting for us, and I shall preach in a meeting at El Paso sometime in the spring. G. A. Dunn, Jr., is to preach in our big tent meeting the last three Lord's days in June. I recently preached to a throng of men at the railroad shops and seven hundred and fifty Indian students at their local school."
- J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala., January 31: "I am just back from Florida, where I conducted two short meetings—one near De Land and the other near New Smyrna. I found good, faithful, earnest brethren at both places doing a great work, but not doing what they might do, owing to the fact they are meeting in out-of-way places. Both congregations have agreed to move to the cities named above, purchase lots, build church houses, locate a man, and hold a series of meetings. The De Land congregation subscribed one hundred and ten dollars last Sunday. They will give one hundred and fifty dollars a month to a good preacher who will preach 'the whole counsel of God' and work to establish the truth in that city. The brethren there will purchase their lot next week. The New Smyrna congregation has agreed to conduct a series of meetings in the city sometime in April."

Brother and Sister Elam have just returned from a short and pleasant visit to Texas. They left Nashville on January 27 for Fort Worth, visiting some good friends there. Brother Elam preached on Friday evening, January 30, for the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth. They went on Saturday to Dallas, visiting several friends there; saw J. B. Nelson, and heard two good sermons on Sunday by Brother Oliphant. They left Dallas on the following Tuesday for Paris, visiting relatives there. In Paris they met their good friend, Brother Carlton, and report that the affable F. L. Young is well beloved by the church there; and also that the Oak Cliff congregation (Dallas), while regretting the loss of G. M. Pullias as a preacher, are much pleased with Brother Oliphant. They returned to Nashville on February 6, not at all alarmed over the prediction of the end of the world at midnight of the same day.

H. C. Shoulders, Barrackville, W. Va., February 2: "The first of January we announced the one hundredth birthday anniversary of Sister Susan Ella at Granville, Tenn. January 20 was the day, and it was a wonderful occasion for Sister Ella. When I heard from there the last time, she had received over fifteen hundred cards and letters, together with a number of nice presents, from all parts of the United States and Canada. About seventy-five persons assembled to celebrate the occasion and partake of the dinner which had been prepared in honor of her long and useful life. Among those who attended the celebration were a number of the older people of the community, and all seemed to have a great time. Sister Ella, even though she had been here one hundred years, was feeling fine, and spent one of the happiest days of her life listening to the many messages of cheer from far and near and talking to her friends who had gathered for the occasion. Sister Ella and the family wish to extend to one and all who joined in this celebration their sincere thanks for their kindness."

Great hearts, like the ocean, never congeal.

No man can do wrong and get away with it.

If you don't want to be stepped on, be a live wire.

A preacher loses his power when he begins to cater to the world.

It is right to be contented with what we have, but not with what we are.

J. L. Bivens, of Cleveland, Tenn., made us a very pleasant visit last week.

The best place for a man to stand who stands for nothing is to stand adjourned.

A. B. Lipscomb preached two splendid sermons at Olmstead, Ky., last Lord's day.

God ceases to live in the life of him who ceases to meditate upon his word and pray.

If a man would have the world respect him, he must have convictions and be true to them.

Repentance is not being sorry for getting caught. A fellow that has to be caught has not repented.

N. B. Hardeman, St. Petersburg, Fla., February 2: "We are having splendid crowds, and I trust some good is being done."

Baptism is the answer of a good conscience. How can a man have a good conscience when he knows that he has not obeyed a commandment of God?

Married, at the residence of S. H. Hall, 820 Woodland Street, Nashville, Tenn., February 9, Herschel T. Choate and Maud Shepherd, S. H. Hall officiating.

The regularity with which young men miss the Sunday school, the prayer meeting, and the church services, and show up at the theaters, prize fights, and gambling dens, is alarming. Something is bound to happen if something is not done.

Married, at the home of A. B. Lipscomb, in Belle Meade Park, Nashville, Tenn., February 3, at 8 P.M., Morris Allison Lewis and Bettie Pauline Jones, A. B. Lipscomb officiating. Both of these fine young people are Christians, and we extend congratulations.

J. D. Tant, of Greenville, Miss., writes in an exchange: "Brethren who have become fanatical over Bible colleges, Christian education, and Bible chairs and degrees will do us but little good in Mississippi; but those who will preach the Bible and build up churches of Christ will find a hearty welcome among us."

We notice in an exchange this: "In the interests of modesty and female health, the Polish Parliament will be asked to make law and not fashion the arbiter of women's clothes. A bill has been drafted which would limit the display of ankles and shoulders. The proposed statute is supported by many members of the Parliament and was originated by Warsaw rabbis, who already have done what they could to cover the female form by barring immodestly dressed women from synagogues."

- T. E. Tatum, Jackson, Tenn., February 3: "I have been reading the Gospel Advocate for many years, and have always admired the stand that it has taken for a 'Thus saith the Lord' When such men as Lipscomb, Sewell, McQuiddy, and others passed away, I wondered if the standard that had been reached would be kept up. I am proud to say that as it grows older it seems to grow better. I am sure now that the Advocate teaching under its present management will be kept up to the standard."
- W. P. Edmunds and Tom Spear, elders of the church of Christ at Beckton, Ky.: "Samuel H. Austin, of Munfordville, Ky., lately from Texas, a sound gospel preacher, is anxious to see the truth triumph. He has charge of one church in our county, but for the cause of Christ and extension of his kingdom, he offers his services to any church of Christ within his reach. He held a meeting at this place recently, with twelve added to the one body. Address him at Munfordville, Ky."
- H. D. Jeffcoat, Ackerman, Miss., February 3: "I was with the church at Sturgis on the fourth Lord's day in January. They are expecting J. Roy Vaughn and a young preacher from David Lipscomb College to hold their meeting in June. John P. Lewis is coming back to Mississippi this summer. The field is white for the harvest, and true gospel preachers are very few in Mississippi. J. D. Tant is in Mississippi. Thank God! Come to Ackerman, Brother Tant, any time you can. I was with the church at Shady Grove last Lord's day."

Leslie G. Thomas preached twice at Green Street, this city, last Lord's day. Splendid audiences at both services.

- city, last Lord's day. Splendid audiences at both services.

 J. E. Baxter, Crossville, Tenn., January 17: "J. D. Jones will preach for the congregation at Crossville on the second Lord's day in each month this year. His work started off very pleasantly last Lord's day. Two made the noble confession and were baptized. This congregation came together last May under the preaching of Will J. Cullum, with six members to start with, and now we have a membership of eighty-two. We now meet in an upstairs hall for the worship each Lord's day. We are very much in need of a meetinghouse. We have purchased a lot in the heart of towa for five hundred and fifty dollars. We will not be able to build on this lot this year unless other congregations take fellowship in the building, as most of our congregation are women and children."
- L. D. Perkins, Armona, Cal., January 20: "On the second Lord's day in this month I preached for the Nevada Avenue congregation in Fresno. I do not believe it possible to find a more efficient eldership than at this place, and the faithfulness of its members are to be commended. A number have been baptized during the year, and much advancement has been made in preaching the truth. I preached to a nice audience at Tulare last Lord's day. This is another nice, loyal congregation of faithful members. In twenty-six years congregations have been established from one end of the State to the other, and the work is in the most prosperous condition that it has ever been, and we look forward to a great year in California in saving souls and building up primitive Christianity. The Lord bless all the workers."
- A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas, February 2, to F. W. Smith: "Allow me to congratulate you and all of the brethren who had a part in bringing H. L. Calhoun back into our ranks. I have always admired him as a man. In all of his writings, I have never seen a partisan statement from his pen or one that really criticized the truth and in favor of error. I believe his statement was clear and to the point. It should satisfy all lovers of the truth. I have held meetings for the church near which he was reared, and I am sure the disciples there will rejoice in his return to the 'old paths' that his father loved so much. The church at Pearl and Bryan Streets, this city, extends a helping hand to him in his field of labor." II am glad to receive the above letter, which voices the sentiment and the good wishes of thousands of disciples.—F. W. Smith.]
- J. Leonard Jackson, Lebanon, Tenn., January 20: "The Lebanon church has a mind to work. We now have a Bible class every day in the week. Last fall the town was divided into seven sections, with a class and a teacher for each section. The attendance last week was a hundred and one, and seldom has it been less than eighty-five. In this way we have a Bible class of over one hundred, a much larger number than we could hope to get to the church. But at certain intervals the classes mean to meet together at the church. Our Saturday-afternoon Bible school is doing good work, notwithstanding the schools are in session this year on Saturday. However, the children rush from school to the meetinghouse immediately after dismissal, where they find a faculty of seven interested teachers waiting for them. The church is now getting the Bible before both child and parent better than ever before."

Price Billingsley, Brooksville, Fla., February 1: "Today I began the Brooksville meeting, with fine services and one baptism. The past year I held meetings in eleven different States, with larger general attendance and more additions than any year of my ministry. Yet it may be wondered if the immediate visible results of those efforts justified the outlay of the energy and means involved. There was so much scattering, haste, and expense. The best meetings of my life were long ones—from five to eight weeks. The Mango meeting, just closed, took all of January. Eighteen men and women were baptized and several others otherwise added. Had we closed at ten days, the usual length of a meeting, most of those brought to Christ would have remained among the unsaved, seeing they obeyed right at the last. I resolve upon longer meetings for this year, hoping thereby to accomplish more for the Lord's cause. Brethren, let us do good and permanent work, that which will stand long after we ourselves are gone. The money remuneration may be less, but the satisfaction of work well done and the Lord well pleased will more than compensate. And let us spend a greater proportion of time in meetings training the church. This, too, is less showy, but verily is the Lord's way to build for the future. I have one other meeting in Florida—at Plant City; then I go to Texas for several engagements, the Lord willing."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.59,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it naless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is charged, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Goepel Advocate, 110 Beventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

SPECIAL PLEADING.

BY F. W. SMITH.

One phase of special pleading is the art indulged in by some writers and speakers of using language which, upon its face, can have but one meaning, and when shown to teach error they raise the cry of being misunderstood, and claim the right to explain what they did mean.

Now and then some sympathetic (?) soul rushes into print in defense of these "special pleaders," claiming that such have not had "a fair deal," and that they should be permitted to explain what they meant. The following relative to a certain religious teacher has been broadcusted through religious papers: Blank "has not had a fair deal;" and in a letter: "When the unfair and unkind misrepresentations of his teaching are eliminated, and when" Blank "is allowed to explain in his own words his position, there will be nothing more left to which we would object than some harmless guesses."

The naked facts are that the positions called in question and criticized have been stated over and over again in the public prints by the author of the objectionable teaching himself; and if he did not mean what the clear import of his language indicated, then he should keep himself out of print and out of the pulpit until he can learn to express himself in language that all can understand. No one should pose as a religious teacher that cannot speak and write in such language that all can comprehend

It is doubtless true that some men use words in writing and speaking with which they can juggle, so that when attacked on what indicates a fair construction of their language they can flee to another possible and contrary meaning. With such, ambiguity of speech is always preferable; but should one posing as a teacher of the word of God indulge in such "trickery?"

But when a man becomes "wise above that which is written" and begins to indulge in "some harmless (?) guesses" that cause division, strife, and alienation among the children of God, it comes in bad grace for some would-be "pacifist," actuated more by sickly sentimentalism than from a love of the truth of God and the peace of his church, to rush to the defense of such a man. What is still worse, if anything, is for such defenders to charge upon those contending for the word of God against such false teachings that they are guilty of "misrepresentation."

Such men should consider the danger to their own souls from such a course of action, for John says: "Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son. If any one cometh unto you, and bringeth not this teaching, receive him not into your house, and give him no greeting: for he that giveth him greeting partaketh in his evil works." (2 John 9-11.) In the light of this divine warning, he who claims to be a disciple of Christ should be exceedingly careful regarding his attitude toward religious teachers.

But as an illustration of a religious teacher's "blowing hot and cold in the same breath," comparable to the cow that gave a pail of milk and then kicked it over, the following is submitted: "There is no kingdom of God on the earth, save the church. All that are in the church are in the kingdom." There is nothing "ambiguous" about that, and it would be impossible to misrepresent the author's meaning according to the plain import of his words.

But did he mean what he said in the above quotation? Not quite, for he immediately follows that statement with a "juggling" of words, so that if he should be pursued to one city he could flee to another. Hence, he said: "To show how 'the keys of the kingdom' can admit a man into the church, and how the man who is in the church is in the kingdom, while yet the church is not all there will be of God's kingdom, I have sometimes used the illustration of a man's opening a meetinghouse to me, and how, after I had entered the vestibule, I was indeed in the meetinghouse, while yet the 'vestibule' is not the same thing as the meetinghouse, nor coextensive with it."

Now, I submit that any one can see at a glance how the author has laid the ground here for "special pleading" when his difficulties demanded it. It is perfectly clear that in his illustration he makes the church the "vestibule" to the "meetinghouse," which he intends to represent the kingdom. At first he tells us that "there is no kingdom on the earth, save the church;" while later he informs us, under the figures of vestibule and meetinghouse, that the church is not the same thing as the kingdom, nor coextensive with it.

Can any one be censured for not understanding such a religious teacher who thus "juggles" with the English language? But any one with a moderate degree of intelligence knows perfectly well that a person is not in a house when he is simply in the vestibule; and since the author makes the "church" the vestibule, and the "kingdom" the meetinghouse, why is he not teaching one of the "distinctive doctrines" of Russellism? I shall leave this tangle for one of the sympathetic (?) souls who designates such teaching as "some harmless guesses" to unravel.

A THOUSAND YEARS OF GLORY FOR THE EARTH. BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

In the Living Message of recent date there appeared an article by Earl C. Smith with the above caption. While the article is made up mostly of quotations of scripture, there is just enough comments made to show that the brother has the same foolish theory that Adventists have tried to maintain for many years. The brother first quotes Isa. 11: 1-9, the last four verses of which read as follows: "And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea."

That is a beautiful quotation from the prophet, if the brother had not endeavored to place a construction upon it which puts it out of harmony with other passages of scripture. But the brother gave the quotation and added: "Isaiah, in these two paragraphs, gives us a most rapturcus picture of that for which the whole creation waits." I deny that statement. Notwithstanding the brother makes these few remarks just before introducing another quotation of scripture that has the whole creation in it and has them waiting for something, I deny that there is anything more than the gospel to be offered to this world. I know that there is joy and bliss in eternity for those who obey the gospel and live faithful to it, but there is nothing more to be offered to man in this world. What more can Brother Smith want than he can find in Christ? "For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and in him ye are made full, who is the head of all principality and power." (Col. 2: 9, 10.) Why does Brother Smith want to teach any one to wait for anything except the glory of eternity?

The brother quotes the apostle Paul and tries to connect that with something in the future which the Lord is withholding from this world. This is the quotation: "The creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only so, but ourselves also who have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for our adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." (Rom.

8: 21-23.)

The brother was so anxious to prove his foolish theory by the apostle that he began his quotation in the middle of a sentence. The verse preceding the one quoted begins the sentence, and in the Revision there is not even a comma between verse 20 and verse 21. Beginning with verse 20, the apostles says: "For the creation was subjected to vanity, not of its own will, but by reason of him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God." (Rom. 8: 20, 21.) That is the full sentence, but the brother began to quote in the middle of the sentence. The only advantage I can see is that he gets rid of the past tense which is so clearly expressed by the verb "was." May not the passage mean that the creation was in bondage without a redeemer till Christ came, but they have nothing to wait for now but the redemption of the body, and this will be at the resurrection when Christ comes again?

The brother further says: "And the apostles shall judge the Israelites." I deny this, and say the apostles are now judging the Israelites.

The brother quotes: "And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye who have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Matt. 19: 28.)

It will be noted that the Savior said that the apostles would judge "the twelve tribes of Israel" when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory. The Son of man first sat on that throne on the day of Pentecost. Then the apostles began their work as judges, and their preaching is still judging the world. On the day of Pentecost, Peter said: "This Jesus did God raise up, whereof we all are witnesses. Being therefore by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath poured forth this, which ye see and hear." (Acts 2: 32, 33.)

After Brother Smith quoted these passages and others, he asked several questions, among which I note the following: "When has the wolf dwelt with the lamb?" I answer, never, literally. "When has the leopard ever lain down with the kid?" I answer as I did the other question, "When has a child ever put his hand on the adder's den without harm?" The brother answers his questions by saying: "None of these things have happened since Adam fell in Eden." Literally, I suppose they never have; but in the sense in which the prophet made the promise, I judge they have happened many times. The brother seemed to realize the weakness of his position when he asked: "But is this all figurative language? Why should we ask such a question?" I answer, we should ask such a question because it is foolish to try to interpret the language of the prophet without admitting that it is figurative. The brother asks another question: "Is it all too good to be true?" I answer, no, it is too foolish to be true, What good would it do the world for the wolf to dwell with the lamb, or for the leopard to lie down with the kid, or for a lion to eat straw like an ox? It would do me no good for every lion on the earth to eat straw like an ox; but if the lions were to begin to do that, I would say that the lion has been wonderfully changed. "Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." (Matt. 7: 15.) Now, Brother Smith should say these are not false prophets; they are literally wolves. "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." (Matt. 10: 16.) Brother Smith may ask, "Is it not too bad to say that these wolves are men?" But it would be too foolish to say that they are not men.

This entire Adventist fabrication is based upon the false theory that the prophet did not use figurative language. "A lion is gone up from his thicket, and a destroyer of nations; he is on his way, he is gone forth from his place, to make thy land desolate, that thy cities be laid waste, without inhabitant." (Jer. 4: 7.) Was that a literal lion that was on his way to destroy the cities of Judah? He who says so knows nothing of the fulfillment of this prophecy. "Wherefore a lion out of the forest shall slay them, a wolf of the evenings shall destroy them, a leopard shall watch against their cities; every one that goeth out thence shall be torn to pieces; because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings are increased." (Jer. 5: 6.) This is all literal, is it, Brother Smith? He who says this does not understand this prophecy and knows nothing of the history that was a fulfillment of it. The disposition of the wolf in man can be so changed by the gospel that the most helpless of humanity will be safe in his hands. If the lion should eat straw like the ox, his nature would be changed, as the sinner is changed by the gospel. The gospel of Christ will take all the wolf out of man, and the leopard, and change the nature of the lion that is in him. No other interpretation of these figurative expressions of the prophet can possibly harmonize with the plan of salvation as taught in the New

The strangest thing known to me is that the paper which contains this article with this foolish interpretation of the prophet is owned, edited, and controlled largely by the faculty of the same Bible school. In the same copy of the paper in which this article appeared is found an article from the president of the school on this subject: "The Kingdom Predicted by Daniel Identical with the Present Reign of Christ." The president teaches what I believe is true, but his truthful arguments are followed in the same paper by the foolish position which has here been briefly reviewed. If they run their school as they run their paper, I suppose they will teach not "either system," but both systems at the same time. If they succeed with their Bible school, it will be a sad comment on their patrons.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

I should like to encourage all who can to visit Washington City, as a knowledge of our National Capital, its activities and its beauties, tends to strengthen patriotism, and all of us should cherish "love of our country," which is patriotism. It contains so many places and things of historic significance that a study of it constitutes an education in history. It contains so many monuments to noted people of the past that it has been appropriately called "the Monument City," and contemplation of these tributes to the great and the good is an inspiration to a better use of time and talent. It is a cosmopolitan city, where are congregated people from all quarters of the globe, and meeting and mingling with these tend to broaden the sentiment of brotherly interest and worldwide fellowship in which many of us are lacking. In view of all these things, I encourage all who can to visit Washington City.

Of course, the first place visitors usually see is the Union Station, it being the portal of the capital to all railway travelers. Situated at the intersection of Massachusetts and Delaware Avenues-two of the many great thoroughfares that cross the city diagonally northeast to southwest and northwest to southeast-it was located and built in harmony with the great plan for beautifying the city. It is of magnificent proportions-a close rival of the Capitol itself in size-being seven hundred and sixty feet long and three hundred and forty-three feet in width, and is constructed of white granite from Bethel, Vt.

The Union Station was built by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, the United States, and the District of Columbia, at a cost of eighteen million dollars, of which our Government paid five millions. Trains of other lines come into the station, however-Atlantic Coast Line, Chesapeake & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, Seaboard Air Line, Southern Railway, Washington Southern. Thirty-three tracks enter the station, twenty of which are on a level with the waiting rooms, thirteen being twenty feet below, and nine of these lower tracks lead into twin tunnels beneath Capitol Hill, and thence to tracks leading southward.

The first room entered from the railway shed, whether from a track level with the waiting room or after climbing a stairway, is an immense room with a lofty arched ceiling-the passenger concourse, seven hundred and sixty feet long and more than a hundred feet wide-said to be the largest room in the world under one roof. Fifty thousand people could stand on its floor. It contains no seats and only one bookstand—in the center. Many swinging doors lead from the concourse into the main waiting room, and one door near the east end of the room leads into the President's private waiting room.

The main waiting room is very large-two hundred and twenty feet long and one hundred and thirty feet wide, with an arched ceiling one hundred and twenty feet high. The architect, Daniel H. Burnham, caught his inspiration for the building from the triumphal arches of Rome; hence, arches and arched ceiling are in evidence throughout the structure. In the east end of the waiting room is a semicircular window seventy-five feet in diameter. The room is well arranged, with comfortable seats, information booths, ticket windows, bookstalls, news stands, telegraph booths, telephone booths, dining rooms and lunch rooms, and all the other conveniences usually found in railway waiting rooms, though not always on such a generous scale. Most convenient and commodious rest rooms for women on the east side and for men on the west side of this great waiting room are in keeping with the tone of utility and beauty that pervades the entire building. Baggage rooms, parcel rooms, and all else are well arranged for the comfort and convenience of travelers.

In front of the waiting room is a wide and lofty portico, and narrower porticoes or loggias extend to the right and the left the entire length of the building, terminating at the eastern end in an arched carriage way that leads to the President's waiting room, called the "State Entrance," and at the west in a similar carriage way for general use. In front of the station is a great semicircular lawn or plaza, in the center of which is the Columbus Memorial group of statuary, and to the right and left of the group are fountains that add much to the beauty of the plaza.

The three lofty arches of the front portico are supported by six massive columns. Upon pedestals on top of these columns are statues eighteen feet high, those of the west arch representing Prometheus (fire) and Thales (electricity), the two great forces connected with the operation of railroads. On the east or right-hand arch the figures represent Ceres (agriculture) and Archimedes (mechanics), two great contributors to the success of railroads, as railroads contribute largely to the development of these two lines of human endeavor. The figures surmounting the central columns represent Freedom and Imagination, typifying the atmosphere of freedom in which the inventive imagination has achieved its greatest results.

The inscriptions on the panels above the porticoes, which were selected by President Elliott, of Harvard University, are very appropriate:

State Entrance, east elevation:

Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest. Virtue alone is sweet society. It keeps the key to all heroic hearts, and opens you a welcome in them all.

On the southern elevation:

Let all things thou aimest at be Thy Country's, thy God's, and Truth's.

Be noble, and the nobleness that lies in other men, sleeping, but never dead, will rise in majesty to meet thine own.

Carriage Porch, south elevation:

He that would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him. So it is in traveling—a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring home knowledge.

On the western panel of the front portico, presided over by Prometheus and Thales (fire and electricty):

Fire, greatest of discoveries, enabling man to live in various climates, use many foods, and com-pel the forces of nature to do his work.

Electricity, carrier of light and power, devourer of time and space, bearer of human speech over land and sea, greatest servant of man, itself un-

"Thou hast put all things under his feet."

On the eastern panel of the front portico, presided over by Ceres and Archimedes (agriculture and mechanics):

The farm, best home of the family, main source of national wealth, foundation of civilized society, the natural providence.

The old mechanic arts, controlling new forces, build new highways for goods and men, override the ocean, and make the very ether carry human thought.

"The desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose."

On the central panel, presided over by Freedom and Imagination:

Sweetener of hut and of hall, bringer of life out of naught, Freedom, O fairest of all the daughters of time and thought.

Man's imagination has conceived all numbers and letters, all tools, vessels and shelters, every art and trade, all philosophy and poetry and all polities. "The truth shall make you free."

I have brought you through the Union Station in reverse order, from the back to the front, that being the order in which visitors usually see it: First, the great concourse, then the beautiful waiting room, thence to the frent portico, with its massive columns; and, standing there, looking out across the wide semicircular plaza, you have a view of the great dome of the Capitol, almost directly in front and not distant, easily recognized by the figure of armed Liberty surmounting it, and from thence-forward Washington and its attractions are yours for the seeking.

MIRACLES HAVE CEASED. No. 1. BY E. A. ELAM.

A good brother asks me some questions in regard to the teaching of some that miracles can now be performed, and refers to what Eusebius, the historian, says that Irenæus relates concerning the power to work miracles remaining with the church many years.

I regret that I misplaced this letter, but trust that I can bring out, in this article, that which this brother wishes to know.

Taking it for granted that all know what a miracle is (although that may be doubtful), I will say, in the first place, unmistakable miracles are recorded in both the Old Testament and the New Testament.

It will help us to learn first God's purpose of miracles. While afflicted and suffering humanity was miraculously blessed in various ways, the leading purpose of miracles was to show the power and glory of God; to convince people that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and Savior of the world; and to confirm the truth of God.

The earth and all life upon it began with miracles. Jehovah "spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast." (Ps. 33: 9.) "God said, Let there be light: and there was light." (Gen. 1: 3.)

The Mosaic dispensation began with miracles. (See Ex. 19, 20.)

The kingdom or church of Christ, or "the Christian dispensation," began with miracles.

After the creation of the earth all vegetable and animal life was continued according to the laws (which we call natural laws) which God ordained for that purpose—everything yielding seed after its kind.

This is true of the kingdom or church of Christ. The claims of Jesus to be the Christ and all that depends upon this truth having been confirmed "both by signs and wonders, and by manifold powers, and by gifts of the Holy Spirit, according to his own will" (Heb. 2: 4), the word of God remains the seed of the kingdom, from which all spiritual fruit springs (see the parable of the sower), and by which all children of God are begotten, quickened, and brought forth into his family, or church (1 Pet. 1: 22-25; 1 Cor. 4: 15; James 1: 18). It is also the spiritual food upon which children of God feed. (1 Pet. 2: 1-3; Heb. 5: 11-14.)

To show that miracles were to confirm the truth and to convince people that the servants of God were sent by him, attention is called to Ex. 4: 1-9, 27-31, where God taught Moses to perform miracles in order to convince the Israelites that God had sent him.

This is true of Jesus. While he performed many miracles of compassion, mercy, and love, his miracles were to convince people that God had sent him, and that he is the Messiah and the Son of God.

Many other signs therefore did Jesus in the presence of the disciples, which are not written in this book: but these are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name. (John 20: 30, 31.)

Nicodemus said to Jesus: "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no one can do these signs that thou doest, except God be with him." (John 3: 2.) Jesus said to the Jews: "The works which the Father hath given me to accomplish, the very works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me." (John 5: 36.) Jesus said to his own disciples: "Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake." (John 14: 11.)

Then all the wonderful works of Jesus were performed to convince people of these glorious facts.

When Jesus sent out the apostles to teach all the nations or to preach the gospel to the whole creation, he endued them with power to work miracles in order to convince people that he had sent them, and he confirmed what they preached "both by signs and wonders, and by manifold powers, and by gifts of the Holy Spirit, according to his own will."

In chapters 10, 11 of Acts, Cornelius, a Gentile, was directed by an angel to send for Peter. Peter was convinced by miracles, and the Jewish brethren were convinced also by these miracles and by the miraculous outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon Cornelius and his household, that the Gentiles should be received into the church.

Jesus sent the Holy Spirit on Pentecost upon the apostles, or baptized them in the Holy Spirit, in order to teach them all things and to bring to their remembrance all that he had said unto them (John 14: 26); to guide them into all the truth, to speak through them the will of God, to declare unto them the things that are to come, to glorify Christ because he would declare the things of Christ; and through them to "convict the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." The world is convicted of sin because it believes not on Christ. (See John 16: 7-15.) Faith comes by hearing the word of God (Rom. 10: 17), and the gospel was preached "by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven" (1 Pet. 1: 12). This was done by the Holy Spirit through the apostles, who "were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Acts 2: 4.)

Speaking with "tongues" was to speak intelligently different languages which the speakers had not studied, which different languages all who spoke them as their mother tongue recognized and clearly understood. Paul declares that "tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to the unbelieving." (1 Cor. 14: 22.) This miracle of speaking intelligently in tongues which the speakers had never studied, but which all who used that language clearly understood, was to convince unbelievers of the truth of the gospel. This further shows the purpose of miracles.

At the time the different congregations mentioned in the New Testament were established, the New Testament had not been written; hence, it was necessary that there should be inspired teachers in these congregations. The apostles taught much in different congregations, but they could not remain with these congregations or teach all congregations. The need of inspired teachers is plainly stated in 1 Cor. 12, 13, 14, and in Eph. 4: 7-16.

This inspiration to teach in different ways was called "spiritual gifts." "Now there are diversities of gifts, . . . But to each one is given the but the same Spirit. manifestation of the Spirit to profit withal." These were given for the edification of the church. (Read 1 Cor. 12: 11.) The apostolic measure or gift of the Spirit was the highest and fullest which men received. Jesus had the Spirit without measure (John 3: 34); but God gave the Spirit to men by measure, the apostolic measure being the fullest and highest. "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, then miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, divers kinds of tongues." All had not the same gifts, and some had no miraculous gifts at all. These same facts are stated in Eph. 4: 1-17.

The purpose of these gifts is plainly and unmistakably given—namely, for the instruction and edification of the church and for the profit of all. Since the New Testament had not been written, and since, therefore, individual Christians had not the teaching of Christ in written or book form, these spiritual endowments were necessary that all might learn and do all the truth.

We naturally conclude, therefore, that when the New Testament was completed and placed in permanent form in all congregations, these miraculous gifts were no further necessary, and, therefore, ceased. But God does not wait for us to draw this conclusion. He states it himself in so many words. He exhorts the Corinthians to "desire earnestly the greater gifts," but adds, "Moreover a most excellent way show I unto you," or, "a more excellent way." This way is love, as stated in 1 Cor. 13, in which chapter it is declared: "Love never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall be done away; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be [miraculous] knowledge, it shall be done away." Here God emphatically states that these miraculous gifts should cease; hence, the days of miracles would at some time come to an end.

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Brother Elam: Please explain, through the Gospel Advocate, 1 Cor. 3: 12. I wish to know what these six materials represent. Also, explain verse 15. J. W. McMahan.

Read verses 10-15. Paul, "as a wise masterbuilder," "laid a foundation," "which is Jesus Christ," and "other foundation can no man lay." Paul laid this foundation by preaching "Christ, and him crucified." build on this foundation by preaching the truth, as Paul laid it by preaching the truth. But "each man" should "take heed how he buildeth thereon." In verses 1-9, Paul refers to himself and Apollos as teachers under the figure of planting seed. Paul planted and Apollos watered, while God gave the increase. While some in the church at Corinth were claiming to be of Paul and others of Apollos, they were jealous and afflicted with strife, and were yet babes, carnal, and walked as men. All this came from erroneous teaching, or from not a clear understanding of the truth which Paul and Apollos taught. Paul has reference to teaching when he says he planted and Apollos watered; so when he further says, under the figure of a building, he laid the foundation and another builds thereon, he also refers to teaching. Every teacher, then, must take heed to what he teaches, and study and pray that he may teach nothing but the truth. All the solemn warnings of Paul against all the fables, untaught questions, etc., to which attention has been called lately in these columns, and his serious charges to Timothy to "preach the word," to study to rightly apply it, and to be diligent in holding fast the pattern of sound words, show there is great danger of teaching error. The whole church is warned against giving heed to false teaching. With all good intentions, then, a man may fail to teach and emphasize the whole truth or may allow some error to creep into his teaching. So he should be very careful, very prayerful, and very studious of the word of God.

Everything that different brethren are now teaching cannot be the truth, for some of it is as far apart as the east is from the west. Will every one thus teaching, or thus on some points missing the truth, be saved or be lost? We know some teach things that are contrary to the New Testament and to the silence of the Bible. We cannot think that every one who differs with us on some points will be lost or that we will be lost because we differ with them. The truth alone can save, and the word of God is truth. God's command is to preach the word.

The gold, silver, and costly stones represent the truth unmixed with error. The wood, hay, and stubble are the error which a man may allow to become mixed with the truth he preaches. He is a most studious, most prayerful, most watchful, and most fortunate man who keeps every word of error or mistakes out of his teaching. If any hay, wood, and stubble of mistakes, or of opinions, or of errors of interpretations of scripture, creep into a man's teaching, they must be burned as the wood, hay, and stubble, and thus he will suffer loss, but he will be saved; yet "so as through fire." The fire consumes the dross and purifies the gold.

I cannot think that Paul means a man must take heed to the individual converts he makes, for this would be impossible. He has no way of determining whether they are going to remain faithful or not. He is not the judge in this particular. He can take heed to what he preaches, and, therefore, to how and to what converts are made.

* * *

- 1. How near is there a church of Christ to Ringgold, La.?
 2. Please explain some things in 1 Pet. 3: 20, 21. (a)
 Does the ark represent the church of Christ? (b) Would Noah have been lost had he not gone into the ark? (c)
 Does this refer to temporal or eternal life? If eternal life, were not some that were drowned saved eternally? I understand that people are to-day under Christ, and that was before Christ, and we are saved by the blood of Christ. I want some light for myself and others.

 H. D. HASTY.
- 1. I do not know. I would ask some one to write Brother Hasty, but he failed to give his post office.
- 2. In the first place, read all the Bible says concerning Noah and the salvation of himself and family in the ark. (Gen. 6-9; Heb. 11; Matt. 24: 37-39; Luke 17: 26, 27.) 1 Pet. 3: 20, 21 says that baptism is an antitype of the flood, or that the flood was a figure, or type, of baptism; and that baptism is an answer or approval "of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ."
- (a) Noah was commanded to build the ark according to God's directions; then to enter it, when God shut him in; and thus in the ark and by means of it he was saved, he and his family, from temporal destruction. Now, through faith in Christ, turning from all sins, we are baptized into Christ (Gal. 3: 26, 27), and are thus saved through him; but he is the head of the church, which is his body (Eph. 1: 22, 23; 4: 15; 5: 23; Col. 1: 18; 2: 19). As Noah and his family were saved from temporal destruction, so through Christ, and therefore in his church, and hence by his blood (Acts 20: 28), we are saved eternally.
 - (b) Yes.
- (c) As stated above, the salvation of Noah and family was temporal, but prefigured our eternal salvation. Noah was a preacher of righteousness for many years, and the people then refused to hear him and obey God, and I find no promise of their eternal salvation.

* * *

Brother Elam: Please answer, through the Gospel Advocate, the following questions: (1) If a man puts away his wife not for the cause of fornication and marries another, will the two become one flesh? (2) In such case, what must they do to obtain salvation? (3) In Heb. 12: 1, is the besetting sin referred to one certain sin to which all of God's children are subject, or is it a sin one is most inclined to commit?

O. S. Moss.

- They will become one flesh as a man becomes one flesh with a harlot when joined to her. (1 Cor. 6: 15, 16.)
 - 2. Repent of and forsake their sin.
- 3. As the connection shows, the besetting sin is the sin of unbelief. It has been the besetting sin of all time.

HOME READING

SON.

I ain't stuck on writin' poems,
An' I didn't wanna do it,
But the angels all kep' sayin':
"Yer must do it, boy; go to it;
The good that's in yer heart say out."
And this is wot it's all about:

My teacher calls me Dearie;
The boys they call me King;
I'm Old Pal to my daddy;
The girls breathe soft Sweet Thing;
The preacher greets me Sundays
With "How's my friend to-day?"
On week days "Talian Joe says,
"Gooda kidda"—that's his way.
The neighbors say: "You're all that
A boy had ought ter be."
Great Tike, Fine Lad, and Corker
Are names they say suit me.
The butcher an' the grocer
Both hev lovin' names for me
Like Candy Kid an' Sporty
An' names o' such degree.
I like these lovin' play names,
I sure do, ev'ry one;
But the world's all golden honey
When mother calls me Son.

An't it queer them naggin' angels Hev all left me one by one? I felt the last one fly away As I finished writin' Son.

-Emma A. Ferris.

0 0 0

THE SOUTHERN MOCKING BIRD.

(Extract from a speech of Hon. John E. Rankin, member of Congress from Mississippi, delivered before the Mississippi Society, in Washington, D. C., on December 11, 1924.)

It has indeed been a pleasure to me to listen to your excellent musical program, and especially to the imitations of bird songs as illustrated by that celebrated writer and naturalist, Schuyler Mathews, in his delightful book on "Wild Birds and Their Music."

The only suggestion I have to offer is that before he puts out another edition of his wonderful work that distinguished gentleman should take a postgraduate course in his chosen field of study by going down into Mississippi and reveling in the songs of the Southern mocking bird—the greatest singer of them all.

I can understand how one who has never heard him can extol in superlative terms the songs of other birds; for, as Shakespeare has wisely stated, "the crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark when both are unattended."

And if, as the poet Burton has said, "a nightingale dies for shame if another bird sings better," then one melodious trill of Dixie's matchless songster would put a world of nightingales to instant and shameful death.

He is the master of them all!

The Caruso of field and forest, the Mozart of wild music, the grand opera of nature, he seems to embrace within his boundless repertoire the songs of all the birds that have ever lived and those that are yet to come.

As courageous as the eagle, he guards with valor and with vigilance his nestlings and his mate, repelling the invasion of the dreaded hawk, and scattering a flock of intruding crows in ignominious flight. As gentle as the dove, he manifests the highest attributes of civilization as prescribed by the golden rule by reflecting in his daily life the sentiments of his song.

It has been said that musical expression is confined to the highest natures, and that, therefore, birds of prey never sing. The friendless vulture that wafts his way in geometric figures over the sunny landscape, measuring with his fleeting shadow those double circles which meet only at the bedside of death, or on the field of carnage, never sings a song. The weird owl, the nightly terror of all the feathered tribe, the most ghastly and striking emblem of desolation and despair, never warbles a note. The loathsome vampire, that detestable plague of the tropics, that reputed pest to human life, never breathes a tune.

I would rather be the mocking bird, which Longfellow has described as "swinging aloft on a willow spray" and shaking from his little throat "such floods of delirious music" that all the world would seem to pause and listen, to live for one short hour, than to be the venomous toad and exist throughout a century, or to be the loathsome reptile and live a thousand years.

We dignify as a national emblem the American eagle that soars and shrieks his screams of defiance from the seclusion of the crags; we perpetuate in verse and story the imaginary song of the mythical dying swan; we praise the inferior songs of other birds; but, in my humble judgment, there is none that deserves more praise, credit, or commendation at the hands of enlightened humanity than the peerless mocking bird, America's sweetest singer, who enlivens the spirit of springtime with his tireless screnade, and thrills every heart with his inspiring note of gladness as he touches the golden harp of nature's sweetest song and "stirs with love and hope the languid souls of listening men."

0 0 0

THE LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT.

I once had the advantage of knowing a very charming girl. She was short, pasty-faced, pale-eyed, and plain. Her clothes were well chosen and well worn, it is true, but she had fewer new frocks than any one else in her set. She had a shrill little voice; her movements were heavy; I never heard any one call her clever. Her name was Belinda. And yet Bill (as we lovingly called her) managed to be the sweetest thing that ever stepped.

She had no presents to give her friends, but she freely gave her time. Any one who wanted a chat or a grumble might drop in on Bill at any moment and be sure of a welcome, and no gossip afterwards on what might be said.

Once when I was ill, Bill came to see me, with a small confectioner's box in her hand.

"I can't bring you fine fruit or flowers," she apologized;
"but I remembered once hearing you say how much, on a visit to Birmingham, you had enjoyed the—don't laugh—the farthing buns, which are a sort of specialty there. So I sent for a few."

Her present had cost a shilling. But it made me eat a good tea—a thing I had not done in weeks.

When she comes to call, she remembers that aunt likes for folks to sit on her right because of her deaf ear. She knows that father loves a chat in the street, but can't stand in the sun, so she trots along by him till they get to a shady place. She twiddles grandmother's chair skillfully round, and with a kindly, "There you are," installs that lady where she loves to be, "in the dark with a light behind her."

Little things, all of them—mere nothings. But they serve to make Bill adored, in spite of her many drawbacks. After all, most of us are little folks living little lives, and nine times out of ten heroics do not fit in. What we like and are grateful for are the little well-chosen gifts, the little kindly words, and the wee thoughtful acts of a treasure beyond price—a girl who really cares for others rather than herself.—Selected.

* * *

Nothing great is accomplished without much labor and preparation.

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Pain

Headache Toothache Neuralgia Neuritis

Lumbago Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Sallcyllcacid

TEACHERS' TESTAMENT WITH NOTES

The Preacher's and Sunday-School Worker's Testament and Commentary-A Testament and Commentary in One Handy Volume

SPECIAL FEATURES

The American Standard Version of the New Testament with the words of Christ marked in boldface type and proper names marked for pro-

Explanatory Notes and Comments on every page, making clear all difficult passages and enlightening the reader on Eastern customs.

Introductions to each book in the New Testament by eminent scholars of world-wide renown.

The Explanatory Notes and Comments on every page, throwing light on Eastern customs and making clear all difficult passages, were edited by the leading religious writers of the various denominations. All commentaries should be used with a grain of salt.

We have bought a large number of this book to furnish our readers with the Gospel Advocate. This Teachers' Testament and the Gospel Advocate for one year, to new or old subscribers, at $3.00. Old subscribers are expected to pay up to date and renew one year in advance. You should place your order at once, for our supply will soon be exhausted.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

From the Brethren

Hohenwald, Tenn., January 28.—
My labors for the past year have not been so very great. It has been a time of sacrifice on my part among poor people and in destitute fields, with very few additions. I have labored in three counties—Lewis, Lawrence, and Perry. Untold good has been accomplished among poor congregations. Our house of worship, two miles west of Hohenwald, at Lomax Crossroads, is partly finished:

gregations. Our house of worship, two miles west of Hohenwald, at Lomax Crossroads, is partly finished; it is ceiled, but not weatherboarded. We thank all the brethren who donated to this work. We are very poor financially, and owe some on the ceiling yet. Brethren, pray for us in this awful time of indebtedness and hard times on us, that the word of the Lord may be gladly received and accepted by many.—C. A. Lancaster.

Fresno, Cal., January 10.—The church here is getting along nicely, and by "speaking the truth in love... maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." Having a number of members who are competent to teach, we have regular preaching, mostly by our own members, and souls are being added at the regular meetings. We have Bible study twice weekly, in which the young are showing interest, and the young men are being trained into leadership. Brother L. D. Perkins, of Armona, gives us a good lesson about once per month. One of the elders with the congregation twelve years, said: "This church is in better condition than I ever saw it." But I am sure there is room for much improvement, especially in missionary work, tion than I ever saw it." But I am sure there is room for much improvement, especially in missionary work, and trust we will soon be doing something toward sounding out the word in other parts of the city. Our house of worship is on Nevada Avenue, between First and Orchard Streets, near the McKinley car line. Any one having relatives or friends in or near Fresno will please notify me, and they will be visited.—J. A. Craig.

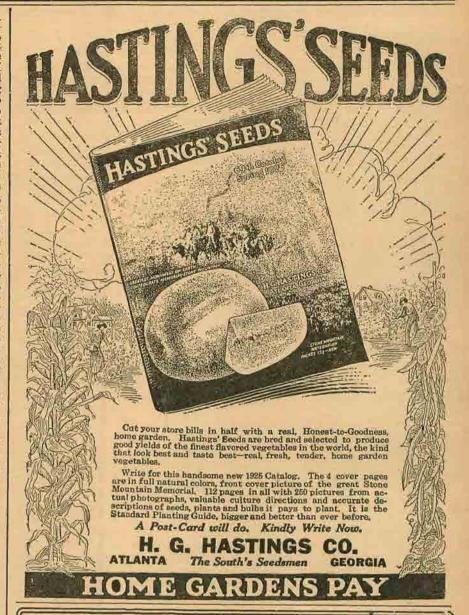

Pasadena Cal January 25.—Most

Fresno will please notify me, and they will be visited.—J. A. Craig.

Pasadena, Cal., January 25.—Most of my friends are familiar with the fact that I left Colorado and came to California three years ago in search of health. The first year I gained most satisfactorily, but the last year has all but entirely incapacitated me for public work, the trouble being diseased tonsils. I am now just back from the hospital, where I had my tonsils removed, and, though suffering greatly at present, I am assured that my troubles of this nature will be over when I fully recover from the operation. This has been a serious trouble to me for twenty years. Many times have I had to close a meeting just as interest began to develop, in order to nurse my tonsils, a spell always lasting from one week to one month. I sincerely hope this is forever past with me. My last public work was a debate with the Seventh-day Baptists, at Riverside, Cal., just four days before the operation, my voice being so weak it could scarcely be heard by the large audience assembled. Within a week I hope to be "in harness again." A great work seems to lie before me in this State. Mrs. Fuqua's health continues to improve most satisfactorily.—E. C. Fuqua.

Columbia, Tenn., February 2.—I began a tent meeting in Columbia, Tenn., on June 10, and continued it for ten days. There were no visible results. While in this meeting I found fourteen disciples in and around Columbia and around columbia. results. While in this meeting I found fourteen disciples in and around Columbia, and succeeded in getting them together and securing a place to worship. In September I returned to Columbia for another ten-days' tent meeting, and five precious souls obeyed the gospel. We were meeting each Lord's day in a small room at the home of one of the sisters. We wanted a larger house, but saw no way of getting it. The matter was brought before Dr. Black (white), and he at once began to devise plans. A lot was soon located, bought, and paid for by the white brethren, with the exception of five dollars. The next question was the building of a house. Dr. Black arranged with a contractor to build a house on said lot for eight hundred and fifty dollars, which was to be paid in the future. Dr. Black saw that the deed was properly made, containing the restrictive clause. Dr. Black is taking an active part in this work, seeing that everything is being properly done. Since there are only twenty-four members in this congregation, and most of them are sisters, a contribution from any one will be highly appreciated. We thank the following brethren for their contributions for this work: Dr. J. S. Ward, W. S. Dennison, B. F. Thornton, J. Huston, J. C. Shepherd, and J. B. Johnson. I am laboring with this congregation to build it and to develop the members. I have not words with which to express the with this congregation to build it and to develop the members. I have not words with which to express the gratitude of my heart for the fellowship that the white disciples of Columbia are rendering me in this work. I hope to ever prove worthy of all that they may do. Due to my physical condition, I spent only six months of 1924 on the field. There were one hundred and fifteen additions. Brother A. M. Burton has liberally contributed to my necessity, for which I thank him. I hope to be able to continue my work in destitute places and with broken-down congregations. Brethren, pray for me.—Alonzo Jones. Clovis. New Mexico, January 26.—

Clovis, New Mexico, January 26.—
I am still in the field doing all I can in building up the cause of Jesus Christ in this needy State. I am doing the work of an evangelist as best I can, and hope to be able to remain here, as there is so much to be done. I have been to Melrose and Farwell, and found a faithful little band of brethren at both places. I preached at Farwell last Lord's day afternoon, and had a few out to hear me. Last Lord's day, both morning and night, we had a good hearing here in Clovis. I gave a lecture at the High School auditorium on Saturday night, and this did good, not only because a large crowd heard the lecture, but some who heard me there wanted to hear me preach. I am to deliver another lecture here in the town next week, and I expect to explode the monkey theory of man's origin as taught in most of our schools of this day. My son and his wife are no better, and it will be some two or three months before he is able to get out here with me. He is now in the United States Veterans' Hospital at Muskogee, Okla. I am asking the brethren in Muskogee who may read this to go to see him and get him out to church on Sundays. I hope they

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 1½ inches deep, 9¼ inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

will do this much for me. He writes me that the Baptist people send out to the hospital and take the patients that are able to go to church on Sunday, but he said he wanted to find our brethren. My son's name is Andrew J. Ligon, and he is in hospital No. 90. Mail addressed to me here or at Denton, Texas, will reach me. I will say to the churches in Mexico, if you want to sustain a preacher in this State, write me for meetings, and if not engaged I shall be glad to assist you.—D. S. Ligon.

Take KOZOL instead of aspirin for Headache, Colds, Flu, Neuralgia, Rheumatism and pains from similar aliments. It is safe and does not affect the heart. Not habit forming—25c at your Druggist, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, Nashville, Tenn. Manufactured by KOZOL LAB., Nashville, Tenn.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2, &**********

You might be surprised to know that You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granu-lated sugar syrup. Or use clarified lated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Seventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1865

H. S. PETTUS JOHN S. BURNETT B. E. RAINS

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fin SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:20 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00.
Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.
Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M.
(Eastern time.)
A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Buelid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North.
Phone, 1523-R.

Vapo (resolene. duced

"Used While You Sleep"
Send for descriptive booklet 43C, Sold by druggists
Vago-Cresolene Co., 62 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

TRIBUTE TO A. D. THOMPSON. BY COLEMAN OVERBY.

On December 16, 1859, A. D. Thompson, of Murray, Ky., was numbered with the inhabitants of this earth; in the year 1879 his name was enrolled in the Lamb's book of life; on June 27, 1924, his righteous spirit was borne away to the God who gave it; and on June 28, 1924, his bodily frame, emaciated by intense suffering, was sorrowfully returned to mother earth, whence it came.

His public life was that of ceaseless activity and untiring service for his fellow man. While in his twenties he taught in the rural schools, and as a teacher he made a mark to be coveted by his fellow teachers. Hence, many of his pupils rise up to "call him blessed."

When Kentucky was in her formative period, he served his people as their representative in the State Legislature for two terms, and in this service he acquitted himself like a man

He began the practice of law at Murray, and continued his service at the bar for about twenty-five years; and during this time, as a matter of conscience, he rejected many cases because he could not conscientiously defend his client.

While yet a young man he obeyed the gospel at Green Plains-the old home church. The last twenty years of his life was an incessant warfare for his Master; for during this period digression became rampant at Murray, and he and a number of others were driven out of the old meetinghouse and the organ was introduced.

The church of Christ at Murray is decidedly one of the best congregations in Western Kentucky, and it may be truthfully stated that A. D. Thompson was one of the chief factors in her development into a strong bulwark of opposition. Financially, he did far more than any one else. He donated the place for the building, gave liberally toward the building, always contributed systematically to the support of the gospel, and many times made up the deficits.

In addition to his support of the work at home, he gave regularly to Sister Sarah Andrews, to two orphanages, to the missionary work at home, bought and distributed many gospel tracts, and gave much to those who were close to him. "There is that scattereth, and increaseth yet more." "The liberal soul shall be made fat." With him, these promises were literally fulfilled.

He was scrupulously loyal to the old Book, outspoken against speculative teaching, strenuously opposed to all the subtle forms of digression, contended "earnestly for the faith" both privately and publicly, and beOTHERS WANT IT for croupy children be-cause it quickly clears away the choking phlegm, stops hoarse, croupy coughs and allows restful sleep. No alarming croup when Moth-er keeps a botte of always on hand in the home. Benefits children and grown persons.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat
Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market. Postpaid, 300, 75c; 500, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B.
Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.50; 10,000
up, at 80c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price. Satisfaction guaranteed.

D. F. JAMISON,
Summerville, S. C.

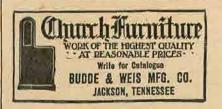

COMMERCE UNION BANK

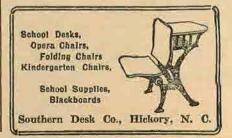

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

lieved the Bible to be its own divine commentary; hence, with a few standard translations and Webster's Dictionary close by, he daily perused the blessed pages of inspiration. In latter years of life most of his time was given to the study of the Bible, and with his natural and acquired ability he became an efficient teacher of the word, and had few equals in this sphere,

During the last months of his life he suffered intense agony. Many were his prayers for the church, and an unceasing petition, if in harmony with the Father's will, if he could not get well, that he be permitted to cross over the great divide. Though he was weary of life, he became perfectly resigned to God's will.

Truly the cause of Christ will realize the loss. A great man has fallen in Israel. The loss to the church is his gain; for he has gone where "the weary are at rest"—to the home of the soul—to rest from his labors, which is "very far better."

Brother Thompson leaves on this side a brother, a sister, one nephew, one niece, many relatives, and a host of friends, who cherish the fond hope of meeting him again in the realm of "the spirits of just men made perfect." What a glorious thought! What a glorious privilege!

THE LIFE WORTH WHILE.

BY G. F. MILLS.

The Savior of man says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11: 28-30.)

How consoling and comforting it is, when weary and footsore with the burdens of life, and when sorrow, pain, and distress overtake us, to remember that Jesus says, "Come unto me!" Many people look upon the life of the Christian as being a hard, austere, servile existence. But not so. There is not a command in the whole book of God but that is meant to make the man a better man, to make the woman a better woman, to make the boy a better boy and the girl a better girl. All of the requirements of the Bible are meant to purify, ennoble, and enrich the Christian's life while here and to give him an everlasting rest in "the sweet by and by."

It is true that the Christian life is compared to a warfare; but we should remember that there is pleasure in duty—duty well done. General Sterling Price, of the Confederate Army, was loved and respected by his men.

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid_____$1.50

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

was loved and respected by his men. In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate

From School Teacher To Great Eminence

A young man who was brought up on farm in Western Pennsylvania studied diligently and qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save up enough money to put him thru medical college. After the Civil War, he began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pa., and often rode horse-back thru the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods. Later, he moved to Buffalo, N.Y. where ne launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known blood medicine and tonic. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U.S. If your druggist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery is the second of the U.S. If your druggist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery in the control of the U.S. If your druggist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery in the Colden Medical Discovery in the gist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to the Dr. Pierce Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y

OFFICE House 10 to 12-2 to 5

GRADUATE

R. H. BENEDICT, D. C. CHIROPRACTOR

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES

Office 176 Eighth Avenue, North

NASHVILLE TENN.

SureReli FOR INDIGESTION

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

Those that were with him first and last and all the time loved him best. They would not disobey him, because they loved him, and it was a pleasure to them to obey his orders. God, our Heavenly Father, so loved us "that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Every Christian home of parents and children, well regulated, illustrates the Christian life, the parents having the authority and the children rendering obedience; the parents throwing such restraint and control around the children as is necessary for their well-being, comfort, and happiness, and the children obeying with pleasure and alacrity-not as slaves and menials, but as children beloved. Such is the Christian's life. It is a joy, a pleasure, a glorious privilege to him to obey his Father who is in heaven.

The vilest sinner has respect for such a life and will tip his hat to those who thus live. This is "the true Light [though dim to them], which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

In the "Dark Ages," when the priests had suppressed the Bible, then, by witchcraft, necromancy, sleight of hand, and every conceivable trickery, they threw a glamor of mystery around religion that lingers in the minds of many people even to this good day.

There is no mystery in the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ-no more mystery in living an obedient Christian life than there is in obedient children's doing the will of their parents.

Christianity is a common-sense, everyday affair. In fact, it is a business-the most important of all businesses, for upon it depends the issues of eternity-and every accountable person should be a zealous partner in this business. A life of service to God and humanity is the only life worth while, for it has the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. No odds how big your name, how loud it sounds-you may be an orator, able to move multitudes; you may be a statesman, able to guide the State through its most intricate troubles; you may be a philanthropist, and may have given thousands of your dollars to the poor-if you are not walking that strait and narrow path that the Savior and his apostles blazed out, you are a failure, worse than trash by the roadside. "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." (Matt, 7: 13, 14.)

Education without religion is simply veneering rotten wood.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan. — "My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have in-creased as I grew older. A little bookolder. A little booklet was left at my door, and Iread
what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous night and I stopped having that hervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."—

Mrs. Gus Vogel, 6608 Pelouze Street,
Detroit, Michigan.
A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$

NOTICE TO ALL AGENT

You are not working merely for exercise, nor for amusement. You are working for an income. Sooner or later, everybody requires a headstone or some other form of monument. Not so with most things, Therefore, we suggest that you sell something that every man, woman, and child must have some day. There's a good profit in the sale of monuments. Fill out the coupon and let us fill up your bank account.

MEMORIALS, INCORPORATED.

P. O. Box 278, Canton, Ga.

Tell me how to make good money seiling monuments.

P. O.

$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

SUNDALE SERMONS. No. 3.
BY W. N. ABERNATHY.
PREACHING AND TEACHING.

I have written on this theme before, but feel that the importance of the subject will justify further discussion. The more unpopular a work may be, the greater it must be stressed, if people are made to realize its worth.

It is usually claimed that preaching and teaching are synonymous terms, but there is a difference in their meaning. A preacher is one who proclaims, and a teacher is one who directs others in their studies. John was a preacher, and Christ was a teacher. One lays the foundation, and the other builds thereon. John proclaimed or announced the coming kingdom; Jesus set forth the principles of that kingdom and taught the people concerning them. The latter work was much more complicated than the former. Jesus sent the twelve and the seventy in advance of his coming to preach, while he followed as a Teacher. The work of the evangelist is very largely that of the preacher, though much teaching is necessary with the presentday proclaimer of the ancient gospel. The elder is the real teacher of the congregation. A man may be both evangelist and elder. (See 1 Pet. 5: 1; 2 John 1; 3 John 1.)

Now, it does not require a Solomon to see that most of our churches, especially those in the country, are sadly lacking when it comes to teaching. Much of the work done by the evangelist has been lost, because it has not been followed by proper teaching. Too much consideration has been given to planting the gospel, rather than giving a part to watering the tender plants. (1 Cor. 3: 6.) We may just as well expect a crop of grain to thrive and increase its fruit while the farmer gives his entire time to sowing as to expect a church to prosper with preaching alone.

It is no uncommon thing to see a farmer "overcrop" himself. His desire to outstrip his neighbors in yield causes him to take chances on the season, health, and other important factors in cultivation. Again, the planting, which may be done by horse power and machinery, is easier than the hand labor necessary to keep down the weeds when the scorching heat of summer comes. So our desire to eclipse our religious neighbors in membership is an incentive to boost "our plea" at the expense of the future welfare of the church. Another cause for so much preaching and so little teaching is that it is so much easier for people to listen to a ready-prepared sermon than it is to buckle down to a study of the Bible for themselves. This method of sermonizing is a good way to convince people of the truth, but not so good when it

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book —merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address comes to fortifying them against erroneous teaching and preparing them to become teachers of others.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

A failure of the people to appreciate the value of catechetical teaching has been the cause of preachers' depending too much upon oratory to instruct their audiences; in fact, it is often the best they can do. It is like the physician who spends most of his time looking after the sick, when he knows that it would be much better for him to spend more of his time in preventing them from getting sick. We neglect the unsanitary conditions about our premises, and when we get sick willingly pay the physician, to come and treat us, when, if he had come to us while we were in health and urged us to clean up and destroy the germs of disease lurking about us, we would have probably told him to go about his own business. The evangelist comes along and "skins the sects" (gives the medicine), and is well paid for his services. The teacher offers to help us, so that we can understand the Bible for ourselves and be able to teach others also (1 Tim. 2: 2), and we class him as "a poor speaker"

Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
433 Winston Building Philadelphia

who "can't hold the crowds." Of course, "he is a good man, but does not suit this place."

Now this is not the way we talk about those who instruct us in other things. We do not depend upon flowery speeches and memorized quotations when we wish to learn something about farming, mathematics, or geography. No wonder we "can't understand the Bible."

Humility does not mean doubt of one's own ability or hesitation in expressing an opinion, but it holds a due regard for the ability and views of others.—Selected.

Caxatives do not overcome constipation

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only. Their continued use leads to permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Physicians advise lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt the abit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composar of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

All prices t. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

OBITUARIES

WOMMACK.

James H. Wommack was born on March 16, 1848, and died on April 21, 1924, at Sulphur, Okla. He was a native of Tennessee. He sold goods at Bradford and later was a merchant at Bradford and later was a merchant at Puryear. He moved from there to Hazel, Ky., then to Fowlerton, Texas. He lived the last eight years in Sulphur, Okla. He became a member of the church of Christ at the age of twenty and remained true to his calling until the end. He served as elder of the church for many years. His last days were filled with hope and love for the church. He has a wife and three children who have already crossed over. He leaves a wife and two boys, Ira and Ross. Funeral services were conducted in the meetinghouse at Sulphur by Brethren W. M. Bantia and W. E. Jones. He had been a reader of the Gospel Advocate for more than thirty years. cate for more than thirty years.
IRA WOMMACK.

GREENE.

F. A. Greene passed away on September 30, 1924. He is survived by his wife, four boys, four girls, twenty-three grandchildren. Brother Greene was seventy-four years old, with as good a record behind him as could be found in the county. He was a Christian for fifty years, living an honest, upright, and conscientious life. His good qualities have been inherited by his children. They are all Christians and leaders in the community where they live. He leaves the world considerably better than when he found it. His good wife, who has been an invalid for years, has Christian fortitude and the spirit of Jesus about her sufficient to bear the loneliness which she must suffer. It is good to know, to associate with, and to be called on to preach funerals for such good men as was Brother Greene. May the Lord bless all good influences of his life and give his relatives and many acquaintances. GREENE. life and give his relatives and many acquaintances strength and determination to imitate his good example.

W. CLAUDE HALL.

NOWLIN.

Robert F. Nowlin was born on July 20, 1887, and met his death on August 6, 1924, in Birmingham, Ala., while working with the L. & N. telegraph company. In December, 1911, Mr. Nowlin was married to Miss Donnie Harris, of Martin, Tenn. To this union two children were born—Almary, who is now eleven years old, and Ben, a little boy of five years. Brother Nowlin was reared under Baptist influence and training, but about two years ago became a member of the church of Christ, and was faithful and loyal till death came. His wife and little daughter are also members of the church of Christ at Martin. He had been employed by the telegraph company for about two years, and during that time had been away from home much of the time, but was expecting to be permanently located with his family within a few days. Just a few days before his Robert F. Nowlin was born on July death he subscribed for the Gospel Advocate and had it sent to his wife. She received the first copy the day after his death. His sending the Advocate to his family was characteristic of his attitude toward the purity and simplicity of the gospel of Christ without any addition thereto or subtraction therefrom. Funeral services were conducted by Brother services were conducted by Brother E. P. Smith and the writer, and the body was laid to rest in East Side

DAVIS.

Joshua and Selmer Davis died on March 13 and March 19, 1924, re-spectively, Selmer preceding his fa-ther in death. Pneumonia was the cause of death in both cases. Selmer was just merging into manhood, with a bright future before him. He was a dutiful son a kind and affectionate brother, a studies, and decide here in a dutiful son, a kind and affectionate brother, a studious and docile boy in school, a companionable classmate, and a model young man in many ways. The writer learned to love him as his student and in his associations with him in his home and in the church. Our beloved brother, Joshua Davis, was almost in sight of the fifty-seventh milepost when death came. Early in life he chose that "good part," like Mary of old, which is the greatest heritage—the Lord of glory. He loved the church of God, and was seldom absent from the worship. He was always ready to help in a substantial way. We feel assured that all is well with him. He said: "I am going home." And as he was in the right composure of mind, we are congoing home." And as he was in the right composure of mind, we are convinced that he knew whereof he spoke. One remarkable incident in connection with his last days on earth is worthy of mention. He was never known to sing till just a few days before his spirit took its flight, and then he sang some of the old hymns he loved so well and then fell asleep in Jesus. To his Christian wife and his bereaved children I would say: Live in the fear of God and reverence him, and he will sustain you.

W. M. WLSON.

YOUNG.

Death has visited the home of the Youngs, in Lawrence County, Ala., for the third time within fourteen months, claiming this time the mother, Mrs. Mattie C. Young. She was sick about four weeks, and suffered much during the early part of her sickness. The latter part was attended by paralysis, which caused her death. She was about sixty-seven years of age. She had been a member of the church of Christ for more than forty years, of Christ for more than forty years, and had been a Baptist for several and had been a Baptist for several years before her marriage to R. M. Young, in 1879. She was the mother of four children, three of whom survive her. All of them are members of the church and faithful in the service of God. She was stepmother to the wife of the writer, and I think no child ever had a better stepmother than she. We both loved her, and we were loved in return. She was a good woman, believing in the wisdom of God and the dignity of the place he assigned woman—"queen of the home," a keeper of the home; that the making of a home and the rearing of children was the proper and most imchildren was the proper and most important duty of woman. She was chaste in conversation, sober in deportment, modest in dress, and kind and gentle in disposition. She was a wife, a devoted mother, and a faithful friend and neighbor. of all, she was a Christian, and loved the church and the cause of the Lord; loved the truth, and was satisfied with the Lord's will and plans. She will be sadly missed in the community and the church. We confidently expect to see her in "the land that is fairer than day."

I. B. BRADLEY.

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

HERE IS YOURS!

An opportunity to engage in a dignified position selling Coggins Monuments. Intuition bids you act now. Territory is being assigned daily.

COGGINS MEMORIALS, executed in EL-BERTON BLUE GRANITE, "The Stone Eternal," or GEORGIA MARBLE, are un-excelled for beauty and durability, What more fitting tribute can be paid a departed loved one?

Mr. Palk, of Oklahoma, writes us: "Inclose the fifth order from Mr. Crenshaw, and the Gamble order inclosed was unsolicited." He speaks from ten years' experience, and says further: "Your monuments have always been better than we have expected."

For spare or full time. Write for particulars and confidential contract

COGGINS MARBLE COMPANY 24 Main St., CANTON, GA.

CHRISTIAN W WORKERS

To sell Bibles, Testaments, good books, and handsome velvet Scripture mottoes. Good commission. Send for free catalogue and

GEORGE W. NOBLE, Publisher, Dept. 3H, Monon Building, Chicago, III.

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick. Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredients. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick relief assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago said to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 70c and $1.00.

Colds Fever Be Quick-Be Sure

Get the right remedy—the best men know. So quick, so sure that millions now employ it. The utmost in a laxative. Bromide Quinine in ideal form. Colds stop in 24 hours, La Grippe in 3 days. The system is cleaned and toned. Nothing compares with Hill's.

All druggists WILL'S Get Red Box POMIDE with poetralt

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x51/4 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes,

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living .-R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound.-N. B.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits .- H. Lee Boles.

Greatest ald to Bible study known to me. Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

it is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When an-swering their ads, men-tion this paper.

DO WE LOVE THE FATHER-LESS AND MOTHERLESS CHILDREN?

BY F. C. SOWELL.

The child who has no father's protection or mother's love and lives in a destitute and deserted home needs the love and tenderness of hearts of Christians to give to it the needs and comforts of life.

Brother J. C. McQuiddy wrote an article occasionally, while he lived and a director of the Tennessee Orphan Home, for the interest and the uplift of the Home. He said then he did not want to do all the writing about the needs of the Home, but would be glad if some other member of the board would give an article occasionally.

As he has written his last line and made his last freewill offering, I feel, in a measure, as I give a part of my time as a helper in the Home and am acquainted with its workings, it would be a justice to the brotherhood and probably a help to the Home to say something through the Gospel Advocate at this time.

There is some sickness in the Home now, two or three having been operated on recently for appendicitis and some for tonsillitis; otherwise the children are in fine condition. I find where the brethren are getting better acquainted with the Home and what is being done for the development and welfare of the children, they are opening their hearts and giving more liberally of their means. Our motive in appealing to you through the Advocate is to give you more information and light, that you may be able to look into the Home with a clear understanding and see the wonderful results coming from your cooperation in an institution that drives away tears and heartaches and brings the precious sunshine to the many little trustful hearts who have no mother to teach them to pray. I sometimes hear them sing, "If I could hear my mother pray again;" and when the sweet voices of these children are heard singing that song, it makes me think, "God will take care of you." The Lord is using you, my brother, to take care of these children. God will give you credit for every offering you kindly and heartily send to bless the children in the Tennessee Orphan Home, and you will get an acknowledgment of thanks from the treasurer. May every good work have its forward momentum, with greater results in 1925 than ever before.

It was a little sister who watched the baby Moses in his floating bed and who made the diplomatic suggestion to the princess which gave the child back to his mother for training. -Selected.

Stop Rheumatism in 48 Hours

If you suffer from rheumatism, sciatica, neuritis, gout, or swollen joints, to prove you can quickly be rid of these troubles, I will send you a $1.00 box of my famous anti-Rumatix treatment, postpaid and without cost or obligation. If it cures you, tell your friends and pay me what you think is fair, otherwise the loss is mine. Merely send your name to-day for this liberal introductory offer. EYSSELL LABORATORIES.

Dept. 781, 628 Grand, Kansas City, Mc

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

SWEDENBORG'S WORKS

FREE TO THE MINISTRY FOR ONLY THE POSTAGE

"The True Christian Religion;" 1,098 pages;

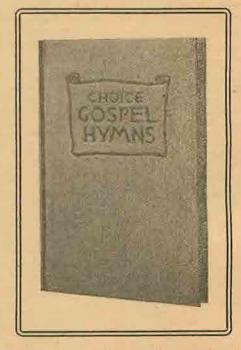

"The True Christian Religion;" 1,098 pages; postage, 20 cts.
"The Areana Celestia;" Vol. I., 800 pages; postage, 15 cts.
"Heaven, the World of Spirits, and Hell;" 350 pages; postage, 15 cts.
"The Apecalypse Revealed;" 1,100 pages; postage, 20 cts.
"Divine Love and Wisdom;" 277 pages; postage, 15 cts.
These books are offered only to ministers and students for the ministry who reside in the United States and Canada.
Any work may be ordered, or all five will be furnished by mail upon receipt of postage, which may be sent in stamps, check, draft, or money order. Address

REV. L. G. LANDENBERGER, 3741 Windsor Place. St. Louis, Mo.

Take six parts of enthusiasm, one part of tact, and spice them with a little ability, and the greatest success can be made in any kind of en-

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, cloth binding____$0.50 Per copy, flexible binding ____ $0.40

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Volume LXVII. No. 8.

NASHVILLE, TENN., FEBRUARY 19, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
SCRIPTURE STUDIES. OUR CONTRIBUTORS. Are We Faithful Here?—The Work of the Church— Notes from West Tennessee—Mary Montgomery Anderson—"A Double-Minded Man"—Mark, the Unsteady—How Many Cups Should Be Used?
OUR MESSAGES. EDITORIAL Miracles Have Ceased (No. 2)—John B. Cowden's Tract—Word from Washington—Human Ambition— Can Men Understand the Bible Alike?—"Unfulfilled Prophecy"
Call from Harvest, Ala.—Nunnery-Douthitt Debate Moore-Paisley Debate. OBITUARIES Clark—Pair—Williams—Bass—Potter.	185
Ajone with God. FROM THE BRETHREN. Noble Thoughts	180

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

By JAMES A. ALLEN

IT MUST BE RECOGNIZED by every intelligent Christian that there is, and should be, such a thing as Christian union. The harmonious operations of the innumerable systems composing the universe and the world indicate the wisdom, goodness, and unity of God. An author is known in his works. What comes from God is worthy of God and exists in harmony with every atom in God's creation. Friction and disorder occur only when foreign things are introduced. The Christian religion, being the consummation of the remedial scheme, was prompted by infinite benevolence to bring man back to God; and let us note, in this place, that all people, of whatsoever tribe, kindred, or color, who have been united to God, need not be disturbed over questions of union with each other. What brings a person into covenant relationship with God brings him also into unity, communion, and copartnership with all others who are in fellowship with him.

The absurdity of denying the possibility of Christian union is apparent to every intelligent reader of the Bible. As sure as God himself may be said to be a great and infinite Unit, and, therefore, in perfect harmony with himself, Christianity, coming from God, must be, and is, a complete, harmonious, and united system; and such a system necessarily establishes harmony and union among all who subscribe to it. The prayer of the Messiah was that his people "may all be one." With reference to the Christian profession, not only in the first century, but in all subsequent ages, he said: " Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us." This was desired by Jesus in behalf of this people, "that the world may believe that thou didst send me." To the congregation at Corinth, Paul wrote: " Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

BUT WE MUST CONCUR with all sincere Bible students in saying that unity among the disciples is impracticable, as well as impossible, to view it from a popular and fashionable viewpoint. I am aware of the fact that some of our large city churches of different denominations try to forget their differences and enjoy for a season a hearty handshake in a "union meeting." But is this Christian union? They do not, and cannot, "think the same thing," lest the fading glory of their creeds should be forgotten; and they cannot "speak the same thing" without doing violence to the dignity of party lines; but, as is seen in the end, these spasmodic efforts at union prove to be only an armistice, a mutual cessation of hostilities until present purposes are accomplished. As viewed from the standpoint of the denominational world and of those of the disciples who have introduced innovations into the primitive institutions of the church, it is impossible to locate any common grounds upon which all may work and worship in harmony together. The opinions and ideas of one man or one party of men have as much right to claim public acceptance as those of any other men or parties. One is as infallible as the other, and all are equally human.

Harmonious action and affiliation in business, social, or religious interests can result only from a mutual recognition of a common understanding in which all of the parties can contentedly concur. In other words, to put it in a simple form, there must be union grounds upon which all may stand before union can exist among them. And any intelligent person, informed in the records of the early church, must see that the apostles, in enjoining unity of thought and action upon the part of the primitive disciples, invariably pointed them to the means through which they might attain unto this high and glorious end. In enjoining upon them "that there be no divisions among " them, but that they " be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment," they thus emphasized the importance of occupying the great union grounds prepared in the wisdom of God and ordained in the churches through the apostles of Christ Jesus.

* * *

QUESTIONS which upon the surface appear to be the most difficult are generally the easiest to be solved. The trouble with the world is that the people are looking for a mystery where God has made it so plain "that he may run that readeth it." There are no mysterious problems confronting the world upon the fundamental duties of We need not adduce a single argument to prove to an honest believer that the much-vexed question of union, so generally and so often discussed, is not only possible, but that it is also a very simple and practicable question. In writing to the church at Ephesus, enjoining them to give diligence "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," Paul shows how it may be accomplished at the same time and in the same words in which he enjoins it. The "unity of the Spirit," reason would suggest, must necessarily be kept upon the words of the Spirit; and this, in a few words, completely and fully solves the entire question and shows the great union position that was recognized as being appointed by God and common to all among the primitive disciples. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God," and may, therefore, be received as a divine and perfect rule for the guidance of the man of God in all works that are good. The command is: "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." In so doing, nothing can be taught or received that is not enjoined in those oracles. The warning that has always been sounded clear and plain, making it impossible to mistake it, in all of God's dealings with man since the world began, is: "What thing soever I command you, that shall ye observe to do; thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it."

The trouble is that the churches are not willing to abide in this rule. They make a great pretense of desiring union; but Ephraim cares too much for his idols to adopt the means to attain it. We do not need any more conventions or great meetings to consider the subject. There has, indeed, if the truth is fairly told, been too much of this already; and then, too, we cannot but regard with a little suspicion an occasion that is utilized to gratify vanity and pride in an effort to see and to be seen. The whole question hangs upon a single issue; and that issue is no more considering of the subject in conventions assembled, but to faithfully and implicitly reduce to practice the solution of the question as given in the oracles of God. Why should we contend for matters purely of human speculation having no higher origin than the feeble mind of man? It is not safe nor in accord with common sense to accept things that have been questioned from the start. All agree, and no one has ever denied, that it is safe and certain to observe what is authorized in express terms in the Bible; and the wisdom of God in his word has fully comprehended every want of the church as well as of the individual man. Safety here is found, but all else is dangerous and treacherous and must sink at the fall of the house built on the sand.

* * *

PAUL SAID to Timothy: "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom: preach the word; be urgent in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching. For the time will come when they will not endure the sound doctrine; but having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 1-4.) This refers to the defection that would occur in the church. It has always been difficult to hold the people to the truth. The history of the Jews affords many examples of this, abounding in instances showing the perverseness of man, a stiff neck and a hard heart, in so soon forgetting God and going in paths of wrong. The apostles showed that this would occur again among the Christian people, the majority of the profession leaving its original position. Hence the continual warning against heresy and false teachers and the admonition to "hold the pattern of sound words" as given by the oracles of God.

The Christian writers deal with questions in all of their bearings. When they warn against one sin, they do not cease to urge against another. It is more fatal to the world to introduce heresy into the churches and corrupt the gospel than it is to grossly neglect duty, but the latter receives a due share of treatment in the Scriptures. Indeed, the truth is evil spoken of because of the indifference and carelessness of some of the disciples. The society bases one of its excuses upon this very thing, upon the neglect of the churches. It cannot be denied that God established the church through which to preach the gospel, to care for the sick, for orphans and widows, and to engage in the great work of uplifting man; that, as Jesus declared, it is "the light of the world," "the salt of the earth." While there is no excuse for the neglect and indifference of the churches in these matters, it is very illogical, as well as irreverent and disrespectful, to declare that the church is unable to do the work, by organizing another institution. We could not but regard such as a blind zeal, not according to knowledge, and that results in more harm to the heathen than it does good.

Christianity brings man up to the highest point of excellence in all the relations of life. It makes him a better father, husband, or brother; it makes him a better financier, farmer, or mechanic; it improves him spiritually, morally, and physically, and makes him more successful in every line and sphere of human endeavor.

* * *

THE GOOD LIVES led by the early disciples were a powerful argument in favor of the religion of Jesus Christ. The disciples of every other system of theology and religion fall so far below the disciples of Jesus Christ as to make impossible any comparison whatsoever. No code of morals or ethics ever prompted such an improvement in human character as that contained in the sayings and teachings of Christ. The good influence exerted by the lives of the early Christians, their abounding in good works, their exemplary conduct, and their rigid practice of soberness, righteousness, and godliness, gave great weight and influence to their preaching of the gospel, As the history of the past is open before us, let me ask what other religion ever known to the world had oracles who taught: "And let our people also learn to maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful." (Tit. 3: 14.) "See that none render unto any one evil for evil; but always follow after that which is good, one toward another, and toward all." (1 Thess. 5: 15.) And, again: "And let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." So then, as we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of faith." (Gal. 6: 9, 10.) We might multiply these passages, but we take it that these are more than sufficient to convince any candid person of the superiority of the Christian religion at theology, philosophy, and religion of both ancient and modern times. Those who subscribe to a system of religion grow to the standard it maintains. Such as subscribe to human systems can never inculcate principles higher than those of human origin, as the stream cannot rise above its source, nor water above its level. A Mohammedan can never grow better than the standard maintained in the Koran, to grant that his practice is perfect. The Christian religion is of divine origin, and is as far above the systems of earth as God is greater than men. Those who honestly endeavor to practice it in sincerity and truth rise to the highest sphere of purity and usefulness possible to attain.

Politicians discuss many problems that are not in their power to settle. We might mention the race question as an example. Many great conventions, wielding the influence of governors and statesmen, have deliberated upon this question, and it is no nearer a settlement now than it was at the start. The quickest and surest way—and, indeed, the only way—to meet all these difficulties is to print and circulate more Bibles and do more to spread the teachings of Jesus Christ. These problems cannot be met and dealt with apart from the principles of the Christian religion, and any making the effort must meet with failure. But let all give more attention to the Bible and to its teachings, and these problems, with a thousand others, will adjust and settle themselves to the honor of God and to the good of men.

A youth to develop into the best manhood must be trained in a school of hardship. David, the shepherd boy, was so trained. All the toil and severity and suffering of a shepherd boyhood and of those wilderness years in flight from Saul helped to form his character.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

ARE WE FAITHFUL HERE? BY S. H. HALL.

It seems that God has spoken on no subject more strongly than that of peace-a "righteous peace." "Who is wise and understanding among you? let him show by his good life his works in meekness and wisdom." If our Lord's Spirit we have and his will we are continually praying to be done, it will be shown in our lives. A tree is known by its fruits; and fruit it will bear, either good or bad. "But if ye have bitter jealousy and faction in your heart, glory not and lie not against the truth." Just why this statement is put this way is not for me to say, but it certainly sounds like those who have "bitter jealousy and faction" in their hearts are in danger of glorying and lying against the truth. Is it not true that the "faction" maker, the one that carries bitterness around in his heart against those whom he opposes, does quite a lot of "glorying" and "lying" along with it? All who thus conduct themselves have not that "wisdom that cometh down from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish." And it is easy to be seen where "jealousy and faction" are. This evil tree must bear its fruit-viz., "confusion and every vile deed." But that tree that is governed by this heavenly wisdom bears a different fruit. "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance ["doubtfulness," or "partiality" -margin], without hypocrisy." Read all of this in James 3: 13-18. And it is declared that the "fruit of righteousness is sown in peace by them that make peace." no such thing, then, as our being faithful to God, governed by the Spirit of our Lord, unless we are very much interested in that unity for which our Lord prayed and the Holy Spirit pleads.

Read the words in our Lord's prayer in John 17: 20-22. He prayed that all who believe on him through the words of his apostles may be one, as he and the Father are one. This is the kind of union and the degree of union he wants. Those who are the objects of this special petition are those who believe on him through the words of the apostles. I think he cares but little how much those who have a faith that comes otherwise are divided; but for those who get their faith from the teaching of his inspired ambassadors, he wants them to be one, as he and the Father are one. So must we desire and work and pray if his Spirit we have. Then the Spirit's word in 1 Cor. 1: 10, commanding us to "speak the same thing," to have "no divisions among" us, but to "be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Are we to disregard this and be found faithful? Never. Then, when we go to Prov. 6: 16-19 and find that God classes those who sow discord among the brethren with murderers and other evil workers, it is time to pause and ask ourselves the question: Am I a peacemaker or a peace destroyer? "Church grumblers" come in here, those who would have a "fuss" over every little thing about which they cannot have their own way. "Blind guides" who teach for doctrines the commandments of men, as spoken of in Matt. 15: 9, 14, certainly are to be condemned for all the strife and confusion their teaching causes, else we would not be commanded to "mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling," as stated in Rom. 16: 17. But we must remember to be faithful on this subject. We must not only see to it that we teach not the doctrines and commandments and opinions of men, but that we love peace, that we strive to be indeed peacemakers where trouble exists, and that we ever, in all things, "follow after things that make for peace."

In 1 Cor. 12: 25, 26 we have a scripture that forever condemns parties and party makers. Paul here says that the reason our Lord wants no divisions in the body is that the members may "have the same care one for another." This certainly shows that when division exists, this "same care one for another" we cannot have. Take the denominational world. Do they have "the same care" one for an-To ask the question is to answer it. Are the Methodists as interested in the Baptists as they are in themselves? Will they as readily and gladly give their money and time to support the Baptists as they do the Methodists? Do the Baptists have "the same care" for the Methodists as they have for the Baptists? If they do, they forget it when it comes to their Baptist supper that they call "the Lord's Supper." Denominationalism, parties, factions, strife, and confusion are the curse of this age. How earnestly we should pray that our Lord will stand by us, keep us full of his own Spirit, and help us show all men the way of peace! This is the one duty that rests heavily upon the church of Christ to-day. But before any teacher can very well teach others, he must know the lesson for himself. Hence, I would admonish that we obey first the command: "Be at peace among yourselves." (1 Thess. 5: 13.)

The Bible declares that "party makers" are governed by the flesh. You will find a list of sins called "the works of the flesh" in Gal. 5: 19-21. Along with murderers and fornicators you will find "enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties." And Paul, in speaking to the church at Corinth, in 1 Cor. 3: 3, teaches that those who wanted to be of Paul, Cephas, and Apollos were carnal and walked as men. Paul, Apollos, and Cephas taught the same thing, and were united in the one church. This teaches that we cannot afford to let even our preference for preachers divide us into parties.

We are commanded to "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) We are also commanded: "As much as in you lieth, be at peace with all men." (Rom. 12: 18.) We must never be at peace with erroneous teaching; we must never encourage and be a party to sowing strife and discord by preaching the doctrines and commandments of men; and we must also see to it that our envy, our jealousy, our personal grudge against another, is never the occasion of strife among God's people. This last scripture has special reference to personal differences. Let us never allow such to go unsettled when it is in our power to settle the trouble. How often are local congregations torn asunder by such!

Division is the mother of hatred. When we allow ourselves to have hatred for anything except Satan and sin, we are getting in danger.

A character sketch of "party makers" is in order in concluding this study. "Hatred stirreth up strife," (Prov. 10: 12.) Where you find strife, you will find more or less hatred. Brethren can differ without any strife. But let a difference come when there is hatred, and strife is inevitable; whereas, if they loved, they would come to see the question alike.

"By pride cometh only contention." (Prov. 13: 10.) Take the man who champions the doctrines and commandments of men and undertakes to defend them. There is quite a bit of pride stuck back in that man's heart. When you take the stand for only the plain-as-day statements in Jehovah's truth, you can defend this and stay humble. It is dangerous when we become "wise above that which is written."

"So is a contentious man to kindle strife." (Prov. 26: 21.) Such a man is just the opposite of a peacemaker. He knows not how to "follow after things that make for peace" and to "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

"It is an honor unto a man to cease from strife; but every fool will be meddling." (Prov. 20: 3.) Real men, then, are not meddlers, not peace destroyers, but those who flee from strife and confusion and plead for a righteous peace. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God." (Matt. 5: 9.)

In the next study of this question, I hope to show the "one church" our Lord established, then how peace is obtained and kept.

THE WORK OF THE CHURCH.

BY S. F. MORROW.

I notice in the Gospel Advocate of a few weeks ago, Brother H. E. Winkler, of West Nashville, makes reference to a piece I had written on short meetings. I am glad he has given the other side of the subject, and want to thank him for it and the spirit in which he writes. The truth on all subjects is what we should earnestly strive to teach. Truth, and only truth, will make us free. In Matt. 5: 6, Jesus says: "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." John says: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

We see from Brother Winkler's experience that churches are at fault in wanting short meetings. My experience in the last twenty-five years has been that in most meetings it was the preacher's fault. Prior to that time they all seemed anxious to have meetings to continue as long as possible. Our beloved and honored D. Lipscomb said to me it was sad to see so many preachers close a meeting just at the time it should continue for the salvation of souls and the glory of God.

Why this change, and what is the cause of it? That is what all good, God-fearing and God-loving people want to know. And what is the remedy? This is the class of brethren and sisters we are appealing to, to help save the church and take the world for Christ.

Short meetings are not the only practice that has been introduced into many of our congregations that will finally bring destruction. One of these is the present-day "pastor" or priestly system. No one can say a word just right and that will suit, except the preacher in charge. Build a fine house and hire a big preacher, one who entertains well and says many good things, but will soon be preaching to please the crowd, and the people exalt the preacher instead of God, just like the Catholics and denominations. You will hear them say, "We will ask our preacher," instead of studying the Bible for themselves. The preacher becomes the golden calf like unto the one Aaron made for the children of Israel while Moses was receiving the Ten Commandments from the finger of God. A preacher soon learns this, and the temptation is too great for him to stand. So quickly did the Israelites forget the God who delivered them from Egyptian bondage. The same is true of us to-day, poor sinful beings. We need to study our Bible daily to know our duty to God and man; and if we fail to do this, we soon become blind to our duty. Jesus says: "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."

Why will the preacher preach to please the people? He knows he is teaching elders and deacons and others who should be teaching others instead of being taught. The preacher is forced to make a decision. Shall he tickle the ears of the people, who in return will tickle him with big pay—enough to keep two loyal teachers in some destitute field where the gospel has never been heard? You may tell these untaught people you are a member of the church of Christ, and they will promptly say: "We have never heard of that church." It is a sad condition for a poor mortal to be in.

Who is to blame for this? All of us who practice it. Who will be lost? All who continue to practice it. Jesus said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

I ask you to please read, in the Advocate of January 29, Brother Farmer's call for laborers for East Tennessee. He has been calling for years, long and loud. Yes, brother, keep calling; God will bless you if you prove faithful, whether we heed or not. Brother Will J. Cullum has tried that field with great success. Can we take that field for Christ and save them and ourselves? Forty congregations participated in the Hardeman meeting in Nashville, which was a great success and a blessing to us all. As a rule, all of these congregations have preaching every Lord's day, and they pay on an average ten dollars to the preacher, which makes about four hundred dollars per Lord's day. Multiply this by fifty-two, and it makes twenty thousand eight hundred dollars per year. Would we be blessed in sending our preachers to this section where they would be inspired in teaching the word of God to these people who are in darkness as to the church of Christ? Yes, we would be blessed. We would be forced to study our Bibles and develop the talent of the church, make many good preachers or teachers, and all would rejoice in this. Why? Because it is God's way. Hear Paul to the elders: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.)

Can we find the preachers to go to this field? Certainly we can. I, for one, am willing to help in locating good, godly preachers for that neglected field and all others, so far as possible, notwithstanding I am as busy a man as lives, it seems to me. I am now in Tampa, Fla., securing names for the Gospel Advocate, teaching every Lord's day, and settling church troubles, and I thank the Lord I have succeeded in settling one in Tampa, with the help of others. These brethren in Gary, a suburb of Tampa, have bargained for a lot to build on. We hope to build at once. I want to do as we have done in Stewart County, Tenn. We are on our sixth church house there, built in the last few years, and it has been my pleasure to pay for the roof on each house and to help dedicate each one as far as we have gone. I thank the Lord for this work. Some three years ago we secured the services of Brother J. G. Malphurs, who moved to Clarksville, Tenn., my native home. Here live some of my old friends and schoolmates. The Edmonson brothers live there. They and others and the Oakland congregation were the principal ones to support Brother Malphurs in his work. I told Brother Malphurs at the beginning of the work that as long as I had a biscuit, he and his family should have one, provided he did the work as Paul commanded Timothy, enduring hardships as a good soldier of Jesus Christ, which he nobly did. All went to work. Sister Malphurs and others did all they could, and thus a great work has been done for the cause of Christ. For years we had wanted a true church of Christ in Clarksville, one that had no instruments of music and had not joined itself to any society of men. Brother C. E. W. Dorris had tried to accomplish this work some years before, and helped us much during Brother Malphurs' time. At the proper time the Edmonson brothers secured eleven thousand dollars and built a good house of worship in Clarksville. These brothers did not wait to see what the churches would do, but went forward, putting their trust in God, and the church saw their faith by their work and helped them liberally. They now have their debt under control, and the congregation is growing nicely, and they will soon be able to put a man into some destitute field.

I conclude by quoting from D. Lipscomb in the Advocate cf October 30, 1924, page 1004: "The idea of a preacher, teacher, or a church of Christians confining their labor to one community and building itself up alone is contrary to all the precepts and examples of the Bible. . . . Regular set speaking was not the order of the primitive church, but instruction as the work demanded."

NOTES FROM WEST TENNESSEE. BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

In the long, long ago, Solomon said: "And there is no new thing under the sun." When Solomon said that, I am very sure he did not have a copy of the Christian Standard of January 17, 1925. In this issue of the Standard I notice where one J. J. Castleberry, minister of the Walnut Hills Christian Church, has somewhat amended or revised the commission as given by Mark. In his invitations to sinners to "come," only those in sympathy with the United Christian Missionary Society are invited. So now the commission should read: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth in the United Christian Missionary Society and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." This "Rev." J. J. Castleberry was at one time the "pastor" of the "First Christian Church" in Union City, Tenn. It is so strange to see how the Standard will condemn the action of Castleberry and then advocate things just as unscriptural as the United Christian Missionary Society. According to Castleberry, salvation is now made to depend upon faith in the United Christian Missionary Society, and not in Christ Jesus the Lord. If Solomon were writing now, perhaps he would not say as he did long ago. Another strange thing about this matter is, this amendment or revision of the commission was made in Cincinnati, the headquarters of the Christian Standard. I wonder if the "First Christian Church" in Union City would now accept the pastorate of said Castleberry?

In another Christian paper I read an article quite different to the one in the Standard. Sad, sad, but true! It gives instances where, in years gone by, self-supporting preachers went, oftentimes without any remuneration, preached the gospel, and built up congregations, and now many of these old soldiers of the cross do not get a support. While these old preachers are cast off, not wanted any more, the same congregations built up by these old preachers are now paying from one to two hundred dollars per month for young preachers to preach twice on Lord's day; while the poor old preachers that went without money or price and cleared away the rubbish, fought sectarianism and all other sins, reached the hearts of the people with the gospel, now are not fitted to preach where they once did, but must go into new fields and pave the way for some younger, better-educated, more up-to-date preacher to occupy. The article referred to reminded me of the fact that some congregations that I have built up for next to nothing in the way of a living now are paying more for one meeting than they paid me for a whole year's work. Some of these congregations pay young preachers as much or more for half time than I get for full time. The old preachers are not made to feel good when they see these things. When congregations do these things, you should remember that you are not placing any laurels upon the gray locks and furrowed cheeks of these old veterans; you are not filling their hearts, in their declining days, with joy and happiness as a reward for true and faithful service rendered in bygone days, and without whose service you would not exist to-day.

I am not grumbling. Wife and I are managing, so far, to keep out of debt and look the world square in the face. But, as a matter of fact, it saddens the heart of the old preacher to see such a difference and such a preference as is being made to-day. If the same difference and distinction is kept up, by the time the young preachers of to-day become old preachers the congregations will not be able to pay the young preachers for one-fourth time, to say nothing of one-half or all the time. I know of some preachers that received more than they were worth, and I also know of many preachers who did not receive enough to feed them.

Elders are almost a thing of the past. What the preacher says is about the end of the matter. When old, gray-headed elders turn over the management of the congregation to the young preachers, soon a special class (like Castleberry) will be included in the invitations and all others excluded.

MARY MONTGOMERY ANDERSON.

BY CLARA COX EPPERSON.

She is missed by her loved ones everywhere, but next to the empty place in the home is the touchingly empty place in the church where she always sat at the right of the pulpit, her good face and sweet smile an inspiration to the men of God who talked there.

They knew that she was repeating the passages of scripture to herself before they could utter them, so versed was she in sacred lore. Her never-failing interest and the commendation spoken from her beautiful dark eyes gave them encouragement and power. By her constant presence and her unfailing appreciation she truly ministered unto the minister, whose spiritual needs are often greater than we know.

Her faith was without question. The problems that rose and fell as the years of her life went by troubled her not at all; her mind and heart and soul were left untouched. To her there was but the simple, narrow way that her Savior's feet had trod; nothing else was of consequence. Theories new or old held no interest for her. She was the embodiment of "Kind hearts are more than coronets, and simple faith than Norman blood," and for her that "simple faith" and unquestioning trust were sufficient.

When she knew that death was approaching, with the same unshakable faith, patient endurance, abiding hope, she waited its coming with a smile, her only thought being for the comfort of those who were grieved over her going.

"Sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust," she approached her grave "like one that wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams." Truly a great soul went out into a greater life.

"A DOUBLE-MINDED MAN,"

BY J. G. ALLEN.

I like to meet a man that stands firm for what he believes to be right. It has been my experience that, as a rule, when you meet this type of a man, if he holds to something that conflicts with the Bible, he is easy to reach with the truth; but, on the other hand, if he is a "double-minded man" you are wasting time trying to teach him, because "he is unstable in all his ways." He is not even practicing the truths he already knows, and, of course, will not accept other truth if you teach it to him. If a man expects God to be with him, he must follow God's rule. God's rule requires of us all to study the Bible, and as we learn a truth to walk in it. John expresses it thus: "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1: 7.) When a man violates this rule, he belongs to the double-minded class, and will be condemned except he repent. I do not believe that there would be a hobby among us to-day if we would all adhere to the above rule. I met an anti-Sunday-school preacher not long since, and I asked him if he had ever considered how strange it was that such ripe scholars and godly men as Campbell, Stone, Lard, Franklin, Lipscomb, Sewell, and a host of others who made the Bible their chief study in life, had failed to discover what some little double-minded preacher claimed he had discovered.

MARK, THE UNSTEADY, BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE TURNING BACK AT PERGA.

As leading characters in this little story, I introduce Barnabas, Paul, and John Mark. I might as well mention Peter also, for he figures incidentally. Barnabas, gifted with the power of exhortation, was a native of Cyprus. Paul, afterwards the matchless missionary, was born and reared in Tarsus. Mark, son of a certain Mary of Jerusalem, lived in that city. A further word about the last-named character seems necessary before beginning the narrative.

When we first meet the name of John Mark, he is already a Christian. His mother would seem to have been intimately acquainted with Peter. It was to her home, as to a familiar home, that the apostle repaired after his deliverance from prison. This fact accounts for Mark's intimate acquaintance with that apostle, to whom also he probably owed his conversion, for Peter calls him his son. Thus Mary and Mark were special friends of Peter, and it is noteworthy that Mark, later, wrote the Gospel by Mark at the dictation of Peter. In this connection, it should be noted, too, that Mary was a sister of Barnabas, and so Mark and Barnabas were bound by ties of blood relation.

We must see now how Barnabas and Paul and Mark were brought together. The first two were ministers, or teachers, working together in the great church at Antioch. John Mark was at Jerusalem. By and by a famine fell upon Judea and the region round about, and distress prevailed. The disciples in Antioch, desiring to relieve the poor saints in Judea, sent gifts by Barnabas and Paul. When these two messengers of mercy returned from Jerusalem to Antioch, Mark accompanied them.

The time had now come for missionary work among the Gentiles of Asia Minor. Then it was that the Spirit separated two missionaries from among the prophets and teachers at Antioch. "Separate me Barnabas and Saul," said the Spirit, "for the work whereunto I have called them." Accordingly they were commended to the grace of God by fasting and prayer and laying on of hands, and sent away to the Gentiles. The missionaries chose Mark for their attendant, to care for their wants and to baptize believers.

All was ready for the hazardous journey. Down to the seaport at Seleucia walked the little party. Taking ship, they sailed to Cyprus, the island home of Barnabas. Landing at Salamis, the chief city, they traversed the length of the island, evangelizing as they went. At Paphos, on the southwest coast, they succeeded in converting the Roman proconsul. They now decided to sail for the continent, and a short voyage brought them to Perga. They were now in Pamphylia, a province of Asia Minor, and on the eve of entering upon the most hazardous and arduous part of their mission. The prospect was not promising. Hardship and difficulties were sure to come-dangers threatened. But the lion heart of Paul and the zealous soul of Barnabas did not quail. Only Mark was unsteady. Disheartened, he departed from them and returned to Jerusalem. The lesson lies in this incident of Mark's turning back.

WHY MARK TURNED BACK.

Why did Mark turn back? The reason is not given, yet it is not a difficult inference. He left the missionaries at a time of sore need, and he returned to Jerusalem, to his home and to brethren. Paul very justly concluded that under the circumstances Mark was to be blamed. He should not have turned back at the time of need. It is an interesting episode to study, and it has its lessons.

"John departed from them and returned to Jerusalem."
We do not know in what manner he effected his departure —whether he simply abandoned them, or made an excuse for absence, or wrote a respectful "letter of resignation." It may be safely said that nothing could confer dignity on his departure. How he was received at Jerusalem, whether or not with questionings or contempt, we are not told. It is enough to know that he left the two missionaries without an attendant. He went not with them to the work, but returned home. His case seems to have been one of religious homesickness. He lacked steadfastness.

By and by the missionaries returned-worn, ill-used, but buoyant and joyful in spirit. They had a cheering report to make, and the church was glad. They tarried a while at Antioch. All the time a heavy anxiety burdened Paul's heart. He cared most for the converts he had left in Asia Minor as lambs among wolves. "Let us return now," he said to Barnabas, "and visit the brethren in every city wherein we proclaimed the word of the Lord, and see how they fare." Now arose a difficulty. Barnabas desired to take Mark, his kinsman, with them as attendant again. But Paul did not think it good to do so. Had not Mark withdrawn from them at Perga, abandoned the work, and returned home? Was this not shrinking from dangers and difficulties that must be incurred? Paul would not consent to take Mark. Barnabas, however, thought better of his kinsman. There arose a sharp contention. Neither could yield. They parted. Barnabas took Mark with him, and sailed away to Cyprus. Paul chose Silas, and went forth, with the blessings of the church, on a great tour that carried him to the shores of Europe.

What were the subsequent careers of these evangelists? That of Paul needs no tracing. First, it was Barnabas and Paul, then Paul and Barnabas, and then Paul. Thus he became the matchless missionary. And Barnabas. Taking Mark, he sailed to his native island, and with that the story of his labors suddenly breaks off.

And Mark. Notwithstanding the Perga incident, we find Mark at Paul's side during that apostle's first imprisonment at Rome, and he is acknowledged by Paul as one of his few fellow laborers who had been a "comfort" to him during the weary hours of his imprisonment. There are other traces of him in connection with his spiritual father, Peter, in Babylon. Then we get a glimpse of him in Asia Minor, for during his second imprisonment Paul, writing to Timothy, charges him to bring Mark with him to Rome, on the ground that he was "profitable" to him for the ministry. "Only Luke is with me," he writes, sadly. "Take Mark, and bring him with thee; for he is useful to me for ministering." From this point we gain no further information from the New Testament respecting the evangelist. It is probable, however, that he did join the apostle at Rome, and suffered martyrdom along with Paul.

SOME LESSONS OF VALUE.

Let us gather up a few lessons from the Perga episode and the Antioch disagreement. Mark turned back at Perga. Paul and Barnabas disagreed as to his fitness for the second tour. They parted, and probably never met again. I think Paul was right. Did he lose esteem and regard for Barnabas? No! He valued him as a Christian and as a faithful minister of the word. In his letters he refers to his former fellow worker in esteem and kindness. These allusions (1 Cor. 9: 6; Gal. 2: 13) clearly indicate that Paul regarded Barnabas as a faithful minister of Christ and as a man of no ordinary degree of firmness.

Nor was Paul estranged from Mark. We have seen that Mark was his fellow laborer and helper in his imprisonment at Rome. The apostle had come to think better of Mark, because, I think, Mark had grown to be stronger. Never, for that matter, was the apostle blind to any good thing in his brethren. He cherished no resentment, no envy, no bias. Though he and Barnabas had differed even to the point of parting, and though they never met again, Paul came to shake hands with him in spirit. Though John Mark had deserted the standard in time of need, Paul took him to his bosom in the Roman prison. Are there no lessons here for us?

What was John Mark's weakness? In one word, an irresolute will. His failing was unsteadiness, lack of definite purpose. Not that he was a man of ill-doing or of unworthy aim. But he had conflicting aims, and this forbade any set purpose. Jesus set his face to go to Jerusalem and to death; but Mark did not set his face with such resolution to go to the work. Wavering, he deserted an unpromising mission for more congenial labor. He was unsteady; perhaps he was constitutionally volatile. A man of steady will would have battled down the temptation to return. But Jerusalem the golden, the Jerusalem of his youth, with brethren and friends, had too strong an appeal for him, and his religious homesickness outweighed against the sufferings and risks of a hard mission among the heathen. Therefore, his weak and wavering soul turned back.

Mark grew steady and firm with the years. If not, why the Pauline commendation? And why the call to the prison as comforter and fellow worker? His ministry. says Paul, is profitable now. The last scene is touching. Paul languishes in prison. As his last day draws near, as death stares him in the face, most of his companions of former years having fled, who is it that he asks for, and who is it that he longs to see? It is Mark. I can imagine no greater compliment paid by man to man. I should think it worth while to be rejected a hundred times, if, as a recompense, I received such an approach at last. Did Mark go? I feel sure he did. I have no doubt that he did go with Timothy to cheer the aged apostle's last hours.

There, not inappropriately, we shall leave him—in the city of the steadfast, in the place where of all others men had learned the virtue of inflexible tenacity. John Mark, who turned back at Perga, did not fail at Rome. The unsteady had become the steady. He was profitable to Paul because he was no more wavering, but steadfast, unmovable, abounding in the work of the Lord. At the last, instead of turning back in fear, he would go forward in boldness, to martyrdom, to victory, and receive as a reward the crown of life.

HOW MANY CUPS SHOULD BE USED?

(David Lipscomb, in "Queries and Answers.")

"Where I have been preaching recently the two leading brethren disagree as to how many cups should be used in the Lord's Supper, and they desire to hear from you on the subject. One brother contends that we ought to use but one cup, and that to use more than one is sinful; while the rest of the brethren think that the cup sustains the same relation to the wine that the plate does to the bread, and hence it is not the cup, but what it contains, that should be considered, though, out of deference to him, they use only one cup."

It is difficult to tell how to treat those who exalt such whims into matters of faith. They, as a rule, are good, morbidly conscientious men, who, to say the least, are like some of whom the Savior speaks, who "tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith." But these do not pertain to the law of God at all. God teaches nothing on the subject of whether there should be one loaf or cup or more. Matthew says: "As they were eating. Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it; and he gave to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took a cup, and gave thanks, and gave to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins. But I say unto you, I shall not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom." (Matt. 26: 26-29.) When Jesus speaks of this cup, "this fruit of the vine," he does not mean that special cup before him, but the wine used for the same purpose even till he comes again; he will drink of this cup when he comes again, which shows he means by this that which is like this and used for the same end.

The abuses that grew out of the Supper show that they did not all drink of one cup. One ate and drank before another, and each seems to have brought his own bread and wine and plates and cups; and, then, some got drunk, which they could not have done if all drank from the same cup of wine; there would not have been enough in one cup to make them drunk. This was an abuse of the Supper, of course, but an abuse that could not have grown up if all had to partake of one cup. The truth is, this Supper was instituted at the passover, and the passover was a feast. Out of this feasting the abuses grew, and Paul (1 Cor. 11) corrects the idea of its being a feast to eat and drink, and makes it a memorial service to refresh our memory of the kindness and love of Jesus in dying for the world.

There is nothing taught as to whether one cup or more, or one loaf or more, was used. This cup or this loaf did not confine the Savior's language to the one cup or loaf he had in his hand, but it meant: This cup or this loaf used to commemorate my sufferings, whenever and wherever it be, till I come again. All efforts to make laws and restrictions where God has made none are as sinful as to annul those he has made. Both displace God's authority with man's. To bring in these untaught questions is to disturb the peace of the church, and falls under the law. "Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations." Disputations over these questions are forbidden, and he who occupies his mind with these untaught questions cannot find time for the great and important work of saving a lost and ruined world.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your order for Bibles and good books at once. Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

We are at work now on a new and enlarged edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachmon.

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75 each. Mail us your order at once.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

We have just printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order to-day for a copy of this splendid book.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

The man the cap fits is its worst critic.

Flatterers proceed on the basis of reciprocity.

Leslie G. Thomas preached at Franklin, Ky., last Lord's day.

A sermon preached by a man who is not a saint loses its power.

Hugh H. Miller preached at Lewisburg, Tenn., last Lord's day.

The tendency among our preachers to "pastorate" is alarming.

Shields of faith are not provided for the back. We must go forward.

C. E. W. Dorris preached a splendid sermon at Ivy Point, Tenn., last Lord's day.

Clayton L. James preached at South Harpeth, in Williamson County, last Lord's day.

F. B. Srygley preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. There was one confession.

J. G. Hunter preached at the Jefferson Street church of Christ (colored), this city, last Lord's day at 11 A.M., to a large audience.

George H. Porch advises that H. T. King preached two splendid sermons at Belmont Avenue, this city, last Lord's day, and that one was baptized into Christ.

C. W. Sewell, Corpus Christi, Texas, February 11, to F. W. Smith: "I want to thank you for your many fine articles. Your writings have done me much good."

S. F. Morrow, Tampa, Fla., February 11: "The Gospel Advocate is fine. I have been busy securing a lot to build a house of worship on. The Lord willing, I want to go after subscribers next."

W. E. Morgan, Senatobia, Miss., February 14: "I will assist the church at Flint, Mich., in a revival, April 12-26. I would like to hold one or two meetings in Ohio in May before I return South."

T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., February 9: "It rained here yesterday, but we had a record attendance at Bible study, increasing twenty over last Sunday. The house was filled at the night service, with two being restored and one making the confession."

C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., February 11: "J. O. Barnes, of Lake City, recently held a two-weeks' meeting here, with several added to the one body and the church greatly strengthened. I am still preaching on Lord's days, morning and evening. I baptized one into Christ last Lord's day."

Charles L. Speir, Greenville, Texas, February 11: "I preached for the church at Bethany last Lord's day. We had good services. I have from June 1 to June 21 and from July 6 to July 20 open for meetings. I will be glad to hear from brethren interested. My address is 1713 Oneal Street."

F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, February 12: "For six years I have labored with the church at this place. It is in fine condition spiritually. I am taking a short vacation. My first meeting will be at Oklahoma City, Okla, beginning on March 1. Then I go to South Texas for a month or six weeks. Foy E. Wallace, Jr., will be with me in May."

Thomas J. Wagner, Rockwood, Tenn., February 10: "I beg to advise that work here with the church is quite encouraging. The interest and attendance are growing, with two confessions Sunday night. They were baptized on Monday afternoon, with two others from South Harriman who made confession at Brother Turner's meeting. The Gospel Advocate is fine. I enjoy it more and more."

Mrs. B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., February 13: "The doctors rushed Mr. Davis to the Protestant Hospital last Monday on account of so much poison in his system. He is now facing a very serious operation, besides minor ones, and will have to be in the hospital quite a while. We will gratefully appreciate any assistance sent us, and ask the prayers of the brethren everywhere."

J. G. Allen, 1412 Baltimore Street, Muskogee, Okla., February 9: "We had two splendid services yesterday at the C Street Church, notwithstanding the stormy weather. The prospects are bright for another congregation in Muskogee in the near future. I still have some time left for protracted-meeting work this summer that I would like to put in, in Arkansas or Oklahoma. I would be glad to hear from brethren and arrange dates, if convenient."

S. Whitfield, Glencoe, Ontario, Canada, January 30: "Brother Black was never married, and he boarded with Mrs. Lloyd, 12 Ray Street, South, Hamilton, Ontario. When his means were gone, she still cared for him, and he died there. The brethren helped her, but she was very kind and good to him. She wrote me, stating that she wished me to send you notice of his death." We shall be glad to have Brother Whitfield send a more extended notice.

T. C. Fox, Henderson, Tenn., February 12: "We had splendid services at Reform, Miss. During the bad weather we had services in the different homes, and when the weather was good we held the services in the house. The interest was just fine. I was at Sturgis, Miss., last Sunday and preached to a large crowd. I will be in Benton County, Miss., next week. I hope to do much good in the Mississippi field this year. Much success to the Gospel Advocate."

J. M. Gainer, Winchester, Tenn., February 10: "Beginning on January 18, E. Gaston Collins and I held a meeting at Wilmington, N. C., resulting in five additions. There were already eight members there, and these are working hard to establish the cause there. They have two good leaders in Brethren Macy and Sutherland, and the entire membership is faithful and exceedingly liberal in supporting the local work. They have purchased a lot on which they hope soon to have a house to meet in, and there can be no better place to help than these good people. This meeting was made possible by the Winchester and Bridgeport (Ala.) congregations."

The following is from a Woodsfield (Ohio) paper: "A revival meeting will begin in the Woodsfield church of Christ on Sunday morning, February 22. Evangelist F. B. Srygley, of Nashville, Tenn., will be the preacher. Elder Srygley is a man of many years' experience in evangelistic work, and he is a tower of strength and a power for good. He has assisted the minister of the local church here in three revival meetings in other fields of labor, and the proposed meetings in Woodsfield will not be an experiment. Elder Srygley is a champion debater, a forceful writer, and a wonderful preacher. He is a man with a big heart, a big head, a splendid voice, and a very jovial disposition. His first word will arrest your attention; and when you hear him once, you will not want to miss a word. We want everybody to hear this great preacher. Get ready now for the first service. (H. H. Adamson, minister.)"

David F. Nickell writes: "I am not sure who is responsible for 'Our Messages' in the Gospel Advocate of February 5, but under that heading I note a little thrust taken at Brother Love and the position he occupies in reference to the 'individual cups,' and it is suggested that there is something wrong with his head. There may be; but if there is, Brother Lipscomb had the same ailment, as I can name dozens of former pupils of his who will bear me out in asserting that many times in his classes he very obviously stated that the New Testament carries the one-cup idea." If Brother Love will do like Brother Lipscomb did, as can be seen from the present issue of the Advocate on page 175, the Advocate will be willing to "pat him on the back;" but if he does not, but continues to suggest a division over this question, the Advocate will still insist that he ought to be patted where he needs patting.

Mrs. Flora Ramsey Forrest, Niota, Tenn., February 7:
"I cannot bear to think of missing a single copy of the Gospel Advocate, and I hope to be able to take it as long as I live. My father took it before I could remember, so you see I have been raised up with it. It sure is fine. The pieces in it are so helpful and instructive. Long, long may its banner float out over a perishing world and lead many to turn to their Savior. Do you ever send the Advocate to widows? There is one here that belongs to the church of Christ that says she is not able to take it. I do wish you could see your way to send it to her, as the Methodists are trying to get her to go with them. I believe the Advocate would help her to stay loyal. If I were able, I would have it sent myself." We are sending the Gospel Advocate to this widow and charging it to our free-list fund. Our readers will kindly remember to continue contributions to this fund. The calls upon it are many.

Send us a subscriber.

Learn how to do good.

Fair work needs no false words.

A sore preacher serves the devil.

A dirty dollar gained is a dead loss.

We enjoy our blessings as we share them.

An uneasy conscience makes a restless night.

Nobody can go to heaven who wants to go alone.

A tombstone is a very poor sort of ticket to glory.

We like men who come out flat-footed on everything.

Sin will never be exterminated by sugared sentiments.

A good time that is no more than a good time is a bad time.

F. B. Srygley preached at Hillsboro, Tenn., last Lord's day.

W. H. Owen preached at Little River, near Hopkinsville, Ky., last Lord's day.

Four walls do not make a house of worship. Too much importance is attached to these walls.

When it gets to where a fellow has to stand on his dignity, he must be hard up for something on which to stand.

E. C. Hall, Moore, Okla., February 13: "I enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate very much. I intend to read it as long as I live."

We would not be so suspicious of some of the things that are being advertised and promoted, if these same things did not create such good jobs for those promoting them.

- H. S. Lipscomb preached at Twelfth Avenue, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. The singing class, which meets on Friday night for instruction and drill by Professor Starr, is being largely attended. Interest in the Bible study is commendable, and the attendance is large and growing.
- J. Fairs Nichols, Murray, Ky., February 11: "I wish to make note of the change of my address from Fancy Farm, Ky., to South Sixth Street, Murray, Ky. Alonzo Williams preached here on Sunday morning and I in the evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening. The Lord willing, I shall go to Antioch, Ill., the third Lord's day."
- J. A. Gibbons, Freeman Lacy, and E. H. Beeson, elders, Fort Worth, Texas, January 31: "We wish to commend to the church at large Willard Morrow, who has preached for the South Side church of Christ here during the past year. Any church desiring the services of a true, loyal gospel preacher, well versed in the Scriptures, will make no mistake in employing Brother Morrow."

David Lipscomb said; "I have no doubt that the worldly goods and honors that men so eagerly seek now and that they cling to till death will be objects of greatest loathing and disgust at the judgment seat of God. They will be a witness against them of their breach of trust in not using what God committed to them as he directs. It will be a leaden weight that will drag many down to ruin."

G. C. Brewer (Christian), of Sherman, Texas, and J. J. Walker (transgressive Christian), of Nashville, Tenn., are announced to begin a four-days' debate on instrumental music, at Columbia, Tenn., Wednesday, March 4. The debate will be held in the courthouse, and arrangements have been made to take care of all visiting preachers in the various homes. Brethren everywhere and the public at large are invited. H. Leo Boles, president of David Lipscomb College, will serve as moderator for Brother Brewer.

Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth shall be condemned." Nashville has more Christians and churches of Christ than any other city in the world; and yet it would, in our opinion, be extremely conservative to say that not one-fourth of its population has ever rendered obedience to Jesus. Conditions are worse in other places. O that Christians may arouse to a realization of their duty, quit trying to "organize" something to shoot out the moon, and individually, "on their own hook," as it were, simply as Christians and as members of the church, go to their neighbors with the gospel! That's the way the early Christians did. It can't be beat.

W. F. Lemmons, Pocahontas, Ark., February 16: "The debate on the separate communion question that has been announced to begin on March 3, between Raymond Henley and myself has been called off indefinitely. I preached at Noland, Ark., Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night, to large audiences. This is my old home settlement. I met many old friends and made new ones, I shall go to Texas for a short meeting the last of this month."

An "unemployed preacher" is a character we cannot harmonize with the doctrine of the Bible. What do bretheren mean—"unemployed?" Is preaching a monetary profession by which to make a living? With as many unsaved people as there are, preachers ought to be very busy. Busy preachers generally receive financial support, as an audience feels that "the laborer is worthy of his hire." But when a young man starts out with the intention of making a "preacher," in the popular sense of a clergyman, and enters a theological school with that intention, he not only does something that is antiscriptural and antiapostolic, but also engages in something that is opposed to the original idea of preaching and teaching advocated and acted upon by the apostles.

The following is from the Nashville Tennessean: "Albany, Ala., February 13.—Announcement was made here to-day that within sixty to ninety days construction will be started on a thirty-five-thousand-dollar edifice by the church of Christ. The building will be erected on a lot on Grant Street. In general outline the edifice will resemble the Charlotte Avenue Church at Nashville, Tenn. The plans call for use of red and yellow brick and stone." We have preached at Albany, and personally know them to be among the best Christian people on earth. We are glad they are building a new house on a different street. But, brethren, be careful; don't spend too much. Jesus was born in a stable. The teaching of Him who had not where to lay his head is not compatible with luxurious quarters. Somehow or other, it does not thrive in a costly house.

Henry Ford's paper says: "I read in the papers all the stuff published about the end-of-the-world furor—not because I was interested in the end of the world, but to observe what publicity can do to people. The idea began with a few obscure persons who were ordinarily out of newspaper purview altogether. Poor, misguided as they were, flying in the face of the very revelation on which they pretended to base their conclusions, they were not nearly so misguided as were the flippant journalists who made the matter a thing of national importance. The people who committed suicide, who sold their property, who destroyed their standing in society, certainly would not have been moved to do so without newspaper aid. These tragic occurrences must be laid at the door of those who thought it worth wire tolls to telegraph from one end of the country to the other the vagaries of people whose opinions on any subject would have no intrinsic value. I noticed also that the newspapers did nothing whatever to enlighten people concerning the religious beliefs involved."

Felix G. Owen, Santa Rosa, Cal.: "F. L. Rowe preached

I noticed also that the newspapers did nothing whatever to enlighten people concerning the religious beliefs involved."

Felix G. Owen, Santa Rosa, Cal.: "F. L. Rowe preached here at the morning service the first Sunday in February. The interest nad enthusiasm of the church here is good and is increased by our school. The school has a literary meeting every Friday night, and a little paper, Vim and Vision, is edited every week. This paper is not published, only read before the club every Friday night. I give here an extract from a recent issue: 'We are sure the friends of Christian education, and of the Santa Rosa Christian Academy especially, are happy over the progress our school is making. The school gets better every day and in every way. The pupils are growing more in earnest, more studious, and more enthusiastic as the days come and go. The attendance, regularity, and punctuality is almost perfect lately. Pupils are bringing their lessons up better. The teachers and patrons seem more enthusiastic than ever. The addition of Brother Narron to our teaching force has simplified matters wonderfully. This enables a complete revision of the daily program, and now the classes are all being heard on time and none slighted.' We now have three teachers and have enrolled forty-five pupils. The Pacific Christian Academy (our school as Graton) is doing good work, and they have enrolled one hundred and fifty or more, so that the two schools together have enrolled close to two hundred pupils this year. Our primary teacher, Mrs. William T. Owen, is now having her first experience with a Bible school. She is very enthusiastic, and says it is an inestimable blessing to her. She says no one can ever know about Bible schools and the great good they do without teaching in and working with one. She takes a great interest in helping the pupils prepare their numbers for the Friday-night club meeting."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell,

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is malled regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is charged, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments were from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily coour from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gespel Advecate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

MIRACLES HAVE CEASED. No. 2.

BY E. A. ELAM.

The important question is, when did God say miracles would cease? He says they would cease "when that which is perfect is come," which is the complete will of God revealed. These miraculous gifts were "in part;" but when the complete will of God was revealed and in the hands of all the churches, that which was "in part" was "done away," because "that which is perfect" had come. These miraculous gifts represent the childhood of the church, while having the complete will of God represents the manhood of the church. Eph. 4: 18-16 states that these miraculous gifts were to continue "till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: that we may be no longer children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, in craftiness, after the wiles of error; but speaking truth in love [which all can do with the complete will of God before theml, may grow up in all things into him, who is the head, even Christ; from whom all the body fitly framed and knit together through that which every joint supplieth, according to the working in due measure of each several part, maketh the increase of the body unto the building up of itself in love."

In this way, as Paul says in 2 Tim. 3: 17, "the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work." This "every scripture inspired of God"

This, then, is when God says miracles ceased. He who asks for miracles since then lacks faith in God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, and the word of God. If he would not believe these, he would not believe though one rise from the dead.

Jesus said in the great commission: "And these signs shall accompany them that believe; in my name shall they cast out demons; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents [as Paul did], and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall in no wise hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." (Mark 16: 17, 18.) All these signs accompanied the believers until the days of miracles ceased; and all since then have received the benefit of these miracles and of all that the apostles and Jesus worked, because it is stated that they have been written for our benefit, and that we might believe in Christ and be saved through his name. (See John 20: 30, 31.)

Not only do all who call for miracles to-day lack faith in God, but those who claim to work miracles are impostors.

Let it be understood that all along, since the age of miracles ceased, there have been persons who have claimed miraculous power.

"Notes on the Miracles," by Archbishop Trench, an English author, pages 54 and 55, speaks of the many miracles which it was claimed were performed in the Middle Ages. Some of them are "the innumerable Romish miracles which attest transubstantiation," "the miracles which go to uphold the whole Romish system," and which he characterizes as "ludicrous and grotesque, saintly jests." He speaks of some for whom it was claimed they performed "miracles beside which those of our Lord shrink into insignificance."

Attention is called to this only to show that all such claims are spurious and contrary to the word of God.

Eusebius was born about A.D. 260 and died about 340. He refers to the accounts of miracles given by Irenæus. Irenæus was born about A.D. 130 and died about 202. He lived near the time of the apostles. Just how long spiritual gifts remained in the church we cannot say, because we do not know just how long different congregations were in receiving the complete will of God in permanent form. But we know by the word of God that since that time miracles have ceased. We do not suppose miraculous gifts ceased in all congregations at a certain hour on a certain day of a certain month of a certain year. We must make some allowance, too, for the superstitions of those days.

When we contrast the miracles of Christ and the apostles with the spurious miracles which some claim to perform to-day, we see the ridiculousness and falsity of such claims. Jesus and the apostles performed their numerous miracles in the most enlightened centers of the earth and in public where hundreds could see them and know that they were miracles-such as opening the eyes of those born blind, healing the deaf and dumb, and the paralyzed, raising the dead, etc. Those who claim that miracles are wrought to-day will tell you of such things which have been done at some distant place, but none will dare to attempt to walk upon surging seas, or to drink deadly poison, or to raise the dead in view of a multitude. When the apostles spoke with tongues, they spoke intelligently in different languages which they had not studied and did not know, and which all who used those languages understood and so received instruction. All who claim to speak with tongues now say nothing intelligently. That which they mutter is nothing more than geese gabble. God forbade speaking with tongues, even when by miraculous gift, if the congregation did not understand the language used and there was no one present who could interpret it. The edification of the audience is that which God desires and commands. He says, too: "Let all things be done decently and in order." Only one man should speak at a time, and all others should keep silence. This must be done that all the church may understand the speaker and be edified. (See 1 Cor. 14: 26-40.)

In the days of miracles, God at times allowed Satan to perform some miracles to show his superiority to, and power over, Satan. When Aaron cast his rod down before Pharaoh and it became a serpent, Pharaoh called for his wise men, sorcerers, and magicians, who threw down their rods, which likewise became serpents. "But Aaron's rod swallowed their rods." When Moses and Aaron turned the waters into blood, Pharaoh's magicians did the same. When Moses and Aaron brought up the frogs, Pharach's magicians did the same; but these magicians could not destroy the frogs. This was done in order to show Pharach and the Egyptians "that there is none like unto Jehovah our God." When Moses and Aaron turned the dust into lice, Pharaoh's magicians tried to do the same, but failed. "Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the finger of God." (See Ex. 7: 17 to 8: 19.) Besides these two plagues, Moses and Aaron continued these mighty works until they brought upon the Egyptians the other eight. Let us study the whole account and note the great difference between the wonderful works of God and that of sorcerers, enchanters, magicians, and other impostors. See the case recorded in Acts 19: 14-20, and note what the evil spirit said and did and the effect this had upon the inhabitants of Ephesus.

JOHN B. COWDEN'S TRACT.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

For a while Brother John B. Cowden was the editor of the "digressive" paper for the State of Tennessee; but for some cause he has been succeeded as editor by a man from West Tennessee, I believe. Brother Cowden developed very rapidly into a prolific writer, but not an accurate one. It seems that he has broken out again in a tract which is too broad for the Christian Standard. Brother Cowden has been hunting for some time for a platform in religion for a broad-minded man, like himself, to stand upon; but it seems that he has "out-Heroded Herod," and has gone so far that the Standard cannot endure him, and it has thrown him "overboard." Brother Cowden has got so broad and liberal that he is no longer in good standing with the Standard.

I find in a recent issue of the Standard the following editorial:

A RECRUIT OF THE CULT.

Some one has favored us with a tract, published by John B. Cowden, of Nashville, Tenn., and entitled "Christian Unity and Open and Close Membership." It is the author's apology for affiliation with Mr. Ainslie's association for the promotion of open membership, which is an agency of the Disciples denomination. Mr. Cowden has been doing apprentice work for the "broad-minded leaders," as he calls them, and his circulars prepared the way for the public announcement of his complete initiation.

Mr. Cowden's dissertation is carried in the approved

Mr. Cowden's dissertation is carried in the approved and empty vernacular of the cult. He gossips about "baptism by immersion," "spiritually baptized," "interpretation," "uniting denominations," "broader fellowship with the Christian world," "we," "us," "our churches and our conventions," and "our denomination." He refers to those who practice open membership and those who oppose the practice as "two parties in the church," and aspires to "speak a word of reconciliation." He dubs those who stand for the scriptural conditions of church membership as advocates of "close membership," and threshes over the old "close communion" straw.

The author bases his advocacy of open membership on a single premise, and that a false premise. "As far as we know," he says, "no roll of church members was kept by the apostolic church, for the evident reason that the Lord did the adding, and no one knows whom he added." In order to get the pious unimmersed in, he proposes that every church discard its membership roll and form a new record, "not as church members, but as church workers and worshipers, because no one but the Lord knows whom to receive and record as members of the church"—church workers and worshipers where there can be Greek and Lew circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian. Scythian to receive and record as members of the church "—church workers and worshipers where there can be Greek and Jew, circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bord and free. This is not a new discovery. Mr. Ames and Mr. John Holmes have been working it for years.

The nonsense of Mr. Cowden's assertion that "no roll of church members was kept by the apostolic church" is apparent to the wayfaring man in the light of Luke's statement that "there were added unto them in that day [Pentecost] about three thousand souls." The inspired historian made another bad break (which could have been prevented if Mr. Cowden had been present) when he wrote into the record: "The number of the men came to be about five thousand." Paul is also caught napping, for he says "unto the church of the Thessalonians in God" "We command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which they received of us." And the Lord himself will have to be revised, for he said: "Tell it to the church." In one breath he asserts that we cannot keep a roll of church members, "because no one but the Lord knows whom to record," and then, in the next breath, he says: "Open and close membership should be declared out of order in any New Testament church." Who will do the declaring? Where will we find a "New Testament church," and by what marks may we identify it?

Another weighty quotation: "There was no such practice [open and close membership] in the apostolic church, historian made another bad break (which could have been

Another weighty quotation: There was no such practice [open and close membership] in the apostolic church, to which the Lord added and excluded members. There was no such issue, because church membership was left in the hands of the Lord. We have no right or authority to open or close the doors of the church upon any follower of Christ." It may be said in reply that "we" claim no such authority. Peter and the other apostles, commissioned by Christ and inspired by the Holy Spirit, have taken care of the opening and closing, the binding and loosing, by explicitly defining the conditions of salvation, which, as Mr. Cowden admits, are "the same as the conditions of church membership." There is no room for parleying over the membership of the church in Jerusalem. "They then that received his word were baptized: and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls. And they [the baptized believers, the church members] continued in the apostles' teaching," etc. There is no room for parleying over the membership of the church of Christ in any place. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "And the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved."

Mr. Cowden looks upon his "broad policy" as a new discount of the church and the sales were as the conditions of Christ into the conditions of Christ into the conditions of Christ into the conditions of the church of Christ into the conditions of the church of Christ into the conditions of Christ into the conditions of the church of Christ into the church of Christ tice [open and close membership] in the apostolic church,

Mr. Cowden looks upon his "broad policy" as a new discovery which will "lead all the followers of Christ into the unity for which he prayed." We respectfully refer him to the career of the Christian Connection denomination, which began operating this same "broad policy" before Messrs. Ames, Ainslie, and Cowden were born. A high sense of fairness and consistency would lead these gentlemen, and others who espouse open membership, unless in truth they are Unitarians at heart, to affiliate with less in truth they are Unitarians at heart, to affiliate with their forbears and cease posing as representatives of the brethren who are pleading the cause of New Testament Christianity.

We conclude with Mr. Cowden's confession: "Upon the basis of this understanding, that church membership is a matter left with the individual and the Lord, I stand ready to meet all the followers of Christ for work and worship in his name, . . . working and worshiping with them on an equal basis as myself."

I have not seen the tract herein mentioned, but I take. it that the editor of the Standard quotes accurately from it. It will be noted that the Standard calls the tract "the author's apology for affiliating with Mr. Ainslie's association for the promotion of open membership, which is an agency of the Disciples denomination." As a matter of fact, Peter Ainslie was here and held some kind of meeting in the Vine Street Church, of which Carey E. Morgan is pastor. Brother J. J. Walker, pastor of the Woodland Street Church, was present in that meeting, and, I suppose, gave his indorsement also to it. I believe. in even "giving the devil his dues," and I do not think that Brother Cowden should take all the blame for indorsing Peter Ainslie's open-membership Disciples denomination, because both these digressive churches here in Nashville are as deep in the mud as John Cowden is in the mire. Brother Cowden was for a long time, and, I suppose, is yet, backed up by Brother Morgan's church as the chief, if not the only, man in the Commission on Unity. He had, and I suppose has yet, the indorsement of the Vine Street Church to go over this country and teach and work for what they call "Christian unity," but which was only an effort to divide churches over what he calls "his Christian liberty" to use an instrument in worship. and build up human societies through which to preach the. gospel. Brother Cowden has been as close to Brother J. J. Walker as two peas in a pod, and they have stood together like David and Jonathan in their fight for what they call "Christian liberty" and "Christian unity." The Standard says of Brother Cowden, "He gossips about baptism by immersion," as though there could be baptism without an immersion! It is the same as to gossip about immersion by immersion, for baptism is immersion. "Spiritually baptized," as though one could be spiritually baptized when he is not baptized at all! Suppose the apostles did not keep a roll of church membership, would that fact prove that one can be a member of the church who had never been baptized? They kept a roll of the conditions of church membership all right. Peter said to them on the day of Pentecost: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." Those who obeyed this received the remission of sins, or were saved. "And the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved." Why, they must have kept some kind of record, as it was said, "There were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls;" but if they did not, would this fact furnish any authority for Brother Cowden to say that one can be a member of the church without doing the things herein specified? I suppose Luke did not count all those Jews that were spiritually (?) baptized, as Brother Cowden had not made that discovery at that time. I believe Brother Cowden could get a patent on the idea of baptizing spiritually without baptizing at all, as it seems to be entirely original with him.

It seems from the Standard's report on Brother Cowden's tract that he was only trying to work out some kind of plan as an excuse for these transgressive brethren in working and worshiping in the Billy Sunday meetings with "Greek and Jew" circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond and free." All these things, I suppose, were present in that meeting. If I am right in this, then it is unjust for Brother Cowden to be condemned alone, when Brethren Morgan and Walker were in that meeting as well as Brother Cowden. Why should Cowden be the scapegoat and be denounced as "a recruit for the cult," and Morgan and Walker allowed to go free? They were both working and worshiping with those "Scythians" in the Billy Sunday meetings for seven weeks; and if they could do it for seven weeks, why could they not, like Cowden, continue it for all time? Cowden has got enough conscience left to try to prove his practice is right. While the other two do not seem to care whether it is right or wrong, they propose to do it, anyway; and Brother Cowden is denounced by the Standard as "a recruit for the cult," and they will never open their mouths in his defense. While I am not giving it as a recommendation for Cowden, I like them less than I do Brother Cowden. I felt sure Brother Cowden was gone when he knew the truth and deliberately left it. There is no place to stop, except just before you start. When we leave the Bible, we are in a condition to go the limit. Good-by, brethren; I cannot go with you.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

I scarcely know why I have not heretofore written something for my friends about the Washington Monument, it being one of the most imposing sights in the city—a great shaft of white marble rising from a gentle elevation in Monument Park, south of the Executive Grounds and near the Tidal Basin. Its immense height makes it distinguishable to visitors approaching Washington, and from many points in the city—from parks, avenues, the Capitol, the White House, the hills about the Soldiers' Home, and from the heights of Arlington, across the river—its peak is seen piercing the sky. One writer says of it: "Taken by itself, the Washington Monument stands not only as one of the most stupendous works of man, but also as one of the most beautiful of all human creations. Indeed, it is at once so great and so simple that it almost seems to be a work of nature."

Its appearance changes with the successive hours of the day, the varying lights and shadows, the alternation of clear or cloudy skies. In a storm it suggests a mighty mountain, immovable, while the elements dash against it. Seen through the veil of a gentle, misty rain, its pale gray outlines now visible, now hidden by the mists, it seems more like the ghost of a monument than a substantial structure of marble and granite.

It is an obelisk-a four-sided pillar, tapering as it rises, and terminating in a pyramid. It is set in the center of a great circle of concrete, and there are no steps whatsoever to its approach. From the floor of entrance to the tip is five hundred and fifty-five feet and five inches. It is fifty-five feet square at the base and thirty-five feet square at the top of the shaft, five hundred feet above the base, where it begins to taper toward the tip. The walls are fifteen feet thick at the base, and eighteen inches thick at the top of the shaft. The pyramid-shaped section rises fifty-five feet above the observatory floor at the top of the shaft and terminates in a point, or tip, of pure aluminum, about five and a half inches square at its base and nine inches high, weighing one hundred ounces-the largest piece of aluminum that had ever been cast when it was made. Aluminum was selected for the point, or tip, of the monument because of its lightness and because it will never tarnish, but always remain bright. The outside of the walls is of pure white Maryland marble, and the interior of gneiss and New England granite. The structure rests on a foundation of rock and cement one hundred and twenty-six and one-half feet square and thirty-six feet and ten inches deep. It has been declared the best piece of masonry in the world. A plumb line suspended from the top of the monument inside showed less than three-eighths of an inch deflection.

A stairway of nine hundred steps leads from the floor of entrance to the observatory floor at the top of the shaft. It is not a circular stairway, being built between the walls and an interior square shaft of iron in which the elevator runs, a flight of steps rising ten feet, then a landing across one side of the shaft, another flight of steps and another landing, and so on as the stairway winds its way to the top. The elevator, with a capacity of carrying twenty-eight, makes a trip every half hour, and oftener if visitors are numerous, and so many visit the monument that there is nearly always a carful waiting to go up. It ascends very slowly, the time of its ascent being five minutes.

The elevator is lighted by electricity, as the monument is, and it carries a telephone by which a message can be sent to the floor of entrance, the observatory floor, or the motor room. Some visitors walk up, but most of them ascend by the elevator, and many walk down, to examine more closely the inscribed memorial blocks set into the walls of the shaft.

These memorial blocks set in the inner face of the monument begin at the thirty-foot landing and continue to about three hundred and thirty feet. These stones were contributed as tributes to George Washington, and many of them are interesting because of beauty, carving, or origin. Most of the States, as well as many cities, have contributed a block. Lodges of various orders, debating societies, political organizations, fire departments, Sons of New England in Canada, and Americans residing in Foo-Chow, China, in 1857, are represented by memorial stones built into the great monument. There are stones from Braddock's battle field, the battle field of Long Island, Otter's Summit, stones from ancient Carthage, the Isle of Paros, Vesuvius, the Alexandrian Library in Egypt, and the tomb of Napoleon on St. Helena's barren bosom. Greece contributed a block of marble from the Parthenon;

Turkey, a beautifully carved marble; Switzerland, a stone from the chapel of William Tell, "built at the spot where he escaped from Gessler;" and there are blocks from Wales, Japan, China, Siam, Brazil, and, strange to say, one from the Cherokee Nation.

Blocks are still being contributed. The last time we visited the monument, fragments of stone were displayed for sale as souvenirs on a table on the observatory floor, and the vender told us they were pieces of a block that had been chipped out a few months before to allow a stone contributed by Arizona to be placed in the wall of the monument.

There is an officer in charge of the floor where visitors are ushered into the elevator, and another on the observatory floor where the elevator stops. No fees are expected for elevator or other service.

Four feet above the observatory floor the walls are pierced by eight windows, two on each side, from which a fine view of the city and the surrounding country may be had. Toward the north, directly in front, are the grounds of the President's Park, rising in a gentle slope to the White House, flanked on one side by the State, War, and Navy Building, and on the other by the Treasury; while beyond is the most compact residential section of the city, the Northwest, and still farther away are the square towers of the Soldiers' Home. Toward the east, between the monument and the Capitol, are the green levels of the Mall, the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum, and the grounds and buildings of the Agricultural Department, and, beyond these, the Capitol, one and a half miles distant, its symmetrical proportions and immense size very impressive. Over its right wing appears the gilt dome of the Library of Congress, and still farther away the valley of the Anacostia River, or Eastern Branch of the Potomac. From the south windows the Tidal Basin seems almost at the foot of the monument; to the left the eye follows the windings of the Potomac toward Alexandria, six miles away, and to the right the heights of Arlington, across the river. From the west windows the first object that claims attention is the Lincoln Memoriala beautiful building modeled after the Parthenon-and farther away the Pan-American Union and its sister buildings on Seventeenth Street, and on clear days the outlines of the Blue Ridge Mountains far away are outlined against the horizon.

The plan of erecting a suitable monument to commemorate Washington's service to his country began before his death, and it is said he selected the site for it. Soon after his death, a bill appropriating one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for a mausoleum passed both houses of Congress, but was mislaid and not signed. In the next Congress, Washington's political enemies were in the majority, and nothing more was heard about a monument to him for a long time. It is strange that any one should have been an enemy of Washington, but so it was. Many of his acts as President, especially his suppression of "the whisky rebellion" in Pennsylvania, aroused the bitter enmity of his political opponents, exceeding, the Encyclopedia Britannica says, anything that would be tolerated to-day, they going so far as to intimate that the guillotine should be instituted for his especial benefit. So much for partisan political prejudice.

The enmity of the comparatively few, however, could not dim the luster of the fame of Washington, or turn from him the hearts of the great mass of his countrymen. In 1833 the Washington National Monument Society was formed, popular subscriptions were taken, and a considerable fund was raised. The site was secured and the work begun, and the corner stone was laid, with impressive ceremonies, July 4, 1848. The funds were exhausted, however, when the shaft had been constructed to a height of one hundred and fifty feet, and the Civil War soon thereafter turned public attention to other matters for a time; but in 1878, Congress appropriated sufficient money to complete the work. The entire cost of the monument was $1,300,000.

The Monument was dedicated February 21, 1885—almost exactly forty years before the day on which you will read this description of it. The orator on that occasion was Robert C. Winthrop, American statesman, who, thirty-seven years before, had delivered the oration at the laying of the corner stone. In that first oration he said: "Lay the corner stone of a monument which shall adequately bespeak the gratitude of the whole American people to the illustrious Father of his Country. Build it to the skies, you cannot outreach the loftiness of his principles! Found it upon the massive and eternal rock, you cannot make it more enduring than his fame! Construct it of the peerless Parian marble, you cannot make it purer than his life! Exhaust upon it the rules and principles of ancient and modern art, you cannot make it more proportionate than his character!"

HUMAN AMBITION.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Webster defines "ambition" as follows: "An eager desire of preferment, honor, superiority, or power," Of course, the word can and does have an application to a "holy" as well as an "unholy" desire. Hence, we are justified in saying there is a kind and degree of ambition on the part of man that is commendable, as well as a kind and degree that brings man into disfavor with God and all right-thinking people.

Man without some degree of ambition would be "inactive" and fail to meet the ends of his creation. The wheels of industry would become idle and all human progress would stagnate, if man did not have a desire to succeed. The undeveloped material would lie dormant in the earth and forests without the inspiration of human ambition, and the forces of nature intended to contribute to man's welfare would go unharnessed and unutilized without the native skill with which man is endowed.

The purpose of this investigation is to call attention to the two "kinds" of ambition moving men in the affairs of the world, and that which lies back of each. The Bible furnishes concrete examples of both.

AN EXAMPLE OF UNHOLY AMBITION.

"Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshiping him, and desiring a certain thing of him. And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom." (Matt. 20: 20, 21.)

This mother's two sons, who were James and John, joined her in this request to the Master: "And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory." (Mark 10: 35-37.)

From a misconception of the "nature" of the kingdom Christ proposed to establish this woman and her two sons were led to make this request, but back of the request was an unholy desire for political preference and power in the kingdom. Hence, it was perfectly natural for the other disciples to feel as thus expressed: "And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren." (Matt. 20: 24.) Commenting on this, McGarvey says: "Nothing moves the indignation of men more than to know that one of their company of equals is plotting to get an undue advantage over the others." This desire for prestige and power over their fellow men was wicked, and the Savior promptly "answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able. And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father." (Matt. 20: 22, 23.)

That Jesus intended, as is claimed by some, to confirm these disciples in the belief that he would establish such a kingdom as they had in view, and that men would actually sit on his right and left in that kingdom, is contradicted by Jesus thus: "Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence." (John 18: 36.)

This unholy ambition is often seen among professed followers of Christ to-day, men wanting the preëminence, desiring to be looked up to and regarded as superior leaders in the church. Diotrephes of old is their prototype (3 John 9, 10), and against such a spirit the Master gave the following: "But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Matt. 20: 25-28.)

Not only did the Master thus rebuke these unholy ambitious souls, but he enforced his teaching by his own example of humble and unselfish service to mankind. Peter warned all elders in the churches against this same spirit of an unholy ambition: "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

(1 Pet, 5: 1-4.)

Many churches have been hindered in their growth, and not a few rained, by the domination of men called "elders," "lording" it over the flock.

THE GOAL OF HUMAN AMBITION.

The very acme of human ambition, uncontrolled, and unsanctified by the spirit and gospel of Jesus Christ, is "power" over humanity for self-aggrandizement and self-glory. The love of and striving after riches, either to hoard or spend upon the lusts of the flesh, is actuated by the desire for power to exercise over mankind.

The fall of Babylon and the dethroning of her mighty king came about because of an unholy ambition, a proud and haughty spirit. (See Dan. 4: 29, 30; 5: 18-21.) Many examples could be given in which an "unholy" ambition has resulted in the downfall of nations and indibiduals, but for the present this will suffice.

CAN MEN UNDERSTAND THE BIBLE ALIKE?

(David Lipscomb, in Nashville American, March 25, 1900.)
Do Christians agree on what the Bible teaches? Divisions on the subject of religion confuse many minds, discourage efforts to learn the truth, and work injury to man and dishonor God. The Son of God foresaw the evil that the rending of his spiritual body on earth would bring to man, he felt it more keenly than the rending of his fleshly body; so he spent the last moments after the Supper before he entered the garden of Gethsemane in agonizing prayer for "them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

Jesus laid the failure of the world to believe that God sent him to the divisions among those who would believe on him. Yet many professing to be his disciples justify and glory in these divisions, the foreseeing of which added deepest anguish to the dying sorrows of the Son of God. Not only did Jesus pray they might be one, but the apostle Paul besought and entreated in all his letters to the churches, as a father his children for their good: "I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

This entreaty for the oneness of the children of God is repeated in some form or other in every letter written to the churches under the guidance of the Holy Spirit; this oneness is not only required, but the things that divide and the course that will promote unity are pointed out in the Bible. In this very prayer of Jesus for the unity of his followers, he prays God: "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." (John 17: 17.) "Sanctify" means to set apart, or to use for a sacred end and purpose,

The prayer, then, is that God would use his word to lead them into this unity. To do this, they must all walk by his word. The word of God is the essence and standard of all truth. By it all truth is to be tested. "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, 32.) Jesus Christ said: "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." (John 14: 23.) "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." (John 15: 10.)

God is the great Ruler of the universe. There can be no possible good to any being save in harmony with the will and in obedience to the Ruler, and God can dwell with no being out of harmony with his laws. God cannot rule and bring good to beings refusing to obey him and to honor his rule. Even Jesus remained in his Father's love by keeping his commandments. Men become sons of God and remain in his love by keeping his commandments. "This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.) The love that God bestows and requires is not a mere sentiment, but is practical. God demands his children shall be one, but they must be one in obedience to his laws. Union not in obedience to God would be union against God, and all refusal to obey God is war upon the rule of God. It is an effort to dethrone him. Hence: "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin," (1 John 1: 7.)

There are two ends to be accomplished in one effort. We are to have fellowship with one another, and we are to be "cleansed from all sin by the blood of Christ." Both are brought about by walking in the light as Jesus walked in it. He had no will but to do the will of his Father. The servants of God are to be one, then, by walking in the commandments of God. His children cannot become or remain one by compromises and agreements among themselves any more than an army could be one in their operations by agreements and compromises among the soldiers. The unity and harmony of the army is brought about and preserved by all refusing all other directions and obeying only the commands of their chief. So the people of God can be one only by all ignoring and rejecting all else save the commands of their Ruler, the God of heaven and earth; and if all are led by him, they will be led in the same pathway of holiness and will constitute the one fold of the divine Shepherd. The Bible contains the commands of the Ruler. Can all understand its teachings alike? If not, why not? Are not its commands in all practical matters given in plain and simple terms? God desired man to understand and obey his commands. Did he so give them that men cannot understand them? My contention is, men do substantially understand the teachings of the Bible alike, and that the religious differences among the believers in the Bible do not arise from a failure to understand the teachings alike, but from the introduction of things into the faith and practice of the church not taught in the Bible.

When I say they understand it alike, I mean men who come to it to study it to learn its teachings. Of course, partisans who come to it to hunt reasons to sustain their party will find what they seek; but men earnest to know its teachings do understand it alike. A striking evidence of this is found in the agreement that the leading commentators of different parties show. When they come to say what this word, this clause, this sentence means, the harmony is remarkable. These commentators give their opinions why things are so, or what they think God will do outside of what the Bible says, and then there is divergence, but it is not about what the Bible teaches.

Take the subject of how and where the guidance of the Holy Spirit may be found, which, though not so apparent, is probably the most fundamental and far-reaching question of dissent in the religious world. The Bible teaches that the Holy Spirit revealed the things in the Bible; hence, the teachings of the Bible are the teachings of the Holy Spirit. A person obeying the Bible is guided by the Holy Spirit. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." (John 6: 63; see, also, John 14.) Again, Jesus says, "The word of God is the seed of the kingdom"-that is, the word is the seed in which the germinal principle of spiritual life dwells. To receive that principle of life, we must take into our hearts the word in which it dwells. On this point, that the Spirit of God works through the word, there is no dissent. The Bible teaches it, but many think he works outside of and apart from the word, and on this there is dissent, because the Bible does not teach it.

There is a dissent concerning the subject, action, and office of baptism. The Bible teaches: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." No one doubts the true believer is a fit subject for baptism. All teach it because the Bible teaches it. Some think the infant children of believers are entitled to it. None believe the Bible requires this. This causes dissent.

The word translated "baptize" has a distinct meaning, and all lexicographers define its meaning to be: "Immerse, dip, bury." There is no dissent from this. All candid Bible students say it was so practiced in primitive times. The Catholics and Episcopalians and many Presbyterians say it was so practiced, but claim the right of the church to change it. Mr. Wesley and Dr. Clarke, eminent Methodists, say immersion was practiced in primitive times. The Bible teaches this. All agree to it. These latter think affusion was also practiced as baptism. The Bible does not teach this, nor does it teach the church has a right to change the order given by God. The introduction of a practice on these grounds causes the dissension, not what the Bible teaches.

The Bible teaches that faith perfected by obedience saves. Some think faith separate from obedience saves. The introduction of this as an article of faith causes dissent. The Bible teaches, and for fourteen hundred years all divisions and parties in the churches, without a dissenting voice, so far as history records, held, that baptism is the act in which faith expresses itself and in which man is promised forgiveness of sins. None deny such a person has the promise of pardon. Some teach he is pardoned before faith is thus perfected, and this causes dissension. The Bible gives the names, order of worship, of church organization and work. Over these there is no dissent or contention, but some think that these may be changed and different ones introduced. This brings dissent.

These examples are sufficient to illustrate and enforce the truth that the dissensions and divisions among Christians do not arise over a misunderstanding of what the Bible teaches, but over things not taught in the Bible that are introduced into the faith and practice of the church. These cause divisions. The way to remove the strife is to drop everything not taught in the Bible, and to cling to and practice the things taught in it. In doing this, all walls of partition and division will be broken down, and the believers in Christ Jesus will flow together as kindred drops mingle in one stream, as they all flow downward, guided by the will of their Maker and Master.

"UNFULFILLED PROPHECY."

BY E. A. ELAM.

The following specimen of "unfulfilled prophecy" (?) may serve a purpose:

REVOLT IN AMERICA PREDICTED BY SPEAKER.

The greatest internal revolution in the history of the world is due to break out in the United States during the year of 1933, bringing the most awful carnage and destruction ever known, declared A. G. Ridgeway, of New York, in a lecture at the Jefferson Hotel, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Ridgeway based his prediction on Old Testament prophecy.

The only significant thing in this statement is, its author "bases his prediction on Old Testament prophecy." This makes it certain, for every vagary in religion which was ever started was "based on" the Scriptures.

This provokes a smile, because Bible-reading people do not believe that Mr. Ridgeway knows what the prophecy to which he refers means or when it will be fulfilled.

More ridiculous still was the prediction by a woman of California that the world would come to an end at midnight, February 6.

All that this is worth to us is to show the absurdity of such predictions; also that the predictions concerning "unfulfilled prophecy" made by brethren of the church of Christ are just as certain of fulfillment in the way and at the time predicted as the ones mentioned above. I am just as sure that these good brethren are right in their teaching on "unfulfilled prophecy" as I am that Mr. Ridgeway is right concerning his predicted "most awful carnage" in 1933, or that the prediction from California concerning the end of the world is right; and I am fully satisfied that these brethren know as much about the teaching of the Bible in regard to such things as any gentleman in New York City or any woman in California.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

If you are wanting a first-class hymn book, send us your order for "Choice Gospel Hymns." We publish only first-class music books, and books that are filled up with inspiring hymns. We are very much opposed to this jazz music that is destroying the spirituality of the churches.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

FOR PRICES ON SATISFACTORY

GOSPEL TENTS

THE ATLANTA MFG. COMPANY

West 0196 231 1-2 Stewart Ave. Atlanta, Ga.

SWEDENBORG'S WORKS

FREE TO THE MINISTRY FOR ONLY THE POSTAGE

"The True Christian Religion;" 1,098 pages; postage, 20 cts.
"The Arcana Celestia;" Vol. I., 800 pages; postage, 15 cts.
"Heaven, the World of Spirits, and Hell;" 350 pages; postage, 15 cts.
"The Apocalypse Revealed;" 1,100 pages; postage, 20 cts.
"Divine Love and Wisdom;" 277 pages; postage, 15 cts.
These books are offered only to ministers and students for the ministry who reside in the United States and Canada.
Any work may be ordered, or all five will be furnished by mail upon receipt of postage, which may be sent in stamps, check, draft, or money order. Address

REV. L. G. LANDENBERGER, 3741 Windsor Piace. St. Louis, M St. Louis, Mo.

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

DEEP-SEATED

Need attention NOW or may remain all winter. Use the old and time-tried guaranteed treatment that has given satisfaction to millions of women for over 16 years, and rid yourself of these homely spots. Ask for

Othine-Double Strength

We recommend Othine Complexion Soap for use with Othine

At all Druggists and Department Stores. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, men-tion this paper.

CALL FROM HARVEST, ALA.

We are a very small congregation of the church of Christ, only fifteen in number, and we have no place where we can meet on the first day of the week to worship, the nearest church being nine miles away, over a road almost impassable in bad weather. But we have a very modest little meetinghouse under construction. We have raised four hundred and ninety dollars among ourselves. In addition, two churches in Franklin County, Tenn., Old Salem and Huntland, sent us ten dollars each, and the Dallas Avenue Church, Huntsville, Ala., sent us twenty dollars, for which we feel very grateful. But we still lack about two hundred dollars, and being a small congregation, and all of us very poor in this world's goods, we are unable to proceed farther toward raising sufficient funds to finish the building without the help of the faithful elsewhere: so we are taking this method of asking the different congregations for aid. If congregations will be so kind as to consider our petition, I am sure they will send us a small donation.

MRS. SALLIE S. WILLIAMS.

NUNNERY-DOUTHITT DEBATE.

BY CECIL B. DOUTHITT.

On January 27-30, A. U. Nunnery (Baptist) and Boone L. Douthitt (Christian) met in debate at Skull Bone, near Bradford, Tenn.

Mr. Nunnery affirmed that Baptist churches are scriptural in origin. When asked how a church not so much as mentioned in the Bible could be scriptural in origin, Mr. Nunnery answered that the church of the New Testament was called the church of Christ until the sixteenth century, and ought to still be called the church of Christ, but it was necessary to call it the Baptist Church to distinguish it from the new religious bodies that sprang up. Brother Douthitt then asked if men could call the church by a name other than the one by which it ought to be called, without sinning. Mr. Nunnery replied that the new name was providentially given in the sixteenth century. He was then asked if Providence made a mistake in giving a name to the church by which it ought not to be called. Mr. Nunnery changed positions and said the name was in the Bible. He was pressed relentlessly to produce the passage of Scripture that so called the church or to retract his statement. Mr. Nunnery made the arguments on the establishment of the kingdom that are usually made by Baptist debaters. He first took the position that the church was organized when Jesus called the twelve apostles (Matt. 10), but changed positions three times during the two days he affirmed.

Brother Douthitt affirmed for two days that the church of Christ, of which he is a member, is scriptural in origin. He made four arguments, based upon Dan. 7: 13, 14; Zech. 1: 16; 6: 12, 13, 15; Isa. 28: 15, 16; Mark 9: 1; and finding the fulfillment on Pentecost.

Throughout the debate the weather was extremely cold and the roads bad, but the meetinghouse was not large enough to hold all the people that came. The brethren were well pleased with the debate and have arranged for Brother Douthitt to meet T. F. Lowery, Mr. Nunnery's moderator, at Skull Bone, in March.

MOORE-PAISLEY DEBATE.

BY R. A. CRAIG.

F. L. Paisley (Christian), of Louisville, Ky., met G. M. Moore (Missionary Baptist), of Carbondale, Ill., in an eight-nights' discussion, beginning on January 19. The usual propositions were discussed—viz.: The design of baptism, possibility of apostasy, and the operation of the Holy Spirit in conversion.

On the design of baptism, Brother Paisley advanced many arguments that were never even referred to by Mr. Moore. Mark 16: 16 was made out in check form by Brother Paisley—viz.: "Pay to baptized believers salvation, remission of sins, for my blood's sake." Signed: Christ Jesus. Moore tried to quibble around this argument by claiming that the check was a canceled check. Pressed to write Mark 16: 16 in check form, he saw where it would lead him to, and let it severely alone.

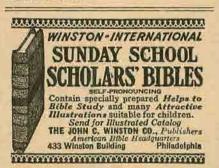

Moore attempted to diagram Acts 2: 38, and failed miserably. Brother Paisley's diagram of the sentence was submitted to Josephine Turk Baker, Evanston, Ill., and was correct. Miss Baker is editor of Correct English, and is nationally recognized as a teacher of English.

On the apostasy question, Brother Paisley presented many scriptures in support of his position, even displaying his arguments in chart form. These were never touched by Moore.

On the operation of the Holy Spirit, Moore, being in the affirmative, forsook the Missionary Baptist camp and walked right into the Primitive Baptist camp. Many of the Hardshells complained about his inconsistent course.

Brother Paisley pressed Moore to tell the audience who was the father of the spirit of the child, God or the devil. Moore could never sum up courage to answer this question. Then Brother Paisley showed that according to Baptist doctrine, the child is born deprayed and without hope. It was prophesied by Moore that this debate would forever kill the "Campbellites" in Benton, but the people he loves to call "Campbellites" are very much alive.

There is nothing in this world calculated to cause more evil than the doctrine of impossibility of apostasy. Teach a man that he can steal, kill, commit adultery, lie, and do any other sin in the catalogue of crime, and you remove the very foundation of Christianity and civilization. Brethren, let us arise and go with the sword of the Spirit and stamp out the teaching of Satan.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

Hill's act quickly—stop colds in 24 hours. Fever and headache disappear. Grippe is conquered in 3 days. Every winter it saves millions danger and discomfort. Don't take chances, don't delay an hour. Get the best help science knows.

All droggists WILL'S

Get Red Box ONION with portrait

666

is a prescription for

Colds, La Grippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book —merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

AND A BIBLE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. type is large and clear and is easily read. The size-5x73/4 inches-is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps: 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

In ordering, order Bible No. 102-Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 11/2 inches deep, 91/4 inches in diam-

Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from ter.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

OBITUARIES

CLARK

Mrs. Ruby Meadows Clark, wife of Travis S. Clark, of Haydenburg, Tenn., departed this life on June 30, 1924, at the age of thirty-six years and six months. She became a Christian in 1901, and was married to Brother Clark in 1903. Brother J. A. Craichead who performed the mark Craighead, who performed the marriage rite, also conducted the funeral services, giving words of comfort and hope to a great company of her friends and near kinsmen who came to see her for the last time on earth. It was said of her by those who knew her best that she was indeed a Chrisher best that she was indeed a Christian, and, like one spoken of in sacred story, she "was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did." So by these she yet lives long after her body has turned back to dust, and by these she is still calling her dear children, her husband, and other loved ones to the best life here and the life heaviiful over there. the life beautiful over there.

PAIR.

Mrs. Doyle F. Pair was born on January 9, 1902, in Glenrose, Texas. Before her marriage to Brother Doyle F. Pair, on June 6, 1920, she was Miss Lora Roland. She was baptized into Christ in April, 1917. On October 9, 1924, she departed this life, in Altus, Okla., where she had lived for the last four years. She lived a very consecrated life in Christ, and was one of the very best memlived a very consecrated life in Christ, and was one of the very best members of the church of Christ in Altus. Although she lived only a short life, just twenty-two years and nine months, it can be said truly of her that she "finished her course," because she "fought the good fight" and really "kept the faith." Therefore, her devoted husband, father, mother, four sisters, two brothers, and a multitude of friends "sorrow not, even as the rest, who have no hope." The writer spoke words of comfort to the loved ones and many friends.

S. E. TEMPLETON.

WILLIAMS.

Robert M. Williams (better known as "R. M." Williams) was born on July 27, 1842, and died, near Greenwood, Tenn., on June 8, 1924. He was born into the family of God in 1870. He was a member of the Bethel congregation for fifty-four years. Brother Williams was a quiet, modest, earnest, faithful servant of the Lord. He was a good, substantial citizen, a kind and helpful neighbor. He was interested in his fellow man, and did what he could to encourage and help them in bearing the burdens of life. He was a member of a large family, and nearly all of them preceded him to the life member of a large family, and nearly all of them preceded him to the life beyond. He has one sister living—Mrs. W. W. Gant, of Shelbyville, Tenn. Brother Williams made his home with Brother S. S. Dudney for nearly twenty years. Brother Dudney and family loved "Uncle Bob" and tenderly cared for him in his old age. The good that "Uncle Bob" did shall continue to live and influence the community in which he lived for many years to come. H. LEO BOLES.

BASS.

BASS.

Sarah Mabrey Bass was born on October 3, 1888, and her spirit departed this life on January 3, 1925. The end was not unexpected, for she had lingered in sickness about a year. Of her life the writer, who conducted funeral services, has heard nothing but compliments. She became a member of the church of Christ at Smyrna, Tenn., on September 19, 1905. At the time of her death she had been for several years a member of the church at Seminary, only a few miles from Smyrna. One of the members of the Seminary church of Christ remarked to the writer that Sister Bass had been a faithful Chris-Sister Bass had been a raturus of the complete tian. That statement, when made in sincerity, is a genuine compliment. The funeral was held in the Bass home, and the burial took place in the family burying ground immediately outside the yard that surrounds the residence. The only near relatives left are a brother, George C. Bass; a sister, Blanche Bass; and an aunt, Mrs. Maggie O. Avent. The sister is a member of the church; but the brother, it appears, seldom, if ever, enters a church house. The writer of this wishes sincerely that Mr. Bass may learn more about the will of God.

R. P. Cuff. Sister Bass had been a faithful Christian. That statement, when made in POTTER.

When death came and claimed Brother P. G. Potter, a useful man quit the walks of men. He was born on September 27, 1842, and died on March 16, 1924. He was a member of a family of fourteen children, only March 16, 1924. He was a member of a family of fourteen children, only one of whom survives. He was first married to Miss Melvina Webb on May 9, 1865, and to this union six children were born, and only one remains to bear the name—Brother Clyde Potter. Five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren survive. His first wife died on March 2, 1911. On July 8, 1913, he was married to Miss Sue Frugitt, of Woodbury, Tenn., who survives him. During the greater part of his early life Brother Potter was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church; but about the year 1881, by a careful study of the Bible, he was led to believe that he could be a Christian without being a Baptist, whereupon he left the Baptist Church and lived a faithful Christian the remainder of his life. Brother Potter was engaged in the mercantile business more than forty years, after which he lived on the farm. He was a good man and a very useful citizen. He was called upon to preach many funerals and to write deeds and wills, and assisted in bringing about peace and harmony upon to preach many funerals and to write deeds and wills, and assisted in bringing about peace and harmony among those who had difficulties in the community in which he lived. He was truly a great man in the church. He could preach a good sermon, lead songs, and pray a good prayer. He would take care of the preacher in his hospitable home during the protracted meetings, and before each service he would stand at the door of the meetinghouse and shake hands the meetinghouse and shake hands with the people as they went in. It was his custom, after breakfast, to read with his family a chapter in the Bible, which was a good introduction for the duties of the day. In meeting his friends, he would greet them with his friends, he would greet them with a pleasant smile upon his splendid face. It was always his heart's desire to talk about Christ and Christianity. The funeral services were conducted at his home congregation at Dibrell, in Warren County, Tenn., by J. Paul Slayden, Price Billingsley, and F. C. Sowell, in the presence of a large gathering of friends who loved him.

F. C. SOWELL.

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820

Gray's Dintment

sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Mashville Tenn.

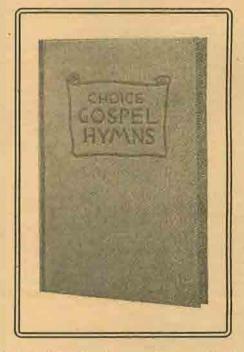

LEG SORE

ARE CURABLE. If you suffer from Leg Sores or Varicose Ulcers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous book that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my remarkable, patnless treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over thirty-five years' specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 979, 421 East Eleventh Street, Kansas City, Mo.

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding ____$0.40 Per copy, cloth binding ____ $0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

HOW THIS WOMAN GOT STRENGTH

Put Up 300 Quarts Fruit, 500 Glasses Jelly and Took Care of Four Children

Norwalk, Iowa .- "I have been meaning for some time to write and tell you how much good your medicine has done me. When I started to take it I was almost bed fast and would have been in bed all the time if I had had arty me to had had any one to care for my children. There was so much swelling and pain that I could hardly Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and found that so healing. I am not entirely well yet for I was in bad shape when I started your medicine, but I am so much better that I am not afraid to recommend it, and I think if I keep on taking it, it will cure me. I have done my work all alone this sumhave done my work all alone this summer, caring for four children, and I canned 300 quarts of fruit and made 500 glasses of jelly, so you see I must be better. I feel pretty good all the time and I am glad to tell others about the medicine."—Mrs. C. J. WENNERMARK, Box 141, Norwalk, Iowa.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. inkham's Vegetable Compound to rever them from female troubles. For eve them from female troubles. For bale by druggists everywhere.

MAYO'S SEEDS

Send us only 10c and we will mail you postpaid one packet each of the following:

Early Scarlet Turnip Radish Seed, White Spine Cucumber Seed, Mayo's Blood Turnip Beet Seed, Southern Giant Curled Mustard Seed, Black Seeded Simpson Lettuce Seed, Mayo's Special Mixture of Sweet Peas, with our illustrated catalog of Seeds for the South.

Or we will be glad to mail you our catalog and price list of Farm Seeds free on request, 45th year in Seed business.

U. R. MAYO

KNOXVILLE :: :: TENNESSEE

ALONE WITH GOD. BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

In Matt. 6: 6, Jesus teaches us to enter the closet and pray to the Father in secret. If more would do so, I feel sure fewer would refuse public work. We often hear such expressions sung as, "O for a closer walk with God!" and few really mean it. Put the question now to self: "Do I secretly pray to God often?" If not, why not?

Jesus often desired to get away from the crowd and to be alone with God. We are to follow his steps. If Jesus needed to so act, much more should we realize the need. We often weaken from pulling the loads of life, and our power soon fails; but when we go to God alone, he revives us, and soon we come back with renewed energy sufficient to perform the duties about us. We should never tire of this needed secret prayer, for the promise is that we shall be rewarded openly. If we desire power and strength to do God's will, we will rejoice that it is possible to get alone with God.

Moses, alone with God, was called to go and deliver the people and was given the power to work. Again, alone with God, he received the law to govern a people for God's own possession. Elijah, alone with God, got a vision of him that never had been seen before. Isaiah got a threefold vision when alone with God. He saw more of God, man, and self than ever before. Jacob said: "Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not." Yet, as he wrestled, not willing to stop till a blessing came, it was alone with God that he saw greater heights. John, on the isle of Patmos, saw that which no mortal had ever seen. Here he is away from the busy world, alone with God. O, how much we need to get the lesson, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" And if we are with God, we will not fear what man will do to us.

Elisha caught the lesson and taught it to the young man. Paul saw the real situation and instilled it into Timothy. Will we get the same kind of spirit and pass it on to others? No life has ever been really great that was not filled with this principle. To this all who know the teaching of our Lord are ready to say amen; but the thing we are failing in is to act like we actually believed the truth.

"Enter into thy closet, and . . . shut thy door," is the order from Him who knows it all. The one who takes a special delight in telling of his repeated praying is but exhibiting pharisaical pride. If a man is really in earnest and prayerful, no need for his blowing about it; surely the power of his life will speak clearly enough for all to get the IEAD COLDS Melt in spoon; inhale vapors; apply freely up nostrils.

Kidney and Bladder Trouble Can Now Be Quickly Stopped

I will send you absolutely free and postpaid, under plain wrapper and without the slightest obligation, my famous treatment.
It will prove that your suffering from getting up nights, back, groin, and leg aches, dizziness, burning sensation, or other dangerous symptoms due to kidney trouble, bladder disorder, or prostate engorgement, can be quickly stopped. Escape these aliments that often lead to Bright's Disease and Diabetes and kill 75,000 people yearly. If my treatment cures you, repay the favor by telling your friends; otherwise, the loss is mine.
Simply send your name and address to-day to prove entirely at my expense, and no cost to you, that you can feel ten years younger, enjoy life, and be safe from those dangerous diseases. Address

ROBERT NORMAN,
565 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

Beauty and Health

MRS. BEULAH WALL

Gastonia, N. C .- "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best tonic and nervine that I have ever taken and I would never hesitate to recommend it to any woman who is ailing or nervous. I was weak and ner-vous after my first baby came, would have dizzy spells and backaches. I also had functional disturbances but after I started taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription my system be-came regulated and then my pains and aches disappeared. I took sev-eral bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and was just as well and strong as a woman could wish to be." -Mrs. Beulah Wall, 103 S. Ran-Regain your health and improve your looks by obtaining this famous "Prescription" now, in tablets or liquid, from your druggist, or write Dr. Pierce, President Invalids Hotel in Pagents N. V. tel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free advice-

God shall "reward thee openly." Don't you try to do the rewarding.

In the darkest days of life there is a light to shine, if we will only connect with the current. Job evidently never disconnected. His wife, friends, and kindred seemed to think he had; but Job, helpless, hopeless, and hapless, as far as the worldly surroundings were seen, looked above it all and said: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." He knew to be with God alone was worth more than to be with the whole world without God. He must have prayed many a prayer in secret, and early and late kept his mind on the heavenly things. He is a lesson for us. Will we learn it for our good?

If the members of the body would do more secret praying with God alone, we would see more real Christianity practiced. One reason we do not like to get with God alone more often, we feel that our case is not pleasing to him; but we ought to know that is the greater reason for getting with him so as to have all fixed up. I am persuaded that many would go more to secret prayer if they wanted a closer walk with God. Really, brother, do you love to be alone with God? If not, ask yourself, why?

PROMISE YOURSELF

To be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind.

To make all your friends feel that there is something in them.

To talk health, happiness, and prosperity to every person you meet.

Pal-Pinto Crystals

Are produced by steaming away the wonderful health water of Mineral Wells, Texas. This is done in a great factory built for the specific purpose. They resemble snow.

When redissolved in water and drunk, give same results one gets by going to the wells to drink. Brother S. D. Lofton, of Post, Texas, is advertising for his company, and guarantees the crystals to give good resuits or cure Rheumatism, Constipation, Liver, Stomach, Kidney, and Bladder trou-bles, and Appendicitis. He highly recommends its use in case of Colds.

Having used a one-pound box, if you are not satisfied, your money will be refunded.

Your doctor and drug bill can be reduced 50 or 75 per cent by keeping and using these crystals when needed.

Thousands of satisfied customers in the United States and Canada keep a flow of orders going to the advertiser, and the business is permanent. Order to-day, or cut this out for future use. Write for booklet on subject and for terms to agents.

Price, $1.00 per pound, delivered, Send $1.00 bill or P. O. Money order.

Send all orders to S. D. LOFTON, Post, Texas.

FOR ITCH and other Skin Troubles, nent relief with "Wonder Ointment." Safe and sure. Absolutely guaranteed. Postpaid, $2.00 large size, $1.00 small size. Dealers Wanted Everywhere.

EVANS PHARMACY, Anderson, S. C.

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid_____$1.50

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

ADDRESS

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nausealess Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old and calomel herestofare recommended by style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

physicians.
One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteer by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

COMMERCE UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

From the Brethren

Port Arthur, Texas, February 4.— In March, 1922, a small but neat frame building was erected and a congregation started in the northeast part of the city, with a half dozen members. In a short time we had thirty or forty members, with one hundred and thirty-two in the Bible school and as many as ninety in attendance at the preaching services. Long ago we outgrew our little house, having to hold protracted meetings in the open air to take care of the crowds. We have now under construction a brick and tile and conconstruction a brick and tile and concrete building of ample size for the present. This will be the best church building owned by the church of Christ in Southeast Texas, except the one now being built in Houston. The contractors have promised us the building in sixty days, if the weather continues fair. This church will be known as the "De Queen Park church of Christ," and is located on the corner of De Queen Boulevard and Ninth ner of De Queen Boulevard and Ninth Street, in one block of a school of fourteen hundred. Visitors are in-vited to worship with us, Brother A. E. Findley preaches for us.—L. B. Badgett.

Franklin, Tenn., February 9.—I visited the church of Christ at Paris, Tenn., on the second Sunday in January, preaching for them morning and night. This congregation was started by Brother F. B. Srygley and a good sister some nine years ago in the courthouse. It numbers at present about fifty loyal members. Brother Chunn, of Henry Station, preaches for them every third Sunday. They had continued to meet in the courthouse until the first Sunday in November. The Missionary Baptist people house until the first Sunday in November. The Missionary Baptist people have lately built a new house, which cost them one hundred and forty thousand dollars. This caused the Methodists to decide to build a more costly one—one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. They knew that our brethren were contemplating building soon, so they proposed selling their meeting-house to us. This house is a brick structure, built about twenty-seven years ago at a cost of sixty thousand dollars, with a seating capacity of six hundred. Our brethren purchased this property for ten thousand dollars. They paid down four thousand, and have a large amount of the remainder promised. I am sure that this bargain could not be duplicated in the State. This building is located about two blocks from the Public Square, in a town of about seven thousand population. These brethren are worthy of any support that may be given them.—W. T. Beasley. were contemplating building soon, so February 7. Cleveland, Ohio, February 7.— Brother T. Q. Martin says that preachers and congregations should not get together and hold protracted meetings. He says they should let them go and then push them. Since them go and then push them. Since thinking the matter over, I guess he is about right. On Lord's day, Jan-uary 11, the church began its first meeting in their new house of wor-ship on the East Side of the city, with Brethren T. Q. Martin and W. S. Gibbons as the preachers, Brother Martin doing the preaching WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

GOSPEL TENTS

Twenty-four years' experience, no hire, no overhead expense, and a burn-ing desire to ald the spread of the gospel are reasons why you can save so much money by ordering your tent from

W. G. WHITE, Nashville, Tenn. 1220 McChesney Ave.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00.

Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)

A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Suelid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North, Phone, 1522-R.

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Saventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1865

H. S. PETTUS JOHN S. BURNETT B. E. RAINS

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market, Postpald, 300, 750; 500, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B. Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.56; 10,000 up, at $00. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price, Satisfaction guaranteed.

D. F. JAMISON, Summerville, S. C.

MAKE $40 TO $60 WEEKLY

also cash bouns and prizes—taking orders for our low priced, top quality, taifored-to-measure sufficient of the protected territory.

TAILORED and $28.50

TAILORED And TAILORED AN

FREE

WHOLESALE問題

Dept. 513, 83-89 Ellicott Street, BUFFALO :: :: N. Y.

and Brother Gibbons doing the baptizing. This meeting continued over three Lord's days, with eleven baptisms, four reclamations, and one by statement. All things considered, it was a good meeting. The brethren seemed to be encouraged and built up seemed to be encouraged and built up in the faith and enthused to move on in the work of the Lord. Brother Martin is not only a sound gospel preacher, but he possesses the rare faculty of being able to effectively rivet his arguments in the minds and hearts of his hearers. Brother C. O. Hannahs, of Wheeling, W. Va., led the song service, and did his part well. The brethren in East Cleveland need financial aid in paying out on their new house of worship, which has been so badly needed and for the lack of which the cause of Christ has been much hindered in this great city. Brethren, help them, and help them now. Send contributions to Brother A. L. Hendershot, 7815 New York Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.—A. A. Bunner. Bunner.

Richmond, Va., February 1.—As Richmond is the capital of the State and was once the capital of the Southern Confederacy, the brethren everywhere would like to know of the church here. About one hundred years ago Brother Alexander Campbell came here and preached the gospel, which resulted in leading about one hundred Baptists to forsake human names and man-made creeds and become Christians only. This was before instrumental music and manmade societies were put into the church. But since that time there have been many departures from the church. But since that time there have been many departures from the New Testament way. Picture shows and all other attractions have been put into the worship to attract the worldly and worldly-minded. About three years ago Brother R. T. Moore and wife came from Tampa, Fla., to make this their home. At that time I was living in Washington, and they wrote me to know if there were other members here, and urged that I come and help them to find others. In May, 1923, Brother T. B. Larimore and I drove to Richmond, and the next day (Sunday) a few members met for worship at the home of Brother Luck, just out of Richmond on the Williamsburg highway. This was the first meeting. The next Sunday I was with them, and we met in was the first meeting. The next Sunday I was with them, and we met in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. In September, 1923, I held a twenty-days' meeting in this auditorium, and at its close we had brought together about twenty members. Since then the faithful have met each Lord's day at the Y. W. C. A. They have grown little by little. Last Lord's day there were two new members who found their way to the worship. To-day we have about twenty-four members. Some come all the time, some occasionally, and some never come. Let us all work and pray that the memus all work and pray that the membership may be greatly increased during this year. Will the readers of this clip it and mail it to any members they may know living in or near Richmond?—W. S. Long.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, or gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

"BAYER ASPIRIN'' SAY and INSIST

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Headache

Pain Neuralgia

Toothache Lumbago

Neuritis Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets-Also bottles of 24 and 100-Druggists. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Saticylicacid

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Cabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per single copy.....$0.40 | Per 50, per copy..... 87
Per dozen, per copy .38 | Per 100, per copy..... 85

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy....$0.80 | Per 50, per copy..... 27 Per dozen, per copy 28 | Per 100, per copy... 25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

For the treatment of non-contagious chronic ailments by improved naturo-pathic methods. Neuritis, neurasthenia, high blood pressure. Excellent cli-mate. Pleasant surroundings. Good food and care. Moderate charges. Write us about your trouble. Pamphlets free.

No Home Treatment, Nothing to Sell but Service

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

NOBLE THOUGHTS.

BY W. C. MORTON.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." (Prov. 22: 1.)

This is one of the most familiar passages of the entire Bible, and although a part of the old law, to which we are no longer obligated, it is none the less true and applicable at the present time. Really, I can think of nothing greater than a good name. Having a good name implies integrity, honesty, sobriety, courage to meet the real problems of life bravely, and, above all, faith in God.

Riches are to be desired, but they can be a blessing only when used in the service of God. No man should be condemned for trying to accumulate a modest portion of the world's goods, but he should be encouraged to use them for the glory and honor of God, "from whom all blessings flow." The really poor man is the one who fails to appreciate the fact that all our material blessings come from God. The really selfish man is the one who fails to give credit to God for his accumulations. The highest form of material success of which I have any knowledge is the man who uses his means to advance the kingdom of God. It seems to be absolutely true that God prospers the man who thus uses his accumulations to serve God and man.

Solomon certainly "hit the nail on the head" when he uttered the above thought. A good name means capital that thieves cannot "break through and steal." Give a man a good name plus health and ability and a desire to do God's will, and you have a combination that has the approval of God and that will win the admiration of the sons of men. Admiration should not be the aim of man, but it is one of men's ways of expressing their approval of fearlessness and courage in "being silent where the Bible is silent and speaking where the Bible speaks." Only in this way can we prove to the world that the Bible is the only rule and guide of faith and practice.

There is no question but what too many of us are trying to gain favor instead of the approval of God. I had rather have peace with God than the smiles and favors of the kings, potentates, and monarchs of earth. The man who has a good name has everything. The man who has silver and gold without a good name is the poorest of the poor. Poverty is not always the absence of wealth and material comforts, but the greatest poverty is found in the man who does not love and worship God and is "without hope in the world." Real poverty is disobedience to God, refusing to take a stand on the precious promises, refusing to do what he says, and walking by sight rather than by faith.

But here is the real thought. You will observe that Solomon uses the word "chosen." If any person, there-fore, does not have a good name in the sight of God and man, it is the result of choice. All eternity hinges upon choice. We have two alternatives-to do as God would have us do, er not to do so. "He that is not for me is against me," God tells us. A good name in the sight of men does not always mean so much, although its value is worth its weight in gold; but the question that should concern us is, what does God think of us? We cannot help but be impressed with our unworthiness in the sight of God, still we should "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Striving earnestly, conscientiously, and prayerfully toward such a goal will give us a name that will outlast such material things as silver and gold or the "loving favor" of men.

UIETS COUGHS Safe and reliable for coughs, colds, croup, bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs and those sleep-disturbing night

For more than half a century

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

carefully made of the best cough-relieving medicines obtainable, has stopped coughs and colds of children and grown persons everywhere.

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE AND BIBLE ONE YEAR FOR $3.00

To our readers, we are now giving with each new yearly subscription or renewal to the Gospel Advocate one Bible— American Standard Edition, Number 101-for $3.00. This is a splendid Bible, clear type, silk cloth, red edges. This Bible is well adapted to use in Bible Schools.

The American Standard Bible

The American Standard Bible is the same old Bible that we have always used, but it gives the exact meaning of the inspired writers in the language of to-day, instead of in the language used three hundred years ago. It has been tried and tested now for seven years by all the Colleges, Theological Seminaries, and Bible Training Schools in the United States, and has become with them, as with the Editors of all Sunday-school periodicals, the authorized standard version of the Bible.

For many years it had been felt that a revision of the Bible was necessary, and as early as the year 1856 an effort was made in the British Parliament to have a Royal Commission appointed to make such a revision. This effort failed, but in 1870 the Convocation of Canterbury appointed a Commisssion of eminent Biblical scholars as an English Revision Committee, and this Committee requested the leading Biblical scholars from all denominations in the United States to cooperate with them as the American Revision Committee.

The American Revision Committee devoted thirty years to the work, and at the end of that period produced what is now recognized as the best version of the Scriptures ever published in the English language—THE AMERICAN STANDARD

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Volume LXVII. No. 9.

NASHVILLE, TENN., FEBRUARY 26, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
SCRIPTURE STUDIES	193
5UR CONTRIBUTORS. Missionaries of the Churches of Christ—"What Think Ye of Christ?" (No. 2)—Are They Sincere?—Are We Faithful Here?—Memory of David Lipscomb.	196
OUR MESSAGES	200
EDITORIAL Is the Church and the Kingdom the Same?—A Worthy Ambition—Word from Washington—Miracles Have Ceased.	202
QUERY DEPARTMENT	206
HOME READING	208
FROM THE BRETHREN	208
Waiting for the Boatman	209
OBITUARIES	210
"Raccoon" John Smith Anecdote	212 213
Taking Root Downward and Bearing Fruit Upward	214

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

By JAMES A. ALLEN

WE HAVE BEEN ENDEAVORING, in these columns, to emphasize the importance of all coming fairly and candidly to the Bible. It seems strange that the religious world should need such a thing continually pressed upon its attention. All acknowledge the Bible to be the only Book to which appeal may be made in religious matters. What is found in the Bible came from God; what is not found in the Bible did not come from God. Anything found in the Bible can be stated in the words of the Bible.

That what the general public erroneously regards as the Christian world is not what the Christian world was in the days of the apostles is obvious to every intelligent student. Things that were advocated by the apostles are unhesitatingly repudiated and eliminated to-day; and many things, which we cannot here enumerate, are now taught and practiced by large bodies of religious people that confessedly were not taught and practiced in apostolic times. In those days every Christian was regarded as a member of the church of Christ. There were no Christians outside of the church. All members of the church were called "saints," "an elect race," "a royal priesthood," "a holy nation," "a people for God's own possession." There were no "Roman" or "Greek Catholics," no "Protestants," no "Episcopalians," no "Presbyterians," no "Methodists" or "Baptists" among the primitive disciples. ought not to be, and, indeed, there cannot be, any such among Christians to-day. For to either add to, diminish from, or change what was taught by the apostles, and to wear any other name than the name that was worn by that body of people who "were called Christians first in Antioch," is to be something more or less than a member of that primitive, apostolic, and catholic church of Christ that was established in Jerusalem in the first century.

* * *

CONTROVERSY in the religious world originated in a departure from the primitive teaching of the apostles. It will continue as long as men refuse to abide "steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." It ought to continue under such circumstances. And, notwithstanding pretenses of innocence, those who thus depart from the word of God are responsible for it. Shame on the man who is too lovably sweet and too much addicted to that which is popular "to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints!" Continual agitation is what purifies the waters of the ocean. Investigation, examination, inculcates light and elicits truth. "Many are running to and fro;" and we cannot but regard this spirit of inquiry upon the part of the general public as an indication of a better day and as conducive to a better understanding of primitive Christianity.

The apostles of Jesus Christ predicted an apostasy from the primitive faith. "Let no man beguile you in any wise," said Paul; "for it will not be, except the falling away come first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, he that opposeth and exalteth himself against all that is called God or that is worshiped; so that he sitteth in the temple of God, setting himself forth as God." (2 Thess. 2: 3, 4.) The apostle explains that this "man of sin" and "son of perdition" is not a pagan, a Jew, or an infidel, but, indeed, a churchman, sitting "in the temple of God, setting himself forth as God" by presumptuously assuming to substitute laws of his own for the laws of God, and exalting himself among the nations as the "Vicar" of Christ and the "Supreme Pontiff" over all the earth. "But the Spirit saith expressly," writes Paul, "that in later times some shall fall away from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons," or doctrines concerning the spirits of dead men, "through the hypocrisy of men that speak lies, branded in their own conscience as with a hot iron; forbidding to marry," or advocating the pretended celibacy of the clergy, "and commanding to abstain from meats," or observing Lent, "which God created to be received with thanksgiving by them that believe and know the truth." (1 Tim. 4: 1-3.)

Indeed, the Spirit of God, through the apostle, informs us that "there arose false prophets also among the people, as among you also there shall be false teachers." These false teachers, introducing "destructive heresies" and establishing rival sects and denominations, would do their condemnable work "privily," as they are opposed to debates and are dead set against all investigation and examination. While loudly professing faith in Christ, they undermine his divinity, "denying even the Master that bought them," who came "to give his life a ransom for many" and to die that we might live, by introducing unauthorized things and making "void the word of God" by their tradition. The apostle further informs us that they shall bring "upon themselves swift destruction" and adds: "And many shall follow their lascivious doings; by reason of whom the way of the truth shall be evil spoken of. And in covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose sentence now from of old lingereth not, and their destruction slumbereth not." (2 Pet. 2: 1-3.) The great fountainhead of all this apostasy, human denominations, and infidelity still lives in Rome and still modestly claims dominion over angels and saints in heaven and over all the spirits in the wide domains of purgatory. He still impiously and blasphemously styles himself, and permits others to address him, as God on earth, as "His Holiness, Lord God the Pope," and still claims to hold the keys of heaven and hell and to be the only rightful political ruler of the world by virtue of being the ecclesiastical descendant of Saint Peter,

* * *

RECOGNIZING, therefore, that what is popularly regarded as the Christian world is very far apostatized from what the Christian world once was, the Gospel Advocate has endeavored, for more than sixty-seven years, to exert all its energies and influence to persuade the religious world to return to the primitive teaching and practice of apostolic times. This is the ground the Advocate occupies, the position upon which it stands. We frankly declare that we have no dogmas of our own or of others to substitute for those already before the public. We only aim at substituting the teaching of the apostles of Jesus Christ in the place of the teaching of uninspired and fallible men. We do not advocate Methodism, Presbyterianism, Baptistism, or Campbellism, but Bibleism. We regard the Bible as a full and complete revelation from God to man, and that, in the Bible, "men spoke from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1: 21.) And as these men, who spoke "as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2: 4), were guided "into all the truth" (John 16: 13), we frankly confess that we do not believe that anything is true into which they were not guided by "the Spirit of truth." Therefore, anything in the religious world that was not preached and practiced by the apostles is false and is incompetent to save.

Gospel truth, as proclaimed by inspired men in New Testament times, "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." (Rom. 1: 16.) "Jesus therefore said to those Jews that had believed him, If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, 32.) The Advocate wishes to persuade the people to abandon "the commandments of men" and to accept the teaching of the apostles of Jesus Christ. We wish to point sinners to what the apostles command them to do to be saved.

Why should preachers to-day refuse to preach what inspired men preached? We do not wish to adversely criticize nor to say unkindly things; but, at the same time, it is well known that none of the country's popular clergymen are willing to tell sinners what the Holy Spirit, through the apostles, commands them to do to be saved. We could begin with the clergymen of Nashville, popular "pastors," who are members of "the Ministers' Alliance." None of them will permit passages of Scripture telling sinners what to do to be saved to be read, without comment, from their pulpits. What should the people think of that? What are we to do about it? Sit supinely by, asleep on the walls of Zion, and ignore it, while the people go down to hell, because weak-kneed and soft-soap brethren object to anything that would incur the displeasure or injure the reputation of these aforesaid "pastors?" It is too late in its history for the Advocate to show that kind of a streak. The Advocate thinks today, as it has thought for the last sixty-seven years, that it is better to "obey God rather than men."

0 0 0

WE URGE ALL CHRISTIANS to carry the primitive gespel, "the power of God unto salvation," to the people. Animated by faith and fired by zeal, simply "in the name of the Lord Jesus" and as members of the church of Christ, let them "publicly, and from house to house," testify "both to Jews and to Greeks repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." Amazing results would follow. The whole world would become Christian, or fires of persecution, as in days of yore, would be lighted in a vain effort to stop it. At present the church is too sound asleep to arouse antagonism enough to cause the world to pay it much attention. They think they cannot do anything unless they "organize" something, start a "drive" for a huge fund, and stifle personal consecration and individual activity in the creation of a human corporation that becomes a political plum for those on the hunt for easy jobs with big salaries. The world does not prepare stakes nor light fires for that kind of Christianity. Personal piety and individual effort are what the world hates and fears.

The Gospel Advocate exists upon the issue of pleading for a return to the teaching and practice of the apostolic age. We wish to persuade the people to abandon and abolish human denominations and to return to the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. They can so do only by repudiating human creeds and dogmas and coming back to the Bible and to the original institution of primitive Christianity. Then there will be but one church and one brotherhood, of which every penitent, immersed believer is a member, and "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" will grow and thrive in a universal concurrence in observing the ancient order of things. The glorious spectacle of a united people would be held before the eyes of the world, and carnalism, with its division and strife, would cease to be; the prayer of the Messiah, "that they may all be one," would come to a full fruition; the voice of vain jangling, sectarianism, and infidelity would no longer be heard; and the world would "know that thou didst send me, and lovedst them, even as thou lovedst me."

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

We are at work now on a new and enlarged edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachman. It will be ready by March 15.

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75. Mail us your order at once. once.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

We have recently printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order for a copy of this splendid book.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Reformation. Price, $1.50.

If you are wanting a first-class hymn book, send us your order for "Choice Gospel Hymns." We publish only first-class music books, and books that are filled up with inspiring hymns. We are very much opposed to that jazz music that is destroying the spirituality of the churches.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

MISSIONARIES OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Who are they? They are brethren—just plain, simple Christians, such as we read about in the New Testament. They take no one name found in the Scriptures to the exclusion of others, nor yet any religious name adopted by men which would set them off as a denomination. They teach no peculiar doctrine which would erect a barrier between them and other Christians or mark them as a sect. Any name found in the New Testament, which was applied to Christians, they accept. They want no poculiar denominational mark, either in name or doctrine, which would erect a barrier between them and other Christians. They wear no religious titles, such as "Doctor," "Reverend," "Right Reverend," etc., preferring to be just common disciples along with all other disciples.

They teach the Old and New Testaments as the inspired word of God. As some one has so well put it, they believe the New Testament was concealed in the Old, and that the Old Testament is revealed in the New. In order to understand the New Testament, one must study the Old; but the teachings of the Old Testament, save as they have been developed in the New, do not apply to us at the present time. We are not under Moses, but under Christ. In the main, the object of the four Gospels is to produce faith in Jesus Christ, the Son of God. The purpose of this faith is that we may have life through his name. (John 20: 80, 31.) Acts of the Apostles, generally speaking, teaches sinners how to become Christians. To this end, a number of examples are recorded. In Acts 2, Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, preached a full gospel for the first time. Many believed it and in great agony cried out: "Brethren, what shall we do?" "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." "They then that received his word were baptized: and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." (See Acts 2: 37-41.) Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and a whole-hearted obedience, including baptism, made them Christians then, and the same gospel believed and obeyed will make Christians now. Nothing else will. Paul calls "baptism" a burial. (Rom. 6: 3, 4; Col. 2: 12.) It is safe to practice the same thing for baptism that the apostles practiced. Nothing else is safe, however old the custom or universal the practice. (See the example given in Acts 8: 36-39.) In so important a matter as the eternal destiny of the soul, we should take no risks. From Romans to Jude are letters to Christians, either collectively as churches or individually. These teachings apply to all Christians of subsequent time till the Lord's return. Revelation is a symbolic forecast of the future, beginning from the time of the vision and ending with the second coming. The chief thought running through the whole is that there is a stupendous conflict between the good and the evil, and that the good must prevail in the end. Though imperfect, this they believe to be a brief outline of the Holy Scriptures.

They believe in the personal indwelling of the Holy Spirit in every regenerated heart, in the personal return of our Lord to this earth, in the resurrection of the dead at his coming, and in the eternal salvation of all the faithful in Christ; that we are saved by grace through faith, and not of works of righteousness which man can do. They believe in prayer for the divine healing of the body in cooperation with human effort, just as prayer for the healing of the soul in cooperation with human effort. God works with us, and we work with God. They believe in the special providence of God to lead and care for his own. (See Matt. 6: 33.) They believe in the observance of the Lord's Supper on "the first day of the week"—not once a month, once a quarter, or once a year. (See Acts 20: 7.) "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink the cup," said our Lord. Once a week cannot possibly be too often; less would not be often enough. It is always best to be on the safe side.

They also believe in a life of holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord, and that all should aim to reach the perfect ideal just as nearly as possible, but that absolute perfection is not to be obtained while in this sinful body.

In the worshiping assembly of the church, they do not believe in the use of instruments of music. First, because, though used by the Jews in the temple service, no mention is made of their ever being used in any of the apostolic churches. Together with incense, the burning of lights, and the offerings of sacrifices, the instruments were also left out of the Christian assemblies. There must have been good reason for this. In the second place, when we praise God in song, we must speak to one another, must teach and admonish one another. (Eph. 5: 18, 19; Col. All obstacles in the way of this should be 3: 16.) avoided. Singing is speaking the same as preaching or praying, and as in the case of preaching or praying, so in regard to singing-all that hinders the hearing of what is sung should be avoided. Instruments are not heard when people are preaching or praying, and for the same reason should not be heard when people are singing.

Why in Japan? They came to Japan, not to start a new sect, nor to oppose the gospel in so far as it is preached by others, nor yet to antagonize the work of others where that measures up to the plain teachings of the New Testament, but for the sole purpose of making known the unsearchable riches of Christ to the millions of Japan who have not yet believed to the saving of the soul. They believe the Lord's command to the apostles applies to all subsequent Christians. He says: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever 1 commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." "Teach them," the taught, "whatsoever I commanded you;" and the very first thing he commanded them was to "go." Hence, all who themselves have been taught must in turn go and teach, and say also to those they teach, "Go." This brings the message down to us. In keeping with this, the apostle Paul said to Timothy: "And the things which thou hast heard from me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." (2 Tim. 2: 2.)

How did they come? They came to Japan as the first foreign missionaries went out from the church at Antioch in Syria. (See Acts 13, 14.) They believe every congregation of Christians, every church, is in and of itself a missionary society, and that every member of it is a mis-They believe that it is God's will that the churches themselves do the work which is usually intrusted to mission boards. They are in direct fellowship with certain churches of Christ in the United States and Canada. Their fellowship with these churches is not uniform, but, as in the case of Paul, it fluctuates considerably. Sometimes it is necessary to resort to "tentmaking" to supply that which lacks. In one way this may seem like a hardship, but it proves to be a blessing in another. At any rate, it is in keeping with scriptural example. Their relation to each other is simply that of brethren. No one has the preëminence over the rest. Each follows the particular line of work suited to his tastes and according to the various gifts which God supplies. In the main, they are united on the one thing of making their chief aim evangelistic work. They advise with one another, but pass no resolutions, nor inflict any rules to bind, save the blessed tie that binds their hearts in Christian love. The churches they establish in Japan are likewise free and independent churches. The only authority over them is Jesus Christ and his word.

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?" No. 2. BY J. W. BUSH, M.D.

Forty-five years ago, when the negative critics, who falsely style themselves "higher critics," had begun their destructive work, some one in England predicted that within thirty years the storm would gather around one sacred person. How this has come true! Satan's work of undermining the authority of the Bible, a pernicious work that is still going on with leaps and bounds, was but the preliminary to an attack on the Person of Christ.

To-day, as never before, the virgin birth, the deity of Christ, and his glorious Person are being denied and belittled in the camp of so-called "Christendom." All this is but the fulfillment of divine prophecy. The Scriptures say that in the last days men will depart from the faith (1 Tim. 4: 1), deny the faith (1 Tim. 5: 8), cast off their first faith (1 Tim. 5: 12), be seduced from the faith (1 Tim. 6: 10—margin), overthrow the faith of others (2 Tim. 2: 18), and be reprobate concerning the faith (2 Tim. 3: 8). Now, in fact, the Lord's virgin birth and his deity are being openly denied in many sectarian churches, including many of the latest sect, the "progressive" Disciples Church.

I could give you many examples, but I select just one, which is a fair example of the most moderate among the negative critics. "Dr." David Smith has written: "It will matter little on the day of judgment what theory we held about our Lord's virgin birth, his divinity, or his resurrection; but it will matter infinitely how much of his grace and charity dwelt in our hearts and shone in our lives." But the "Doctor," and all such thinkers as he, will discover, too late, that grace is inseparable from truth, and one dies with the other; that when they have once allowed themselves to deny the Scriptures, and are deliberately resolved to do so, something snaps in the brain, the main sinew of grace is fused, and the fortress of truth crumbles in the soul.

"What think ye of Christ?" What about the virgin birth? Was it a fact or fiction? Is he divine? That is the question. It is for us who "deny not his name" (Rev. 3: 8), whose desire is to exalt his Lordship and divinity, ever to remind ourselves of the blessed One and his glory.

At this time I desire to present some plain scriptural statements concerning Mary as positive proofs of the virgin birth of our Lord.

1. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary was pronounced by the angel Gabriel as the most blessed among women. "And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women." (Luke 1: 28.)

2. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary found favor with God. And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God." (Verse 30.)

3. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary was a handmaid of the Lord. "And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her." (Verse 38.) "For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." (Verse 48.)

4. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary was greeted by Elizabeth with joy. "And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?" (Verses 42, 43.)

5. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary rejoiced in her exaltation. "And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior." (Verses 46, 47.)

6. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary believed in God's promises concerning the coming of the Seed. "As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed forever." (Verse 55.)

7. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary pondered in her heart the marvelous happenings that surrounded the birth of the infant Jesus. "But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart." (Luke 2: 19.)

8. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary was blessed by Simeon. "And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against." (Verse 34.)

9. The Scriptures clearly teach the virgin birth, because Mary stood by the cross. "Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleopas, and Mary Magdalene." (John 19: 25.) Simeon had told Mary: "Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also. (Luke 2: 35.) The dying Lamb of God, turning his loving, wearied face toward Mary, said: "Woman, behold thy son!" He then said unto John: "Behold thy mother!" (John 19: 26, 27.)

10. The Scripture's clearly teach the virgin birth, because in the last scriptural vision of Mary she is seen in an upper room with the disciples in prayer. "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren." (Acts 1: 14.)

May God help us to study more carefully and prayerfully the written word, that he may thereby reveal unto us more of the matchless beauty of the wonderful Person of our Lord and Savior.

We honor and adore thee, loving, blessed Lord; and while the true manner of thy birth is denied and thou art rejected by the "reverend critics" who are "wise above that which is written," we thy humble disciples would know more of thyself and keep closer to thy feet, because we believe with all our hearts that thou wast conceived by the Holy Spirit, born of the virgin Mary, and that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Amen.

ARE THEY SINCERE?

The readers of the Gospel Advocate will recall what was said in the issue of December 18 about the Shelbyville debate. A brief editorial was copied from the Tennessee Christian and replied to by me in that issue. In that editorial the editor states that much good was done in the debate at Shelbyville on the instrumental-music question and that J. J. Walker was "rendering a great and lasting service" by affirming the proposition, "Instrumental music in church worship is scriptural." The editor intimated that Walker was amply able to bring the truth on this proposition to the public and that he was anxious to do so. In reply to that, I called attention to the fact that the editor of the Tennessee Christian was either ignorant of the facts in the case or he was insincere in making that statement. In the January issue of the Tennessee Christian the editor tries to extricate himself and the advocates of instrumental music from this dilemma.

The editor states that he does not have to take hold of either horn of the dilemma—that is, he is neither ignorant of the facts nor insincere. I think I can help the editor to free himself from one horn of the dilemma. I do not think he is ignorant of the facts; I rather think he is very familiar with them. All of the leaders of the advocates of instrumental music are acquainted with the facts. So I am ready to deny that they are ignorant of these facts. They know them, and admit that they do know the facts. So the Tennessee Christian is not gored by that horn of the dilemma. But was he sincere when he stated that they were anxious to debate the music question again, with J. J. Walker as their leader? In the January issue of the Tennessee Christian the editor says: "Now we want to assure Brother Boles and his brethren that we are perfectly willing to debate the question anywhere, any time. We prefer to remain in Tennessee with it, so far as we are concerned, for we have enough to do here, but we will not draw the line anywhere. We are ready, Brother Boles, and willing. As Walker has issued his challenge, why not accept it?" I am wondering if the editor is sincere in the above statement. Let us try him and see.

The challenge to which he refers was made by Brother Walker in the Shelbyville debate to go to Columbia, Tenn. Was Walker sincere in making the challenge? Let us see. By an agreement with the Commission on Unity, headed by John B. Cowden, J. J. Walker, and others, and F. B. Srygley, S. H. Hall, and H. Leo Boles, it was agreed that we would carry the discussion on the instrumental-music question only to those towns or communities where there was already an open division and where both sides or churches invited the discussion. The point was made that we would not force a discussion upon any community or church, but would solicit invitations from different churches. Now, I suppose the editor knew the agreement. The church at Columbia, because of local conditions, did not think it wise to have the debate there. Hence, the church there had not invited it, but, on the contrary, had expressed itself as not wanting it. Some two years ago John B. Cowden, knowing the agreement that we had, and also knowing that the church at Columbia had refused to invite the debate there, published a challenge to F. B. Srygley. Brother Srygley could not accept the challenge, and Brother Cowden knew that Brother Srygley could not accept it unless he was invited. Now, Brother Walker knew this, and he knew that Brother Hall could not, according to agreement and common courtesy toward the church at Columbia, accept his challenge. But, with a thorough knowledge of these facts, publicly, at Shelbyville, Tenn., to an audience that did not know the condition, he boastfully issued a challenge which he knew could not be accepted. Walker knew that the challenge would not be accepted. He knew that John B. Cowden's chal-Walker knew that the challenge would lenge to Brother F. B. Srygley had not been accepted, and he knew why it was not accepted. So he felt safe in boastfully issuing the challenge before an audience not knowing the facts. Could he be sincere in offering the challenge? Can the editor of the Tennessee Christian be sincere in trying to make it appear that Walker has a challenge out to Brother Hall which has not been accepted? It is very mild language for me to use in saying that the advocates of instrumental music are not sincere. How bold, seemingly, are the advocates of instrumental music!

The editor confesses that they have refused to debate the instrumental-music question, and very lamely apologizes in the following language: "Those who favor the use of instrumental music in worship have tried to avoid public discussion of the question, not because they were afraid of it, but because they were anxious, lest the breach among our brethren should be widened rather than closed by that method. They have never been afraid to discuss the question." The editor very truthfully says they "have tried to avoid public discussion of the question." They have been very successful in avoiding public discussion of the question and are to be commended for their success along this line. We have never had a discussion with them on the music question that we did not have to force them into it. The editor further says: "Our conservative brethren have taken this reticence to mean that we are afraid to discuss it." Yes, we have so understood you, and still believe that you are afraid to discuss it, although you state that you "are perfectly willing to debate the question anywhere, any time." Now, that is a very bold and broad statement—that you are willing "to debate the question anywhere, any time," and that you are "ready" to debate it. I would like to call for a rising vote on all who believe that you "are willing and ready to debate the question anywhere, any time." Let all who believe the above statement "stand up."

As has been published in the Gospel Advocate, Selma, Ala., has invited the debate; and Clarksville, Tenn., has had an invitation extended for about two years, which has not been accepted by Walker. Rockwood and Livingston, Tenn., have been added to the list, and a score of others are anxious to hear the debate. Is the editor of the Tennessee Christian sincere in saying that they are ready and willing to go anywhere, any time, for the debate? I have in my possession copies of letters which have been written to J. J. Walker, urging him to come and debate the music question with S. H. Hall. Walker has not even answered them. Will the editor of the Tennessee Christian publish these letters if I will furnish him a copy of them? It is not enough, in the face of these facts, for the Tennessee Christian to affirm that it is sincere in being willing to debate the music question, "anywhere, any time." All the proof is on the other side. I reaffirm that the editor of the Tennessee Christian is either ignorant of the facts or he is insincere when he states that the advocates of instrumental music are ready and willing to debate the question anywhere, any time. He cannot be, he is not, ignorant of the facts; he is insincere in his statement.

The present arrangement for a debate between Brother G. C. Brewer and Brother J. J. Walker on the music question at Columbia, Tenn., in no way affects the contention made above, as Brother Brewer lives in Texas and was not bound by any agreement.

WRITINGS OF J. C. McQUIDDY.

We are pleased to advise readers of the Gospel' Advocate that we have in course of preparation a new book, consisting of a choice selection of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, who was for over forty years an editorial writer on the Advocate, as well as its business manager. The new volume will be entitled "The Profitable Word," and has been carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb.

For many years the writings of Brother McQuiddy have attracted widespread attention. He was an earnest and diligent student of the word of God and consecrated his great powers to the task of learning its holy teaching. Until ill health made it unwise for him to continue the strain of constant public speaking, he was an unusually successful evangelist, and was long regarded by competent critics as one of the most gifted and talented preachers in the church of Christ; and his clear, strong, and able editorials in the Gospel Advocate were widely read with interest and attention and have accomplished untold good in the cause of primitive Christianity. No man can read the writings of J. C. McQuiddy without being impressed with his profound loyalty to God's word and his intimate acquaintance with its teaching. The collection made by Brother Lipscomb contains what Brother McQuiddy's friends consider as some of the best of his editorial work.

"The Profitable Word" will be ready for distribution in the near future. It will be nicely bound in cloth and will contain about two hundred pages. The price of the book will be $1.50. We shall be glad to have our readers send in their orders at once and be sure of receiving a copy.

ARE WE FAITHFUL HERE?

BY S. H. HALL.

As you remember, under the heading, "Are We Faithful Here?" we studied the subject of unity with the idea of making a personal application of the subject to our own hearts. The point was made that we, each one of us who claims to be a member of the church of Christ, should examine our own hearts and lives and see if, indeed, we are "giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" and following "after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another." This is what we are taught to do, and to fail here is to prove unfaithful.

But in this article we wish to study the subject of unity as taught in the New Testament and applied to the church as a whole. There would be a great inconsistency on our Lord's part if he had so admonished us to be interested in unity and had established a system that forbids it. I will ask you to observe the following facts:

First, our Lord established but one church that he calls his church. Read it in Matt. 16: 18. "Upon this rock I will build my church" is enough to show its unity. Unless you can prove that Christ is divided and all out of harmony with himself, it is needless to contend that this church of which he speaks did not have a unity like in kind to that our Lord himself possessed. Do you remember the words of Paul to divided Corinth? Speaking to the four divisions there-viz., Paulites, Cephasites, Apollosites, and Christians-he raised the question; "Is Christ divided?" (1 Cor. 1: 10-13.) What does this question mean other than that such divisions cannot be sustained, unless a like division we can show to be in Christ? Thank God that one of the four groups mentioned was right. But those who were for Paul, Cephas, and Apollos were wrong in pulling off little groups to "boost" their respective men. And let it be here understood that these three preachers were not responsible for this state of affairs. Paul, Cephas, and Apollos taught identically the same thing to aliens on how to be saved and to Christians on work and worship, but their admirers (some of them) were "party makers" and were declared to be carnal.

This church that our Lord established is called "the body of Christ." As such, it is declared over and over again that there is one body. (See Rom. 12: 4, 5; 1 Cor. 12: 12, 13; Eph. 1: 22, 23; 2: 16; 4: 1-6; Col. 1: 18, 24.) If these scriptures you have not read, be certain to turn to them now and read them. And to put the matter beyond room for a quibble, Paul declares there is "but one body." (1 Cor. 12: 20.) If you can say it stronger than that, let us have it.

It is also spoken of as a "sheepfold," and as such it is stated by our Lord that there is "one fold, and one shepherd." (See John 10: 16.)

The Lord's Supper declares this unity. "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not a communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not a communion of the body of Christ? seeing that we, who are many, are one bread, one body: for we all partake of the one bread." (1 Cor. 10: 16, 17.) Just how close communion, as taught by some of the human organizations that now exist, can be sustained, goes beyond me. If these human organizations did not teach that God has children who are not members of their organization, it would not be so bad. But they claim that others are God's children, are on their way to heaven, and will be saved, but say they have no right to the table they set and call "the Lord's table." It is well to state that it is a very great sin to call anything "the Lord's table" when any faithful child of God on earth is excluded by men from that table. The oneness of the body of Christ is seen in the fact that we all-every child God has have the right to eat of the "one bread." The church of Christ believes in "close communion," all right; but the only close communion we know about is to get each member of the church to get as close to our Lord and the cross as he can when he or she partakes of the bread and the fruit of the vine.

Baptism teaches this unity. "For by [that is, directed by] one Spirit were we all baptized into one body [or church.]" Who can believe that God's Spirit would direct me into the Mormon Church, my wife into the Baptist Church, my son into the Methodist Church, and our daughter-in-law into something else? Can the Spirit do such a thing as this? We are commanded to "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit." If you do not mind, you will be found teaching that the Holy Spirit has no "unity;" and, indeed, this is the case if it leads us to join everything that comes along. Never can the divided state of the religious world be defended! Does not Prov. 6: 19 say that God hates those who sow discord among the brethren? If the Holy Spirit has led a man's wife into one church, and the same Holy Spirit led the man into a different church, which churches forbid their eating the Lord's Supper together, then the Holy Spirit has caused division, and God would have to hate the Holy Spirit. Is this not enough to make you shudder at the thought of accusing the Holy Spirit of leading people into all the different churches now existing? Somebody is wrong. Then, let all heed the admonition of Jeremiah: "Thus saith Jehovah, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way; and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." (Jer. 6: 16.)

The "seed of the kingdom" also teaches the same great lesson on unity. Christ says: "The seed is the word of God." (Luke 8: 11.) God's eternal law that governs seed is that each produce "after its kind." Read it in Gen. 1: 11, 12. Wheat will not produce pumpkins, nor will the oat seed produce watermelons. They must produce after their kind. On this law rests the stability of the vegetable kingdom. Exactly the same is true in the kingdom of God's Son. His word is the seed and produces after its kind. When this word is sown into the hearts of men and women, and is gladly received and obeyed, it produces after its kind; hence, it makes them all members of the same church or body. Who could believe, if Paul were here and should conduct a series of gospel meetings in one part of this city, and the apostle Peter also were here conducting one in another part, and each should convert one hundred souls to Christ and put them to work as a local church, that the church Paul established would be a Mormon Church and the one Peter established something else? You cannot believe this; for you know these two men would preach exactly as they did while here on earth, and, hence, preach nothing but the pure word of God, and that this makes us, as individuals, Christians only and members of the church or body of Christ.

But enough for this time. Let us preach only what the inspired apostles taught, and live every day as their teaching directs us, then no part of the responsibility of the divided state of the religious world can be placed at our feet. This means that we will not be out starting churches on our own theories, doctrines, and commandments. It also means that we will not be out working up a party around ourselves because of their personal preference for us, nor because of some personal grudge we have against some soul or personal difficulty or difference we have had with others. Teach Christian union one hundred per cent as taught in the Bible, and go all the way in your practice. It is not enough to condemn denominationalism and sectarianism and at the same time allow parties to be formed around us, which is more devilish and damnable than teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, and in this way divide the church of the living God.

MEMORY OF DAVID LIPSCOMB.

(From "The Babbler," the College paper.)

In just respect to the memory of one so noble, Founder's Day, January 21, was very appropriately observed at David Lipscomb College. The approach of the day cast upon student body and faculty a deep reverence for the memory of one who has been very fittingly called the mightiest man in dealing with God's truth since the days of the apostles. With this solemn atmosphere and respect settled upon all, the student body assembled in Harding Hall at chapel period. Tributes were paid to the memory of David Lipscomb by some who knew him personally—H. Leo Boles, S. H. Hall, A. G. Freed, and E. A. Elam. Often as such tributes were being paid would students glance at a painting of the noble David Lipscomb which hangs in the chapel hall.

Professor Boles, in announcing the event of the anniversary of the birth of David Lipscomb, very fittingly told how appropriate it was to give emphasis to the work of such a man and how in the mad rush of affairs the present generation may rush on and forget him. Born, as David Lipscomb was, January 21, 1831, and possessed with a desire to follow the Bible, and it alone, he was active in teaching when Mr. Boles entered the Nashville Bible School (now David Lipscomb College) in 1901. For seven years, he said, he sat at the feet of this man of God and learned daily valuable lessons from the Bible. "Then," Professor Boles continued, "all other studies were as satellites revolving about the one center, the Bible. Now it is not so. Teachers have not purposely deviated from God's way, but in the onward progress of education standards have been set up and the world to-day does not look upon the Bible as the center." He assured all, however, that in David Lipscomb College there has been and still is an effort to put the greater emphasis upon the word of God.

Professor Boles stated that he had secured a speaker for Founder's Day who was his classmate and a student under David Lipscomb. With this he introduced S. H. Hall, an alumnus of the Nashville Bible School of 1906, and now located with the Russell Street church of Christ, in Nashville.

Mr. Hall spoke of the influence which caused him to fall under the hand of David Lipscomb—how certain papers had been wrangling over certain religious matters and he had become partisan to these matters. He entered school and D. Lipscomb's class, not to learn from him, but to find fault with him; but, in studying this man, Mr. Hall found him to be the very essence of honesty, a lover of justice and kindness, and a man who would die before misrepresenting any one. He kindly and gently called attention to tendencies not for the best, and thus his students grew to love and respect him.

The speaker described David Lipscomb as a man who leved the truth so deeply that it was impossible for him to tell a lie, and said that David Lipscomb would tell the truth, and the whole truth, at all times.

E. A. Elam told of the deceased follower of Christ's work in and about Nashville and of the congregations he and his colaborer, E. G. Sewell, established. "It has been truthfully said," said Brother Elam, "that no city in the world, in ratio to its population, has as many congregations claiming to be Christians only as has Nashville. These came from a willingness on the part of those who went and preached to any who would hear."

From his intimate acquaintance with David Lipscomb, Brother Elam was able to say that a firm foundation on the Rock of Truth made that man what he was. Such characters as Lipscomb, Huffman, Fanning, Sewell, Fall, and Harding, he said, must not be forgotten, and the present generation should be thankful for the influence of such men.

Though not reared under the influence of David Lipscomb, A. G. Freed spoke of his deep interest in Lipscomb's writings. Since boyhood he has read the Gospel Advocate, and from his writings he had judged him to be harsh and severe; yet, when meeting him, he found him to be the opposite of harsh and critical. Brother Freed commended David Lipscomb's writings, as no uninspired writings of all time has surpassed him in his realm.

President Boles concluded the exercises of the morning by telling how Brother Lipscomb died. Almost breathlessly the student body listened to his account. For some time before his death Brother Lipscomb had been feeble and paralyzed. He would come to classroom and listen to Professor Boles teach until he became paralyzed to the extent that he could not express himself. The time came when the end seemed near. For three days he lingered, then on a Sunday night between ten and eleven o'clock Mr. Boles said to Mrs. Lipscomb: "The end is near." At the request of Mrs. Lipscomb those present knelt in prayer, but she did not arise when the others did. She saw that his spirit had gone, and breathed very softly the prayer: "Lord Jesus, receive his spirit." Thus quietly passed away the man who has left to the present generation the works of his hands.

ROBBING GOD.

BY J. G. ALLEN.

In Mal. 3: 8 the question is asked: "Will a man rob God?" I read this question to-day, and then I asked myself this question: What would a man have to do to-day to be guilty of robbing God! The dictionary says if a man takes something from another and appropriates it to his own use, he is a robber; and as this definition is fully in harmony with the Bible, I accept it at its face value. God said the Jews robbed him in "tithes and offerings." How did they do this? God's law required certain things to be done, and every time they failed they were guilty of robbing God. In Lev. 19: 13 there is a law recorded that forbids man's robbing man. When one man performed a service for another, as soon as the service was completed, whatever pay was promised must not be held back, even until the next day. Why? Because the price belonged to the man that had rendered the service. The prophecies of the Old Testament contain many instances of where men robbed God, and it had grown to such an extent that when Jesus was on earth he declared that they had made God's house "a den of thieves." So it is highly important that we stay clear of such a crime as robbing God. I am sure that many are just as guilty of robbing God as the Jews were, with less excuse than they had for sinning against God. If God gives me five talents to use in his service, and I use only four or less, am I not guilty of robbing God? Of course I am, and will be condemned as much as the man that received one and failed to use it. Then, again, the Lord ordained the church to do the work that saves men; and if I neglect the church and give my time elsewhere, am I not robbing God? And, again, God has ordained "that they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel;" and when we refuse to give support for gospel preaching, we place ourselves where we belongthat is, among robbers. May God help us to do our duty along all church lines.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your orders for Bibles and good books at once. The second edition of "Travels in Bible Lands," by Andy T. Ritchie, is selling fast. It is pronounced by all who have read it as being the best book ever written on travels in the Holy Land. It is illustrated and contains 335 pages. Cloth bound. Price, $1.50, postpaid, to any address. Send for your copy to-day.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

Leslie G. Thomas preached twice at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Lytton Alley preached for the Eighth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night.

Samuel H. Austin, Munfordville, Ky., February 8: "I preached for the brethren at Three Forks, in Warren County, Ky., to-day."

Clayton L. James preached at the First Church of Christ, Columbia, Tenn., last Lord's day. There were two splendid audiences.

- C. M. Pullias preached at Murfreesboro, Tenn., last Lord's day, morning and night. Brother Pullias preached at Woodbury in the afternoon.
- P. Hovious spoke for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's-day morning, and his son, J. R. Hovious, spoke at the night service.
- G. L. Cullum preached at Lischey Avenue, this city, on Sunday morning and at Joe Johnston Avenue at night. There were four baptisms at the latter place.

Every scriptural congregation will take care of the poor, sick, and afflicted in its community, under the personal care and oversight of its own bishops and deacons.

Allen Phy, Brownsville, Tenn., February 18: "James A. Salmons, a splendid song leader, is available for meetings this summer and fall. Address him at Franklin, Ky., Route 6."

D. L. Pullias, son of C. M. Pullias, is representing the Gospel Advocate in Murfreesboro, Tenn., and vicinity. We will appreciate any courtesy the brethren may extend to Brother Pullias.

Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C., February 16: "Since J. C. Mosley arrived, we have been enjoying some very fine preaching. Our meeting is two weeks old. Ten have become obedient to the word."

- J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala., February 16: "Yesterday was a great day with us. Three were added to the congregation—two by letter and one restored. I secured a parole for a young man in the Kilby prison and brought him to the church house, where he made his confession."
- T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., February 16: "We had capacity audiences yesterday, with five restorations, three for membership, and one confession. In our Bible classes we had one hundred and nineteen. On the first Sunday in October there were only thirty-three in the class work."
- W. S. Moody began a meeting at Joseph Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Moody is a splendid preacher and Joseph Avenue is a wide-awake congregation, and we expect much good to be done. Services every night at half past seven o'clock. T. B. Simpkins is leading the song service. All are invited. Take First Street cars.
- F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, February 18: "I have closed six years' labor with the church here. One man was baptized last night at prayer meeting. There are no jars, parties, or factions in the spiritual family. After a two-months' vacation I shall take up the work again, May 1. My first meeting will be in Oklahoma City, beginning on March 1,"

Any organization separate and apart from a local congregation is an unscriptural institution. If brethrem would exert the enthusiasm and spend the time, energy, and money to build up the congregation that they do to build up such organizations, practically the entire neighborhood would be converted and become members of the congregation.

J. C. Mosley, Union, S. C., February 19: "About thirteen or fourteen confessions to date and others expected. I received one hundred tracts from H. M. Phillips, Nashville, Tenn., for which I am thankful, and will put them in the hands of untaught people. Cemeteries here are white with tombstones marking the graves of thousands who passed away without hearing the true gospel."

- W. Claude Hall, Henderson, Tenn., February 20: "We read the Gospel Advocate down here with a great deal of appreciation. The issue of February 19 is an especially interesting one. We read J. G. Allen's article, 'A Double-minded Man,' with considerable interest. The change that Hall L. Calhoun has made is one that is highly appreciated by everybody who knows anything of him. It has given a new impetus to the school here, and greater things are expected in the future."
- J. W. Grant, Largo, Fla., February 20, writes: "The Yohannan fund, amounting to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, was started to him on February 17. Under favorable conditions we shall hardly hear of his receiving it before May 20. I have receipted by card or letter all the donors, except a liberal sister at Friendship, Tenn., who failed to sign her name to her note. She will know by this that I got her donation. Many thanks to all who sent to his need. I am sure he will appreciate it."
- S. H. Biggerstaff, Shawnee, Okla., February 17: "On the second Lord's day in this month I was in Chattanooga, Tenn., and preached in the afternoon for the Cowart Street congregation and at the evening hour for the East Chattanooga congregation. Last Lord's day I preached at the evening service at Antlers, Okla. On Monday I preached for the little band of disciples at Caney, Okla. I am to return to that place and assist them in a meeting, beginning next Lord's day."
- W. R. Rucker, of Lecoma, Tenn., who is a student in the Vaughn School of Music, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., will be ready, if the Lord wills, to teach classes in vocal music or to lead the singing in protracted meetings, beginning in the early spring. Brother Rucker is a member of the church of Christ and has decided to devote his life to sacred-song work. T. C. King, of Lawrenceburg, says: "I have known W. R. Rucker for some time, and believe him worthy of any confidence that may be placed in him." We urge the churches to use Brother Rucker.
- G. C. Brewer (Christian), of Sherman, Texas, and J. J. Walker (transgressive Christian), of Nashville, Tenn., are announced to begin a four-days' debate on instrumental music, at Columbia, Tenn., Wednesday, March 4. The debate will be held in the courthouse, and arrangements have been made to take care of all visiting preachers in the various homes. Brethren everywhere and the public at large are invited. H. Leo Boles, president of David Lipscomb College, will serve as moderator for Brother Brewer.
- C. D. Otey, Pilot, Va., February 17: "I first read the Gospel Advocate more than thirty years ago. I know all of our loyal papers, and I am satisfied that the Advocate gives the deepest, clearest teaching on the Bible to be found in any of them, and in a spirit more like that of our Master. Brother Allen's article in the Advocate of February 12, I think, contains more truth, forcibly presented and crowded into a very small space, than anything that I have read. Why is that such teaching as this will not cause the world to see the truth?"
- J. D. Mathews, Bristow, Okla., February 19: "I preached at Maysville, Okla., on Saturday night before the second Lord's day in this month and on Sunday and Sunday night. From there I was called to Bristow to the bedside of my son, who is in the Bristow General Hospital, from a bad burn received from an explosion of a gas engine in a gas refinery here, where he was employed as engineer. He has been in the hospital twenty days, but is recovering rapidly. I preached for the brethren here last Lord's day, and heard Rue Porter at night."
- Lord's day, and heard Rue Porter at night."

 "A Sister in Christ," Oakville, Tenn., February 10:

 "Please find inclosed two dollars, my renewal. I would be lonely without the Gospel Advocate, especially since I am deprived of going to church. My place of worshiping is on Harbert Avenue, in Memphis, and my brother, who has been taking me in his car to church, has moved to Memphis. Another lady and I are all at Oakville who are members of the church. We hope to get some one located out here that will help us get the work started. Oakville is only four miles from the car line, and not too far out to drive into town for work each day, if we can find some one who loves to work in the vineyard of the Lord, and would make his home out here and still work every day in Memphis. Brother Hudson has preached twice for us at the Tuberculosis Hospital, about one-half mile from this little place. We would gladly sell an acre or more to some member of the church who will come and help us start the work, or he could rent a little place here. Houses rent here for ten or fifteen dollars, and land can be bought for five hundred dollars per acre on Pigeon Roost Road and on the Frisco Railroad."

L. A. Gotta advises that H. M. Phillips will begin a meeting at Lischey Avenue, this city, Sunday, March 15. All are invited.

Mrs. M. E. Colsher, Fitzgerald, Ga., February 21: "We enjoy the Gospel Advocate, and enjoy your writings so much, as well as all the others."

Her many friends will be pleased to learn that Mrs. Ida Chandler Noble has recovered sufficiently from her recent illness to resume her classes in Art at David Lipscomb College.

- B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., February 16, sends us three renewals and one new subscriber, and says: "More will follow. One restoration at West End Avenue on the second Sunday in this month."
- J. Porter Sanders, Jackson, Miss., a few weeks ago sent six subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, and now he sends five more. Brother Sanders knows that one of the best ways to spread the truth and build up the congregation is to get the people to reading the Advocate.
- J. H. McBroom, Atlanta, Ga., February 17: "The three congregations here are doing nicely. We have had union meetings the last three Sunday evenings, and great meetings they were. The speeches by the brethren were full of encouragement and love and zeal for the work of the Lord here. These were love feasts."
- W. S. Long, Sr., Union City, Tenn., February 17: "I have been doing all I could for the extension of the circulation of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, sending in renewals and new subscribers from time to time all these years. It is the best paper by far published by the brotherhood, and I shall continue my effort in its behalf as long as life lasts with me in the flesh."
- Mrs. J. E. Caldwell, Spring Creek, Tenn., February 16: "I am asking your help to locate a colored brother who would go to a community where the gospel has never been preached and hold a meeting sometime this year. I have talked with some of the members of the church of Christ at Independence (near Juno) in regard to reaching the colored people with the gospel, and it seems that the best way is to help send a preacher to them."

We wish to kindly advise writers that we are editing the Gospel Advocate for the readers, not for the writers. They will please not send contributed articles with a demand that they appear "in next week's issue." We have to reserve the right to edit our own paper. We are very glad to receive articles for publication; but if those sending them are not willing for us to use our own judgment as to their use, they will kindly refrain from sending them.

Will J. Cullum, Rocky River, Tenn., February 16: "At this writing I am here at a lumber camp, preaching each evening in the school building to large and attentive audiences. There are a few disciples here who will meet regularly for Bible study and worship. Fate Hunter preached at Livingston and Wirmingham yesterday. J. D. Jones is now living at Monterey, and will work there and at Crossville and Algood. He is a laborer that is worthy of his hire, and we are already seeing good results from his labors."

A brother said: "He is not my brother in Adam, for I have come out of Adam." "And it came to pass, that after three days he called together those that were the chief of the Jews: and when they were come together, he said unto them, I, brethren, though I had done nothing against the people, or the customs of our fathers, yet was delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans." (Acts 28: 17.) According to that, Paul had not come out of Judaism, as he still called the Jews "brethren."

Robert E. Wright, Bradentown, Fla., February 18: "R. E. L. Taylor closed his meeting with the church at this place on Wednesday night. Six were baptized, four came from the Baptists to be Christians only, several repented of careless living as Christians, and several others took membership with the congregation. Twenty-three were added to the church here from all sources. A. C. Traylor led the singing throughout the meeting, and did it well. This is one of the best meetings the church at this place has had in several years, the brethren say."

H. F. Oliver, Austin, Texas, February 16: "All the members of the Hyde Park church of Christ at the Oliver Tabernacle are rejoicing over the results of our efforts to build ourselves up in the faith and to teach and exhort the unsaved to obey the Lord and be saved. At our midweek meeting last Thursday night a married woman confessed Christ and desired to be baptized. At our morning service yesterday another confessed the Lord. These were baptized in the afternoon. Last night the Lord's table was spread, and they ate the Lord's Supper for the first time. We are determined to push the work in this part of the capital city of the Lone Star State."

of the capital city of the Lone Star State."

Price Billingsley, Plant City, Fla., February 22: "With the closing of the Plant City engagement to-day, I arrive at the end of my Florida meetings. Here for two months I have preached the gospel with all my might, reaching therewith an increasing and considerable public. In passing, let me say a word upon the astonishing advances which the State is now making along varied industrial lines, though such material considerations are secondary. In the estimation of those in position to judge, as to health and climate and varied natural advantages, the entire commonwealth has no equal. Babson, the noted statistician, confidently predicts that within the next few years Florida will be teeming with more than fifteen million population. In quest of both health and wealth there come from almost every section of the Union in rapidly growing numbers many thousands to buy homes and settle. I am interested to discover that in this influx from other States are many members of the body of Christ. So that to-day down here at a hundred places there are scattered Christians needing to be gathered together and set to work after the New Testament order. What man, sensing these labors and opportunities in the gospel, would not entertain high hopes of our future in this section? This year much better meetings are being held than last year. But for the present, at least, I turn northward, and on the first Lord's day in March, the Lord willing, I will begin a meeting at Jackson, Tenn. After that I shall go to Texas."

NELSON

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so fulf, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

Bound in Strong Cloth. Regular Price, $5.00

Our Price, $4.00

WE WILL SEND FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY

SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

If you will send us eight new yearly subscribers to the Gospel Advocate at the regular price of $2.00 each, we will send you this Concordance FREE.

SEND YOUR ORDER AT ONCE

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remilitances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as wall as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from ear-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter, Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

IS THE CHURCH AND THE KINGDOM THE SAME? BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

Brother E. M. Borden has been saying some fine things in the Herald of Truth on the kingdom of Christ. I think he shows conclusively that Dan. 2: 44 had its fulfillment on the first Pentecost after the death of Christ, For some reason, I know not why, there appeared under the heading, "West Virginia Siftings," by Ira C. Moore, the following:

If "church" and "kingdom" are synonymous terms, If "church" and "kingdom" are synonymous terms, then to say the church was set up or established or had its beginning on the first Pentecost day following the resurrection is the same as to say the same thing of the kingdom. And if Brother R. H. Boll's position is that the church and kingdom are the same—identical—and if he says the church had its beginning on said Petencost day, then he believes also that the kingdom was set up, established became a reality, on that day and occasion. If then he believes also that the kingdom was set up, established, became a reality, on that day and occasion. If Brother J. N. Armstrong believes, as stated in the Gospel Advocate of December 18, that Brother Boll thinks the church and kingdom are identical, and that the kingdom was set up, inaugurated, and began as a reality on the first Pentecost following the resurrection, when he (Boll) says the church had its beginning, then he is deceived regarding Brother Boll's position. Brother Boll does not believe the terms "church" and "kingdom" are synonymous terms, but that the kingdom is one thing and the church another. This he makes unmistakably plain in a private letter to me. He is right in saying the terms are not synonymous—not coextensive in their meaning and application; but he is undoubtedly in error in saying that the kingdom did not come into existence, was not set up application; but he is undoubtedly in error in saying that the kingdom did not come into existence, was not set up or established, on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ. The term "kingdom" but signifies the kind of government Christ Jesus is at the head of. That he has the government upon his shoulders now will not be denied. But what kind of a government is it? Is it a republic? No. Is it a democracy? No. Is it a limited monarchy? No. It is a monarchy in which the Chief Officer is King, Lawgiver, and Executor, and his government is therefore a kingdom. In the very nature of the case, the government of Christ had to be a reality before any one could become obedient to him. His government was announced for all nations on the Pentecost mentioned, and it began at once to subdue the nations—to gather subjects—to call them out of the kingdom of darkness into the new kingdom, the kingdom of light, and these subjects are the church. church.

If the above is a sample of Brother Moore's "Siftings." I must say I would prefer my part of the truth without his "sifting." If Brother Borden thinks that the position set out in this extract strengthens his contention with these brethren on the question of the kingdom, then he and I differ very much. It will be remembered that Brother Ira C. Moore is one of the editors of the Christian Leader and that he made an effort to reply to the false position held by these brethren, the Adventists and Russellites, and, as I believe, very much weakened his article by agreeing with them that the kingdom and the church are different. Brother Moore said in his effort to reply to Brother Boll: "Boll believes the church and the kingdom are different. In this he is eminently correct." Brother Moore then came out in Brother Borden's paper advocating the same error; and it went through, so far as I know, unchallenged. Brother Moore may be able to handle this Adventist-Russellite theory with his hobby, but it will certainly be a handicap to him.

Note that the brother begins with this statement: "If 'church' and 'kingdom' are synonymous terms, then to say the church was set up or established or had its beginning on the Pentecost day following the resurrection is the same as to say the same thing of the kingdom." That sentence may have great wisdom in it; but if it has, I have not the ability to detect it. There is nothing before this and nothing that follows it, so far as I am able to see, that brings out one particle of wisdom in the sentence or that shows that it has any bearing whatever on the subject. No one, so far as I know, ever believed that "church" and "kingdom" are synonymous terms.
"Church" means a called-out body, and "kingdom" means a rule or government. While this is true of the two words, or "terms," as Brother Moore calls them, yet I believe that both these "terms" are applied to the same thing in the New Testament. This is not the first time I have told Brother Moore this, and yet he goes right on with the same statement, as though he had not been corrected. It always strengthens me in a position when a man cannot answer me without misrepresenting me. I am not concerned as to whether Brother Armstrong is deceived about Brother Boll's position or not, because I do not attach much importance to any man's position on the subject of the kingdom of Christ that cannot be understood by two men who claim to know as much about Boll's position as these men do. What I am concerned with just now is that Brother Moore is deceived about the position of the Lord on the question of the kingdom. Jesus said: "And I also say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it. I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16: 18, 19.) If Brother Moore did not have a hobby to ride, it appears to me that he could see that Jesus uses the word "church" in verse 18 and the word "kingdom" in verse 19, and there is no indication that the subject changes. Christ evidently is talking about the same institution in both verses. But Brother Moore says the "terms" are not synonymous. Certainly they are not, but they are both applied to the same thing. Brother Moore seems to think that two words with different meanings cannot be applied to the same thing. The Israelites were called a "nation," a "kingdom," and a "congregation." These three words are not synonymous, and yet they are all applied to the same thing. Brother Moore seems to think that because "kingdom" and "church" are different words with different meanings, they cannot apply to the same thing. If there are as many different institutions as there are different names applied to the family of God, then Christ did not establish one institution on the day of Pentecost, nor two, as Brother Moore contends, but he must have set up fifteen or twenty. "Family," "house," "household," and "church" are not synonymous terms any more than "church" and "kingdom" are, and yet the body of Christ is called all these things. It is not necessary for Brother Moore to go to the Greek to find a difference in the word "kingdom" and the word "church," for I will admit that there is as much difference between the two words in the Greek as there is in the English; but this fact does not prove that Christ built two things, one of which he calls his kingdom and the other the church. The two words are applied to the same thing. I believe there was one thing promised to David, with three different terms used to describe it, which was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. "And thy house and thy kingdom shall be made sure forever before thee: thy throne shall be established forever." (2 Sam. 7: 16.) Does this mean that three different things were to be established because these three words are not synonymous? Brother Moore can prove this just as well and with the same plausibility that he can prove that the church and the kingdom are different because the words are not synonymous. "House" is a very different word from "kingdom" or "throne," just as the word "throne" is different from "kingdom," but all three of these words describe the same thing. But Brother Moore may say the word "house" in the passage does refer to the same thing that the word "kingdom" does in that passage, but that the word "house" is not applied to the same thing to which the word "church" is applied. "But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how men ought to behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3: 15.) Is the "house of God" different from "church" and "kingdom?"

Brother Moore says: "The term 'kingdom' but signifies the kind of government Christ Jesus is head of." Well, what of it? Is not Christ Jesus the head of the church? "And gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body." (Eph. 1: 22, 23.) Is it possible that there is one head and two spiritual bodies? Brother Moore says the word "kingdom" signifies that Jesus "has the government upon his shoulders." Well, what of it? Is not the government of the church upon his shoulders? If not, upon whose shoulders is it? But the brother says the kingdom is a monarchy, and that Christ is the Chief Officer, King, Lawgiver, etc. Well, what of it? Is not Christ the Chief Officer in his church, and the only Lawgiver! If not, who is chief? "He is the head of the body, the church: . . . that in all things he might have the preëminence." (Col. 1: 18.)

Brother Moore closes his "siftings" on this subject with this statement: "To call them out of the kingdom of darkness into the new kingdom, the kingdom of light, and these subjects are the church." I would say these subjects are members of the body, which is the church. If the church and kingdom are different, and Peter only had the keys of the kingdom, what right did he have to open the church? If one can be saved by being in the church, and the kingdom is different from the church, why was it necessary for Christ to establish a kingdom? Why did Jesus build two things on the same day for the same purpose, when either one of them would have been sufficient?

If Brother Borden needs any help in his fight, I think he had better call on some one who has no hobby on the kingdom question. Will Brother Borden allow Brother Moore's weak contention to go unchallenged in his paper, or has it been corrected and overlooked by me? If he has not already done so, I think Brother Borden had better "sift" this again.

If people were as deeply interested in doing good as they are in enjoying pleasure, it would not be difficult for them to find a way to do good.

A WORTHY AMBITION.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Having considered the subject of "ambition" from the unholy and unworthy side, we will now view it from the opposite angle. Men and women should be stimulated with the desire to succeed in everything that pertains to the glory and honor of God and the welfare of humanity. This involves

THE PROPER IDEALS OF LIFE.

Any ideal of life that prompts men to action based upon selfish interests cannot be a true and worthy one. Such an ideal or conception of life, with its tremendous responsibilities, is diametrically opposed to the very genius and spirit of Christianity. One of the fundamental laws of Christian living is thus expressed: "Not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others." (Phil. 2: 4.) Another equally fundamental requirement states: "For ye, brethren, were called for freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh, but through love be servants one to another." - (Gal. 5: 13.)

A strict conformity to these divine admonitions will eliminate from the heart every feeling of ambition based upon selfish interests and create within us the purest and holiest desires. We will be moved by an ambition to spend and be spent in the service of God and man. In this our Master has set us an example; for he "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Matt. 20: 28.) This was said as a rebuke to a wrong conception of man's relation to his fellow man, and we should profit by the rebuke given to others.

How to BECOME TRULY GREAT.

It is a worthy ambition to become great men and women in the true sense, and none should be censured or criticized for maintaining such an ideal. The danger lies in the conception as to what constitutes true greatness and the method of attaining it. Fortunately, Jesus Christ has told us in plain language not only in what true greatness consists, but how it is to be attained. "But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones exercise authority over them. Not so shall it be among you: but whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister [or servant]; and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant." (Matt. 20: 25-27.)

Thus our Lord has marked out the highway to true greatness through humble service, and he who serves most may be counted greatest in the kingdom. But it is a greatness that does not generate a feeling of self-importance, or cause one to be puffed up with a worldly pride.

WHAT A WORTHY AMBITION CAN ACCOMPLISH.

Men become worldly great, heroes in the estimation of worldly-minded people, not by some so-called lucky turn of the wheel of fortune, but by an indomitable energy born of a determination to succeed. Now, the same amount of energy and the same determination to succeed in the Christian life, to reach the true goal of life, will be rewarded with genuine success.

Hear the apostle Paul: "Brethren, I count not myself yet to have laid hold: but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.) Let us bear in mind that Paul's being an inspired man did not help him to live the Christian life any more than if he had not been inspired. His inspiration was not given to him for that purpose, and he had to buffet his body and bring it into subjection, lest he become a castaway. (See 1 Cor. 9: 27.) Hence, if he attained the true goal of life, so can all who try as did he. That he did attain it is most certain, for he said: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.)

THE KEY TO PAUL'S SUCCESS.

I believe that Paul's great oneness of purpose and his wonderful energy and undaunted determination were the chief factors from the human side that brought him safely to the goal. He seems to have been completely dominated with one great purpose in life—viz., to reach the land of the blest. Everything was made subservient to the accomplishment of that one purpose.

Paul was not what some term a "quitter," but kept pressing on to the attainment of his ideal. The sentiment embodied in the following lines applied to Christian endeavor seems appropriate:

Full many a race is lost

Ere ever a step is run,
And many a coward falls

Ere ever his work's begun.
Think big, and your deeds will grow;
Think small, and you'll fall behind;
Think that you can, and you will—
It's all in the state of mind.

If you think you're outclassed, you are.
You've got to think high to rise;
You've got to be sure of yourself before
You can ever win a prize.
Life's battles don't always go
To a stronger or faster man;
But, soon or late, the man who wins
Is the fellow who thinks he can.

The same thought has been very finely expressed thus:

"Our successes come in 'cans,'
Our failures come in 'can'ts.'"

We cannot estimate the far-reaching influence of an idea incarnate. One has said: "Put an idea on two feet, and bid it travel across the continent, and it will revolutionize it." Of course, such has never been true of all ideas formed and cherished by man, but it has been true in numbers of cases. The ideals of Christianity embodied in the lives of the early Christians revolutionized the world to a very large extent. The same ideals cherished and lived up to will revolutionize any life, transforming the vilest characters into holy saints.

Human character is developed by imitation or the assimilation of the characteristics of another, and not because of the entertaining of certain ethical or philosophical doctrines propagated by some dreamer. Certain ideas embodied in a life become to us a model, and we either consciously or unconsciously imitate that model. The only true model or concrete example for the formation of the right character is found in the Lord Jesus Christ, whose steps we are urged to follow. (See 1 Pet. 2: 21.) Shall we have the ambition to heed the admonition?

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Thursday of this week (February 12) being the one hundred and sixteenth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, it is fitting that I should write something about the memorial erected here in his honor. The nation waited long before erecting a memorial to Washington, and almost as long after Lincoln's death to build a suitable memorial to him; but the grandeur of the Washington Monument and the beauty of the Lincoln Memorial atone for the delay in erecting these tributes to two of America's most wonderful men-two of the peerless four-Washington, Lincoln, Lee, and Wilson.

The Lincoln Memorial is on a direct line with the Washington Monument and the Capitol, the monument being between the other two, one and a half miles from the Capitol and half that distance from the memorial. Two structures could scarcely be more dissimilar than these tributes to Washington and Lincoln: the Washington Monument, a tall, stately shaft rising sheer from the top of the slight elevation on which it stands and piercing the heavens with its summit; the Memorial to Lincoln, a little temple of exquisite beauty set on the highest point in Potomac Park, approached by a succession of steps and terraces. Situated on the bank of the Potomac, surrounded on all sides by great open spaces, the white marble building is plainly seen from many points in the city.

It was modeled after the Greek Parthenon and consists of a lofty hall surrounded by a colonnade, or porch, sixteen feet wide. The entire building, including the colonnade is about two hundred feet in width, one hundred and thirty-two feet in depth, and eighty feet high. So it is not really "a little temple," except as compared with some of the spacious structures here. The great colonnade is supported by thirty-six immense columns of Colorado marble, seven feet five inches in diameter at the base and forty-four feet high-the largest of their kind in the world. The square capstones that surmount these fluted columns are the largest single pieces of marble ever quarried. These thirty-six columns represent the thirtysix States that comprised the Union at the time of Lincoln's death, and on the wall above the colonnade are graven in the marble the names of the forty-eight States comprising the Union now. The open entrance on the eastern side—the only entrance to the building—is supported by two columns of similar size.

The central hall is sixty feet wide, seventy feet long, and sixty feet high. The ceiling is supported by a framework of bronze beams, with rectangular openings in which are set slabs of Alabama marble one inch thick, and these admit a softened, mellow light from the glass skylight that covers the entire building.

Against the west wall of this great room is the marble statue of Lincoln, by Daniel Chester French. It is of colossal size, but so well proportioned that it is impossible, looking at it, to realize how large it is. The figure is seated in a curule chair—an oblong pedestal, ten feet high, seventeen feet from the front to the back, and nineteen feet wide, including the drapery over the solid, low back of the seat. The curule chair, among the ancient Romans, was occupied only by those of highest rank. The figure itself is nineteen feet from the sole of the feet to the crown of the head. A tall man can stand under the leg, just back of the knee, without stooping; but the statue seems, at a casual glance, not greatly larger than life-size.

The figure faces the entrance, the eyes seemingly looking out through the front columns toward the Washington Monument and the Capitol. The face is impressive, showing the characteristics of the man—full of high resolve, patience, determination, sympathy, tenderness, and, above all, the sadness always so apparent in Lincoln's pictured face—especially apparent in the eyes—"the strangest, saddest eyes that mortal ever saw."

On each side of the central hall a row of fluted Ionic columns, fifty feet in height, partially screen from the central room a smaller hall, on the south wall of which is inscribed Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, and above it are three symbolic paintings. The central group depicts the Angel of Mercy striking from the hands and feet of slaves the shackles that bound them, and the groups to the right and left represent Civilization and Progress.

On the north wall, within the line of columns, Lincoln's second inaugural address is inscribed. The central painting above represents Unity, symbolized by the Angel of Peace joining the hands of the North and the South, and the groups to the left and right represent Fraternity and Charity.

The room contains nothing except the statue, and there is only that one room in the building. Henry Bacon, the architect who designed the Memorial, said: "From the beginning of my study, I believed this memorial of Abraham Lincoln should be composed of four features—a statue of the man, a memorial of his Gettysburg speech, a memorial of his second inaugural address, and a symbol of the Union which he stated it was his paramount object to save, and which he did save." On the west wall, just above the statue, is this inscription: "In this temple, as in the hearts of the people for whom he saved the Union, the memory of Abraham Lincoln is enshrined forever."

The exterior of the building is of Colorado Yale marble. The interior walls, the columns and ceiling are of Indiana limestone. The interior floor and wall base are of Tennessee marble, and the steps and platforms of the statuary group are of Pink Milford granite from Massachusetts. The statue itself is of pure white marble.

There is a guard on duty in the building day and night, three men serving eight hours each.

In front of the Lincoln Memoria

In front of the Lincoln Memorial, between it and the Washington Monument, is a rectangular pool, or lagoon, twenty-five hundred feet long and one hundred and sixty feet wide, its greatest depth three and a half feet. The bottom of this pool is made of black slate, and on clear days it mirrors in its placid depths the Monument in the morning hours, and in the evening the shadow of the Memorial is reflected in it. When the weather is cold enough to cover Mirror Pool with ice sufficiently thick, it affords a carnival for skaters.

Hundreds of memorial trees have been planted in Potomac Park, and will soon make of it a spot of beauty that will add to the attractiveness of the white marble temple that crowns its highest point. A bridge in memory of our soldier dead is to be built across the Potomac, connecting the Lincoln Memorial with Arlington, the United States Cemetery on the Virginia hills opposite. It is said that Virginia will build, near the Virginia end of that bridge, a memorial to Robert E. Lee; and thus these memorials of Lincoln and Lee, the outstanding figures of the Civil War, will be closely connected by the bridge built in memory of our soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice.

MIRACLES HAVE CEASED. No. 3. BY E. A. ELAM.

God gave the unmistakable rule which shows the difference between the true teacher and the false, even should the false teacher do "a sign or wonder."

"But the prophet, that shall speak a word presumptuously in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, that same prophet shall die. And if thou say in thy heart, How shall we know the word which Jehovah hath not spoken? when a prophet speaketh in the name of Jehovah, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which Jehovah hath not spoken: the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously, thou shalt not be afraid of him." (Deut. 18: 20-22.)

This rule applies in the New Testament, and, therefore, to-day. Any teacher or preacher to-day who speaks "a word" in the name of Christ, which Christ has not commanded, does so presumptuously.

There can be no greater sin than the one of presumption.

"Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be clear from great transgression." (Ps. 19: 13.)

"If there arise in the midst of thee a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and he give thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or unto that dreamer of dreams: for Jehovah your God proveth you, to know whether ye love Jehovah your God with all your heart and with all your soul. Ye shall walk after Jehovah your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and cleave unto him. And that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death; because he hath spoken rebellion against Jehovah your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of bondage, to draw thee aside out of the way which Jehovah thy God commanded thee to walk in. So shalt thou put away the evil from the midst of thee." (Deut. 13: 1-5.)

Let us note particularly some things in this passage:

1. The teacher who would lead the children of Israel to serve other gods, even though he should do "a sign or wonder," should not be heard. On the contrary, that teacher should be put to death. This was God's means of putting away evil from his people.

2. God never works miracles, sends angels, or gives visions and experiences in order to release people from obedience to his commandments. In the miraculous age he performed miracles, sent angels, and gave visions, but they were all to confirm his commandments and entire will and the importance of obedience to them. To-day that man is woefully deceived who thinks any experience he may have had or any vision he supposes he has seen has released him from faithful obedience to God's will or saved him in disobedience to God. No man has ever seen or heard more than Saul of Tarsus saw and heard-a light brighter than the noonday sun, Jesus of Nazareth in that light, the words of Jesus in an audible voice, and the miraculous restoration of his sight; yet, in obedience to God, he must believe in and acknowledge Jesus as the Christ, repent of all sins, be baptized and wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord, and continue in faithful obedience to the end of life. Neither did the vision of an angel, their miraculous baptism in the Holy Spirit, and all other miracles connected with their conversion release Cornelius and his household from obedience to the gospel of Christ.

3. Since the children of Israel should do all this, loving Jehovah with the whole heart, because he delivered them from Egyptian bondage, how much more should the church to-day fear and honor him and obey Christ! (Heb. 5: 7-9.)

4. Since such teachers then should be put to death, how much more should the church to-day obey God in turning away from all such and in warning all others against them!

5. Let us be impressed with the fact that God allowed such teachers, doing signs and wonders, to prove the children of Israel, that they might know whether or not they feared and honored and obeyed Jehovah with the whole heart. If they should allow a false teacher to turn them away from the commandments of Jehovah, that was proof that they did not honor and obey him.

6. The New Testament is just as plain and strong on this point. God uses all speculations and theories and dreams of men, all doctrines and commandments of men, all false teachers of every sort, and all factions and divisions, to prove his children or to test the church, that they may know whether or not they will obey him and remain faithful to Christ. (See 1 Cor. 11: 18, 19.) Judging by such things, we are forced to see that many are untrue.

7. Every teacher to-day who depreciates obedience to God in all his commandments of the gospel of Christ to the end of life or persuades people that obedience to God is not essential to salvation is a false teacher and must suffer the condemnation of heaven.

8. Satan now is the archenemy of God and his church. In every possible way he is putting forth ceaseless efforts to turn the church away from the truth and to keep people back from obedience to it. He does all this through human instrumentality.

"For such men are false apostles, deceitful workers, fashioning themselves into apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for even Satan fashioneth himself into an angel of light. It is no great thing therefore if his ministers also fashion themselves as ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." (2 Cor. 13-15.)

It makes no difference how beautiful and bright as an angel of light Satan appears, he is the devil still. It matters not how fair and smooth, beguiling and bewitching, eloquent and charming, humble and righteous, his ministers may appear, they are still his servants or wolves in sheep's clothing.

There are things put forth by false teachers which "have indeed a show of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and severity to the body; but are not of any value against the indulgence of the flesh." Paul warned the Colossians against being robbed of their prize "by a voluntary humility and worshiping of the angels," taught by men, standing on the experiences of what they have seen [not seen-margin], "vainly puffed up" by their "fleshly mind, and not holding fast the Head, from whom all the body, being supplied and knit together through the joints and bands, increaseth with the increase of God." Furthermore, all Christians, with these Colossians, are warned against this show of humility, while they must remain truly humble; this pretended righteousness, while they must continue indeed righteous; and all ordinances and precepts and doctrines of men, while they must faithfully submit to the commandments of God. (Col. 2: 16-23.)

Christians must be so "rooted and grounded in love" (Eph. 3: 17), and must so "continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast" (Col. 1: 23), that "Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceit of unrighteousness for them that perish," cannot turn them from "the love of the truth" and the right way of the Lord.

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Brother Elam: Referring to yours in the Gospel Advocate of December 4, I will say: We know that a little thing as a flag would be a trifle to let divide us; but would the Illinois sister be justified in worshiping with the church if the flag remain? Are we not to place a firm hand on the first appearance of evil? Would the church continue to be the church of Christ with K. K. influence or any other "ism" around it?

The church of Christ was builded together "for a habitation of God in the Spirit." (Eph. 2: 22.) has not the Spirit of Christ, it cannot be the church of Christ. All members must give "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The church of Christ cannot receive assistance (money or other help) from any political party as such—the Democratic party, the Republican party, the Prohibition party, the K. K. K. party, or any other. Neither can it be brought under the influence of any such party, or under any obligation to any such party. The church and State are separate institutions. Certainly, then, the church cannot line up with some political party, or any secret organization of any kind, or any other organization of any kind. Christ is its head and sole director, the Holy Spirit is its only Spirit, and the Bible is its only guide and rule of life. Any of its members who would attempt to commit it to any political influence or any other institution of any kind are untrue to its great Head, and, whether consciously so or not, betray it into the hands of the enemy. It is the pillar and ground of the truth, and its mission is to seek and to save the lost and to glorify God. This it cannot do when lined up with, and influenced by, any political party or worldly institution of any kind. It is independent and free, and must remain so; otherwise, it is not the church of Christ.

Many church members should learn anew to sing with the spirit, and so that all can understand them, therefore:

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood."

Christians cannot lose sight of the mission and work and glory of the church and at the same time please and honor God—remain true to Christ. They cannot serve two masters; hence, must choose whom they will serve. If they think more of some political party or any other worldly institution than of the church of Christ, they are unworthy of the church and, therefore, of Christ.

But if some untaught and misguided soul under some political influence would hang some political flag in some church house, which is not the real church, his better instructed brethren should teach him in the spirit of Christ the way of the Lord more accurately. They certainly should not refuse to worship God on this account. Paul says: "The Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves; if peradventure God may give them repentance unto the knowledge of the truth, and they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him unto his will." (2 Tim. 2: 24-26.)

Gentleness toward all, meekness, forbearance, and lowliness are not signs of weakness or that one is not apt to teach, but are true signs of courage, faith, and strength. Hundreds of brethren and not a few sisters should commit this quotation from Paul to memory, and certainly should imbibe its spirit.

The scriptural way to keep the church free from the domination or influence of political parties, their flags and the ensigns of secret orders from off the walls of church houses, is for the elders and other older and wiser members to kindly, gently, but firmly, and in the spirit of Christ, remonstrate with such brethren, show them the strife such things produce, and that such strife and such spirit are contrary to the New Testament, and persuade them to desist from such a course. Let elders and all others study their duties in all things as plainly taught in the New Testament, and I feel sure all such questions can thus be avoided.

0 0 0

Brother Elam: Please answer this question through the Gospel Advocate: Did not Jesus regard the keeping of the Sabbath as finished at the beginning of his ministry? If not, did he break God's covenant with Israel when he labored on that day? (Ex. 31: 13-18.)

C. E. OBERMILLER.

No. Jesus performed no real labor on the Sabbath. He performed deeds of mercy, and reminded the Pharisees that they on the Sabbath would lead an ox or an ass to water or pull a sheep or an ox out of a ditch. Jesus and his disciples kept the Sabbath; but Jesus did some things, such as going through the grain fields and plucking off the heads and eating them, in order to show, it seems, that he was Lord of the Sabbath, and had the right to set it aside according to God's will, and that "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." (See Mark 2: 23-27.) God prepared his people for the changes he made from one order of work and worship to another. The changes were not made suddenly. John the Baptist prepared a people for the Lord, and the Lord prepared them further for the end of the law and beginning of his reign. The Sabbath ended with the law of Moses. (See Eph. 2: 11-22; Col. 2: 13-15; Heb. 10: 9, 10.)

HOME READING

INASMUCH.

While the cobbler mused there passed his pane
A beggar drenched by the driving rain.
He called him in from the stormy street.
And gave him shoes for his bruised feet.
The beggar went, and there came a crone,
Her face with wrinkles of sorrow sown.
A bundle of fagots bowed her back,
And she was spent with the wrench and rack.
He gave her his loaf and steadied her load
As she took her way on the weary road.
Then to his door came a little child,
Lost and afraid in the world so wild—
In the big, dark world. Catching it up,
He gave it milk in the waiting cup,
And led it home to mother's arms.
The day went down in the crimson west,
And with it the hope of the Blessed Quest,
And Conrad sighed as the world turned gray:
"Why is it, Lord, that your feet delay?
Did you forget that this was the day?"
Then soft in the silence a voice he heard:
"Lift your heart, for I kept my word;
Three times I came to your friendly door;
Three times my shadow was on your floor:
I was the beggar with the bruised feet;
I was the woman you gave to eat;
I was the child on the homeless street."
—Edwin Markham.

HE LOVED HIS MOTHER.

The following sketch of a ragged newsboy who lost his mother is full of touching interest. In tenderness of his affection for her, he was determined that he would raise a stone to her memory. His mother and he had kept house together, and they had been all to each other; but now she was gone, and the little fellow's loss was great. But getting a stone was no easy task, for his earnings were small. But love is strong. Going to a cutter's yard and finding that even the cheaper class of stones were far too much for him, he at length fixed upon a broken shaft of marble, a part of an accident in the yard, which the proprietor kindly named at such a low figure that it came within his means.

There was much yet to be done, but the little fellow was equal to the task. Next day he conveyed the stone away on a four-wheeled cart, and managed to have it put in position. The proprietor, curious to know what the boy had done with the stone, visited the cemetery one afternoon, and he thus describes what he saw and learned:

"'Here it is,' said the man in charge; and, sure enough, there was our monument at the head of one of the larger graves. I knew it at once.

"'Just as it was when it left our yard,' I was going to say, until I got a little nearer to it and saw what the little chap had done. I tell you, boys, that when I saw it, something blurred my eyes so I couldn't read it at first. The little man had tried to keep the lines straight, and evidently thought capitals would make it look better and bigger, for nearly every letter was a capital. I copied it, and here it is, but you must see it on the stone to appreciate it:

My mOTHER
SHEE DIED LAST WEAK
SHEE WAS ALL I HAD.
SHEE SED SHEAD Bee WaITING Fur

"And here, boys, the lettering stopped. After a while I went back to the man in charge and asked him what further he knew about the little fellow who brought the stone.

"'Not much,' he said, 'not much. Didn't you notice a fresh little grave near the one with the stone? Well, that's where he is. He came here every afternoon for some time, working away at that stone; and one day I missed him, and then for several days. Then a man came from that church that had buried his mother and ordered a grave dug by her side. I asked if it was for the little chap. He said it was. He had sold his papers, all but one, and was hurrying along the street out here. There was a runaway team just about the crossing and-well, he was run over, and didn't live but a day or two. He had in his hand an old file, sharpened down to a point, that he did all the lettering with. They said he seemed to be thinking only of that until he died, for he kept saying: "I didn't get it done; but she'll know I meant to finish, won't she? I'll tell her so, for she will be waiting for me." And he died with those words on his lips.'

"When the men in the cutter's yard heard the story of the boy the next day, they clubbed together, got a good stone, inscribed upon it the name of the boy, which they succeeded in getting from the superintendent of the Sunday school which the little newsman attended, and on it the touching, expressive words: 'He loved his mother.'

"When the stone was put up, the little fellow's Sundayschool mates, as well as others, were present, and the superintendent, in speaking to them, told how the little fellow had loved Jesus and tried to please him, and gave ntterance to this high enconium: 'Children, I would rather be that brave, loving little newsboy, and lie here with that on my tombstone, than the king of the world and not love and respect my mother.'"

The little newsman has left a lesson to the world.— Selected.

0 0 0

JUVENILE DISCOURTESY.

A motor car drew up in front of an Attica home. It was driven by a young man, who was puffing vehemently on a cigarette. He took the cigarette out of his mouth and, looking toward the house, gave a sharp staccato whistle. Then he leaned back in his seat and started puffing the cigarette again. Presently a young girl with hobbed hair and other marks of the modern flapper came tripping out of the house and down to the car. She hurried around to the other side and climbed in beside the young man, who did not even open the car door for her. She was scarcely seated before the car was speeding down the street and away.

The next morning at breakfast the girl's father, who had observed the manner in which the young man had "called" for his daughter, took occasion to give her a word of wise advice.

"Did it ever occur to you, my dear," he said to his daughter, "that a young man who will treat his girl like a dog probably will treat her even worse after she becomes his wife?"

The girl was shocked by her father's frankness. She hadn't thought about it in that way. Probably the young man had not thought about it, either. But an observing father had.—Exchange.

* * *

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

A self-righteous man believes everything bad he hears about his brother and disbelieves the good he hears of him.

We should do our duty and not lose our patience, come what will. Patience ofttimes brings greater blessings than skill.

It is wonderful how wicked a man becomes when he gets in the way of the ambitions of those who lust for position and power.

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Seventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1885

B. E. RAINS

H. S. PETYUS JOHN S. BURNETT

For safety take Pe-ru-na during hot weather.

Tablets or Liquid Sold Everywhere

COMMERCE UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

From the Brethren

Bradentown, Fla., February 14.—
I have just closed a good meeting at this place, with twenty-three additions, some by confession and baptism and some by restoration. The interest was good throughout the meeting and the attendance was large at all the services. This is the home of Brethren Robert E. Wright and A. C. Traylor. They both work and preach for this congregation, and they are doing a great work. Brother Traylor led the song service. He knows how to sing as well as preach. The Bradentown congregation and the other congregations that they work with are taking on new life. I am now near Zolfo Springs. I will begin a meeting at Sweetwater tomorrow.—R. E. L. Taylor.

Jackson, Miss., February 12.—The Jackson, Miss., February 12.—The church here is doing fine and interest is increasing steadily. One fine lady, Sister Brown, who was baptized about two months ago, has already sent you three subscriptions. She is working like a Trojan. She is a regular personal canvasser. Miss Blanche Vaughan has also sent the Gospel Advocate four new ones and has ordered several copies of "Eunice Lloyd." Each member is working, and, of course, we will grow. "Eunice Lloyd." Each member is working, and, of course, we will grow. We are looking forward with much pleasure to Brother Pullias' being with us in a tent meeting, beginning on the first Lord's day in June, the Lord willing. We hope to more than double our membership during the year. May Jehovah have the praise, glory, and honor.—J. Porter Sanders.

Niota, McMinn County, Tenn., February 9.—I am doing all I can to help toward finishing our meeting-house here. It was started going on two years ago. We are very anxious house here. It was started going on two years ago. We are very anxious to get it finished, so that we can have a meeting soon, as we have missed over two years having a meeting. East Tennessee surely is a mission field. Those who are situated where they have churches and leaders cannot know how it is over here. We need a good, solid leader here. Can you not find us one that will locate here? There is a good opening here for a merchant, a druggist, and a doctor. This is in the heart of the Sweetwater Valley. Nniota is on the Southern Railroad. This is a good farming country and healthy. So please do what you can to send us a good leader. Anything to help us in any way will be appreciated, as our church house will have to be furnished from the start after the house is done. We would appreciate tracts, books, or anything to help further the cause.—Mrs. Flora Ramsey Forrest.

Memphis, Tenn., February 20.—

Memphis, Tenn., February 20.— The work in Memphis with all the congregations is doing nicely, so far as I can learn. The preachers are all congenial and cooperative in their efforts. A good, sympathetic indorsement is worth quite a good deal when the opposition is strong and the work is great. To go alone means a failure, but to be organized in numbers and strength means victory. More religion in business and more busi-

Stop Coughing!

-Photo by Toal's Studio.

J.E. HARE

Columbia, S.C.—"Several years ago I contracted a cough which seemed to sap the very life out of me, and do what I would I could not break it up. I got weaker and more miserable and turned against food. At night the cough got worse so I could not sleep. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and began to take it and felt stronger each day. It entirely broke up my cough and I could sleep well at night, in fact I felt stronger and better than in fact I felt stronger and better than I had for years. There is no doubt 'Golden Medical Discovery' is a grand medicine and will build up any one who has grown weak or suffers from poor blood."—J. E. Hare, 813 Gibb St.

Step into any drug store and ask for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in tablets or liquid, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. and write for free advice,

OFFICE Houss

R. H. BENEDICT, D. C. CHIROPRACTOR

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES

Office 176 Eighth Avenue, North

THE RIGHT MAN

has a wonderful opportunity selling COG-GINS MEMORIALS. Their superior quality overcomes sales resistance. Experience unnecessary. Write for confidential contract and full particulars. Liberal commission. In spare time, Mr. Atwell, in Pennsylvania, made over $200 in January; Mr. McCleskey, in Texas, over $150. Many others are doing equally as well. Quit hunting excuses; seize opportunities. If your application is accepted, full supplies will be furnished without cost. Write immediately to COGGINS MARBLE COMPANY Main Street, Canton, Ga.

ness in religion is apparent to all. If we have the best thing on earth (the gospel), then we ought to put forth the best effort to get it before the people so as to reach the greatest number. As we grow older, as a rule, we grow richer in experience, knowledge, and service. Hence, we are in a position to serve more effectively. Then, too, there is no real happiness and contentment outside of work. The happiest hours are real work hours. "Work while it is day." Our hours. "Work while it is day." Our light shines through our good works. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." He that works most gives most. I shall enlarge my field of labor by entering the evangelistic field some time in May, to continue till late in the fall. I would like to serve in meetings with those congregations that can use my services. I have the last half of June open and the first half of July. I can arrange for meetings in September. With a fixedness of purpose and a determination to know only "Christ, and him crucified," I am ready to serve to the going down of life's sun.—J. E. Black.

Horse Cave, Ky., February 17.— I have just returned home from Indi-I have just returned home from Indianapolis, Ind., where I spent a few days with the East Side Church. I found a body of earnest disciples, who desire to build up a strong church of Christ in East Indianapolis. They represent no "fad" or "faction," but simply stand for the pure, unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ. At present they meet in a rented hall at 4024 East Washington Street, but, judging by the interest. rented hall at 4022 East Washington Street, but, judging by the interest and rapid growth of the congregation, they will soon have to look for larger quarters. Six were added to the congregation last Lord's day. Readers who know of any members in Indianapolis who should be interested in this work was requested to in Indianapolis who should be interested in this work are requested to write to Brother J. C. Hazel, 35 North Colorado Street, giving him their names and addresses. I have been engaged for a three-weeks' tent meeting there in June. Efforts will be made to have a great meeting. I also visited and preached once for the South Side Church. They have recently purchased a meetinghouse at 1201 Cruft Street. Prospects are very favorable for building up a strong congregation in South Indianapolis. I am under promise to be with them for a meeting in October. These two congregations are working together and are determined to see together and are determined to see the cause of Christ established in Indianapolis. Brethren where the cause is well established should help and encourage the work in this great city of over three hundred and fifty thousand people.—Emmett G. Creacy.

WAITING FOR THE BOATMAN. BY G. F. MILLS.

I was baptized near fifty-seven years ago. I have not been perfect; but when I stumbled, the goodness of God, my Father, would call me to repentance. I would take up the cross, take courage, and fight on. I have been living on borrowed time (so termed) for sixteen years. Permit me to submit the following lines for the Gospel Advocate:

I am waiting, just waiting, for the boatman to come

To bear me over the sea, the sea, Where loved ones are waiting with kindly greeting, When I have crossed over the sea, the

Amen, amen, God give me grace to wait and see His goodness displayed to me and mine

On this side of the chilly sea, the chilly sea.

Amen, amen, God give me grace to wait and see.

The heavens declare the goodness of God;

His goodness I adore; and, falling prostrate

At his feet, his mercy I implore;
And in his kindness he will forgive and love me evermore.

Now, friends, you all may think that I am young,

As young as you may be; In fact, I am nearly eighty-six And will soon put out to sea, to sea.

To be too large for worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear, and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.-C. D. Larson, in Exchange.

To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it heats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loos-ens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggiet for "244 ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

TEACHERS' TESTAMENT WITH NOTES

The Preacher's and Sunday-School Worker's Testament and Commentary-A Testament and Commentary in One Handy Volume

SPECIAL FEATURES

The American Standard Version of the New Testsment with the words of Christ marked in boldface type and proper names marked for pronunciation.

Explanatory Notes and Comments on every page, making clear all difficult passages and enlightening the reader on Eastern customs.

Introductions to each book in the New Testament by eminent scholars of world-wide renown.

The Explanatory Notes and Comments on every page, throwing light on Eastern customs and making clear all difficult passages, were edited by the leading religious writers of the various denominations. All commentaries should be used with a grain of salt.

We have bought a large number of this book to furnish our readers with the Gospel Advocate. This Teachers' Testament and the Gospel Advocate for one year, to new or old subscribers, at $3.00. Old subscribers are expected to pay up to date and renew one year in advance. You should place your order at once, for our supply will soon be exhausted.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

"BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST! SAY

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Pain

Headache Toothache Neuralgia Neuritis

Lumbago Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets Also bettles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Sallcylloacid

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

OBITUARIES

VANN.

VANN.

Brother William Vann (familiarly known as "Uncle Billy") has passed from this earthly pilgrimage to try the realities of a better world. He was laid to rest in Mount Pisgah Cemetery, near McAlpin, Fla., his home, in the presence of a host of weeping friends and relatives, as well as brethren in Christ. "Uncle Billie" was seventy-four years of age. He was the father of a large family and an old soldier of the cross of Christ. He fell in battle with his uniform on. He was a member of the body at Evergreen, near his home, body at Evergreen, near his home, and an elder in that congregation for twenty-five or thirty years. The writer conducted the funeral services.

J. O. BARNES.

GOODPASTURE.

Brother Herschel Goodpasture died on April 26, 1924, and was buried at Flat Creek, Tenn., on the following day. He was near forty-six years old, and an uncle of Brother B. C. Goodpasture, who now serves the West End Avenue Church, in Atlanta, Ga. Brother Goodpasture went to Nashville for treatment some two years ago, and returned home seemingly well, and continued up till about a week before he died, when he suda week before he died, when he suddenly became very ill and soon passed away. Cancer of the liver was given as his ailment. He was never married, but he leaves two brothers and one sister behind. He was a faithful Christian, having obeyed the gospel several years ago. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at the Flat Creek Church in the presence of a number of relatives and friends.

WILLIE HUNTER.

DANIEL.

William Earl Daniel, little seven-year-old son of S. W. Daniel and wife, Mamie Daniel, happened to a very serious accident, and a very grievous one to the entire family, on Septem-ber 13, 1924, which resulted in his death the next day. He was not feel-ing well, and, seeking some way to entertain himself, he found a dyna-mite cap and touched a match to it. entertain himself, he found a dynamite cap and touched a match to it, and it blew off all the fingers and thumb of his left hand and burned him from the lower part of his abdomen to the top of his face. The explosion tore such a large hole in his body that his intestines rolled out. His parents, becoming alarmed at the report of the cap, went out and met him coming toward the house, and carried him in and placed him on the bed. It was impossible to save his life. I would say to the bereaved family: Weep not for William Earl. He is at rest, and is freed from the many temptations with which other children are surrounded and which might some day have overcome him and caused his soul to be lost. and caused his soul to be lost.

W. A. Sisco.

SCOTT.

My aunt, Mrs. Artie Scott, the widow of Elihu Scott, one of the most devout preachers of West Tennessee, was laid to rest at McCorkle's cemetery, near Lemalsamac Church, November 13, 1924. She left two sisters, four children, and many grandchildren to mourn her death. All who knew her were impressed with her Christian spirit and devotion to the church. When her husband was away from home procedures. church. When her husband was away from home preaching the gospel, she invariably attended the church at her old home congregation (Lemalsamac), taking her children with her that they might be taught "the way of the Lord." Her devoutness and piety and her godly life are a great asset to the children whom she leaves. She lived to a ripe old age, and died surrounded by her much-loved and faithful children. Her goodness and fine qualities will ever be a sweet remembrance to those who knew her. May qualities will ever be a sweet remembrance to those who knew her. May we all emulate her example of devoutness and loyalty to the true church. She attended services at the loyal church of Christ in Newbern, Tenn., even to the very last. We are confident that peace and happiness forever are hers.

W. CLAUDE HALL.

LUNN.

James N. Lunn, of Cedar Dell, in Marshall County, Tenn., was born on November 28, 1841. He was married November 28, 1841. He was married to Sister Hannah Harman on December 19, 1872. To them were born three children—two sons and one daughter. The latter died at the age of four years. The two sons, Oscar and Austin Lunn, are still living. Brother Lunn served in the Confidence of the federate Army and made a good sol-dier. After the war he made a good citizen until October 4, 1885, when, like Cornelius, he realized he lacked something more; so he enlisted in the army of the Lord Jesus Christ under the preaching of the writer, and I believe he was a faithful soldier in the army of the Lord to the day of his death. Brother Lunn and his wife, who was also a faithful Christian, were devoted to each other until tian, were devoted to each other until her death in 1901. Brother Lunn died on April 16, 1924. It was the request of Brother Lunn that I should conduct his funeral services, which I did. I would say to the bereaved: Study God's word, hide it in your heart, live it in your life, that you may meet the loved ones in the home of the soul.

N. C. DERRYBERRY. tian, were devoted to each other until SHAFER.

Sister Mattie Dial, daughter of the late John Dial, of Lawrence County, Tenn., was born on October 16, 1889, and died on November 4, 1924. She was married to John Wiley Shafer in early womanhood. She leaves her beloved husband and one sweet little girl, besides her mother, five sisters, and one brother, to mourn her death. Mattie obeyed the gospel in 1905 during a tent meeting held by the writer near her home, and thus became a member of the church of Christ. She died, as she had lived, in the Lord. Mattie suffered much with a fatal disease of the head which caused total blindness. All that good physicians and tender nursing could do was done, but to no avail. She bore her sufferings with true Christian patience, She was in possession of that love that can suffer long and be kind. She had the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of Tenn., was born on October 16, 1889, quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. She is gone, but the good life she lived is not gone.

After funeral services by the writer, her body was laid to rest in the Sims Ridge graveyard, near her home. A large gathering of friends and loved ones were there to show their love for this good woman and sympathy for the bereaved ones.

THOMAS C. KING.

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

Take KOZOL instead of aspirin for Headache, Colds, Flu, Neuralgia, Rheumatism and pains from similar allments. It is safe and does not affect the heart. Not habit forming—25c at your Druggist, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, Nashville, Tenn. Manufactured by KOZOL LAB., Nashville, Tenn.

HOUSEWORK NOT DRUDGERY

For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now

Lincoln, Nebraska. — "My back would bother me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. Charles F. Dolezal, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once

Volga City, Iowa.—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. down and could hardly be on my reet.

I was so cold I could not keep warm.

I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would the newspapers so I thought ment in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas.—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so."—Mrs. Dora Phil. Yaw, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recom-mended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite all-ments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

EVANGELISTIC SONGS

Not a "filler" in the book. Every song is fine.

Printed in shaped notes only. Prices: Single copy, postpaid, 15 cents; per hundred, not prepaid, $10.00.

The demand for such a book is great-low price and high in quality. Its use is not necessarily confined to evangelistic services. It is an inexpensive songbook for the church. "Evangelistic Songs" cannot be

Read the index of songs and reach your own conclusion as to the desirability of this inexpensive little book.

INDEX TO TITLES

No.	No.
A Blessing in Prayer 51	Lord's Day Worship 17
All to Christ I Owe 5	Martyn 58
Are You Washed in the Blood? 13	McAnally. C.M. Double 8
Army of the Lord 40	Meet Me There 63
Beautiful Thought 47	My Soul's Sweet Rest 44
Beulah Land	O. How I Love Tesus! C. M 87
Blessed Assurance 56	O, 'Tis Wonderful! 50
By the Blood 41	On the Cross of Calvary 48
Calling Me Over the Tide 62	Over There
Close to the Saviour	O, Why Not To-Night? 49
Come, Blessed Saviour 31	O, Wondrous Lovel
Come to Jesus 88	Redeeming Mercy 35
Come Unto Me	Refuge 57
Death is Only a Dream	Rescue the Perishing 1
Every Day and Hour 34	Say, Will You Meet Me There? 25
Footsteps of Jesus 6	Standing by the Cross
For What Shall It Profit? 54	Stepping in the Light 39
Gathered Home	Summer Land
God's Hand is in It All 81	Sweet By and By
Go Wash in the Blood 82	The Beautiful City of God 43
Hear Him Calling 22	The City Above
Hebron, L.M 21	The Half Has Never Been Told 9
I Lean on His Wonderful Might 20	The Hollow of God's Hand 45
I Love to Tell the Story 7	The Rock that is Higher than I 4
In the Morning of Joy 24	Though in Darkness 11
Jesus Loves Even Me	'Tis so Sweet to Trust in Jesus 59
Joy in Heaven 23	'Tis the Harvest Time 46
Keep Your Heart Singing 3	Walk with Me, Gracious Lord 55
Knocking at the Door	We Speak of the Realms of the Blest 38
Leaning on the Everlasting Arms 52	What a Friend We Have 2
Little Reapers 53	Whiter than Snow 30
Lord, I'm Coming Home 64	Work, for the Night is Coming 26
	THE PERSON NAMED AND PARTY OF THE PERSON OF

Address All Orders to Music Department GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Gentlemen:

Please send me	copies	of	"Evangelistic	Songs."
Inclosed find $	for same.
Maria

Address: _____

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

The clearest and simplest book of its kind published Price, 20 cents single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

WORK IN EL PASO, TEXAS.

BY FRED BLANCHARD.

There is as loyal and active a band of Christians as I know of anywhere here in El Paso. Owing to the fact that this city has a nation-wide reputation as a health resort, we have a situation probably not equaled elsewhere. There are members of the church of Christ here from many States recuperating. Many are cured entirely of their trouble, while many wait too long before coming to this high, dry location. Fortunately, most of them who come are well supplied financially, and thus are no extra burden to us. We enjoy visiting these and encouraging them in every way possible. Unfortunately, some who come are unable to do any kind of work, and soon run out of funds and are often in need. To illustrate. I found a family recently whose condition I will endeavor to describe. The father, about fifty years old, in the last stages of consumption; a son, twenty-four years old, now suffering from hemorrhages and unable to do any kind of work; a widowed daughter, with a small child, but working for one dollar per day. They were behind with the rent, and also owed the grocer. The mother told me she was trying to keep payments up on a burial policy for the sick ones, so she would not have to ask the county to bury them. All I could do was to have a week's supply of provisions sent them. At almost every service at the meetinghouse some one will hand me money to relieve these cases, and members bring food often during the week for me to carry to these places of need. Of course, to us all it is a work and labor of love. I have this suggestion to make to congregations and individuals back East: If you know of patients in El Paso (or elsewhere) from your community, make sure of their financial condition. If they need help, send money directly to them. If you do not know the address of one in El Paso, I will find it for you. If you send money to me for any special one, I will acknowledge by card the receipt of it, and have the patient to do the same. We do not want any one to help the church here (we are able to help ourselves and others), but we will appreciate help from those who have relatives and friends here in need.

MY WISH.

O, may I always have a flower to share
With friends along life's way—
A smile, a thought, an earnest loving prayer
To cheer them day by day,
—Mary Holden Willingham.

Blessed is the man who strives for an end beyond his own interests.

"RACCOON" JOHN SMITH ANECDOTE.

"Raccoon" John Smith was formerly a Baptist preacher, but after becoming familiar with the principles of the Restoration Movement, as advocated by Alexander Campbell and others, he withdrew from the Baptists and united with the Reformers, as they were called. Many of his former brethren did likewise, which resulted in bitter persecution against the disciples upon the part of the Baptists. Mr. Smith was conducting a meeting in some town in Kentucky, the name of which we cannot recall. A distinguished Baptist preacher by the name of "Greatrake," who had heard of the inroads Smith was making upon the Baptists, resolved to put a stop to it. Hearing of the above-named meeting, he came with his war paint on, determined to drive Smith from the town. His Baptist brethren advised him to let Smith alone, stating: "There is but one John Smith. He will surpass you either in wit or argument," Mr. Greatrake could not, however, be prevailed upon to desist. He was not going to disappoint himself. He had equipped himself for the struggle, and a battle he must have at all hazards. Smith had heard of his being in the community, and that he proposed driving him from the field.

Mr. Greatrake finally came to an evening service to hear Smith preach, and at the close of the sermon he rose and said: "I will reply to this sermon yet to-night, sir."

Smith promptly replied: "All right, sir, take it while it is hot; that is our way of doing business."

Greatrake remarked: "I will reply to you with the rough side of my tongue up, sir."

"That is the way calves' tongues generally are—the rough side up," replied Smith.

Greatrake followed up the first assault by saying: "I will let you know, sir, that you have the wrong pig by the ear."

Quick as thought, Smith retorted: "I knew I had an animal of some description by the ear, but I did not know it was a pig." The audience was greatly amused at the retort of Smith.

Greatrake stood erect and held his position, and as soon as order was restored he made his final stab by shouting at the top of his voice: "There are many better men in hell than you are, sir."

Smith quickly and coolly remarked:
"I never expect to be there, sir, but there is many a 'great rake' there."
Mr. Greatrake left the room with the audience in a perfect fit of merriment.

It must be noted that John Smith was not acquainted with Greatrake, but, learning that he was in the community, and that he was there to drive him from the town, he felt quite sure he was the man who had proposed to do the driving.

John Smith was a man of rare gifts-a man of great native ability. The more we study his character, instead of finding defects in it, new and undiscovered virtues develop, almost unique in their simplicity and perfection. The predominating elements in his character were the capacity and power of reason, clear understanding, an exalted idea of the sense of that which is true, just, and right, and a great veneration for virtue, goodness, and that which he called "divine." His reason, like a monarch, ruled all the faculties of his soul. He had great profundity and continuity of thought, especially when discussing Bible themes. He was an original and independent thinker. All the principles to which he adhered were tested by the highest ethical standard—the infallible rule—the word of God. All with whom John Smith came in contact recognized the fact that he was more than an ordinary man. His sparkling wit, his clear, logical mind, his brilliant intellect, superior wisdom, thorough knowledge of human nature, and profound reverence for the word of God made him a many-sided man. Combining all these gifts, which he manipulated with great skill, made John Smith a man of stupendous powers.

Benjamin Franklin related to me, a short time before his death, the controversy that took place between Smith and Greatrake, and at the same time stated that he was sorry it did not appear in his biography.—Campbell Jones, in Christian Standard.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

A FOUNTAIN PEN

Almost every one wants a first-class Fountain Pen. It is a great convenience and a timesaver. It is always ready to write the right thing. We have bought at a bargain a Self-Filler Fountain Pen—one with a clip for men and one with a ring for women. These Pens are as good as any $2.75 Fountain Pen. We are furnishing this Pen with the Gospel Advocate for one year at the exceedingly low price of $3.65. This is by far the best Fountain Pen we have ever offered to the readers of the Gospel Advocate. The value of the Pen with the Gospel Advocate for one year is $4.75. Our price to you, $3.65. The Pen is guaranteed. Specify whether a lady's or gentleman's Pen is wanted. Mabie-Todd Co., the oldest Fountain Pen manufacturers, make the Pen.

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO
GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Gospel Advocate Company,
Nashville, Tenn.

BRETHREN: Inclosed you will find $3.65, which will pay my subscription for one year to the GOSPEL ADVOCATE and entitle me to the Fountain Pen.

Nome
Mame
Post Office
Danta	Stata

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

AND A BIBLE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. The type is large and clear and is easily read. The size—5x7%.

inches—is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps; 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

$6.00

In ordering, order Bible No. 102—Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 1½ inches deep, 9¼ inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Ord er yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

TAKING ROOT DOWNWARD AND BEARING FRUIT UPWARD.

BY DAVID THOMPSON.

"And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward." (2 Kings 19: 30.)

The above is the language of Isaiah to the tribe of Judah, indicating the prosperity that was to be theirs in the days that were to come. Two kinds of growth are here spoken ofone, downward; the other, upward; and both kinds must be present, if there is true prosperity of any kind. Before a tree is worth anything for fruit, it must sink its roots down deep into the earth; and having done this, it is then ready to bear fruit. A few years ago I noticed an apple tree that was bearing no fruit, and was astonished to find that it had only surface roots; no taproot had been sent down deep into the ground to seek water, food, and to brace it against the storms. Such a tree will never be worth anything, but will be shaken by every wind, withered by every dry spell, and lacking the vitality to fight successfully the diseases which make war upon it. The tree that sinks its roots deep, however, may be depended upon to bear an abundance of fruit, if everything else is right. This statement from the mouth of the prophet carries many good lessons to the Christian to-day. We need growth in both directions, to take root downward and bear fruit upward, and must never forget that taking root downward must precede bearing fruit upward. I am sure that the fruitless condition of so many Christians to-day is due to their failure to take root downward. Christ, in the parable of the sower and the seed (Matt. 13), says that the stony-ground seed does not prosper, but is withered away because it has no root. Paul admonished the church at Colosse as follows: "As therefore ye received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in him, rooted and builded up in him, and established in your faith, even as ye were taught," (Col. 2: 6, 7.) The soil that he has furnished for the Christian to take root in is the word of God. If we study that as we ought, we will be well rooted and able to stand the storms that rage about us; but if we fail to study it as we should, we will never take root downward, and, hence, can never bear fruit upward. There is an appalling number in the church to-day who are "children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine," and the reason is that they have no roet. One can never be a real Christian, one who is rooted and grounded, without being a student of the Bible. The element which brings innovations into the church is not usually the element which studies the Bible daily and earnestly, but that element which has never taken root downward into the great truths of God's word, and, hence, are an easy prey to Satan's suggestions. The class which becomes easily discouraged and quits the work of the Lord is not that class which studies the Bible much. The chronic kickers and complainers in the church are not the ones who have taken deep root in the word of God. If they had, they would be bearing fruit instead of being a hindrance to the rest of the church. Brother, how much have you taken root downward? How surely are you grounded in the great truths of the Bible? Are your roots strong and deep enough to stand the storms? Do they go deep enough to keep the droughts of discouragement from withering you? Do they go deep enough and wide enough to furnish an abundance of food for your growth? Have you really taken root downward?

If one fails to take root downward, he fails to bear fruit upward, and, hence, is lost eternally. "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit. he taketh it away." (John 15: 2.) "Every tree therefore that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." (Matt. 3: 10.) It is not my purpose in this article to speak of the specific fruits that a Christian should bear, but rather of the splendid consequences which follow fruit bearing. If a Christian bears much fruit, he glorifies God. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." (John 15: 8.) It is always a pleasure to a good man to honor others. If he can honor his own family, he is glad to do so; if he can confer honor on those greater than himself, he rejoices in the opportunity; and if he could confer honor on presidents and kings, he would feel exalted, to be sure. But the Christian can do more than this. If he bears much fruit, he honors the God who made presidents, kings, and the people and lands over which they reign. This is something worth striving for. If I did not personally care to be saved, I think, when I realized all that God had done for me in a temporal and spiritual way, and then realized that by bearing fruit in his service I could honor him, I would have a sufficient sense of appreciation to keep me working in his service.

Another reason that you and I should try very hard to bear much fruit is the influence we exert over others. If we serve God faithfully, we influence others to do the same; while, if we are careless in his service or quit, we lead others to do the same. Paul said to the church at Corinth:

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Cabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodica, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

Per single copy.....$0.40 | Per 50, per copy... Per dozen, per copy .88 | Per 100, per copy...

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate

Will stop tomorrow

Colds break in 24 hours for the millions ho use Hill's. Fever and headaches go. who use Hill's. La Grippe yields in 3 days. This is the quick, the scientific way to end these dangers and discomforts. Don't trustdesser helps, don't wait. Get back to normal at once.

All druggists AILL'S POMION with portrait

CHURCH OF CHRIST

921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:06.
Evening—Singling, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)
A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the Goor. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$

NOTICE TO ALL AGEN

You are not working merely for exercise. nor for amusement. You are working for an income. Sconer or later, everybody requires a headstone or some other form of monument. Not so with most things. Therefore, we suggest that you sell something that every man, woman, and child must have some day. There's a good profit in the sale of monuments. Fill out the coupon and let us fill up your bank account.

MEMORIALS, INCORPORATED,

P. O. Box 278, Canton, Ga.

Tell me how to make good money selling monuments.

Name P. O.

$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Early Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Flat Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market. Post-paid, 309, 76c; 500, $1.60; 1.000, $1.50. F. O. B. Summerville, 1.000, $1.00; 5.000. $4.50; 10,000 up, at 80c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price. Satisfaction guaranteed. D. F. JAMISON, Summerville, S. C.

Behool Desks, Opera Chairs, Folding Chairs Kindergarten Chairs, School Supplies, Blackboards

Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N. C.

"Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men." (2 Cor. 3: 2.) Men read you and me just as they read the church at Corinth, and, sad to say, often pay a great deal more attention to what they read in our lives than to what they read in the Bible. If our lives are right, they will be impressed with the religion of Christ and may be led to accept it; while, if they see that we do not make an earnest effort to render effective service to the King. they will think that if those who have tried it attach no more importance to Christianity than that, it is not worth investigating farther. It has been my personal experience in trying to convert people that the greatest aid to the gospel is the godly lives of Christians; while the greatest hindrance is ungodliness, worldliness, and carelessness in the lives of those who profess to be followers of the Lamb. When you and I stand in the judgment, will we be made happy to realize that there are people among the blessed who would not be there if it had not been for our fruit bearing? Or will we be made sad to realize that, in failing to serve God as we should, we have not only lost our own souls, but have been the cause of others losing theirs?

A third consequence of bearing much fruit is the joy that it brings to other Christians. John said to Gaius: "Greater joy have I none than this, to hear of my children walking in the truth." (3 John 4.) I am sure that Christian parents can find no greater joy in their children than to see them serving the Lord as they ought to serve him, and no greater sorrow than to see them fail so to do. I know that, as a preacher of the gospel, I have never found greater joy than when one who has obeyed the gospel under my teaching proves faithful, nor greater sorrow than when they prove otherwise.

Let us take root downward and bear fruit upward.

RONCHITIS

Leaves a bad cough; so does "flu." But you can stop these lingering, weakening, sleep-disturbing coughs with

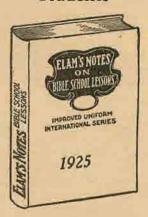

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

Used and recommended since 1872, it has relieved the coughs and colds of both children and grown persons everywhere.

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, men-tion this paper,

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x51/2 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complate cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living .-R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound .- N. B.

I am glad "Blam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits .- H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me. Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

$475.00

Gives You a 30 Day Tour of ENGLAND-BELGIUM-FRANCE

EUROPE

Ten other Tours of longer itinerary at various prices up to $1045.

PALESTINE

Wonderful Cruise on Special Steamer $595 and Up

In our Personally Conducted Parties, you Travel Free From Worry,"

Write to-day for illustrated itineraries. THE WICKER TOURS, Richmond, Va.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

Volume LXVII. No. 10.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH 5, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRISME COMMENT	217
OUR CONTRIBUTORS Commentary on First Corinthians (No. 11)—Work of the Biders—Her Husband's Wish—Murmurings of the Israelites—Organized Religion vs. Christianity.	219
OUR MESSAGES	224
The Christian Standard's Comment—Word from Washington—Women Preachers and the Majority Rule—The Missionary Society a Test of Fellowship.	226
FROM THE BRETHREN	232
OBITUARIES Lipscomb—Stamps—Coleman—Carver.	234
A Meetinghouse Needed—New Church House at Chisholm An Assembly of the Church	236 238

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

An oak is all that grows from an acorn. The word of God, as the seed of the kingdom, when planted by inspired men, produced nothing but local congregations, or assemblies, of Christians. To these local congregations God committed all the work of Christianity. The way people to-day try to carry on Christian enterprises, without having a single clear conception of the work of the church, may be gathered from the following excerpt from the Methodist Advocate:

One of the hopeful signs of the times is the hearty co-operation of all the connectional boards in our missionary work. In the present Centenary Carrying-On Campaign, the object of which is to collect the Centenary pledges and launch the advance world program, the Board of Missions, Centenary Commission, Epworth League Board, Woman's Missionary Council, Sunday School Board, and Board of Lay Activities are all cooperating in the various phases.

The sad part of this whole business is that when we oppose the "organization" of "connectional boards," "the Centenary Carrying-On Campaign," the so-called "advance world program," "the Board of Missions," the "Centenary Commission," the "Epworth League Board," the "Woman's Missionary Council," the "Sunday School Board," or the "Board of Lay Activities," they represent us as being antimissionary and opposed to missionary work. Independent congregations, under their own bishops and deacons, have done infinitely more gospel preaching and Christian work than all the hirelings of the United Missionary Society have ever done, and yet if congregations do not contribute to the support of this missionary corporation, allowing it to take charge of and oversee its work, they are represented as antimissionary.

The twentieth century is too late to commence slandering the church as "not doing anything." For nineteen centuries the church has made remarkable and amazing headway in the face of obstacles nothing but God's church could have overcome. All admit that a man can live the Christian life and go to heaven when he dies simply as a member of the church and without "organizing" anything else whatever. Is that not enough? What better does any man want? It is a wonderful thing to be a member of God's church. God will deal with the man who belittles it by wanting to go into something else.

* * *

It seems that some of our Baptist friends are having some little trouble deciding just what Baptist doctrine really is. The Baptist and Reflector says:

The committee appointed at the last session of the Southern Baptist Convention to report on the advisability of submitting a statement of doctrine has arrived at a wise conclusion regarding its duty and has taken the proper steps to discharge it. It was evident that in the discussions at the Atlanta meeting, out of which came the appointment of the committee, it was generally understood among the delegates that the committee should draft such among the delegates that the committee should draft such a statement if, in its judgment, it was expedient to do so. We are glad to have the following statement from President E. Y. Mullins, who is chairman of that committee:

"In response to various inquiries which have come to me, I am writing to say that the committee on doctrinal statement had a meeting in Nashville, Tenn., a short time ago.

"The committee considered the question of what duty the Convention had laid upon it in its appointment, and it was agreed to ask the Convention for advice and instructions when it meets in Memphis, and at the same time be prepared to submit a doctrinal statement if the Convention should order it. We are preparing a revision of the New Hampshire Confession of Faith, which is so widely accented among Baptists. accepted among Baptists.

"I may say in conclusion that the committee was divided

"I may say in conclusion that the committee was divided on the advisability of submitting such a statement. Some of them felt that it was not necessary, in view of recent statements of this kind which had been promulgated in one way or another by the Convention. All felt, however, that we should be prepared to submit such a statement in case the Convention should instruct us to do so. The statement is not yet in final form, but we hope it will reach this stage in the near future."

If a man were to ask me for a "doctrinal statement" of what I believe, instead of sending him "the New Hampshire Confession of Faith," "so widely accepted among Baptists," or "a revision" of it, I would kindly present him with a copy of the New Testament, "so widely accepted among" those who desire to be Christians, nothing more or less. It is not "advisable" to accept anything but the Scriptures. If "the New Hampshire Confession of Faith" contains more than the New Testament, it contains too much; if it contains less, it contains too little. The men who wrote "the New Hampshire Confession of Faith" were uninspired and fallible men. The precepts, traditions, and doctrines of uninspired and fallible men cause all the controversy and contention in the religious world. There is no controversy over what the Bible actually says. All the controversy is over the precepts of

The Gospel Advocate will agree with the Baptist and Reflector on everything it can read in the Bible. Will the Baptist and Reflector meet us on this?

We find where "the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." (Acts 11: 26.) Will the Baptist and Reflector agree that disciples of Christ should be called "Christians?" If it will produce a passage where disciples of Christ were ever called "Baptists," we will do our best to become a Baptist.

Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," (Mark 16; 16.) Will the Baptist and Reflector agree that, for a sinner to be saved, he must believe and be baptized? Peter said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2: 38.) Will the Baptist and Reflector teach, as Peter did, that, for a sinner to receive remission of sins, he must believe and be baptized? If it will find a passage that says that God for Christ's sake pardons a sinner before he is baptized, the Advocate will gladly accept it and teach it. We have no theory of our own to prove. We simply take the word of God just as it is. If that is not right, will the Baptist and Reflector kindly tell us what is right?

All parties can get together on the Bible. They can never get together on anything else. It would be a calamity for union to ever come on anything but the Bible.

TO OUR READERS.

We wish to place the Gospel Advocate in every Christian home. Our readers can greatly assist us in laboring for the advancement and upbuilding of the cause of Christ by inducing their friends to subscribe for the Advocate. No man can estimate the power of the press, and certainly God's people should use this immense power for the propagation of Christianity. Many souls have been led to Christ by reading the Advocate. One of the very best ways available for Christians and churches to evangelize their communities and to do real missionary work is to put the Advocate in the homes of the people.

We are consecrated to the service of Jesus Christ. We stand for the old paths-for primitive, apostolic, New Testament Christianity in theory and practice. Sinners, out of Christ and in their sins, may find in our columns a simple, clear, and straightforward presentation of exactly what the inspired apostles of Jesus Christ teach them to do to be saved. And as this most important feature of Bible teaching is perfectly taboo with most religious journals and the great denominational world, the Advocate is endeavoring to gather up its strength and to spend all its might in a tremendous effort to carry the gospel, in its primitive purity, before the general public. Nothing else can save sinners or give men a Bible right to "go on their way rejoicing" in the forgiveness of their sins.

Our readers are our main resource in this great work. We are endeavoring to serve them and to produce a paper that will aid them in the great work of spreading the kingdom of Christ. We hope every reader of the Advocate will work with us in endeavoring to preach and teach primitive Christianity. If they will assist us in getting the Advocate in the hands of the general public, we promise to crowd our columns with solid, substantial, and scriptural matter designed to give the people a better conception of the things that were taught by inspired men.

Experience demonstrates that congregations whose members read the Advocate are the most active, intelligent, and wide-awake. In addition to articles and editorials, the Advocate carries news reports of the work of the churches and of our evangelists in the various and widely scattered fields. Every Christian man should know what is going on, should watch with interest the great fight his brethren are making in the various parts of the country and of the world. Advocate reports are reliable. They come direct from the workers in the field and are edited with great care.

We would appreciate it if some brother in every congregation would publicly call attention to the pleasure and profit that may be derived from reading the Advocate and to the great fight the Advocate is making for pure, primitive, New Testament Christianity. We would appreciate their publicly reading this notice and suggesting that every family in the congregation subscribe for the Advocate. Our agents are busy, every member of the Advocate staff is working at top speed, and we want every reader to help. While we are prospering financially, we are not in the business to make money, as any printer will testify that nobody will ever get rich publishing a paper like the Advocate for two dollars a year. But we realize the magnitude of the work before the church of Christ, and we believe that, with the proper effort, we can carry the pure gospel, as it was preached by the apostles, before the general public. Thousands of souls will be saved. Untold good will be done. Let every reader help, redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your orders for Bibles and good books at once.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

We are at work now on a new and enlarged edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachman. It will be ready by March 15.

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75. Mail us your order at once.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

The Index to Volume LXVI, of the Gospel Advocate is now ready, and will be sent, post paid, to any address for 25 cents. Order your copy to-day.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

As Adventism is being agitated, we suggest to all our readers who are interested in the subject to send us $1.25 for a copy of "Adventism and the Bible."

We have recently printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order for a copy of this splendid book.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Refermation. Price, $1.50.

If you are wanting a first-class hymn book, send us your order for "Choice Gospel Hymns." We publish only first-class music books, and books that are filled up with inspiring hymns. We are very much opposed to that jazz music that is destroying the spirituality of the churches.

The second edition of "Travels in Bible Lands," by Andy T. Ritchie, is selling fast. It is pronounced by all who have read it as being the best book ever written on travels in the Holy Land. It is illustrated and contains 335 pages. Cloth bound. Price, $1.50, postpaid, to any address. Send for your copy to-day.

"The Profitable Word," containing some of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, will be ready for distribution in the near future. It will be nicely bound in cloth and will contain about two hundred pages. The price of the book will be $1.50. We shall be glad to have our readers send in their orders at once and be sure of receiving a copy.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 11.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter II.

CHRIST, AND HIM CRUCIFIED. (Verses 1-5.)

In the first chapter, Paul showed that God, through his wisdom, selected means and agents which the world considered weak, no good, and foolish, to convert and redeem man and to overthrow the wisdom of man. In this chapter he shows that this agrees with the means selected and used in conversion of the Corinthians and the planting of the church among them.

1. When I came to you. Visited you. Came not with excellency of speech. Not with nice, choice arrangements of words, the artificial rounding and disposition of periods, those rhetorical connections, transitions, and figures, and those studied tones and gestures, in which, according to the Greeks, the perfection of eloquence consisted. Not with the loftiness of speech or of wisdom of a Grecian orator or a speculative philosopher. The testimony of God-"mystery of God" (American Revised Version)that is, what God gave me to testify concerning Christ. The things concerning Christ which God ordered the apostles to testify or the things which God himself attested by the miracles which he enabled the apostles to work. In either case, the expression implies that the evidence of the doctrine of the gospel is not founded on proofs drawn from human wisdom and reason, but on the authority of God, who revealed it by the Spirit and confirmed it by miracles. The gospel is called "a mystery." (See Eph. 3: 19; 1 Tim. 3: 16.) God revealed it through the apostles; hence, it is no longer a mystery. (Eph. 3: 1-7.) Paul informs the Corinthians that he made no effort to gratify their curiosity with rhetorical strains or philosophical niceties, to please their wanton wits, but solidly to inform their judgments with the great and necessary duties of the gospel, and to furnish them with the strongest arguments and motives for a good life. This is preaching; but had he come with human wisdom, this would have detracted from the excellency of the gospel, which, like the sun, shines best with its own beams. Scripture eloquence is most piercing and demonstrative and convinceth by its own evidence. Human wisdom and eloquence charms the ear, but gospel truth reaches the heart and strikes the conscience. The glory of God is more honored by the plainness and simplicity of the gospel than by the luxuriance of wit or the most admired oratory. All human wisdom must be denied when it comes in competition with, er stands in opposition to, the teaching of Christ. The testimony of Paul relative to the death, burial, resurrection, and ascension of Christ, is called "the testimony of God," because God testified and bore witness to the truth of this doctrine by signs and wonders, and divers miracles.

2. I determined not to know anything, etc.—that is, to waive all my other knowledge and preach nothing, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. All his preaching centered upon this one theme. It was to the Greeks foolishness, and to the Jews a stumblingblock. Paul determined not to discover or display before the Corinthians the eloquence and wisdom of the Greeks, nor to give them any other knowledge but that of a crucified Savior. The apostle did not despise and condemn all other study and knowledge and vilify true philosophy, logic, or oratory, for all knowledge is useful to him that knows how to use it aright. The thought is: we must rely upon Christ, and him crucified, for salvation, and that all other knowledge is useless and helpless in the scheme of redemption. The subject-matter of the apostle's study and preaching was "Christ, and him crucified," and not Greek philosophy nor Jewish traditions. Human wisdom despised the sufferings of Christ; but Paul made them the subject of his study, and the scope of his preaching. "Christ, and him crucified," ought to be the principal subject of the Christian study and knowledge to-day. As there is no doctrine more excellent in itself, so there is none more necessary to be preached than the doctrine of "Christ, and him crucified." Let preachers, then, preach this message and teach people to count all things but dross in comparison with that excellency which is in the knowledge of Christ.

3. In weakness, etc. The Greeks could endure no scheme of doctrine that was not conformable to their philosophy, and valued their teachers in proportion to the skill which they showed in setting off their opinions by the beauty and harmony of their language. Being in the center of Greek culture and surrounded by the splendors of Greek philosophy is probably the reason the apostle felt a human timidity at first in preaching the plain, simple gospel.

4. Not with enticing words of man's wisdom. He did not appeal to the arts and enticements of Greek oratory or philosophy in leading the Corinthians to Christ. His preaching was not with the persuasive words of human wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Being filled with the Spirit, he spake in its power. His teaching was also confirmed by the power of miracles. (See Rom. 15: 19; 2 Cor. 12: 12.)

5. That your faith should not stand, etc. Their faith was not produced by the enticements of Grecian oratory or philosophy, but the gospel preached in the power of the Spirit. This course was pursued that their faith might not be built on the wisdom or power of man, but on the wisdom and power of God; hence, it was sought, sustained, and stands through the means appointed of God. Paul states in what manner he did, and did not, preach the gospel to the Corinthians. He did not deliver it "with enticing words of man's wisdom "-that is, it was not garnished with human eloquence, did not consist in rhetorical tropes, was not accompanied with the witty insinuations of artificial learning, which pleases the ear, but affects not the heart. His preaching was great and serious, pious and ardent, plain and profitable, and just the kind the world needs to-day. Paul preached to the Corinthians "in the demonstration of the Spirit and of power"-that is, the doctrine he preached was accompanied with, and confirmed by, the miraculous gifts of the Spirit which he possessed. This miraculous demonstration of the Spirit, which was peculiar to the apostles, accompanying the preaching of the word, is not now to be expected. But the gospel of Christ carries with it the converting power of the Spirit, converting only through the word, which is addressed to the understanding. The power of the Spirit, which lies in the gospel, enlightens the understanding and persuades the conscience. The understanding assents to the word as true and the will embraces it as good. The reason assigned by Paul why he preached the gospel in and after this plain and inartificial style is: "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God "-that is, that your faith in Christ should not seem to be obtained by human wisdom and eloquence, but be ascribed to a divine power brought about by such weak means as my plain preaching was among you. It is the plan of Omnipotence to work by improbabilities. God delights to do great things by weak and unlikely means, because the weakness of the instrument redounds to the greater honor of himself, the principal agent. Human faith is an assent to anything creditable, as creditable upon the fallible testimony of man; and is founded upon, and resolved into, the authority of the speaker. But divine faith is an assent to anything creditable upon the infallible testimony of God, and is grounded on, and resolved into, the evidence of divine revelation. Upon this foundation stood the faith of the Corinthians. That our faith to-day may stand upon the sure foundation, it must be brought about by the plain word of God, as revealed to us by Christ and the apostles. (See Rom 10: 17.) If produced by any other means, it is not grounded upon divine wisdom, and, therefore, not a redeeming faith.

WORK OF THE ELDERS.

BY S. F. MORROW.

I have read and carefully studied an article published in the Gospel Advocate of January 22, headed, "Elders' Dues and Duties," written by W. N. Abernathy. I want to commend the article, and hope that Brother Abernathy will find it convenient to continue to teach us more on this subject. We seem to know so little about the work of elders and where our preachers should work. If we will practice the plain teaching of the Bible on the duties of elders and have them perform their duties as the Lord has directed, it will help correct many of our preacher troubles.

Everywhere we go and in most congregations there is trouble over preachers, and there always will be until we are guided by the word of God in our work and worship. Jealousy and envy among our preachers has gone to seed, and I hope and pray that all the seed will blast and not one of them will sprout. Thank the Lord, I think I see a better day coming. In the palmy days, Jesse Sewell, A. L. Johnson, D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, T. A. Smith, and others went into the fields where the gospel was never preached in its purity and simplicity, and preached in private houses, under brush arbors, and endured hardships as good soldiers of the cross of Christ, following the example of Jesus while on earth. If we ever expect to go where Jesus is, seated at the right hand of God, won't we have to follow in his footprints here below? If not, why not?

I was called to an old, dead congregation in 1924. I asked an old brother why they were dead. He said they had employed one of our big preachers for twelve years, who preached for them, drew his pay, and had never told them one thing to do in the way of mission work. Did he declare the whole counsel of God? Did he teach them their duty and develop the young men in Christian work? We should put our young men to work as soon as they come into the church. Every congregation should develop one or more public teachers yearly. In doing this, we will save our young men and keep them out of secret organizations. Paul says: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." (2 Cor. 6: 14.) A member of the church of Christ can do any good thing in the church that can be done anywhere; and when done in the church, God gets the glory, and not some man-made institution. Jesus said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things [all things necessary to carry us to heaven] shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6: 33.)

Take, for example, the work of our beloved John R. Williams in West Tennessee. During the year 1924 he baptized over one hundred and established one new congregation. How many preachers or congregations can give as good a report? Churches should locate preachers in destitute fields, as the Belmont church of Christ did W. S. Long in and around Washington, D. C., with a good tent. He began in September, 1923, and continued till September, 1924. The church supported him as they promised for that time, also helped to support Brother Smith in Denver, Col. Besides this, this congregation has helped the Tennessee Orphan Home, the Fanning Orphan School, and looked after their own needy church members. And they have also helped to establish two congregations in Stewart County, Tenn. I am glad to know of the good work the Russell Street Church did in 1924. I hope all congregations will follow these noble examples. I notice that Brother A. M. Burton is helping many in destitute fields. What would happen if all the congregations and more individuals would do this? We would soon do as the early disciples did in and around Jerusalem. Preachers located in some field would always be near their families to help their wives bring up their children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" and render to each other their dues, as taught in the New Testament, and much of the shame that is being brought on the church by some of our preachers would cease. David Lipscomb said he did not have much confidence in a preacher who would leave his family and stay away from home too long.

Something over one hundred years ago, A. Campbell, Barton W. Stone, and others came to understand that the Bible was a complete book on all things pertaining to the religion of Jesus Christ and agreed that they would speak where the Bible speaks and be silent where it is silent. From our condition to-day, it seems that we have just learned how to bring a man into the church. As to the work in the church for every member, duty of elders, preachers, and teachers, we are at sea. The first thing we should get fixed in our hearts is that every child of God should be a preacher or a teacher with all the talent that God has given him or her. Teach the person with you daily, from the cook to the preacher. You will find, if you read your Bible daily and prayerfully, that they both need it; and you will appreciate all the teaching you can get. First, live a righteous life, then teach the Bible on all subjects. With our present opportunities, what would happen if all our preachers were like Paul? We have about two thousand preachers of the church of Christ and five thousand congregations. What are we doing in proportion to what we must do, to be saved? Hear Paul: "And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof." (Rom. 13:

All good Christians want to know where our trouble is. Brethren, by the help of God, let us study our Bible so that we can locate it and find a scriptural remedy for every trouble, and learn to do more for the eause of Christ. I will now name one of our many troubles. have put our preachers in many churches where God has ordained that elders should do the work. Paul said to elders: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock; over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath pur-chased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified. I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel." (Acts 20: 28-33.)

Brethren, which are you laboring for-silver and gold or precious souls?

It is better to be a well-qualified man in a humble place than an unfit man in a high place; but, best of all, it is to be a fit man in the highest place. God wants men to fill the highest positions.

MURMURINGS OF THE ISRAELITES.

Moses, who led the Israelites out of the cruel bondage of Egypt at the command of God, had much trouble with the people. They were constantly murmuring and complaining against Moses and against God because things did not go to suit them. This grew out of the fact that their faith in God was so weak they could not trust in the providences of God to give them all needed things for the journey through the wilderness to the promised land. To us, who live in the light of God's full revelation to man, their lack of faith, in the presence of such wonderful demonstrations of divine power wrought in Egypt and at the Red Sea, seems strange indeed. But we must take into consideration the circumstances and conditions with which the Israelites had been surrounded so long. Jacob and Joseph had been dead a long time, and all those reared under the teaching and inspiration of the faith of those grand heroes of God had passed away, and the Israelites had breathed for ages the atmosphere of idolatrous worship. They had lost almost entirely the knowledge of the true God and had fallen into idolatrous worship themselves. They were scarcely more than little children, who walked by sight instead of by faith, and so soon as some visible manifestation of God's power disappeared they lapsed into unbelief. Moses was an exceedingly meek and patient man, and bore with their murmurings, praying earnestly to God for them when God would have destroyed them. (Ex. 17: 1-7; 32: 7-14.) But, as a matter of fact, there are many professed Christians whose faith in the providential care of God is no stronger than was the faith of these Israelites. We, too, murmur and complain at the dispensations of God's providence, while at the same time professing to trust God. Hence, we should not, until we have so grown in our faith and trust in the promises of God as to cease murmuring and complaining, be too severe in our condemnation of the Israelites. Scarcely had the people emerged from the baptism into Moses in the cloud and in the sea (1 Cor. 10: 1, 2), singing a song of deliverance (Ex. 15: 1-18), before they began to murmur and complain about something to eat (Ex. 16: 1-3). Could they not reason that the hand that dried up the Red Sea for them to pass over dryshod could give them bread to eat? Well, it seems they did not so reason; and before we condemn these people for their lack of faith, had we better not quit complaining and seeing ourselves starve when a drought comes upon us? But with all of their unbelief, murmurings, and complainings against Moses and against God, Moses held on to them. The mountain called "Sinai," near to which the Israelites have come in their march toward Canaan, is situated in the peninsula between the horns of the Red Sea, on the farther side of the wilderness from Egypt. This mount is by many termed a sacred mountain because of certain scenes enacted upon it. It figures largely in sacred history, and the very mention of the Ten Commandments brings to our minds also Mount Sinai .- F. W. Smith.

HER HUSBAND'S WISH. BY A. B. LIPSCOMB.

Moved by a sense of deep personal loss and with an earnest desire to comfort the heart of a trusting but sadhearted widow, I would write something in memory of the lamented Peter H. Harlan, who died at his home in Hendersonville, Tenn., on January 15, 1925. He was born on February 10, 1844, and was, therefore, past his eightieth year at the time of his death. To me Brother Harlan appeared as a noble embodiment of those virtues which the observant mind would naturally look for in the life of an aged Christian. He was "temperate, grave, sober-minded, sound in faith, in love, in patience." He was a man of a remarkably kind and gentle disposition; but with all his gentleness, he stood as a firm, unswerving advocate of truth and righteousness. There has not been in Middle Tennessee a better type of the old-fashioned Southern Christian gentleman than Peter Harlan. He is being sorely missed in the church and in the community.

Brother Harlan was married to Miss Kate Stalker on April 15, 1908. This good woman joined with her husband in making a Christian home noted for its warmth of welcome and hospitality. In writing of her great sorrow, she said to me: "He had often expressed a wish that, if in accord with the Father's will, he might lie down in sleep and wake up in the glory land, and he did it." These words betoken not only a sincere love and appreciation of her husband, but they further demonstrate a spirit of unfailing trust in God. With such confidence in God's wisdom and love there goes the inner strengthening of his grace. Christianity is not an outer life, but an inner one. It is not measured by prosperity, friends, and pleasures, but by righteousness and peace and joy in Christ Jesus. Often there is a storm, and without the wind rages, the thunder rolls, the lightning flashes in the sky, but within the home there is laughter, happiness, and good will. So in the realm of the outer life there may be disappointment, sorrow, affliction, and yet we may have such a grasp of faith, such inner strengthening, such a consciousness of God's grace, that we can say, "Thy will be done," and see light and peace in the darkness of our day. Indeed, it is promised that as our day is, so shall our strength be; and that though the waters come up against us, they shall not overflow us; and though we pass through the fire, we shall not be burned. Did not Stephen's face shine, and did he not see the heavens opened when the stones were pelting his body? Did not Paul sing in the inner prison when his back was lacerated by the scourge and his feet were made fast in the stocks? Did not the martyrs sing at the stake? And have not thousands and thousands of Christians in all ages dried their tears as there has come to them the sweet consciousness that round about them were the everlasting arms?

Sister Harlan understands now, perhaps as never before, that there never has been, and never shall be, such a friend as Jesus. He came to a burdened race that he might give it life and cheer. He healed broken hearts and set at liberty them that were bound. He put silver and golden linings in the dark clouds. He made a rainbow of hope and promise shine brightly in the sky. He taught the true meaning of suffering and of death. Those who have fully believed in him, in all ages, have found comfort and strength in the darkest hours of human experience, when the smart has been keenest and the burden heaviest to bear. They may have wept, but beneath the external manifestation of sorrow there has been confidence and abiding peace.

The crowded inn at Bethlehem is a symbol of the relation of the world in general to the approach of Christ. The world is filled up with its own petty lumber-its wares and its chattels, its dresses and its playthings, its luxuries and its theatrical paraphernalia-and there seems to be in it little room for new things, especially if they be unseen offerings and spiritual values. Where everything is in the way of everything else, where is the room for religion? Religion is obliged to fight its way in, or betake itself to a stable for shelter. But though Christianity originally entered a stable, it did not stay there; and the best values, even in a crowded world, will eventually beg-or beat-their way into notice and social recognition. Religion has ever had to meet competition, and sometimes we think it thrives on it. Christ will finally crowd out the crowds, or create out of them a congregation. God made the world, and he will sooner or later see to it that his Son rules over it.—Selected.

ORGANIZED RELIGION VS. CHRISTIANITY. (F. D. Srygley, in "Biographies and Sermons.")

One of the greatest enemies Christianity now has or has ever had is organized religion. Christ was crucified and thousands of his early disciples were put to death by religious people because the doctrine they preached was disintegrating to religious institutions. Jesus clearly foresaw and plainly foretold the great conflict between Christianity and organized religion: "They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whoseever killeth you will think that he doeth God service." (John 16: 2.) Paul also spoke of people "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." (2 Tim. 3: 5.) He suffered many things at the hands of such men; nearly all the persecutions he endured were from religious people; and he saw no end to the conflict between Christianity and organized religion. "But thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, long-suffering, charity, patience, persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra; what persecutions I endured; but out of them all the Lord delivered me. Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3: 10-13.) Every great religious awakening since John preached in the wilderness, or since Elijah was fed by the ravens in the woods, has been led by consecrated men and women who were ostracized and persecuted by religious people because the doctrine they preached was disintegrating to religious institutions. All the great religious reformers have walked with God and preached the truth while religious people persecuted them to save the craft of organized religion from disintegration and dissolution. Religious people have committed nearly every crime in the catalogue of iniquity to build up, strengthen, and maintain organizations Christ never authorized. All denominational organizations use the power of organization against men and doctrine whenever the interests of organized religion demand it. They have to do this in self-defense. "Self-preservation is the first law of nature," and no organization can maintain itself without opposing men and doctrine that antagonize it. This explains why there is now, has always been, and always will be a conflict between Christianity and every form of ecclesiastical organization. Jesus said: "Every plant, which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." (Matt. 15: 13.), The Heavenly Father never planted any form of denominational organization, and the mission of Christ and Christianity is, therefore, to root them all up. There was no organization in Christianity during the New Testament period but worshiping assemblies or local congregations, and there was but little of what the world now calls organization in a local congregation. There was not an uninspired official dignitary in the whole kingdom of heaven down to the close of the New Testament period greater or more honorable than elders or bishops in local congregations, and it is exceedingly problematical whether they were officers in the full sense which that term now bears. "The Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9: 14); but there were no fixed salaries or salaried positions in denominational organizations, great or small, in the kingdom of heaven, to constitute a boodle, breed corruption, and build up an ecclesiastical "pie brigade" on the hunt for easy jobs with big salaries and high honors. Jesus explained that there were no high places or official honors in the kingdom of heaven. "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you," (Matt. 20: 25, 26.) "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo, here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." (Luke 17: 20, 21.) This is but another way of saying the kingdom of God is not a denominational organization, but a holy life and a spiritual fellowship. The church of the New Testament is the body of Christ. "And gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body." (Eph. 1: 22, 23.) "And he is the head of the body, the church." (Col. 1: 18.) "For his body's sake, which is the church." (Col. 1: 24.) There is but one body, which is the church, and every Christian is a member of it. "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." (Eph. 4: 4.) "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. For the body is not one member, but many. . . . Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." (1 Cor. 12: 12-27.) "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." (Rom, 12: 4, 5.) "For to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby." (Eph. 2: 15, 16.) The church is a spiritual body, and not a denominational organization. Every Christian is a member of it because he is a Christian and as long as he remains a Christian. No man can belong to Christ and not be a member of the church, because the church is the body of Christ. No one has any scriptural authority to belong to any religious body or organization but the church. "But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit." (1 Cor. 6: 17.) No one ought to be joined unto anything but the Lord in religion. The church of the New Testament is the family of God. "That thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God." (1 Tim. 3: 15.) "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Eph. 2: 19.) "Let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of (Gal. 6: 10.) The house of God, the household of God, the household of faith, the church of the living God. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 26, 27.) Every Christian is a child of God and a member of the family of God, which is the church of the living God. No one can become a Christian without becoming a member of the church any more than one can become a child without becoming a member of the family. One becomes a member of the church at the same time and by the same process he becomes a Christian. There is but one way to become a member of the family of God, which is the church of the living God, and that is to be born into it. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) God, by the Holy Ghost, dwells in and works through men and women. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God." (2 Tim. 3: 16.) Inspiration of God is a miraculous measure of the Holy Spirit, and those who had it spoke "as the Spirit gave them utterance;" so that it was not they that spoke, but the Holy Spirit that spoke in them. (Acts 2: 4; Matt. 10: 20.) Any one in whom God, by the Holy Ghost, dwells and works will be governed in all things by the Holy Scriptures, because the Scriptures are given by the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Ghost is always consistent with himself. "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." (1 Cor. 14: 37.) All efforts to control and direct men and women in whom God, by the Holy Ghost, dwells and works, by organizations formed and directed by men, but unauthorized by the Holy Scriptures, are really efforts to control and direct God by human organizations and human wisdom and authority. In its last analysis, it is an effort of men to govern God and make him subservient to the vanities, caprices, and judgment, not to say the wickedness, of frail humanity. God will not work under the dictation and authority of men, and to the extent people imbibe the spirit of organized religion they lose the power of the Holy Ghost. All forms of ecclesiastical organization are lacking in the power of individual piety and personal consecration, and this lack grows more apparent as the organizations grow older, stronger, more cumbersome, and come more fully under the influence of the spirit of organized religion. The tendency in them all is toward decay in personal consecration and individual piety, and they are liable at any time to fall into the hands of designing and self-seeking men who will manipulate them for their own glory and profit; but the work of the Lord has gone on from the beginning, and probably will go on to the end, in a series of revolutions and reformations led by consecrated men and women who break away from such organizations, as they fall into spiritual decay, and walk with God. There are too many high honors, big salaries, costly edifices, and moneyed institutions and corporations in organized religion to harmonize with the spirit of the Man of sorrows and Friend of sinners, who had not where to lay his head. All this is a demoralizing example of worldly vanity and the love of money. No one that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of such organizations, "that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." "The love of money is the root of all evil," and in this money-loving age there are few, if any, places where the rush for the almighty dollar is fiercer than in organized religion. The efforts that are made and the methods that are employed to get money "for the benefit of the church" are often reprehensible, from a standpoint of equity and honesty, and never commendable as wholesome examples of spirituality. To successfully financier complicated and cumbersome religious organizations requires much the same worldly sagacity and disregard of nice points of spirituality as the management of railroad monopolies and campaign boodle in national elections. It is all vanity and vexation of spirit to men who really desire to fear God and keep his commandments. Organized religion would shorten the distance to the kingdom of heaven by a long stride if it would heed the admonition of Jesus: "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me." Men who manage the complicated business affairs and far-reaching financial schemes of denominational organizations have little time to take part in the work of individual evangelism. Moreover, the effort to evangelize the world systematically by such organizations deadens the sense of personal responsibility and discourages the spirit of individual activity. There is too much dependence upon organizations, and not enough emphasis upon personal consecration. The individual is lost in the institution, and the organization falls into decay because it lacks the power of personal effort. Christianity has never prospered under the system of organized religion. The thorns of worldly vanity have always choked the seed and smothered the spirit of Christianity in ecclesiastical organizations. Periods of great revivalistic zeal and evangelistic fervor have always been seasons of individual effort and personal consecration, when men and women were unhampered by ecclesiastical organization, "and every one's bands were loosed." It is exceedingly problematical whether any congregation of worshipers in New Testament times so much as owned a house of any kind in which to hold their meetings, and certain it is the house in which they worshiped was never called a church or considered indispensable to the work and worship of the Lord. They met on the first day of the week for public worship (Acts 7: 20; 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2; 11: 18-24; 14: 23-26; Heb.

10: 25), but the places of such meetings were temporary. varied, and uncertain. They met in upper rooms (Acts 20: 7, 8), in private houses (Rom. 16: 3-5; 1 Cor. 16: 19). and sometimes they doubtless met as "they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth" (Heb. 11: 38.) They did not build costly houses and wait for the people to come to fixed places of worship to hear the gospel in periodic sermons and receive the word in capsules of methodical discourses, but "they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." (Acts 8: 4.) They all preached, wherever they went, to everybody they met. They preached "by a riverside" (Acts 16: 13), in jail (Acts 16: 32), in the synagogues Acts 17: 1-12), in the temple (Acts 5: 25), in the market (Acts 17: 17), in the city court (Acts 17: 22), from house to house (Acts 20: 20), and along the highway (Acts 8: 35, 36). They were neither cranks nor fanatics, but they labored personally to convert men and women to Christ and lead them to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, rather than to build up institutions and make proselytes to ecclesiastical organizations. They put the emphasis upon individual piety and personal worship and service of the Lord, rather than upon strong organizations and centralized institutions and corporations in religion. The spread of the gospel by such individual efforts and personal work, without any method of systematic organization, and against everything human ingenuity could do to prevent it, was the marvel of the age. Denominational organizations are plainly condemned by the New Testament because they produce strife, envying, contentions, and schisms in the body of Christ among the people of God. All ecclesiastical organizations are departures from the simplicity that is in Christ. "For whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" (1 Cor. 3: 3.) "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you. Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" (1 Cor. 1: 10-13.) "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (John 17: 20, 21.) Those who believe on Christ through the word of those whom he has sent never can be one in any denominational organization, but they can be one in Christ. The only way to harmony among the people of God is in abandonment and abolishment of all ecclesiastical organizations unknown in the New Testament. "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." (Eph. 4: 3, 4.) The unity of the Spirit and the bond of peace is in the one body, and not in a denominational organization. If Christians will abandon and abolish all denominational organizations, and walk with God, there will be unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace among them in one body. "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." John 1: 7.) The way for Christians to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace in one body is to be nothing but Christians, belong to nothing but the body of Christ, which is the church, and preach and practice nothing but what Christians and churches preached and practiced in New Testament times under the leadership of

OUR MESSAGES

Study to do good.

Send us a subscriber.

To live righteously is to do right.

Every Christian can lead a soul to Christ.

W. N. Ridge preached at Mandy's Chapel last Lord's

R. T. Currin, of McEwen, Tenn., was in to see us last

A. G. Freed preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day.

E. A. Elam preached at David Lipscomb College last Lord's day.

L. L. Yeagley preached at Charlotte Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

W. F. Lemmons began a meeting at Pecan Gap, Texas, on February 28.

Abraham Lincoln said: "You cannot fly a high kite unless you have a long string."

James E. Chessor preached at the Belmont Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day.

John L. Rainey preached at Boscobel Street, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night.

Oscar Parham, of Pinewood, Tenn., made the Gospel Advocate office a very pleasant visit last week.

P. Hovious preached at Twelfth Avenue last Lord's-day morning, and Milton Acuff spoke at the night service.

We will appreciate it if brethren will suggest publicly to the congregations the good they may derive from subscribing for the Gospel Advocate.

F. B. Srygley is in a splendid meeting at Woodsfield, Ohio. Large audiences are listening to Brother Srygley do some of his best preaching. Five have been added to date.

C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark., February 26: "I was at Hampton, Ark., last Sunday. It is my aim to make this year one of the best of my life in the service of the Master."

Married, at the home of the bride, on the White's Creek pike, near Nashville, Tenn., Sunday, March 1, Richard Allen Seat and Annie Madaline Smith, James A. Allen officiating.

W. Silas Moody began a meeting at Joseph Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. Services every night at half past seven o'clock. T. B. Simpkins is leading the song service. All are invited.

L. B. Jones recently baptized two at Russellville, Ala. Brother Jones reports that the church in Russellville is doing fine. There are seventy-five in the Wednesdaynight Bible class.

Married, in the parlors of the Lindsley Avenue church of Christ, Nashville, Tenn., Thursday, February 26, David King and Clarrine May, both of McMinnville, Tenn., James A. Allen officiating.

S. H. Biggerstaff, Caney, Okla., February 27: "The meeting at this place continues with good interest. I shall begin next Monday night at Caddo, Okla., and from there I shall go to Darwin, near Antlers."

S. H. Hall closed a splendid meeting with the Central church of Christ, Los Angeles, Cal., last Lord's-day night. Fourteen were baptized, five were restored, and two became identified with the congregation by statement.

J. H. Hastings, Blytheville, Ark., February 26: "I wish the Gospel Advocate could be placed in every Christian home in this country, for it contends earnestly for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

R. D. Stafford, Cushing, Okla., February 25: "I enjoy reading the first page of the Gospel Advocate very much, and appreciate the stand taken therein; and, in fact, I never stop until I have read the last page, as it is good all the way through."

Oscar Jones, Golconda, Ill., February 25: "I am interested in getting the Gospel Advocate in the homes of the brethren here. I am very sure it is needed. I commend the paper, and wish to induce others to read it for the good it will do them."

W. T. Hines, Neosho, Mo., February 20: "I recently held a debate with a Mr. Fowler, a Russellite. Much good has resulted. Our crowds at church are a third larger. I will meet another one of the same type in the near future. Success to all gospel workers."

E. C. Coffman, Houston, Texas, February 23: "There were nine additions to the First Church yesterday, making a total of twenty-six from all sources during the month. The largest crowds in the history of the church are now attending the services."

C. A. Myers, Iron City, Tenn., February 20: "I am sending you a few new subscribers. I told them if they would read the Gospel Advocate for twelve months and were not satisfied, I would pay them their money back. I think that much of the good old paper."

Gordon H. Turner, Columbia, Tenn., February 25: "I preached Sunday a week ago twice for the Scott's Hill Church; and last Sunday morning I was with the North Chattanooga congregation, and preached at night for the St. Elmo Church. Good attendance and interest at all the services."

J. A. Craig, Fresno, Cal., February 16: "Our house was almost filled to full capacity yesterday, and eight persons enlisted as members of the congregation. Interest is growing, and we contemplate appointing one or more additional elders soon. We are planning for a series of meetings in April."

G. C. Brewer (Christian) and J. J. Walker (transgressive Christian) began a four-days' debate on instrumental music yesterday (March 4), at Columbia, Tenn. The debate is being conducted in the courtheuse, and commences at half past seven o'clock every night. Arrangements have been made to care for visiting brethren.

H. M. Phillips, Nashville, Tenn., February 27: "The Lord willing, I will assist in a meeting at Burritt College, Spencer, Tenn., beginning on March 9 and continuing for about two weeks. The meeting at Lischey Avenue, this city, is to begin on March 22 instead of March 15, as announced in the Gospel Advocate of February 26."

Alonzo Williams, Water Valley, Ky., February 22: "We have a zealous congregation at Murray, Ky. It has grown rapidly in the past several years under the preaching of Coleman Overby, B. L. Douthitt, A. B. Barret, Horace Busby, and G. A. Dunn, Sr., and the godly lives of its membership. I am preaching there twice each month."

Mrs. B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., February 27: "Mr. Davis is doing as well as we could expect. He has recovered from the antrum operation. The doctors have to go slow on account of his poisoned, weakened condition. I am indeed very grateful to the brethren for the help they have given me. Remember us when you pray."

Dr. W. I. Swangem, D. G. Prater, T. M. Kuykendall, and P. C. Breeden, elders at Terrell, Texas, February 18: "Our work moves on peacefully and harmoniously, and we plan to do more work within the next year than heretofore. It is felt that mission work has been too long neglected, and it is hoped that we may be able to carry the word to at least those who live round about us. We covet the prayers of the brethren for our work."

We regret to advise our readers of the death of Sister Hall, mother of S. H. Hall, which occurred at Smyrna, Tenn., on Tuesday, February 24. Sister Hall was eighty-four years and one day old. Owing to the fact that her son, S. H. Hall, was in California conducting a protracted meeting at the time of her death, her funeral will be conducted Friday, March 6, at 2 P.M., at the home of her son, J. T. Hall, Smyrna, Tenn. A more extended notice will appear later.

S. C. Bolding, Joppa, Ala., February 23: "I am inclosing my check for two dollars, renewal to the Gospel Advocate. I have been a subscriber to the Advocate for twenty-eight years in April. I want to say that the Gospel Advocate is the best paper in the brotherhood. I am always glad when it comes. I first look up F. B. Srygley's article to see who he has got treed; then I turn to Brother Allen's first-page matter, and then on through. I earnestly desire to get as many of the members of the church at my place as possible to take the Advocate, for I believe if they would read it one year they would not then quit."

- C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., February 23: "Two additions at the morning services yesterday. We give our Heavenly Father all the credit and praise his matchless name."
- W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn., February 24: "I preached to two fine audiences at Crossville yesterday. I will be at Smyrna, in Putnam County, next Lord's day. The work is moving on nicely."
- T. W. Phillips, Shreveport, La., February 24: "There were two confessions and four by letter, with capacity crowds, last Sunday. We have ordered fifty additional chairs for our needs at the present."

Every congregation that is able, with all of its members giving one-tenth, should keep an evangelist going from town to town and from city to city. There would be great joy in the souls saved and the new churches established.

J. A. Terry, Athens, Ala., Route 3, February 23: "I enjoy the Gospel Advocate very much. I think the articles it contains are grand, because they are founded on the grand old Book of books. May God bless the Advocate staff, for they are doing a great work for New Testament truth."

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, February 16: "We are having additions right along. Fine audience present yesterday. We now have our new brick building in use and well seated, which gives us a great opportunity build up the Master's cause. We have some fine singers among our members. I preached at O. M. yesterday to fine crowds."

Tice Elkins, Temple, Okla., February 24: "I baptized one Methodist lady a week ago, and have two more to baptize from the Methodist Church next Sunday. I have preached two funerals here in the last two weeks. The church is fine here, with a mind to work. My time is all taken to December, and I hope for the best year's work of my life. My health is fine now, and I think I can do better work."

- J. G. Malphurs, Blackwater, Mo., February 24: "The church here is doing just fine since the digressive element left us. Our attendance since the division is better than it was a year ago, many having taken on new life. We are in possession of the meetinghouse and the parsonage, and do not expect to be dispossessed. Song leaders and Bible teachers are staying with the Book. Brotherly love grows stronger. I hope to give the outcome of the property details later."
- L. L. Brigance, Dade City, Fla., February 26: "Mrs. Brigance and I, with our little boy, Fred, are in the 'Land of Flowers.' I have just closed a good meeting at Avon Park, which grew in attendance and interest to the last service. There were several additions. I began at this place on Monday night. A small congregation and little interest to begin with, but hope that it may improve. We will leave here for Tennessee about March 3, and will stop over in Jacksonville and see Hardeman on our return."

Among the new books lately published by our brethren is one just from the press, called "The Spirit of Christ," by W. S. Long, Jr., and C. R. Rice. Nineteen subjects are discussed, and the writers quote from many of our leading brethren. Strong testimonials have come from leading brethren in all parts of the country. Among the many commending the book are T. B. Larimore, A. G. Freed, and Dr. W. F. Roberts. Those who want a copy may order from the Gospel Advocate Company.

R. L. Colley, Union City, Tenn., February 23: "I have in a public way been encouraging the brethren here to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate through W. S. Long, Sr. (the Gospel Advocate's agent at Union City), and will at all opportune times get all to subscribe that I can. I have been convinced for a long time that the Advocate is the best religious journal in the brotherhood, or in the world, as to that matter. It should have a place in every home, and I feel that every preacher should secure more readers for it."

W. Claude Hall, Henderson, Tenn., February 26: "To the elders of congregations in Tennessee and sister States who have not as yet made arrangements for their meetings this summer and fall: We are in touch with a very flee preacher, a successful evangelist, who will move to Henderson in the summer. He is coming from the West, and is buying some property in Henderson. He is available for a few meetings. There are no better men than he, and few better preachers. If you would like to get in communication with him, write us for further information."

- A. C. Traylor, Bradentown, Fla., February 24: "Sunday, February 22, was the best day that I have had since I came to the State of Florida. I was with the church at Sarasota in the morning, and we had a record-breaking crowd and the best interest and attention that was possible. Bradentown and Sarasota turned out for the meeting at Oneca on Sunday evening, and we had a full house and soul-stirring singing. I did the preaching; and when the invitation was extended, four precious souls stepped out—three to make the good confession and one to renew her allegiance to the Master. From all indications, the work here is taking on new life and beginning to grow as a result of faithful, earnest work on the part of all concerned. Success to the Gospel Advocate and all of its force of godly workers."
- J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala., February 23: "Dr. O. H. Tallman, a chiropractor of nine years' experience and a preacher of ability, has been with us for more than a year. During his stay he has been a great help. Besides preaching time and again for the three congregations in the city, he held a great meeting at Chisholm, a suburb of Montgomery, and has preached for different congregations in the country. He has done much good. But owing to the fact that the State of Alabama does not grant license to chiropractors, he is compelled to leave the State. He has secured license in Tennessee, to which State he is going to move in the near future. It gives me pleasure to recommend Dr. Tallman. He is a man of sterling qualities, a Christian in every sense of the word, a preacher of great ability, and is true to the Word."

Truth is our only armor in all passages of life and death.

Emerson.

NELSON

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

Bound in Strong Cloth. Regular Price, $5.00

Our Price, $4.00

WE WILL SEND FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY

SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

If you will send us eight new yearly subscribers to the Gospel Advocate at the regular price of $2.00 each, we will send you this Concordance FREE.

SEND YOUR ORDER AT ONCE

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but missakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

THE CHRISTIAN STANDARD'S COMMENT.

BY F. W. SMITH.

In its issue of February 21, the Christian Standard prefaced its publication of Brother H. L. Calhoun's "Statement," which recently appeared in these columns, Whether or not one fully agrees with Prof. H. L. Calhoun in all his statements or his actions, no one acquainted with his deep sincerity and high motives can entertain anything but an abiding respect for him. Few, in these latter days, have rendered such distinguished services in preserving the simple and pure faith of the New Testament as has Professor Calhoun. His years of faithful and consecrated teaching of the Bible as God's holy word have made of him an outstanding character among those who seek to restore the New Testament organization, its teachings, ordinances, and its life. We are, therefore, assured that the readers of the following statement from him will give to it a most sympathetic consideration. Whether or not one fully agrees with Prof. H. L. Calsideration.

Had the Standard stopped with this complimentary introduction of the "sincerity" and "high motives" of Brother Calhoun, as well as his abiding faith in the word of God and his great ability to teach it, we would not have offered any criticism on the Standard's attitude in the matter. But on the Standard's following comment a few observations are deemed proper:

observations are deemed proper:

All who know Professor Calhoun will wonder why he found it necessary to publish such a statement. Those with whom he has been laboring, and among whom he has wrought such large achievements, will agree with practically all his statement contains. The two possible exceptions are his attitude on the organ and the missionary-society questions. Yet this statement, whether intentionally so or not, creates the impression that Professor Calhoun is leaving one distinct body of people to join another distinct and separate people. That the people with whom he is now affiliating so regard themselves, few will attempt to deny; but those people Professor Calhoun is now leaving have always, as a whole, been willing to affiliate with the people he is joining. It is only the fact that the people of the Professor's new affiliation would not permit the exercise of that free liberty which is in Christ Jesus that has caused whatever cleavage that exists. That many grave abuses have arisen, both from the use of the organ and also the missionary societies, no one even casually informed on conditions would for a moment think of denying. But the fault does not lie in the principle, but in the application that is made of the principle. One might just as well argue that the ordinance of the Lord's Suppershould be abandoned because it was conducive to drunkenness and revelry by a misguided people, or we might surrender the doctrine of the Lord's return on the grounds that it encourages shiftlessness and indolence, since, in New Testament times, some people gave up their occupations, expecting momentarily the appearance of the Lord. With Professor Calhoun our hearts have ached over the evil and insidious abuses that are clothed under the cloak of "Christian liberty," but any one ordinarily intelligent is capable of distinguishing between liberty and license, Without the least intention of giving offense, we can truthfully say that there are very few intolerances greater than some to be found among those who insist that the organ fully say that there are very few intolerances greater than some to be found among those who insist that the organ or missionary society is an evil. On his own account Professor Calhoun has never been hampered in his message or his beliefs in the years he has been associating with the people he now regards himself as leaving. Of course, Professor Calhoun is within his full rights in the action he has taken, and his manly stand in publicly announcing his decision sustains the high admiration in which we have always held him. We cannot avoid the conviction, however, that the Professor, in his change, if it can actually be regarded as a change, is hampering his usefulness. He has a full New Testament right if he lifts up his voice against the organ or the missionary organizahis voice against the organ or the missionary organiza-tion; but when he makes either of these issues a test of fellowship, then he is, in our humble judgment, violating the spirit of the New Testament church, and delaying that much the answer to the Savior's prayer, that his followers might be one even as he and his Father were one. This, we know, Professor Calhoun would not intentionally do.

In the light of Brother Calhoun's published statement reproduced by the Standard, the following statement is surprising: "All who know Professor Calhoun will wonder why he found it necessary to publish such a statement. Those with whom he has been laboring, and among whom he has wrought such large achievements, will agree with practically all his statement contains. The two possible exceptions are his attitude on the organ and the missionary-society questions." Exactly so; and, with the exception of Brother Calhoun's reference to the baneful influence of evolution and destructive criticism so widespread among those with whom he has been associated, the humanly organized missionary societies and instrumental music in connection with the worship of God are given as grounds for his change.

Regarding what the Standard terms "the two possible exceptions," Brother Calhoun said: "I believe that humanly organized missionary societies lead to ecclesiasticism and human authority in religion, and that their use is not a help, but a hindrance, to the progress of the truth. I believe that destructive criticism and evolution are trying to overthrow Christianity, and that instrumental music and humanly organized missionary societies are seeking to corrupt it." Of course, it is freely granted that the Standard is opposed to and teaches against "evolution" and "destructive criticism," but it is so wedded to humanly organized missionary societies and instrumental music as to be powerless to free itself from those other unholy alliances.

Hence, instead of "wondering why Professor Calhoun published such a statement," the Standard should clear its skirts by taking the same course Brother Calhoun has pursued. Occasionally the Standard throws a religious fit over the United Christian Missionary Society, that fullfledged ecclesiasticism to the building up of which it contributed its powerful influence; but its change of heart is only momentary, and before congratulations can be extended that journal has faced about and become the same old sinner as of old. The Standard craves a humanly organized society; and when the United Christian Missionary Society behaves outrageously the Standard leaves home, and talks like the old man who said he did not know what he was to do-that he could not live with his wife and he could not live without her.

When the Standard becomes disgusted and ashamed of the doings of the United Christian Missionary Society and the "open membership" advocates in its camp, it gathers up bag and baggage, as if to move out from Rome toward Jerusalem; but, somehow, it never gets beyond the gates of the city of apostates, and we find the dear journal doing business at the same old stand.

If Brother Calhoun's statement "creates the impression that Professor Calhoun is leaving one distinct body of people to join another distinct and separate people," a statement from the Standard creates the same impression—viz.: "It is only the fact that the people of the Professor's new affiliation would not permit the exercise of that free liberty which is in Christ Jesus that has caused whatever cleavage that exists." If the Standard does not regard those with whom Brother Calhoun has cast his lot a "distinct and separate people," how are we to interpret the Standard when it says "the people of the Professor's new affiliation?"

The Standard also speaks of "those people Professor Calhoun is now leaving" in contradistinction to "the people of the Professor's new affiliation;" but, of course, the Standard must not be charged with creating the impression that these are "distinct and separate people."

But what about the Standard's "exercise of that free liberty which is in Christ Jesus?" Why, simply this: The Standard claims the "liberty" to have humanly organized missionary societies and instrumental music in the worship of God, and "the people of the Professor's new affiliation" claim the liberty to not have these things. Thus, if it could be shown that the Standard has any such liberty, the "distinct and separate people" on both sides are even on simply the "liberty" proposition. What right, then, has the Standard to "exercise its liberty" and deny "the people of the Professor's new affiliation" the right to exercise their liberty?

How unjust, illogical, and unbrotherly is the Standard's charge that "the people of the Professor's new affiliation," in not permitting the Standard to thrust what it terms its "liberty" on them, "have caused whatever cleavage that exists!" Shame on "those people Professor Calhoun is now leaving" for arrogating to themselves such dictatorial powers of ecclesiasticism!

The charge by the Standard that "the people of Professor Calhoun's new affiliation" make the missionary society and the organ "a test of fellowship" is nothing short of downright wickedness, and the Standard should get on its knees and implore God's forgiveness. Until the Standard can give divine authority for the introduction of such things, it becomes the sinner in the case, because in occupying the ground it does it would force "the people of Professor Calhoun's new affiliation" to stultify their consciences in order to have fellowship with the people Brother Calhoun is leaving. Furthermore, Brother Calhoun is now standing on common ground, and the Standard can easily occupy this ground without doing violence to its conscience. Who, then, is the transgressor?

The Standard indulges in childish talk in that it compares the abuse of a thing God has commanded people to do with what it calls an abuse of that which it only claims the liberty to do. God commands his people to eat the Lord's Supper; but will the Standard dare claim that God commands the organization of human missionary societies and the use of instrumental music in his worship? To be perfectly frank, it is flatly denied that the Standard has any such liberty as it here claims, whether the things in question are "abused" or not.

The Standard need not worry itself over the fear that Brother Calhoun, by the step he has taken, "is hampering his usefulness;" for fields of the greatest usefulness are already opening to him, and such fields will continue to open. H. L. Calhoun has come among the people that not only know him, but who love and appreciate him; and, best of all, he is not only at home, but feels at home. The Gopel Advocate will stand by Brother Calhoun and cooperate with him in upholding the purity of New Testament teaching.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Having written last week a description of the Memorial erected in Washington City to Abraham Lincoln, I wish to tell you now of the Lincoln Museum here.

In 1860, Osborn H. Oldroyd, born and educated in Mount Vernon, Ohio, began collecting mementos of Abraham Lincoln. By natural inclination a collector, Mr. Oldroyd in his boyhood had a fine collection of natural-history specimens; but, being deeply impressed by the career of Abraham Lincoln, who was successively a frontier prairie farmer's boy, a strenuously studious youth, an eloquent and successful advocate, a noted member of Congress, and President of the United States, he collected and preserved clippings, newspaper articles, and all else available about Lincoln. Those early gleanings are in the Museum and form a valuable part of its treasures.

Mr. Oldroyd never saw Lincoln. He served four years in the Federal Army in the bloody sixties; and before his return to private life, Lincoln had fallen by the bullet of an assassin. During his term as a soldier, he constantly added to his collection of pen and pencil jottings, and after Lincoln's tragic death redoubled his efforts in that line. He rented the Lincoln homestead in Springfield, Ill., and there arranged his collection for exhibition as a museum. Later he was invited by the Memorial Association of the District of Columbia to bring his collection to Washington City, with a view to its purchase by the Government.

The Association rented for the Museum the house in which Lincoln died—a plain three-story-and-basement red brick building—now 516 Tenth Street, Northwest—opposite Ford's Theater, where Lincoln was shot. The Government later bought that house and also Ford's Theater, which was never used as a theater after that tragic fourteenth of April, 1865. It bears no semblance to a theater now, having been remodeled for the use of the Government. The play that was being performed that night—"Our American Cousin"—has never again been played in any theater in the United States, I have been credibly informed.

Immediately after the shooting of Lincoln in his box by John Wilkes Booth, physicians attending the sinking President decided that the unavoidable jolting incident to conveying him to the White House, about six blocks distant, would be fatal; hence, he was carried into the house opposite and placed on a bed in a room just back of the entrance hall, where he died the next morning; and that house is now the home of the Lincoln Museum.

The walls of the entrance hall are literally covered with pictures of Lincoln at various stages of his career, and of many kinds—steel engravings, photographs, lithographs—the entire collection embracing nearly three hundred pictures of Lincoln, exclusive of many groups of which he is the central figure.

The first door on the left after entering the hall leads to what was the front parlor of the house. Here are more pertraits of Lincoln; pictures of his home in Springfield; a photograph of the log cabin built by him and his father in 1831, on Goose Neck Prairie, near Farmington, Ill.; and a picture of the interior of the cabin, showing the remains of an old spinning wheel used by his stepmother. His father died in that cabin in 1851, and there the stepmother, to whom he owed much of his training, passed away after his election as President, she having lived to see the realization of her hopes for his success in life.

Inclosed in glass cases in this room are many relics: Autograph letters; a lock of Lincoln's hair; a discharge given by Captain A. Lincoln to one of his men in the Black Hawk War; valuable books, including the family Rible, on the cover of which is the name of Abraham Lincoln, written by himself; a lock of Booth's hair; a piece of the crutch he used after the assassination; and many other articles of interest. Among the many pictures on the walls is one of Booth, who was said to be unquestionably the handsomest man in Washington at that time, without a blemish from head to foot. Near the picture of Booth is the spur he wore the night of the assassination, which caught in the fringe of the flag that draped the President's box, causing Booth to fall heavily to the stage, instead of leaping lightly, thereby breaking his leg, and finally leading to his capture and death by a pistol shot. The flag in which his foot caught belongs to the Treasury Department and hangs in a glass case in one of the corridors of the Treasury Building.

In the wide doorway between the front and the back parlor hangs a black walnut rail that was split by Abraham Lincoln in 1830, taken from the fence around his father's cabin, as certified by John Hanks and attested by Governor Oglesby in 1860. In the back parlor are many pictures illustrating the assassination, the flight and capture of Booth and Herold, the arrest and trial of the conspirators, and the execution of the four who were hanged-Mrs. Surratt, David Herold, Lewis Payne, and George Atzerodt; life masks of Lincoln's face and hands; many cartoons that appeared in the newspapers during Lincoln's political campaigns; a photograph of his visit to McClellan's headquarters after the battle of Antietam; and many other things of interest.

At the rear of the entrance hall is the room in which Lincoln died-seventeen by nine feet-which is preserved just as it was at the time of his death, except that the bed and other furniture have been removed and the room has been converted into a gallery of pictures representing scenes of his life and death, and a museum of relics in glass cases. Many portrayals of the last moments of Lincoln present pictures of distinguished persons who visited his bedside. One made by an artist in that room the morning after his death, from photographs and information furnished by those present, is considered an accurate portrayal of the death scene.

In the rear of this room is a smaller room utilized as a library, containing more than a thousand volumes of biography of Lincoln and books relating to the Civil War, newspapers and magazines containing articles relating to him, manuscripts of funeral sermons, books and pamphlets that belonged to Lincoln, and many touching original letters addressed to or written by him.

Back of the library is a room that has been added to the original building to make room for the collection. In that room is a cooking stove used by the Lincoln family in Springfield; the cradle in which the Lincoln children were rocked; Lincoln's office desk and the office chair in which he sat when writing his first inaugural address; statuettes, photographs, engravings, and many other objects-so many that it is impossible, within the limits of this article, to mention them all.

A few years ago Henry Ford offered Mr. Oldroyd fifty thousand dollars for this collection; but the offer was not accepted, Mr. Oldroyd believing the United States Congress would make an appropriation to buy the collection, rather than allow it to be removed from Washington, as it would be if Mr. Ford purchased it. A bill to appropriate fifty thousand dollars to buy the collection has passed the Senate and is awaiting its fate in the House. A small fee -twenty-five cents-is charged for admission to the Museum, to defray the cost of preserving the relics. If the Government buys the collection, however, the Museum will be free to the public, of course.

The Lincoln Museum is a wonderful collection of relics, and the more than three thousand articles comprising it afford interesting and accurate glimpses of Lincoln's life and character, his trials and triumphs, from his boyhood in his log-cabin home to the moment when, the attending physicians having pronounced him dead, Edwin M. Stanton, his Secretary of War, approached his bedside and sadly said: " Now he belongs to the ages."

WOMEN PREACHERS AND THE MAJORITY RULE.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Potter, Kan., February 2, 1925.—Dear Brother Elam: Please answer, through the Gospel Advocate, the questions which follow. The church at this place is a digressive one, and they have employed a lady minister for the past two years and now starting on the third year. I have refused to help support her. They think I ought to help because the majority want her, and because the church is weak and in a Catholic neighborhood. They say that Paul's letter to the Corinthians was only referring to that one church, as they were having trouble in that church; and, too, that Philip's daughters were inspired and went about teaching, and that there is no difference in teaching and preaching, and how do we know that they taught only in homes? And they say that all reference to women's keeping silence had reference to the old law and could not be binding in this enlightened age.

I would like to see these questions answered. And, too, is it wrong to help support and attend church under such circumstances?

This lady preacher says there are whole counties in Tennessee in which there are not any schools or churches. Is that true?

I will thank you for any information you may give. A. H. B.

Certainly it is a digression from the word of God to employ a woman preacher, because no women in the New Testament were ever appointed by the Lord to serve as elders, evangelists, or public proclaimers of the gospel. The New Testament emphatically says:

As in all the churches of the saints, let the women keep silence in the churches [the congregations or public assemsilence in the churches the congregations of public assemblies]: for it is not permitted unto them to speak [to make public addresses]; but let them be in subjection, as also saith the law. And if they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home: for it is shameful for a woman to speak [make a public address] in the church.

If any man thinketh himself to be a prophet, or smiritual [that is inspired] let him take knowledge of the spiritual [that is, inspired], let him take knowledge of the things which I write unto you, that they are the commandment of the Lord. But if any man is ignorant, let (1 Cor. 14: 33-38.) him be ignorant.

The last verse of this quotation means that, if a man is ignorant of this teaching of God, or will not learn it, he will have to remain in ignorance of it; or if he does not know this, he is not known as a preacher of the gospel, or by the Lord.

The whole context from verse 26 to verse 38 in the Revised Version shows that the apostle refers to making public speeches in congregations or mixed audiences of men and women, saints and sinners, and that to "keep silence" means not to make such public speeches. Nothing can be plainer than this, and, as Paul declares, he who does not accept this as the will of God is in ignorance of that will and is no prophet or spiritual teacher.

Neither was this written to a few misguided women, guilty of immodest and unladylike conduct, in the one church at Corinth, because the Lord says: "As in all the churches of the saints, let the women keep silence in the churches." This includes all churches for all time

Whatever is said in other places in the New Testament in reference to women teaching does not mean that they are to teach in the way of making public addresses to mixed audiences, because God forbids this.

See 1 Tim. 2: -15. Paul says:

I desire, therefore, that the men pray in every place. . . . In like manner, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefastness and sobriety. Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness.

This passage draws a contrast between men praying "in every place" and women learning in quietness and subjection, adorning themselves with shamefacedness and sobriety and modest apparel. "To be in quietness," to "learn in quietness" and "with all subjection" are very significant of the nature of the work women are to do. The reason for this is given: that woman was not first formed and was not made the head of man; but, as stated elsewhere, man is the head of woman, as Christ is the head of the church, and God is the head of Christ.

For Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not beguiled, but the woman being beguiled hath fallen into transgression: but she shall be saved through her childbearing, if they continue in faith and love and sanctification with sobriety.

Faith comes by hearing the word of God, and women who do not believe and do not practice that which God teaches concerning themselves do not "continue in faith." Love is obedience to God, and women who do not obey that which God teaches concerning themselves do not love God. Sanctification means set apart to the service of God. serve God is to think and act as he directs, and women who do not think and act as he directs them do not continue in sanctification. Sobriety is thoughtful, serious, and reverential submission to God in apparel, modest behavior, home-keeping, and in all things that pertain unto life and godliness, and women who do not regard all this teaching of God concerning themselves do not continue in

"Eve" means "living," or "life," and was so named because she was "the mother of all living." When women cease to become mothers, the race will cease. Paul says: "I desire therefore that the younger widows [" women "margin] marry, bear children, rule the household, give no occasion to the adversary for reviling: for already some are turned aside after Satan." (1 Tim. 5: 14, 15.)

Nothing in the Bible is plainer than woman's sphere, or work, or mission. Women who fear God and love the Lord are happy to remain in this sphere, to do this work and fill this mission. On the contrary, women who are not satisfied to live and to work in their God-appointed sphere are presumptuous, presuming to know better than their Creator what is the best for them to do. Such a course as surely leads to ruin now as Eve's course did when, beguiled by Satan, she undertook to become head and manage for man in Eden.

The New Testament makes clear the difference between preaching and teaching. The apostles were sent out both to proclaim the gospel and to teach the observance of all things whatsoever Jesus had commanded. He who does not know this has read the New Testament to little profit. Women should teach in their sphere and in the way God has appointed.

Philip's daughters, although inspired, taught in the way, therefore, in which God directs women to teach, but not in the way in which he forbids their doing so. God never inspired women to do that which he says it is shameful for them to do. Women now can never become so intelligent, so learned, so wise, so good, and so filled with the Holy Spirit as to be pleasing to God in doing anything which he forbids. It is not the wisdom of God or the Spirit of Christ which leads people in any way which God has not appointed; this is the wisdom and spirit of the world.

Priscilla, in company with her husband, taught in a private manner the eloquent Apollos "the way of the Lord more accurately." (Acts 18: 24-28.) In this way the prophetess, Anna, served for so long in the temple, "worshiping with fasting and supplications night and day," and gave thanks for the child, Jesus, and "spoke of him to all them that were looking for the redemption of Jerusalem." (Luke 2: 36-38.)

In this way women should teach to-day. Old women. free from gossip and slander and indulgence in wine, are commanded to live reverential lives and to "train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed." (Tit. 2: 3-6.) 1 Pet. 3: 1-6 shows how women are to dress and to deport themselves so as to win their husbands to Christ. 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10 gives the general life of women in the church. Women who have lived such lives while wives and mothers are worthy of support by the church when widows.

No woman is commended for being a faithful elder, for no women were elders; no woman is commended as worthy of support by the church in widowhood or old age because she was a faithful evangelist, for no woman was a public preacher or proclaimer of the gospel.

The only way women can meet Catholicism or any other error is by living such quiet, modest, home-keeping, and godly lives as God directs them to live, not by doing something which God forbids them to do. The only way in which the church can meet and overcome denominational error in any form is, not by becoming another denomination with denominational machinery, or by fighting it through political parties and secret organizations, but by standing out clear-cut and distinct and separate from all other organizations-religious, benevolent, or political-as the church of the New Testament, whose head and sole director is Christ, and Christ alone. One error cannot be met and overcome by some other error. The church cannot fight the devil with fire.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY A TEST OF FELLOWSHIP.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The Christian Standard of recent date contained the following editorial:

FAITH IN THE U. C. M. S. ESSENTIAL TO FELLOWSHIP.

We are credibly informed that the minister of a congregation in Cincinnati,* purporting to be a church of Christ, in extending the customary invitation every Lord's-day morning, qualified it so as to make it an invitation to those in sympathy with "the policy of this congregation." In other words, instead of extending an invitation to join Christ and be united to one of his churches, it was an invitation to join a policy formulated by the minister and officers of that congregation. It later developed, in an elders' meeting, that by "the policy" the minister meant just what he was suspected of meaning—namely, the policy of supporting the United Christian Missionary Society. To the credit of the eldership be it said that, as a result of a protest, that form of invitation was discontinued. In conversation with individuals, the minister has indicated that all not in sympathy with the aforesaid policy should leave the congregation. We are credibly informed that the minister of a conleave the congregation.

While this comes to us with every guarantee of reliability, it is difficult to believe it. Yet the spirit being inculcated all over the brotherhood by the United Society must eventually come to this. Indeed, unwilling as we are must eventually come to this. Indeed, unwilling as we are to believe it, the evidence daily accumulates that in one congregation after another the United Society is being made, not only the cause of ill feeling, but the test of fellowship. We have just heard of two cases in each of which the group in the congregation who favor the United Society deliberately fought an evangelistic meeting conducted by the minister, solely because he does not agree with them on the United Society.

We are informed of a case in which members of the women's missionary society went to persons who were "almost persuaded" and urged them not to accept the Christ as long as the minister was not in sympathy with the United Society.

United Society.

Whatever be the merits or demerits of the United Society, to make it a test of fellowship is rank heresy.

In this Cincinnati congregation the minister's dictum

^{*}The congregation cited is the Walnut Hills Christian Church-J. J. Castleberry, minister.

has been backed up by a declaration from the board of elders and deacons announcing that support of the United Society is the policy of the congregation, directing that no organization of the church send missionary funds elsewhere, and broadly implying that those not in harmony with the policy of the congregation can find fellowship elsewhere. A new creed adopted, in other words!

Behold what we have come to!

The fellowship founded on faith in the Lord Jesus Christ must be sundered at the demand for faith in the United Christian Missionary Society!

Already we have too much evidence that whenever the influence of the U. C. M. S. can be brought to bear, there is no scruple:

1. To prevent the employment of every minister who is not subservient to the U. C. M. S.

2. To prevent the circulation of every paper that is not so subservient.

To antagonize the operation of every agency that exercises its God-given right to serve the Lord in any way consistent with his word.

consistent with his word.

We have only to join, all of us, in this grossly heretical policy, and the churches that prefer the Clarke Fund, or the Mexican Mission, or Tokyo, or South Africa, to each erect a standard of faith in its own fad, and send every one packing who fails to subscribe, to realize the demise of Christian unity founded on faith in the Son of God! I am of the U. C. M. S.; I am of the Clarke Fund; I of Mexico, I of South Africa, I of the Board of Publication, I of the Standard Publishing Company, I of the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity. Glory to God in the highest! in the highest!

Absurd as this appears, it is but the legitimate outcome of the policy now pursued by the U. C. M. S.

If I am not mistaken, this J. J. Castleberry is the same transgressive brother who formerly preached in Union City, Tenn. If I am correct in this, Brother Brown, the editor of the Standard, can sympathize with us here in Tennessee, as he has before him a sample of the kind of transgressors we have to contend with down here. They made the missionary society and the use of an instrument of music a test of fellowship in these parts when they introduced them into a few churches in Tennessee some thirty years ago. There is nothing yet that breaks the fellowship of a great body of disciples and Vine Street and Woodland Street Churches, except that these two churches use an instrument of music in their worship and support unauthorized missionary societies through which to preach the gospel instead of the church. These things were introduced into the churches when the leaders knew that it would drive out some of as good members as they had. They knew, furthermore, that, even if it were not wrong to use these things, those objecting to them, believing as they did that it was wrong, could not remain with them and be true to their convictions, and vet they went "onward" and introduced them, and thus broke fellowship with these good people, and now comfort themselves by calling them "narrow" and other nice (?) names. True, it was not the "United Christian Missionary Society," but it was perhaps one of those out of which this one was formed. There is as much scriptural right (which is none whatever) for the existence of the one Brother Castleberry has made a test of fellowship as there is for the ones they were advocating them. The Standard never raised so much as the weight of a straw against these things then, and, so far as I know, it would not be opposing the U. C. M. S. now if it could control it as it felt it was controlling those that existed then. Why can the Standard not learn that all unauthorized societies are wrong, even if his ox is not gored? As long as the other gentleman's ox was gored, it was all right; but now, since the animal has turned on him, he wants him killed outright. Be patient, Brother Brown, with Brother Castleberry, because the course of the Standard in the past may have had something to do with his training, which prepared him for the course he is now pursuing.

Of Brother Castleberry's "policy" the Standard says: "Instead of extending an invitation to join Christ and be united to one of his churches, it was an invitation to join a policy formulated by the minister and officers of that congregation." Beloved, we are used to this in these parts, for we have seen for many years that the only thing these transgressive brethren can offer a man which he cannot find in a true church is a "policy;" and if they do not join the "policy," what can they join? There is another strange thing about these brethren here in Nashville; and that is, within a few months after they get a brother to transgress enough to join a "policy" they give him some kind of an office. It has been noted here that when men who have been associated with a church that has no policy except the New Testament teaching, when they accept an invitation to "join a policy" rather than to be "united with Christ," are soon made elders or deacons, which, I suppose, quiets their consciences by making them feel that they are of great worth to the "policy." They usually elect their officers every year, and I notice that one of these churches with a "policy" recently elected thirtyseven deacons and seven elders. This is enough offices to furnish one for every new convert to the "policy" instead of to Christ.

The Standard says: "The evidence daily accumulates that in one congregation after another the United Society is being made not only the cause of ill feeling, but the test of fellowship." We have seen in this city men who had been our friends when they walked with us in the "old paths" turn out to be our enemies when they joined a "policy" instead of Christ. The brother has "just heard of two cases in each of which the group in the congregation who favor the United Society deliberately fought an evangelistic meeting conducted by the minister, solely because he does not agree with them on the United Society." This is no news to some of us who have evangelized over the country. I have heard some good men say that the worst enemy the truth has are those who have joined a "policy" rather than Christ. There are some in this country who have joined a "policy" that have more sympathy and fellowship for a denominational preacher who does not preach the full gospel than they have for us who have joined Christ and not a "policy." The brother further says: "Whatever be the merits or demerits of the United Society, to make it a test of fellowship is rank heresy." It will be noted that the brother says that "the evidence daily accumulates that in one congregation after another the United Society is being made . . . the test of fellowship," and that " to make it a test of fellowship is rank heresy." With the two statements before us, I can read from the old Book what the brother ought to do with "one congregation after another." "A man that is a heretic after the first and second admonition reject." (Tit. 8: 10.) That is the way I did Brother Castleberry. I rejected him. And that is exactly what the editor of the Standard will do if he follows the Scriptures. The editor of the Standard will have to do one of two things-either go back on his own words or on the apostle Paul. The Standard has just found out that these brethren who have joined a "policy" have "no scruple." I knew they were lacking in something, but I did not know they were quite so bad; but there is no telling what people will do when they join a "policy" instead of Christ.

DONT'S FOR CHURCH MEMBERS.

Don't stay away because it rains; that would not keep you away from business.

Don't stay away because there are hypocrites in the church; they are in the world, too. The church does not make them hypocrites.

Don't stay away unless you have a reason (reasons exist, excuses are made) you could give to God if summoned into his presence.

It is an axiom of the believing life that joy and Christ go together.—Alexander Smellie.

I Will Prove To You That You Can Make

Yes, you can make $100 a week. You can make $5,000 a year and not work half as hard as you do now. You can do as well as H. T. Pearl, of Oklahoma, who made $750 in one month. You can begin like R. L. Marshall, of New Jersey, who made $80 in five hours. You don't have to wait. You don't have to invest any money. You don't have to take any course or do any studying. You can start right in next week. You can begin at once to make a really big income. The opportunity is waiting. The money is there for you to get. Do you want it? Then read this ad carefully and answer it, for this offer is meant for you.

Your Profits Will Begin At Once

These records show you how our Representatives make large profits the first day. You can easily do as well.

$16 Profit First Day

That's the record of Alyse Leblanc, of Massachusetts.

$32 Profit in 8 Hours is the result of the first day's work of Adolph Montoya, of New Mexico.

$4 in One Evening is pretty good pay for 2 hours' spare time. That is what Samuel Miles, of Arkansas, made his first day.

$13 Profit First Afternoon

Jacob Myron, of Connecticut, started in the afternoon and cleared over $13 before evening.

$4 an Hour was what Margaret La Roux, of Michigan, aver-aged her first afternoon.

$40 in 24 Hours was the result of the first work of B. Collander, of Massachusetts.

@ A. P. Co.

700 Men and Women Wanted At Once

We are now ready to appoint 700 more Representatives in all parts of the country. You can be one of them, and by simply doing what we suggest you can make a net, clear, cold profit for yourself of anywhere from $50 to $100 a week with very little effort. Your first day will bring you big money. W. A. Webster, of Virginia, made $6 in 1½ hours; Leonard Lemay, of Michigan, made $15 his first afternoon; W. P. Stone, of Maine, made $24 in 4½ hours. All without experience or training and you can do as well, or better.

Amazing Profits For Easy Work

We are the originators and manufacturers of "ZANOL" Products—the nationally advertised line of pure food products, toilet preparations, scaps, perfumes, household and aundry necessities—over 350 different kinds.

Four million dollars worth were bought last year but none of these products are sold in stores.

stores. We sell direct from factory to customer. By this means we give greator values and lower prices than could be secured in stores. We have thousands and thousands of customers in every section of the United States. But instead of sending their orders direct to us we appoint a Representative in each locality through whom our customers send us their orders.

Exclusive Territory

We offer to assign you an exclusive territory and let you handle all our dealings with our customers in that territory. You will simply introduce our products and let the people know that you have become the "ZANOL" Representative. The reat is easy. Our products are nationally advertised and well known in every locality. We have been in business for 16 years and have resources of more than a million dollars. The local man or woman who becomes our Representative is given complete instructions, full equipment and everything necessary for success.

More Than A Million Dollars Made By Our Representatives In 8 Months

If you want your share of these big profits all you need do now is write. You won't believe how easy it is nor what wonderful profits you can make until you get started and the money begins to roll in.

We furnish all of our people with complete equipment for doing business. We furnish it free. We tell you in detail exactly what to do. We make it easy for you. We help you in every way to get started quick and to make big profits without waiting or delay. You will be given the same proposition that has brought thousands of dollars in cash to E. S. Shelly, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. None Kerns, of Mississippi; Edgar Banville, of Massachusetts and dozens of others. It has enabled G. O. Henry to make four times as much money as he ever did on a farm and G. A. Becker, of Iowa, to earn more than he did in 22 years in the grocery business.

Send No Money

Just send me your name and I will tell you how to get started. I will give you all the details. I will show you how you can make $100 a week and even in your spare time $8 to $10 a day for a few hours' work. I will show you how you can have a permanent profitable, honorable, pleasant and fascinating business that will bring in a bigger income than you ever thought possible. It is the one opportunity that you have been waiting for. It is your chance to get ahead. It means thousands of dollars for you. And you are not risking a penny. You are not agreeing to pay anything or do anything. So mail the conpon. Don't wait until someone else gets in ahead of you, Don't delay until it is too late. Write now.

THE AMERICAN PRODUCTS CO Albert Mills

Dept. 1199

Cincinnati, Ohlo.

We Furnish An Automobile We want you to realize that this is high-grade proposition. We want to be proposition. We want to help you in every way to make large profits and we offer to provide a car without any expense to you whatever. Just write for our proposition. Mail the coupon for details of the plan that will give you this automobile without expense and from $10 to $30 a day in cash.

PE-SI'	This NOW
Dept. 1189	Olnoinnati, Ohlo. ie, without one cent of cest and obligation, complete details of on by means of which I can to to to $100 s week.
Name
Address	******************
The state of the s	and the second second

CRYING CHILD

wants attention but a coughing child needs attention.

Used and recommended since 1872

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

stops alarming croup coughs, eases stuffy, wheezy breathing, raises chol-ing phlegm easily, allows restful sleep. Benefits both children and grown persons.

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

Good Health, Good Looks

-Shelby Studio.

MRS. J. E. HENDERSON

"For about five years I was in very poor health brought on thru a nervous breakdown," said Mrs. J. E. Henderson, who resides at 423 S. Columbia St., Gastonia, N. C. "I lost in weight, got very thin and almost too weak to get around. I could not sleep or get any rest, had no appetite, was completely worn out and suffered so with my head that I would nearly go mad. I had backaches and pains in my side. I doctored and took medicine but it was Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription that finally restored me to health. It was worth hundreds of dollars to me, for worth hundreds of dollars to me, for it made me a well woman. I gained back my weight and have enjoyed the very best of health since." You should obtain this famous Prescription now at your nearest drug store in tablets or liquid, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. Write for free medical advice,

Colds, La Grippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria It is the most speedy remedy we know

From the Brethren

Chandler, Okla., February 17.— I began a meeting at Amhart School-house, near Purdy, Mo., on Saturday before the first Sunday in February and closed it on the second Sunday and closed it on the second Sunday night, with large crowds and good interest. I am looking forward to my meeting at Granby, Mo., to begin sometime in March. I expect to continue in the work all the year. I have some time not yet taken. Any congregation that has not made arrangements for a minister to assist rangements for a minister to assist them, and that desires my services, should write me at my home address. —George W. Miller,

Muskogee, Okla., February 25.—
The congregation at Porter, Okla., has recently purchased the Presbyterian meetinghouse, and all appear to be taking a greater interest in the work. Their house is well seated, and the brethren are to meet on the first Saturday in March to paint and make some minor repairs on the building, which will make a comfortable place in which to meet. I preached there on the third Sunday in this month, and was well pleased with the attendance. I expect to visit them once a month. Brother J. W. Nunn is one of the active leaders there, and much credit is due him for the success of the church at that place.—C. Maythe church at that place.-C. May-

Stanardsville, Va., February 15.—
I preached to a large audience today, and never have seen as much interest in my life as is shown here by people of denominations. They are begging me to stay and preach reggularly, and having me to come to their homes and study the Bible with them, or rather teach them. We have only one sister here, and she is getting very old. We have a very good house to worship in, but it is needing repairs. I have a large family at Spencer, Tenn., to support, and some other considerations; but if some church or churches want to support me here and I can arrange my some church or churches want to support me here and I can arrange my other work, I would be glad to take up the work. Should any one want to know my life as a Christian, I refer to the churches at Smithville, Sparta, Silver Point, Tenn., and the Corinth Church.—D. L. Robinson.

Corinth Church.—D. L. Robinson.

Moberly, Mo., 518 Monroe Street, February 18.—A few of us want to hold a mission meeting at Moberly in June, but we have no place to hold it. At present we meet in my residence. We want to secure a good-sized tent for about a three-weeks' meeting. If some congregation knows of a tent that we can get or can lend us one for the meeting, it will be a great help in planting the cause of Christ here. We can raise the support for the preacher and can take care of him, and we can seat the tent for about two hundred people. We will need some help in advertising the meeting and paying transportation of the tent. Our total membership consists of eight persons, and three of them are twelve miles away. We are not begging and do not expect to hut merchy meking the needs We are not begging and do not expect to, but merely making the needs of the cause of Christ known in this city of fifteen thousand population after making our sacrifices first. Let

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

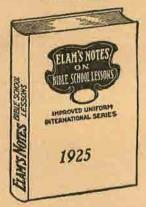

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone. M. 1485

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x51/2 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bihle Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living.—

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound.-N. B.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits .- H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me. -Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Frost-Proof Cabbage Plants

Harly Jersey, Charleston Wakefield, Fiat Dutch, Succession, Copenhagen Market, Post-paid, 300, 75c; 500, $1.00; 1,000, $1.50. F. O. B. Summerville, 1,000, $1.00; 5,000, $4.50; 10,000 up, at $0c. Big Boston, Iceberg Lettuce, same price. Satisfaction guaranteed. D. F. JAMISON, Summerville, S. C.

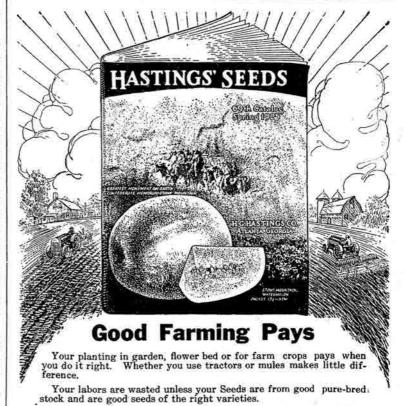

those who know of brethren in or near Moberly write me, and I will call to see them.—James B. Redd.

Pulaski, Tenn., February 20.—In September, 1924, Brother W. S. Long, Jr., and I held a meeting in Wilmington, N. C., as a result of which nine ton, N. C., as a result of which nine were brought together to worship the Lord "as it is written." Brother Gainer, of Winchester, Tenn., and Brother E. Gaston Collins, of Bridgeport, Ala., recently held another meeting there, and five more were added to the one body. Brother Gainer says this meeting was made possible by the Winchester and Reidemort congregations. Now why Bridgeport congregations. Now, why not some congregation (or more than one) follow the example of the Winchester and Bridgeport congregations chester and Bridgeport congregations and select some good preacher to locate and work with the Wilmington congregation? I would be willing to go; but I have a wife and four children to support, which would make it cost more. Can we have a younger man, or a man with a smaller family? If any congregation would like to have a part in this work let them to have a part in this work, let them communicate with Brother Paul Macey, at Wilmington, N. C., or with me, at Pulaski, Tenn.—J. Clifford Murphy.

Paducah, Ky., February 19.—On Monday, February 9, I answered the call of a Baptist woman who wanted to hear the pure gospel preached, near Plantersville, Ala., eighty miles from Birmingham. She met me at the railroad station and conveyed me to her home, where I met her husband. At night I preached in their humble home. There were about nine persons present, and they listened attentively to the word of God. Next day this woman asked me to baptize her, which I did. I left her rejoicing in Christ. I also preached in two Baptist churches while there, and the people seem to be hungry for the truth. This is a fine field, and the harvest is ripe. The Birmingham church sent me down there, and I am church sent me down there, and I am to go back soon. I am now at Paducah in my fourth meeting for this year. I am glad to find most of the thirty-two souls that were baptized last August holding on to the faith. The digressive brethren are permitting us to use their meetinghouse, and they are attending. The white brethren here are arranging for my return in September.

M. KEEBLE. in September.

Montgomery, Ala., February 25.— The churches of Christ of South Ala-bama are all on the upgrade. The bama are all on the upgrade. The Walker-Hall oral discussion of the instrumental-music question in Montgomery in May, 1923, resulted favorably for those who do not allow innovations in the worship. All the established congregations are growestablished congregations are growing and new ones are being established every year. Our brethren who use instrumental music have only one congregation in the city of Montgomery or in Montgomery County, and they are still worshiping in a residence converted into a church house. Plans are on foot to build a house of worship in foot to build a house of worship in Troy, Ala., where one of the State Teachers' Normals is located. The little congregation in Prattville, county seat of Autauga County, meets in the courthouse. Members from Montgomery go over and assist them to have services each Lord's day. Brother J. S. Moores, a preacher of the gospel, who lives near Wetumpka,

This big 1925 Catalog is the Standard Planting Guide of the South. It's the most useful, most interesting and most dependable Seed Book you can get. You need it for good farming, real gardens and worth-while flowers. It makes planting easy Write NOW for the Catalog. You will get it FREE by return mail.

H. G HASTINGS CO.

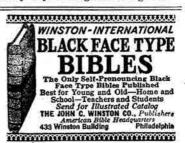

Atlanta

The South's Seedsmen

Georgia

the county seat of Elmore County, stays busy in the Lord's work, and hope is entertained that Wetumpka will have a house of worship in the town in the next few years. Some good work is being done by churches and individuals in this part of the United States, but much more needs to be done.—Fred M. Little.

Toronto, Ontario, Canada, February 14.—The annual business meeting of the Bathurst Street church of Christ was held on February 11. The report showed that there were 6 baptisms; that there are about 100 active members; 27 heads of families; 16 "shut-ins;" several who have moved away; some who have not at-tended for years; from 75 to 95 "break bread" on Lord's days; the membership is very much scattered; the church house is located in a Jew-ish neighborhood; about 100 now enrolled in Bible classes; good interest in the Wednesday-night prayer meet-This congregation is trying its lngs. This congregation is trying its best to be true to the great plea of the New Testament. The worship is delightfully simple, impressive, and edifying. Only the great spiritual hymns are used in the song service. On account of peculiar conditions, this should be a the description. this church has not had a protracted meeting for several years. During the year just past the evangelist was released for four meetings elsewhere, in which there were forty-six confessions and baptisms. The financial report is the best in the history of the church. The offerings for the regular local work amounted to $3,760.49; for work among the poor, $950.11; for home and foreign missions, $901.05. Total, $5,611.65. The missionary offerings were nearly twice as much as those of last year. This report does not include the good work being done by Brother Alex. Stewart, who finds time in the midst of a strenuous business career to where, in which there were forty-six of a strenuous business career to preach somewhere every Lord's day. He led nine precious souls to Christ during the year. Brethren, let us be encouraged by the good reports that appear in our papers every week. The need for pure New Testament Christianity grows more imperative every day.—George A. Klingman.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

HEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM

ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

For the treatment of non-contagious chronic ailments by improved naturopathic methods. Neuritis, neurasthenia, high blood pressure. Excellent climate. Pleasant surroundings. Good food and care. Moderate charges. Write us about your trouble. Pamphlets free.

No Home Treatment, Nothing to Sell but Service

FOR PRICES ON SATISFACTORY

GOSPEL TENTS

Write or Phone

THE ATLANTA MFG. COMPANY

West 0196

231 1-2 Stewart Ave.

Atlanta, Ga.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

OBITUARIES

LIPSCOMB.

W. H. Lipscomb, the elder son of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Lipscomb, was born, in Charlottesville, Va., on May 16, 1866, and died, in Jacksonville, Fla., on August 25, 1924. He obeyed the gospel, at Lebanon, Ky., in the year 1876. Later he moved to Jacksonville, where he worshiped with the First Christian Church until I went to Jacksonville and started a church standing strictly for the New Testament order of things, and about twelve years ago he identified himself with the Date Street church of Christ, and died in that faith. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. W. H. Lipscomb; a son, R. B. Lipscomb; three daughters, Misses Willie H. Lipscomb and Bertha Lipscomb and Mrs. Hunter McGinnis; his mother, Mrs. W. H. Lipscomb; three sisters, Misses Texie M., B. Monie, and Mary B. Lipscomb; and by two grandchildren and four nephews—all of Jacksonville. He was one of the most devoted men to his mother that I ever knew. He has gone into the hands of the Lord, who does all things well and who will reward us according to life's work.

ROBERT E. WRIGHT

Brother J. E. Stamps was born in Jackson County, Tenn., in the year 1858. While he was quite young his father's family moved to Christian County, Ky., where he lived until his death, which occurred on Wednesday, father's family moved to Christian County, Ky., where he lived until his death, which occurred on Wednesday, May 7, 1924. When he was nineteen years of age he was married to Miss Virginia Gray, a girl'of only fourteen years. This union continued forty-seven years. Two daughters, Mrs. Mabel Miller, of Bowling Green, Ky., and Mrs. Clyde King, of Hopkinsville, Ky., and one son, Dudley, of Lebanon, Ky., were the result of this union. These, with Sister Stamps, are left to mourn the loss of a true husband and a loving and kind father. At the age of twenty-four Brother Stamps obeyed the gospel, and he used his influence for the betterment and upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. His labors were in connection with the work at Little River, Bluff. Springs, and Hopkinsville. Brother Stamps was not one of great display, but in his humility was worth a great deal to the church. I have known and loved him since I came to this field, and I shall miss him in the worship here. After a short funeral service by the writer in his home, his body was placed in Riverside Cemetery.

STAMPS.

CHARLES L. TALLEY.

COLEMAN.

Virginia Coleman (née Lewis) was born on May 22, 1859, and died on April 15, 1924. She obeyed the gospel some thirty-five years ago and lived an ideal Christian life. She leaves to mourn her departure, her husband, one son, and three daughters, also a foster daughter. One daughter preceded her to the grave almost five years. All except one daughter were with her through her entire illness and ministered to her night and day. Mother was patient and unselfish through all her suffering. She said: "I have lived as long as I prayed to live—to see all my children grown, with homes of their own, and Christians; and I am pleased with all of you." When I received the telegram, "Mother can't live; have done all we can do," with a sad, brave heart I started to her (with my two little ones) from San Francisco to Tennessee, a distance of twenty-seven hundred miles; but when I arrived at Denver, Col., a telegram was delivered to me with this sad message: "Mother passed away April 15; died easy." I had hoped to see her dear form on earth again, but, through some mistake in the message, they had buried her and all was over when I reached home; but when I reache will be greatly and the said was suffered to the said was over when I reached home; but when I reached my deared to see her with a said was over when I reached home; but when a reached here are the said was suffered to th I reached home; but when I reach my I reached home; but when I reach my eternal home, my dear mother will be there to meet me. How we miss our darling mother and long for the sweet home-comings of days gone by! But we shall remember mother as ideal in thought, word, and deed, and pray that, if it be possible, we may be just such mothers to our children as she was to us; and at the heavenly home-coming, may we all be there.

HER DAUGHTER.

CARVER.

CARVER.

Samuel Lee Carver was born on October 24, 1855, and died on February 16, 1925. Brother Carver was married to Miss Dovie Russell on May 4, 1876. To this union eight children were born—seven boys and one girl. Six sons and the daughter survive him. All six of the sons have families. Brother Carver obeyed the gospel in August, 1876, and lived an earnest, faithful life till the Lord called him home. Brother Carver was an energetic, hard-working man, and he always dealt honestly with all and met his obligations promptly. He lived a quiet, peaceful life, and discharged his duty to God and to his fellow man to the best of his ability. I never knew him to be in any neighborhood fuss or to take any part in any church trouble, except to try to settle all disagreements. I suppose he had as few enemies as any man who lived nearly threescore and ten years. For many years we lived neighbors in Donelson, Tenn., and his boys played with my boys. We attended prayer meeting together and studied together the Sunday-school lesson. Nearly all the little work that I had done about my home, which I could not do myself, was done by Sam Carver, and thus I had the very best opportunity to know him. While I would not say he had no faults, he was as free from blame or censure as any man I was ever associated with. Brother Carver died at Smith's Springs, in this county, and was buried at Donelson, near his old neighbors, who loved him most tenderly. Brother Carver was baptized by Brother Tom Shaw, the man that was known all over the country as "the one-book man." The love and esteem in which he was held by the community was attested by the large concourse of people who attended his funeral. We left his body in a nice grave, surrounded by a bank of flowers. While he left but little of this world's goods to his wife and children, he left the heritage of a good name, which should be chosen rather than riches. If the six surviving sons are as faithful to God as he was, thy name, which should be chosen rather than riches. If the six surviving sons are as faithful to God as he was, they will be a great power for good in the community. The widow is left in sorrow behind, but it will only be a few years, at most, until there can be a happy reunion in the glory world. The Lord comfort her heart and direct the remaining days of her life in his service.

F. B. SRYGLEY.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURN'S have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

STOP ITCH Don't be annoyed or suffer another day. WONDER OINTMENT rids you entirely and quickly, Postpaid anywhere. Large size, $2.00; small size, $1.00. Guaranteed. Druggists and dealers wanted everywhere. EVANS PHARMACY, Anderson, S. C.

MAYO'S SEEDS

Send us only 10c and we will mail you postpaid one packet each of the following:

Early Scarlet Turnip Radish Seed, White Spine Cucumber Seed, Mayo's Blood Turnip Beet Seed, Southern Giant Curled Mustard Seed, Black Seeded Simpson Lettuce Seed, Mayo's Special Mixture of Sweet Peas, with our illustrated catalog of Seeds for the South.

Or we will be glad to mail you our catalog and price list of Farm Seeds free on request. 45th year in Seed business.

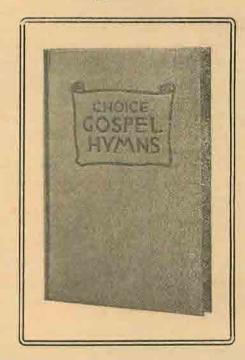

D. R. MAYO

KNOXVILLE :: :: TENNESSEE

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding ____ $0.40 Per copy, cloth binding ____$0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, fall or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

EVANGELISTIC SONGS

COMPILED BY C. M. PULLIAS

Not a "filler" in the book. Every song is fine.

Printed in shaped notes only. Prices: Single copy, postpaid, 15 cents; per hundred, not prepaid, $10.00.

The demand for such a book is great—low price and high in quality. Its use is not necessarily confined to evangelistic services. It is an inexpensive songbook for the church. "Evangelistic Songs" cannot be excelled.

Read the index of songs and reach your own conclusion as to the desirability of this inexpensive little book.

INDEX TO TITLES

No.	No.
A Blessing in Prayer	Lord's Day Worship
All to Christ I Ows 5	Martyn 58
Are You Washed in the Blood? 13	McAnally, C.M. Double 8
Army of the Lord 40	Meet Me There 68
Beautiful Thought	My Soul's Sweet Rest
Beulah Land	O, How I Love Jesus! C. M 37
Blessed Assurance 56	O, 'Tis Wonderfull 50
By the Blood	On the Cross of Calvary 48
Calling Me Over the Tide 62	Over There 19
Close to the Saviour 27	O, Why Not To-Night? 48
Come, Blessed Saviour $1	O, Wondrous Love! 80
Come to Jesus	Redeeming Mercy 35
Come Unto Me	Refuge 57
Death is Only a Dream	Rescue the Perishing 1
Every Day and Hour 34	Say, Will You Mest Me There? 25
Footsteps of Jesus 6	Standing by the Cross
For What Shall It Profit? 54	Stepping in the Light 39
Gathered Home 14	Summer Land 26
God's Hand is in It All 61	Sweet By and By
Go Wash in the Blood 82	The Beautiful City of God
Hear Him Calling 22	The City Above 29
Hebron. L.M 21	The Half Has Never Been Told 9
I Lean on His Wonderful Might 20	The Hollow of God's Hand 45
I Love to Tell the Story 7	The Rock that is Higher than I 4
In the Morning of Joy 24	Though in Darkness
Jesus Loves Even Me 10	'Tis so Sweet to Trust in Jesus 59
Joy in Heaven	'Tis the Harvest Time 48
Keep Your Heart Singing 3	Walk with Me, Gracious Lord 55
Knocking at the Door 28	We Speak of the Realms of the Blest $8
Leaning on the Everlasting Arms 52	What a Friend We Have 2
Little Reapers	Whiter than Snow $6
Lord, I'm Coming Home 64	Work, for the Night is Coming 16

Address All Orders to Music Department GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Gentlemen:

Please send me	copies	of	"Evangelistic	Songs."
Inclosed find $	for same.
Name:			*****

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

The clearest and simplest book of its kind published Price, 20 cents single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

A MEETINGHOUSE NEEDED.

BY H. N. FLACK.

The few brethren at Winter Haven, Fla., are closing a deal for a lot for the church. This lot is seventy-five by one hundred and thirty-three feet, located on Laurel Street, at the south end of Magnolia Avenue. Price, three thousand two hundred dollars; eight hundred down, balance in three years—eight hundred dollars per year. This is one of the finest locations in the city for a church, and I would like very much to see our people secure it now while we can get it.

This city is growing by leaps and bounds and will become a great missionary point for our people. We have a few good brethren here now to form a nucleus to build to, and there is no reason why there cannot be a well-established congregation here in the immediate future, and then we can help sound out the word throughout this fast-growing country.

We are going to build a shed on the back end of the lot and meet there for worship. Thus we can save hall rent and pay that much on the property. The brethren here are not very well off, so far as this world's goods are concerned, but they can be depended upon to pay every dollar they can. Now, brethren, if you will kindly help us pay for this property, just as soon as we can we will be ready to help other worthy work for the Lord. We will have the restrictive clause in the deed to the church. Send all funds to H. N. Flack, 740 Central Avenue, Winter Haven, Fla.

NEW CHURCH HOUSE AT CHISHOLM.

BY J. H. HINES.

Nearly a year ago the three congregations of Montgomery, Ala., conducted tent meetings in three of her suburbs. These meetings proved to be a great success. Many heard the pure gospel for the first time, several were added to the "one body," and one congregation was established.

Dr. O. H. Tallman, a chiropractor of nine years' experience and a preacher of ability, moved to our city just in time to assist us in this great work. The tent was first pitched at Chisholm, and Dr. Tallman began to sound out the word. During this meeting many heard, seven were added, and a congregation of forty members was set to work. But this little congregation had no church house. What did it do? They met from house to house, laid by in store as the Lord prospered them, made sacrifices, purchased a lot, and built a neat little church house.

Yesterday morning the little congregation moved into the house. Brother L. L. Jones, who has been guiding the little band, preached the first sermon. When the invitation was extended, one came forward to take his stand with the people of God.

In the afternoon another service was held, which was attended by members of the three congregations in the city-Liberty, Wetumpka, and Coal Spring. All turned out to demonstrate their interest and love. Dr. O. H. Tallman, who is loved for his work's sake, preached a great sermon on "The Church." Brethren Little, Boles, Moores, Jones, Renfro, and the writer spoke words of encouragement and offered their assistance. During the meeting several hundred dollars was raised to help the congregation. At the close of the service it was learned that the congregation needed only three hundred and eighty-one dollars to clear its debt. This amount will be raised in the near future.

We predict a great growth at Chisholm. May God be glorified and sinners be brought to the knowledge of the truth.

It has been stated by J. J. Walker that they gained a great victory in Montgomery. This does not look like it, does it? Besides this, the three other congregations in the city are having additions nearly every Sunday.

ELOQUENT TRIBUTE TO TREES.

Trees are the arms of Mother Earth lifted up in worship to their Maker; where they are, beauty dwells. Trees are the shelter of man, beast, and bird; they furnish the roof above us, the shade about us, and the nesting places of love and song. They call children out to play; they entice sweethearts into leafy coverts to seal their vows with fond caresses; they console and gratefully reward old age. They are the fittest ornaments of wealth and the inalienable possession of the poor, who can enjoy them without having title to them. They are the masts that fly the flags of all nations and the sails of all seas; they are the timbers that bridge forbidding streams; they bear the wires of the world's intelligence; they hold the rails that carry the traffic of the continents: they are the carved and polished furnishings of the home; they cradle the young and coffin the dead. Trees herald the spring with glorious banners of leaf and bloom; they clothe the autumn in garments of gold and royal purple; bared to the winter's cold, they are the harp of the winds, and they whisper the music of the infinite spaces .- Clarence Ousley.

TEACHERS WANTED

We have urgent demands for hundreds of teachers for principals, grade and rural work. Salaries ranging from $75 to $250. Write to-day.

SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS AGENCY 905 Austell Bidg., Atlanta, Ga.

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

AND A BIBLE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. The type is large and clear and is easily read. The size—5x734 inches—is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps; 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

$6.00

In ordering, order Bible No. 102—Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 1½ inches deep, 9¼ inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

"BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds

Headache

Pain

Neuralgia

Toothache

Lumbago

Neuritis

Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets—Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylloacid

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Cabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy_____$0.30 | Per 50, per copy____ 27
Per dozen, per copy _ 28 | Per 100, per copy__ 25

All prices 1. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate

AN ASSEMBLY OF THE CHURCH. (A. Campbell, in "The Christian System.")

The following extract from my memorandum book furnishes the nighest approach to the model which we have in our eye of good order and Christian decency in celebrating the Lord's Supper. Indeed, the whole order of that congregation was comely.

"The church in - consisted of about fifty members. Not having any person whom they regarded as filling Paul's outlines of a bishop, they had appointed two senior members, of a very grave deportment, to preside in their meetings. These persons were not competent to labor in the word and teaching; but they were qualified to rule well, and to preside with Christian dignity. One of them presided at each meeting. After they had assembled in the morning, which was at eleven o'clock (for they had agreed to meet at eleven and to adjourn at two o'clock during the winter season), and after they had saluted one another in a very familiar and cordial manner, as brethren are wont to do who meet for social purposes, the president for the day arose and said: 'Brethren, being assembled in the name and by the authority of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, on this day of his resurrection, let us unite in celebrating his praise.' He then repeated the lines of a psalm.

"The congregation arose and sang this psalm in animating strains. He then called upon a brother, who was a very distinct and emphatic reader, to read a section of the evangelical history. He arose and read, in a very audible voice, the history of the crucifixion of the Messiah. After a pause of a few moments, the president called upon a brother to pray in the name of the congregation. His prayer abounded with thanksgiving to the Father of mercies, and with supplications for such blessings on themselves and for all men as were promised to those who ask, or for which men were commanded to pray. The language was very appropriate; no unmeaning repetitions, no labor of words, no effort to say anything and everything that came into his mind, but to express slowly, distinctly, and emphatically the desires of the The prayer was comparatively short; and the whole congregation, brethren and sisters, pronounced aloud the final 'Amen.'

"After prayer a passage in one of the Epistles was read by the president himself, and a song was called for. A brother arose, and, after naming the page, repeated the lines of a song. He then sat down, and the congregation sang with much feeling.
"I observed that the table was

REMARKABLE RECOVERY OF MRS, SPINK

Gives Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Full Credit

Minn. Junc., Wis.—"I was under treat-ment, but nothing seemed to help me, and I was run-down and so weak that I had to remain in bed much of the time and was like an invalid. I had pains in my abdomen and in the female organs, and my stomach bothmy stomach both-ered me. My hus-band saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound ad-nust be good, and brought it home to me and advised me to try it. After taking one bottle I was able to eat, and after six bottles I was doing my own work, which I hadn't been able to do for years. I have a new baby who is doing nicely, and I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and feeling better than I have for four years. The medicine is surelywonderful and a good thing to have in the house."—Mrs. GEORGE SPINK, Minnesota Junction, Wisconsin.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 98 per cent. benefited. For sale by druggists everywhere.

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Seventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1865

B. E. RAINS

H. S. PETTUS JOHN S. BURNETT

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45; Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 12:00. Evening—Singing, Communion, and Ser-mon, 7:45 to 9:00. Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)
A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

School Desks, Opera Chairs Folding Chairs, Kindergarten Chairs,

> School Supplies, Blackboards.

Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N. C. furnished before the disciples met in the morning, and that the disciples occupied a few benches on each side of it, while the strangers sat off on seats more remote. The president arose and said that our Lord had a table for his friends, and that he invited his disciples to sup with him. 'In memory of his death, this monumental table,' said he, 'was instituted; and as the Lord ever lives in heaven, so he ever lives in the hearts of his people. As the first disciples, taught by the apostles in person, came together into one place to eat the Lord's Supper, and as they selected the first day of the week in honor of his resurrection, for this purpose; so we, having the same Lord, the same faith, the same hope with them, have vowed to do as they did. We owe as much to the Lord as they, and ought to love, honor, and obey him as much as they.' having spoken, he took a small loaf from the table, and in one or two periods gave thanks for it. After thanksgiving, he raised it in his hand and significantly broke it, and handed it to the disciples on each side of him, who passed the broken loaf from one to another, until they all partook of it. There was no stiffness, no formality, no pageantry; but all was easy, familiar, solemn, cheerful. He then took the cup, in a similar manner, and returned thanks for it, and handed it to the disciple sitting next to him, who passed it round, each one waiting upon his brother, until all were served. The thanksgiving before the breaking of the loaf and the distributing of the cup were as brief and pertinent to the occasion as the thanks usually presented at a common table for the ordinary blessings of God's bounty. They then arose and with one consent sang a hymn.

"The president of the meeting called upon a brother to remember the poor and those ignorant of the way of life before the Lord. He kneeled down, and the brethren all united with him in supplicating the Father of Mercies in behalf of all the sons and daughters of affliction, the poor and the destitute, and in behalf of the conversion of the world. After this prayer, the fellowship or contribution was attended to; and the whole church proved the sincerity of their desires by the cheerfulness and liberality which they seemed to evince in putting into the treasury as the Lord had prospered them.

"A general invitation was tendered to all the brotherhood, if they had anything to propose or inquire tending to the edification of the body. Several brethren arose in succession and read several passages in the Old and New Testaments relative to some matters which had been subjects of

GOSPEL TENTS

Twenty-four years' experience, no hire, no overhead expense, and a burn-ing desire to aid the spread of the gospel are reasons why you can save so much money by ordering your tent from

W. G. WHITE, Nashville, Tenn. 1220 McChesney Ave.

Whooping Cough

Asthma, Spasmodic Croup, Bronchitis Coughs and Influenza.

duced "Used While You Sleep" 1879

Send for descriptive booklet 43A. Sold by druggists Vapo-Cresolene Co., 62 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

COMMERCE UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nausealess Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteect by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

20

CAT

m_o

CROUP or WHOOPING COUGH that several generations of mothers have used successfully (since 1802). Roche's loosens the phlegmrelieves quickly and safely. Equally effective for bronchitis and colds on the chest.

Always keep a bottle handy. All druggists of E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc. 90-92 Beckman St., NewYork

THE RESERVE

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

former investigation and inquiry. Sundry remarks were made. after singing several spiritual songs, selected by the brethren, the president, on motion of a brother who signified that the hour of adjournment had arrived, concluded the meeting by pronouncing the apostolic benediction.

"I understand that all these items were attended to in all their meetings; yet the order of attendance was not invariably the same. On all the occasions on which I was present with them, no person arose to speak without invitation or without asking permission of the president, and no person finally left the meeting before the hour of adjournment without special leave. Nothing appeared to be done in a formal or ceremonious manner. Everything exhibited the power of godliness as well as the form, and no person could attend to all that passed without being edified and convinced that the Spirit of God was there. The joy, the affection, and the reverence which appeared in this little assembly was the strongest argument in favor of their order, and the best comment on the excellency of the Christian institution."

PROMISE YOURSELF

To look at the sunny side of everything and make your optimism come true.

To think only of the best, to work only for the best, and to expect only

To be just as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own.

To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future.

To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature you meet a smile.

There is not a boy nor a girl, all Christendom through, but their lot is made better by the Bible.

Getting Up Nights Can Be Stopped

Often in twenty-four hours. To prove that you can be rid of this atrength-sapping allment, have more pep, be free from burning sensation, pain in groins, backache, and weakness, I'll send you Walker's Prostate Specific, free and postpaid, under piain wrapper. No obligation. No cost. If it cures your prostate gland trouble, you can repay the favor by telling your friends; if not, the loss is mine. Simply send me your name, and prove that you can feel ten years younger and be rid of prostate trouble.

I. B. WALKER,

1677 Gateway Station, Kanses City, Mo.

answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

LEG SORE

ARE CURABLE, If you suffer from Leg Sores or Varicose Ulcers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous book that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my remarkable, painless treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over thirty-five years' specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 279, 421 Bast Eleventh Street, Kansas City, Mo.

How I Ended Superfluous And for All

Without Unpleasant Wax, Pastes, Powders, Liquids, Shaving, or the Elec-tric Needle

Shaving, or the Electric Needle

Only a woman who has tell the horror and humiliation of a disfiguring hairy growth on the face, neck, arms, and himbs can possibly know what joy and happiness came over me when first I realized that at last all trace of superfluous hair had gone and my skin was clear, soft, and smooth, like that of a babe. And this after years of disappointment with almost every depliatory, liquid, paste, powder, wax, and other methods, including razors, that I had ever lieard of. Before I hit upon the simple, easy, harmless new way which has given me such amazing and lasting relief from my affliction, the ugly hair always came right back, thicker and heaview than ever. When I confided to some of my friends how I had at last solved the ageoid problem of getting rid of superfluous hair—at once and for all—they said it would be selfish not to share my secret with others So I have decided to explain to any one interested exactly how I succeeded. ABSOLUTELY FREE, if you will simply send me your name and address with a stamp for sealed reply.

My Own Secret FREE to You Simply sign below and send to-day to

My Own Secret FREE to You Simply sign below and send to-day to MARIE CECIL, 479 Eighth Ave., Dept. 59, New York, N. Y.

Is the Chance of Recovering Your Health Worth Two Cents?

THEN WRITE US

We want every person in the United States subject to Epilepsy or Fits to send us their names, addresses, and ages. We will then prove to you the merit of our treatment by sending you FREE, postpald, our Treatise on Epilepsy and a trial bottle. Cases of from twenty to forty years' standing write us that they have had no seizures for many years. Adress TOWNS REMEDY COMPANY 661 Third St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Order the New Songbook for 1925

Heavenly Echoes No. 9, 25c. each, §18.50 per hundred. This book contains only the beet, new, live gospel songs. For your regular church work, order Resurrected Songs, 50c. each, or Vaughan's Revival, 75c. each-books that contain the old-time hymns as well as the new songs. John B. Vaughan, Athens, Ga.

Volume LXVII. No. 11.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH 12, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT	241
OUR CONTRIBUTORS. Traits of the Honest Man Contrasted—Works That Increased—Children of God—The Revised Version of the Scriptures—Roy Haralson Yeagley.	243
OUR MESSAGES	248
EDITORIAL Women Preachers and the Majority Rule (No. 2)— Word from Washington—A Remarkable Document— Charles Christopher Klingman.	250
	256 257
OBITUARIES Lamb—Arms—Brandon—Shelley—Moore,	258
The Convention at Florence	260
VALUE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE P	262

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

From the Tennessee Christian we transcribe the following extract from the "news notes" of the Linden Avenue Christian Church, Memphis, Tenn.:

Our church has been richly blessed by a three-weeks' journ of Mother Ross in our presence. She was a guest sojourn of Mother Ross in our presence. She was a guest of the "parsonage" household, where she is an ever welcome visitor. During her stay, which included the holidays, she addressed many departments of the church—Bible school, Christian Endeavor, and Woman's Council; and on Sunday morning, January 4, she filled the pulpit to the great delight of a great congregation.

While we revere and respect the aged and rise up before the hoary head, we wish to humbly submit that the example of "Mother Ross" is unscriptural and sinful; and the influence of her example in thus making public addresses before "many departments of the church-Bible school, Christian Endeavor, and Woman's Council," and also "on Sunday morning, January 4," when "she filled the pulpit to the great delight of a great congregation," is, and will be, injurious and harmful. The fact of her being aged and venerable adds enormity to her sin and to the sin of those who encouraged her to so do.

Out of the loose construction our transgressive brethren put on God's word and laws have grown some very heinous and presumptuous sins. They seem to have no conception of the fact that God's laws are fixed and unchangeable, and that when God commands a thing, it must be obeyed without deviation or modification.

The command forbidding women to speak publicly is clear and explicit. "As in all the churches of the saints, let the women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but let them be in subjection, as also saith the law. And if they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home: for it is shameful for a woman to speak in the church." (1 Cor. 14: "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness." (1 Tim. 2: 11, 12.)

Much of the trouble that has arisen in the churches started with a certain class of women. When women take the lead and become promoters of various projects, unless all signs fail, the church is headed for apostasy and ruin. The entire business of woman is in another sphere; and when men, women, or things get out of the sphere in which God placed them, a catastrophe will result. Our religious neighbors, flaunting the plain statements of God's word, are teaching and practicing the sin of women speaking in public. Our transgressive brethren, who entertain a worldly ambition to be like the denominations, "went out from us" because "they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they all are not of us." But God's people are "a peculiar people," separate and distinct, and should not crave or imitate the things in vogue among the denominations around them.

J. G. Bow, D.D., of Louisville, Ky., is writing a series of articles for the Western Recorder (Baptist), giving "Doctrines in Dialogues," from which we take the fol-

"But, papa, I would not have such Bibles. I would get Methodist Bibles, that tell about baptizing babies, about sprinkling, and doing things like we Methodists do them, just putting a little water on the face; and—and I just would not have old Baptist Bibles, that tell about going down into the water, and coming up out of the water, and burying folks in the water. I think it is just awful. Why don't you get Methodist Bibles?"

"Well, Brother Miller," said Mr. Weakley, "I'll turn Mary and the Bible over to you, and ask you to straighten her out."

Mr. Miller forced a smile, cleared his throat, and tried to look wise. Finally, he said: "Mary is too young to understand these things. Some day we will teach her the way of the Lord more perfectly."

"I think," said Grandma Thornton (who was Mary's

"I think," said Grandma Thornton (who was Mary's maternal grandmother, and was really a Baptist, but had been persuaded in early life to join the Methodists to be with her husband)—"I think Mary understands rather too much now for the comfort of your theory and doctrine."

Mr. Miller replied: "Well, you know we Methodists are liberal. We allow the candidate to choose the mode. We sprinkle, pour, immerse, as the applicant may prefer."

"But," said Mary, "how can you do it? I read over here in Eph. 4: 5: 'One Lord, one faith, one baptism."

Now, if sprinkling is haptism, then pouring and immersion

"But," said Mary, "how can you do it? I read over here in Eph. 4: 5: 'One Lord, one faith, one baptism.' Now, if sprinkling is baptism, then pouring and immersion are not baptism; if pouring is baptism, then sprinkling and immersion are not; if immersion is baptism, then sprinkling and pouring are not. Only one can be right. If this Bible is right, then Jesus, and the Jews, and Paul, and the eunuch, were immersed. Then Jesus was not baptized two or three ways, but one way; and what Jesus did is baptism, and nothing else is, and that is what he commands us to do. He meant for them to do just what he did, and you can't make anything else out of it; and if they don't do that, they are not baptized."

Dear reader, what think you? Don't dodge your duty by saying: "The Baptists make too much of baptism." Be honest with God and with your conscience. Baptism has nothing to do with your salvation, but your salvation has much to do with your obedience. Are you saved? Then you love Jesus. He says: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." He says: "He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings." He says: "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." He says: "If a man love me, he will keep my words." Now, dear reader, will you stand the test? Do you love Jesus? Will you keep his commandments?

Mr. Bow is correct in telling Methodists, Presbyterians, and others that the Scriptures teach that immersion is baptism. Immersion was the universal practice of the apostolic age. There was not an unimmersed person in the church in the days of the apostles. In every example of baptism recorded in the New Testament, there was a going "down into the water," a coming "up out of the water," a "birth," a "burial," and a "resurrection."

It is difficult to understand how anybody can fail to see that the Bible teaches immersion. The language is plain, simple, and unmistakably clear. Yet great bodies of people are teaching sprinkling for baptism and are jeopardizing their souls' salvation by depending on sprinkling. All reputable lexicons define baptism to dip, plunge, submerge, immerse, never to sprinkle or pour. Jesus commands "every creature" who believes the gospel to "be immersed," and any man is standing in his own light who depends on sprinkling or pouring.

But it is equally difficult to understand how Mr. Bow can say: "Baptism has nothing to do with your salvation." It seems so easy for him to see the point when addressing his Methodist neighbors and punching them about unwittingly getting hold of "a Baptist Bible;" but when it comes to the errors and mistakes of his own theology, his eyes are closed as tight as are the eyes of Methodists on the subject of sprinkling. If the language of Jesus, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16: 16), does not make baptism have "something to do with your salvation," then language has no meaning. "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) If baptism is not "unto the remission of sins," then plain language is not to be taken for what it says, "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 16.) If we are not to accept these plain statements of the Bible, making "baptism have something to do with your salvation," on what ground may we accept any statement of the Bible?

Let not Mr. Bow think that we have any other motive than simply to take the Bible for what it says. Here are these clear, plain, simple passages that state that baptism is for the remission of sins, or in order to salvation. If this language does not mean what it says, then the Bible is not a revelation, and we cannot definitely decide anything. Is it not best, and is it not safe, to accept the very words of the Bible? Upon rendering obedience to the things commanded, may we not trust God for the things promised? Have we any right to claim the promises offered before rendering obedience to the things commanded? Why permit bias, prejudice, or party dogmas to blind our eyes to the truth? Only truth can save. As for the Gospel Advocate, we honestly avow that we are open to the truth, that we want the truth, and that we will gladly accept it at the hands of anybody. All anybody has to do is to cite us to the passage in the word of God. We will not try to get around it with a shrewd argument, nor to nullify it with a plausible explanation. We will take God's word for what it says. No man can miss heaven, or go wrong, who does that.

* * *

J. Barnes, of McMinnville, Tenn., clinches a well-driven nail thus:

Many strange and wonderful things take place in this world among the human race, but there is nothing so alarmingly and wonderfully strange as the variety of preachers in the world to-day, claiming to be called and filled with the Holy Spirit to preach the gospel of salvation to a lost world, who preach for weeks or months at a time and never tell one time what the Holy Spirit, through inspired men, taught inquiring people to do to be saved. I will venture to say if Billy Sunday had told his penitent believers to repent and be baptized for the remission of their sins, like Peter told the inquiring Pentecostians, or Philip told the Ethiopian eunuch, or Ananias told Saul of Tarsus, that that noted evangelist's popularity would have dropped many degrees below zero in less than twenty-four hours. If such great men can't afford to teach what Jesus commanded to be taught for the remission of sins, how can they afford to teach anything else in his name? If salvation is taught wrong, it is not taught at all.

Indeed, "many strange and wonderful things take place in this world," but the strangest of all strange things that "take place" are the capers cut by preachers in the name of religion. Stranger than fiction is the fact that quite a "variety of preachers in the world to-day" claim "to be called and filled with the Holy Spirit to preach the gospel of salvation to a lost world," who boldly and flatly reject words that were spoken by the Holy Spirit and who never preach the gospel to anybody. They are too blinded by prejudice and dogma to realize that no one has been called by the Holy Spirit, or is filled with the Holy Spirit, who refuses to preach the things that were preached by the Holy Spirit through inspired men. Everybody unhesitatingly agrees that inspired men in New Testament times preached the gospel, "the power of God unto salvation," under the guidance of the Holy Spirit and "as the Spirit gave them utterance." When men, after hearing a sermon preached by an inspired man, labored under conviction and cried out, "Brethren, what shall we do?" the Holy Spirit gave the answer. Is a man a gospel preacher who repudiates the answer that was given by the Holy Spirit? Certainly not. He may be a refined, cultured, and polished person, who delivers pretty speeches on things people like to hear, but he can lay no claim to being a preacher of the gospel that was preached by inspired men.

With regard to Brother Barnes' reference to Mr. Sunday, I can only say that I once entertained the hope that Billy Sunday was brave enough to repeat in his sermons the very passages in the Scriptures that tell sinners what to do to be saved. But it did not take much experience with Billy to cure me of that. When I told Billy that, if he would kindly tell them what Peter said, several thousand of us would like to assist him, he informed me that he had been preaching thirty years and that I was the first man to try to tell him what to preach. In addition to the regret attendant upon being disappointed in Billy, that sort of a statement makes me feel bad, because it shows that many of our transgressive brethren, who have actually cooperated with him, have never even suggested the propriety of his preaching the gospel, and that, after all their close association with him, I had to be the first one to make the suggestion. Still, the great revivalist was willing to taboo a part of God's truth, as it reads in the Bible word for word, rather than have his "popularity drop many degrees below zero in less than twentyfour hours." But let us not be too hard on Billy. It takes courage to be unpopular, and Billy was not as brave as his tough language and fighting antics indicated. Besides, many Nashville preachers sat on Billy's platform who never get any closer to the gospel than Billy did. Evidently they feel that they "can't afford to teach what Josus commanded to be taught for the remission of sins," as none of them have ever been guilty of doing it, and the big churches over which they "pastorate" are perfectly innocent of any knowledge of it.

I have to confess that I feel like Brother Barnes. It is all strange to me that preachers will have a Bible on their pulpits that contains passages they are not willing to even read to their congregations. I could name some of the largest churches in Nashville whose "pastors" pursue this sort of course; but, as I am trying to act nice and be sweet on account of the weak faith of these who prefer "soft soap," I will leave it to everybody who can't quote what Peter said to guess. Yet I beg to submit that I cannot see how any preacher of any denomination fixes it up between himself and God, when he knows that there are passages of Scripture in God's word that he refuses to preach. Are men preaching just for the sake of something to do, or are they preaching in an effort to tell the truth? We are ignorant enough to think that when a preacher fails to tell sinners what inspired men told them to do to be saved, he has omitted telling them the truth. If we are wrong, will somebody kindly set us right?

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your orders for Bibles and good books at once.

For information regarding any book, address the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" is a very interesting book, and is pleasing to both young and old. It is handsomely illustrated. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

If you know of any congregation not now using our Bible Lesson Helps and will send us the address, we will gladly furnish them sample copies.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

BROTHER DAVID NICKELL'S COMPLAINT.

We regret that Brother D. F. Nickell, for whom we entertain the very highest regard, received the impression that the publication of Brother David Lipscomb's article on "individual communion," taken from "Queries and Answers," was intended to contradict his statement regarding Brother Lipscomb's teaching on the subject when he attended the Nashville Bible School. The article from Brother Lipscomb had been in the hands of the printer for some time before Brother Nickell made his statement, Brother F. W. Smith had requested its publication without knowing that Brother Nickell or any one else would write to the contrary.

It is freely granted that Brother Lipscomb, for a long time, opposed the use of individual communion cups; but he changed his views regarding the matter, as is not only clearly stated in the article published, but also in the following answer to a query submitted by Brother G. Dallas Smith on the individual communion question: "Some months ago I published an article opposing a change in the manner of partaking of 'the fruit of the vine.' I have somewhat modified my views on the subject since. . . . I have reëxamined the history and service of the passover in the Old Testament and its transformation into the Lord's Supper in the New Testament, and I have been led to doubt if all who partook of it drank from the same cup. Did not each have his own cup filled from a common vessel? When we come to examine the institution in the New Testament, the examples and the restrictions given seem hardly sufficient to establish a fixed order that all should use the same cup. In 1 Cor. 11 is an account of an abuse that had grown up in the observance of the institution. They not only did not use the same cup, but did not wait for each other; one was drunken and another hungry and had nothing. This could not have happened under the present order. Before this time it retained the character of a feast like the passover." (Gospel Advocate, January 7, 1915.)

From the two statements by Brother Lipscomb to which reference is here made it must be perfectly clear to all that no one can count him on the side of the opposers of the individual communion practice.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

TRAITS OF THE HONEST MAN CONTRASTED.

BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

The true man of God knows the danger of being deceived by men (Isa. 2: 22; Matt. 24: 4; Eph. 5: 6); loves and comes to the light (John 3: 21); searches the Scriptures that he may know (Prov. 2: 6; John 5: 39; Acts 17: 11); asks and watches for guidance (Ps. 119: 18; Prov. 8: 34; Hab. 2: 1); tries all the spirits thereby (1 John 4: 1, 6); makes his calling sure (2 Pet. 1: 10); proves all things and holds fast to that which is good (1 Thess. 5: 21). But the ungodly are not so. They lay not the word to heart (Ex. 7: 23; Mal. 2: 2); it is a reproach to them (Jer. 6: 10); they despise it (Prov. 13: 13) and incline not to hear it (Jer. 9: 3; 25: 4); they hate the light (Job 24: 13, 17; John 3: 20); they have closed their eyes (Matt. 13: 15) and are willingly ignorant (2 Pet. 3: 5).

Violation of the law does not excuse. (Lev. 5: 17; Luke 12: 47; Rom. 2: 12). One can do what he sincerely believes to be right, and yet be all wrong. (Prov. 16: 25; John 16: 2; Acts 26: 9, 10.) We have to search for the truth and forever keep up the fight. Even the best of earth's mortals are possessed of an all but incurable tendency to stray from the right, and every day need to be reconstructed, put back upon the way of the Lord again and again. Thus the word must be sought and studied constantly. Not that it may support some preestablished human choice-not this by any sort of meansbut rather that the Lord may regulate errant human steps. We remain true to God and safe only when in the consciousness of our inherent weaknesses we constantly seek his face and heed his instruction; for in the absence of divine succor, even with the best of intentions, we lapse into error.

It is sinful to be ignorant of God's law, but infinitely more so to consent to this ignorance or to be undisturbed by it. Thus he who is not awake and aware, searching, digging, testing, and proving—he who is incurious about the truth, careless of knowing it for a certainty—verily incriminates himself. Sin increases in gravity in proportion to the light ignored. Whoever is willing not to know, regardless of what it may cost to find out, stands condemned by all the knowledge thus turned down. Pity that preachers should abet this iniquity! For the deadly popular deception that one is all right so long as he is sincere is urged even in many pulpits of the land, which deception is responsible for divers general damning consequences, not the least being a popular disregard for just what the Lord says.

Gospel preachers construct sermons that they may reconstruct a man. They should have a care to present just such lessons as will best excite curiosity and desire for the truth, that will induce their auditors toward investigation. The honest man fears the light from no source whatsoever; rather, he courts it. He is both ashamed and afraid to refuse to investigate lest his position will be weakened or he be proved in the wrong. He seeks truth, no matter if in the quest he be forced to change never so many times. There is no danger in too much light; but we may well fear too little, and be anxious for the welfare of all so long as there is a popular mistrust of facing ugly facts and dread to have the searchlight of full investigation turned on. In the world to-day there is one fatal man, the unthinking one. He who will not reason is a slave. Error is dangerless so long as truth is left free to combat it. Unshackled truth holds her own against all comers. Whoever knew her put to the worse by an encounter? Encourage folks to think for themselves. Tell everybody all the truth. Men are trustworthy only when they have made up their minds in the light of all the facts. Turn on the light. There is danger from no source whatsoever so long as God's word is the supreme rule.

Jehovah has not asked men what they wished to do or believe. He gives orders regardless, and woe be to those who go unheeding! No man can be led of God unless and until he feels the need of divine guidance; no one can enter the kingdom of heaven till he becomes like a child-helpless and bidable. The heart that is right before God does not wish this or that of its own mind. Seeking its own way in nothing, it supremely craves that what God commands shall be faithfully done at no matter what hazard. It accepts the Bible as the inerrant word written by God himself. That man is an infidel, regardless of what he believes or chooses to call himself, who does not receive every word of this Book as divine truth in the absolute. If he is choosy with it, picking here and there the portions thereof which appear to serve his own designs, or doctoring that which does not suit till it fits, he differs no whit in spirit from the boldest out-and-out defamer of the word, no matter if he wears the cloth and fills a pulpit. The curse of God is upon him. (Prov. 26: 12; Isa. 5: 21.)

In stating the divine mind, no word of God can be spared or improved upon. And in making up our minds as to any part of the truth hereof, we cannot leave out of count any germane facts relative thereto. To do so is to take precisely the steps which end in delusion. But this very thing one may easily do from being overmuch interested in some pet theory. God must do all the leading. We dare have no designs of our own upon the Bible, lest we obstruct and limit our vision and all further study serve only to bolster the adopted view. The mind is then made up and closed to any light which might affect or injure the darling. Such a one is no longer a free man. Conscious or not of the impairment of his vision, he is warped, and will make no further headway learning from God till freed of his malady. Alas, that men are so prone to jump at conclusions and fix their minds upon inadequate or biased fact, and yet remain untroubled that they have not weighed and counted in the reckoning much relevant matter. They scruple not to pass blighting and indiscriminate judgments, and even affect to say positively what the Bible does or does not teach, though under pressure will admit that much of it has been read by them only casually, if read at all. The strictly honest man will dare no such thing as this. Green goggles over the eyes prevent them from discovering the true color of objects no more certainly than does slavery to an accepted dogma close the sight to other truth. There is surely no serfdom more abject and degrading than that which gives one over to a theory so blindly as to make him disregardful of further light.

WORKS THAT INCREASED.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE CHURCH IN THYATIRA.

Thyatira was a small city in Asia Minor, and in this city, very early, was planted a church of Christ. To this church the Lord Jesus addressed the fourth of the seven Epistles sent to churches in Asia, named, geographically, after the names of the cities in which they were planted. The first three—Ephesus, Smyrna, and Pergamum—were on or near the coast; the other four—Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea—were in the interior. Thyatira was southeast of Pergamum and northeast of Smyrna. The city is still in existence.

While we have no certain account of the planting of the church, probably it was an indirect result of the influence of Lydia. Thyatira is mentioned in Acts 16 as the home of Lydia, who was converted at Philippi. We remember how she, "a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira," was one at the prayer meeting held on the banks of the river. There her heart was opened to receive the truth, and she and her household obeyed, becoming baptized disciples. Thus they belonged to Thyatira, though at the time they were living at Philippi. It is likely that the church began when Lydia and her household returned; but this, of course, is conjecture. Nevertheless, when we think of Thyatira we remember the devout Lydia, convert and hostess of Paul at Philippi.

In addressing the angel of the church, the Lord announces himself as "the Son of God, who hath his eyes like a flame of fire, and his feet are like unto burnished brass." And this is the confident assertion of his power and authority. He is the infallible one to whose speech the church must pay attention, his title denoting supreme authority. On earth he spoke as "one having authority. and not as the scribes," and "he himself knew what was in man." Thus he comes to Thyatira as the Son of God. having eyes like a flame of fire and feet like burnished brass-eyes piercing and feet strong and pure. Eyes of fire suggest intimate knowledge and penetrating vision concerning the church, and feet of brass signify that the strong one is coming in righteous judgment. The eyes of fire pierce the depths of darkness and discover the profoundest secrets; the feet of brass tread down the wicked in their craftiness. His eyes like a flame of fire-he sees perfectly and understands accurately. His feet like burnished brass-he marches to judgment, and righteous, pure, and final are his judgments. And why the eyes to discern, and the feet to tread down? Within the church at Thyatira there is an evil for which no remedial measures are sufficient. It is the seduction of Jezebel, an intolerable iniquity. It admits of no correction. Nothing but judgment remains, and so he comes to definite and immediate dealing with the evil.

THE MANY GOOD WORKS OF THYATIRA-

But the Lord speaks first of the good works of Thyatira. Always he saw the good, and his commendation is generous. He commences with the usual words: "I know thy works." "I know thy works, and thy love and faith and ministry and patience, and that thy last works are more than the first." This commendation would seem to fall into three logical parts, the commas in the sentence marking off the divisions. Three things are indicated: First, the works of the church; secondly, the forces that lie behind the works—"thy love and faith and ministry and patience;" and lastly, that those works have not decreased, but increased. Works, cause of the works, increased works.

Three things, then, are approved: the church's work, the things that are seen; then the hidden springs of the outward manifestation, as love and faith and patience; and then the normal outgrowth, sequence, increase. All this speaks well for Thyatira.

"I know thy works." The works of the church as such, the general good deeds of the church. He does not tabulate them. He merely declares his acquaintance with them, with approval. That is sufficient. "And thy love and faith." Love and fidelity, great and necessary principles, the root of every commendable thing in Thyatira. Love and faith are joined together. The faith that counts is the faith that works through love. Too often works are occasional and spasmodic; but if faith and love be the promptings, they are characterized by constancy. This was true in the case of Thyatira, for the last works were more than the first.

"And ministry." By "ministry" as here employed is not meant works in general so much as particular kindnesses and tendernesses characteristic of individuals—giving cups of cold water, binding up wounds, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked. It is the work of the good Samaritan, doing good to friend and foe, serving mankind. "And patience." The meaning is steadfastness, and so invariably. The Master was wont to set much value upon this word. He spoke of it to the church at Ephesus, and now again to this church at Thyatira. Patience is the flower of fidelity. It is the capacity for being still when all around is tempest-tossed. An excellent exposition is found in the words of Milton:

Yet I argue not against Heaven's hand or will. Nor bate a jot of heart or hope, But still bear up and steer right onward.

LAST WORKS MORE THAN THE FIRST.

The finest thing in Thyatira was that her last works were more than the first, "I know thy works"—all the outpouring of the life in untabulated service. There was love and faith and ministry and patience; but, best of all, there had been an increase. "And that thy last works are more than the first." Works there were at the first, but now there were even greater works. Faith had grown to be stronger, love deeper, ministry more abundant, patience more steadfast. Good works had abounded to their account.

"Thy last works are more than the first." Instead of retrograding, they had progressed. In fidelity, in love, in patience they had borne the peaceable fruits of Christianity. The outward and evident activity of the church had broadened and deepened. Their works were more, not less. "I know . . . that thy last works are more than the first."

This increase was of God. I have spoken of fidelity. It was in loyalty to Christ as their Head that the church at Thyatira was enabled to increase. Paul, in writing to the Colossians, admonished them to hold fast "the Head, from whom all the body, being supplied and knit together through the joints and bands, increaseth with the increase of God." To the Corinthians he said: "I planted, Apollos watered; Lut God gave the increase," "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself," says Jesus, "except it abide in the vine; so neither can ye, except ye abide in me." First, there must be fruit, then more fruit, and then much fruit. Fruit, more fruit, much fruit. So was it with Thyatira; the last works were more than the first.

Says Peter: "If these things [virtues] are yours and abound, they make you to be not idle nor unfruitful unto the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Says Paul: "Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for asmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

CHILDREN OF GOD.

BY J. LEONARD JACKSON.

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called children of God; and such we are." (1 John 3: 1.)

Ability to trace one's lineage back to the God of heaven is a great blessing. Every Christian may do this very thing. This is the great love of God that John would have us behold.

God abundantly blessed the patriarch, Abraham, in calling him to become the father of the faithful. In designating Noah as the Savior of the ancient world, God bestowed upon him a blessing equally as great. Moses was signally honored by God, as evidenced in his appointment as deliverer and leader of God's people. "Behold, what manner of love God hath bestowed upon these," one might say; and yet, in his blessing to us, God has combined all that he ever did for these three great heroes in making it possible for us to become children of God.

The true child of God is a blessing to the world, as was Abraham; he is the salt, or savior, of the earth, as was Noah; he is a leader of his fellow man, as was Moses.

Man has a dual nature—the spiritual and physical. The inner man was created in the image of God, destined to live forever. The physical man was, and is, of the earth, destined there to return. In the Bible, God has illustrated the inner man, its conception, birth, and growth, by the laws of the physical nature. There can be no existence without conception and birth. This is as true spiritually as it is physically. There must be a spiritual begetting; there must be a spiritual birth. In the very familiar, but oft misapplied, quotation of John 3: 5, the Lord said man must be born anew, of water and the Spirit, to enter the kingdom of God. Just as children are literally born into households and families, so are children of God born into the house of God, which is the church of the living God. (1 Tim. 3: 16.)

Let us inquire, then, how and when is one born spiritually? "For though ye have ten thousand tutors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers; for in Christ Jesus I begat you through the gospel." (1 Cor. 4: 15.) "Seeing ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one another from the heart fervently: having been begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the word of God, which liveth and abideth." (1 Pet. 1: 22, 23.) In addition to the foregoing by Paul and Peter, James says: "Of his own will he brought us forth by the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures." (James 1: 18.) "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered." (Rom. 6: 17.) The expressions, "brought forth," "delivered," are not without their significance.

Whensoever a babe is born into the family of God, it then, by proper feeding and care, grows unto salvation. "Putting away therefore all wickedness, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, long for the spiritual milk which is without guile, that ye may grow thereby unto salvation." (1 Pet. 2: 1, 2.) From this stage of infancy one grows spiritually to a full-grown man. "For every one that partaketh of milk is without experience of the word of righteousness; for he is a babe. But solid food is for full-grown men, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil." (Heb. 5: 13, 14.)

Childhood is a time for educating; so into the school is man ushered, under the great Teacher in whom we have ten thousand tutors. (1 Cor. 4: 15.) Then the great textbook, adequate, all-sufficient for every need, has been placed in our hands, with the charge to study that we may be approved in God's sight, and that we may be prepared for the great examination in a fairer day. "Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete. furnished completely unto every good work." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) Therefore: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 15.)

In the foregoing references God is simply speaking of the spiritual in terms of the physical. The analogy is perfect; we must not misunderstand it. There is this difference, however: man is born physically through no choice of his own, but he has the right to become a child of God at all times. (John 1: 12.)

The preacher who loves the applause of the world more than the approval of God would render the church a distinct service by living in quiet and seclusion.

THE REVISED VERSION OF THE SCRIPTURES. BY ZEILNER ENGLISH.

Within the last one hundred years wonderful strides have been made in the matter of printing and distributing copies of the Holy Bible. While a recital of some of the wonders of the last and present centuries would make intensely interesting reading and would fill a number of pages of the Gospel Advocate, or of a book, I do not wish to go into that, and have not the figures and statements at hand for the purpose. It is sufficient to remember what most of us too easily forget, if we have thought of the fact at all, that within the last seventy-five to one hundred years, both in England and America, for the first time since the Holy Scriptures attained to the stage of completion and of perfection willed of God, the holy Book has been placed in the hands of practically all who are members of any religious body and of millions who are not professing believers in Christ. Millions of copies in English are sold every year, and hundreds of millions have been sold within the last one hundred years.

The early churches, after the days of the apostles, would gather together all the inspired writings of both Old and New Testaments, and preserve them sacredly against corruption, destruction, or injury from all uninspired sources. These would be brought forth in the assembly of the saints on the first day of the week and be read and studied in the presence of all. The words from the sacred page were treasured as eagerly as the words which had fallen from the divine and apostolic lips of a few years before. The Scriptures were the meat and drink of the Christian, and every church of any size guarded the sacred copies it had brought together as its dearest possession. This state of affairs continued until the Roman Church attained to full development and power, when monasteries became the repositories of precious manuscripts, and Latin Vulgates were chained to the church altars away from the eyes and understanding of the congregations. Only since 1611, as is generally known, have we had an authorized or generally published version for English-speaking peoples, and only since 1800 has the circulation of this book been widespread. We are, therefore, at the very opening of a great period of religious education, which, if the Lord wills, will extend and grow until, indeed,

"The earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, As the waters cover the sea."

Because of the exhaustless interest which the Bible contains for all true believers, the numerous translations which have appeared within this time of expansion and development have been welcomed in a manner hitherto unknown and impossible for various reasons. People have welcomed even shoddy and inferior versions, for a time, from the early days of inadequate scholarship in both Hebrew and Greek until the present university versions in ultra-modern language and classic-Greek meanings. Scholars of the church of Christ have done notable work in translating the Scriptures. We yet welcome to our bookshelves such works as H. T. Anderson's translation of the New Testament; Dr. Macknight's and other's translation of the Bible, revised and edited by Alexander Campbell; and Lard's "Commentary on Romans," with its admirably simple version of that book. There yet remains work to be done along this line. But by far the best translation that has been made in English in recent years, and consequently the best that has ever been made, because of the discovery of new manuscripts in the middle of the last century, is the American Revision of the Revised Version published in England, 1881 and 1885. This version was published in 1901, and was adopted almost immediately by such preachers as D. Lipscomb, J. A. Harding, M. C. Kurfees, and others.

Without desiring to extend unduly the length of this article, I wish to make a simple comparison or so, to the end that he who runs may read the difference between the American Standard Version and the King James or Authorized Version, of which the former is a revision—an easy passage, chosen at random:

Rom. 8: 31-39.

AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

What then shall we say to these things? If God is for us, who is against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall be not also with him freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth; who is he that condemneth? It is Christ Jesus that died, yea rather, that was raised from the dead, who is at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or anguish, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or aword? Even as it is written.

For thy sake we are killed all the day long;

We were accounted as sheep for the slaughter.

Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but de-livered him up for us all, how shall be not with him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written. For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor ties, nor powers, nor things pres-ent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Compare with these Lard's simple, almost literal, version, noting which one comes the nearest to Lard's version, which in every way is of high authority:

What then shall we say to these things? If God is for us, who is against us? He who spared not his own Son, but gave him up for us all, how will he not also with him give us all things? Who can bring a charge against God's chosen? It is God that justifies. Who is he that condemns? It is Christ that died, rather that is risen, who also is at the right hand of God, and who pleads for us. Who can separate us from the love of Christ? Can affliction, or distress, or persecution, or hunger, or nakedness, or danger, or sword? Accordingly it is written, For your sake we are killed all the day; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter. But in all these things we more than conquer by him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor rulers, nor things present nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature will be able to separate us from God's love which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

It is seen at once that the American Standard Version and the version by Brother Lard are substantially identical in the number of words used, and in the reproduction of the sense of the original; and while the same may fairly be said with regard to the Authorized Version and Lard's version, a close examination of the three reveals that where differences occur in both the words selected and their position, the two former are in closer agreement than the latter is with either, due to two cuases: (1) the discovery of new manuscripts, and (2) the changes of the meanings of English words, since 1611. The Revised Version is valuable because of these two truths. The American and English revisers, who produced first the Revised Version, and then, in 1901, the revision of the same by the American Revisers associated in the former work, labored under the limitation of seeking merely to revise the existing, the Authorized Version; hence, Lard, Macknight, and others have been able to furnish us with new, illuminating versions which serve as alternative readings for the received text.

The Revised Version, or American Standard Version, renders another service to the faithful student which may be illustrated briefly by a quotation again from each version, this time from John's first letter:

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION.

For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, I the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one. (1 John 5: 7, 8.)

For there are three who bear witness, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and the three agree in one. (1 John 5: 8.)

The words inclosed in brackets have been found to be, according to the best evidence, interpolations pure and simple, although but few of these have been found in the entire Authorized text.

The time may never come when we shall have what we regard as a flawless Bible, because of the mistakes inevitably made in copying by hand, but the mistakes of either version are and have always been trivial. The real value of the Revision consists in its far greater clarity and ease of reading. The reader of to-day finds even the highest modern literature inferior in readable qualities to the new classic which is destined to supplant the old—the American Standard Version. It has every attraction toward making the reading of the Bible superior in pleasure to the charms afforded by the most entrancing novel or story, a thing which has never been the case before. It is mostly valuable for its soul-saving qualities. Because of its certain merits. I do not hesitate to urge for it a more general acceptance in Christian homes. We should not be willing to give ourselves over to prejudices in favor of the older version.

A last word as to price. Neat, good copies can be had for one dollar and up, from the Gospel Advocate Company.

ROY HARALSON YEAGLEY.

BY G. Q. LIPSCOMB.

In this age of industrial progress and scientific discovery man is prone to rely on self and to forget God. Especially is this true of the young. What are the causes of this lack of interest in things spiritual?

"Like father, like son," is an adage that is daily pictured. For what are our efforts expended? In what channels do our thoughts run? To answer this truly, we are forced to admit that selfish interests and material wealth predominate in our life. How much of our time is devoted to the developing and perfecting of the inner man? Our children, following us, and in most cases encouraged by us, are studying and fitting themselves for those trades and professions that yield the greatest money return. The best remedy for this state of affairs is a reformation in ourselves and a greater zeal on the part of parents for the worship of Jehovah.

David said in the Psalms: "Let them praise the name of the Lord: . . . both young men, and maidens; old men, and children." Also, he said: "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word." Solomon said: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." The ideal young man in God's sight makes these words his daily thoughts and plans his acts accordingly. Such a young man is now rare, and the passing of one is the cause of this article.

Roy Haralson Yeagley was born on February 28, 1904; obeyed the gospel at the age of twelve; was married on December 31, 1923, to Mizella Burton; and died on February 11, 1925, lacking a few days of being twenty-one years old. Fortunately, the success of life is not measured by its length, but by service. Roy's was a life of service to God and to man. He received his school training at David Lipscomb College, and at the time of his death he was a valued and trusted employee of the Orr Grocery Company. He was regular in his attendance at Sunday school, the Lord's-day worship, and prayer meeting. He used his talent by leading the song service at the Foster Street congregation, and later at the Waverly-Belmont congregation.

His parents, Brother and Sister L. L. Yeagley; his sister, Elizabeth; and his wife, Mizella, have the sympathy of hundreds of Roy's friends. They have also the consolation that, as far as we know, his life was pure and unblemished.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

The Index to Volume LXVI. of the Gospel Advocate is now ready, and will be sent, post paid, to any address for 25 cents. Order your copy to-day.

"The Christian System," by Alexander Campbell. This has reference to the union of Christians and restoration of primitive Christianity as pleaded by the current Refermation. Price, $1.50.

"The Profitable Word," containing some of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, will be ready for distribution in the near future. It will be nicely bound in cloth and will contain about two hundred pages. The price of the book will be $1.50. We shall be glad to have our readers send in their orders at once and be sure of receiving a copy.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

NELSON

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

Bound in Strong Cloth. Regular Price, $5.00

Our Price, $4.00

WE WILL SEND FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY

SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

If you will send us eight new yearly subscribers to the Gospel Advocate at the regular price of $2.00 each, we will send you this Concordance FREE.

SEND YOUR ORDER AT ONCE

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

OUR MESSAGES

Ignorance is the worst form of darkness.

When humility says, "Look at me," it ceases to be humility.

We can get to heaven only by walking in the footsteps of Christ.

Dr. O. H. Tallman preached at Springfield, Tenn., last Lord's day.

Something is wrong with your eyesight when meanness looks attractive.

The organ is not the trouble. It is simply one little symptom of the trouble.

T. H. Bass, Lufkin, Texas, March 3: "The cause in Lufkin is gradually growing."

T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., March 2: "Two from the Central Christian Church and one confession yesterday."

It is more than probable that you will convert your unconverted neighbor if you get him to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate.

H. M. Phillips is announced to begin a meeting with the Lischey Avenue church of Christ, this city, on the fourth Lord's day in March.

When any one first engages to serve the devil, he always takes a little job for just a short time. But the devil promotes him rapidly,

C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., March 3: "We had two additions at the Wednesday-night prayer meeting and one on Lord's day. Pray for us."

Lytton Alley will begin a meeting with the congregation worshiping at Twenty-second Avenue, North, this city, next Lord's day. All are invited to attend.

Brother McQuiddy's book, "The Profitable Word," is a gem. It contains the cream of Brother McQuiddy's writings, and will be ready for distribution in the near future. Price, $1.50.

All individuals and churches of Christ who are interested in caring for orphan and dependent children should make liberal contributions on the first Sunday in April to the Tennessee Orphan Home.

M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., March 1: "Since writing I have filled appointments near home. The cause is progressing well in this section. Springfield will put on quite a mission campaign this summer."

W. B. West, Jr., Decherd, Tenn., March 3: "On the fourth Lord's day in February I preached at Huntland, Tenn. J. T. Clark is working with the congregation here, and is doing fine work. Our Bible drills every Friday night are good."

Willie Hunter, Tompkinsville, Ky., March 2: "Two good services here yesterday. One baptism in the country last week. I am to be at Gamaliel on the second Sunday in each month. I hear many favorable remarks about the Gospel Advocate."

We are bringing out a new edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachman. It contains three hundred outlines for sermons, a supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, "Hedge's Rules of Debate," and forms of church letters. Price, $1.

The first Sunday in April is the beginning of the second quarter of 1925, and individuals and churches of Christ interested in helping orphan and dependent children will please freely respond in making a liberal contribution to the Tennessee Orphan Home on that date.

David Thompson, Mayfield, Ky., March 2: "Two good services here last Sunday. One addition by membership. T. C. Wilcox preached here on the last Sunday in February. The church appreciated his good lesson. We had a good audience and a fine service at Mount Olivet last Sunday afternoon."

G. A. Dunn, Jr., Gainesville, Texas, March 2: "During the month of February there were additions each Sunday to the Central congregation, with which I am laboring. Yesterday I exchanged appointments with my father, preaching to large and attentive audiences at Cumby."

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, March 3: "Our work here is getting on fine. On the last Lord's day in February we had ten additions to the congregation by membership. We will begin a meeting next Lord's day. Alva Johnson will do the preaching and B. R. Bassel will lead the songs. I preached last Lord's day at Quail. The church at O M is doing well."

J. D. Boyer, St. Louis, Mo.: "The Lord's-day services at the corner of Spring and Blaine Streets, this city, are well attended. We have two midweek meetings. These are not so well attended, but enough come to make the services both interesting and profitable. There have been several baptized lately. Our mission in East St. Louis is slowly gaining, we think."

Horace W. Busby, Italy, Texas, March 2: "The Ozona meeting closed on last Monday night, with eight baptized and several restored, most of them heads of families. W. D. Everidge led the singing. I have baptized about seventy since January 1, at Tipton, Okla., and San Benito, Harlingen, and Ozona, Texas. Tillet S. Teddlie and I began in Italy yesterday, with fine interest. The house was full last night. We are to go from here to Chillicothe, Texas."

A. R. Hill, Avon Park, Fla., March 3: "The meeting at this place closed on Sunday night, February 22, after two weeks' duration. L. L. Brigance did the preaching. Much interest was manifested. As visible results, there were five additions. I am sure that much good will yet result from the seed that was sown. I am sending two renewals and one new subscriber for the Gospel Advocate, More will follow. I hope to put the Advocate in every Christian home in this town."

J. C. Pendergrass, Houston, Texas, March 3: "I came here three weeks ago to visit my son, H. F. Pendergrass. I find four loyal congregations here. I have preached for three of them. I am to preach at Livingston next Lord's day. I aim to visit Beaumont, Bronson, McKee's Chapel, and Tenaha while here. I expect to go through North Louisiana on my way back to Wynne, Ark. I aim to hold another meeting at Philippi, near Trenton, Ky., beginning on the third Lord's day in June. Success to the Gospel Advocate and its many readers."

L. E. Carpenter, Port Arthur, Texas, March 2: "The Sixth Street congregation, of this city, is planning for a great revival, beginning on April 5, with Price Billingsley as the evangelist. The work here was never better than now, and is growing along all lines. Eight came forward last Sunday and four the Sunday before that. We are still maintaining our good record of having new pupils in the Bible study each Sunday. This is the result of a definite goal and aim in view to work by. May we all work more definitely along all lines with a definite aim."

Miss Clementine Ivie, Des Moines, N. M., March 2: "I feel that there is no better way to do missionary work than to send the Gospel Advocate into a home, so I am giving these five persons [named in letter] a year's subscription. Some of them are not Christians, and Brother Allen's front-page articles are so good I wish every one might read them. On November 10 and on December 20 I sent lists of five names, which, together with these five, make fifteen in all. These people do not know who is sending the paper to them, and I think best for some of them not to know. We enjoy reading every article in the Advocate and feel that we could not be without it."

Advocate and feel that we could not be without it."

The debate held in the courthouse at Columbia, Tenn, on instrumental music, came to a close last Friday night. The brethren were greatly pleased with Brother Brewer's able defense of the truth. Great crowds attended the debate. Among the preachers present we note the following: J. M. Gainer, Winchester, Tenn.; E. P. Watson, Shelbyville, Tenn.; Walter W. Sikes, Gallatin, Tenn.; J. T. Clark, Cowan, Tenn.; H. Leo Boles, R. P. Cuff, H. C. Hale, and A. G. Freed, David Lipscomb College; W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn.; John T. Lewis and Hugh Price, Birmingham, Ala.; E. O. Coffman and J. E. Thornberry, Lawrenceburg, Tenn.; S. T. Nix and E. A. Elam, Lebanon, Tenn.; J. L. Hines, Mount Juliet, Tenn.; J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala.; G. W. Riggs, Los Angeles, Cal.; Charles L. Talley, Hopkinsville, Ky.; Coleman Overby, Murray, Ky.; Ben F. Harding, Huntsville, Ala.; B. Frank Moody, Joppa, Ala.; J. Clifford Murphy, Pulaski, Tenn.; W. E. Morgan, Senatobia, Miss.; W. C. Phillips, Cleveland, Tenn.; R. C. White, H. M. Phillips, H. E. Winkler, F. W. Smith, and James A. Allen, Nashville, Tenn.; and others we cannot now recall. H. Leo Boles, who served as Brother Brewer's moderator, will give a more extensive account of the debate. Brother Brewer left last Monday for his home in Sherman, Texas.

The Pope introduced the organ.

Self-conceit is a heavy load of nothing.

E. A. Elam preached at Smyrna, Tenn., last Lord's day.
All safe teachers in religion stick close to the word of God.

Nobody should shoot off his mouth before he loads his head.

The apostles did not have it. Why should anybody else want it?

An educated man is one who realizes how much he does not know.

A person who borrows trouble always pays a high rate of interest.

The preacher who is fishing for souls can live without compliments.

H. Leo Boles preached at Twelfth Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

A. G. Freed preached at Charlotte Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

It is easy to slide downhill, but it is always mighty rough at the bottom.

It is said that the reason a negro never has appendicitis is that he never has the money.

G. W. Riggs, of Los Angeles, Cal., preached at David Lipscomb College last Lord's day.

A man who wants to do right will never stand on ground he does not absolutely know to be safe.

We have never yet heard any grief-stricken brother admit that his aching void was in his head.

The man who knows he is serving the Lord does not lose much sleep over what people say about him.

When Norway went "dry," the universal verdict was that "the women did it." We admit that the women can do a few things.

We must break fellowship with the world and form a closer union with God before we will be more contented and less dissatisfied.

Keep a pure heart and clean hands if you would sleep with a good conscience, avoid wrangles, and enjoy the approval of Jehovah.

A "want" advertisement in the Charleston Post says: "A baby fifteen months old wants two rooms, with privilege of bringing its parents."

G. C. Brewer preached at Waverly-Belmont, this city, last Sunday, morning and night, and at Charlotte Avenue at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Instrumental music was first introduced in the seventh century. That shows the way the Christian world understood "psallo" for six centuries.

You don't have to have a dictionary or a lexicon to find out what "psallo" means. Find out what the early churches did when it was used. They sang.

All denominations concede that the religious position occupied by the church of Christ is safe and invulnerable. No other body of religious people can claim that distinction,

W. E. Morgan preached at Mount Pleasant, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Morgan preached two funerals while in Mount Pleasant—one Saturday afternoon and one Sunday afternoon.

When the celebrated Lyman Beecher asked Alexander Campbell how he possessed himself of such stores of methodized knowledge, Mr. Campbell replied: "By studying sixteen hours per day."

F. B. Srygley was in a great meeting at Woodsfield, Ohio, at last report. Brother Srygley expected to close last Sunday night, but as we go to press we are not advised as to the final results of the meeting.

Wanted—To find S. F. Williams. If any of the readers of the Gospel Advocate know of S. F. Williams or can give any information as to his whereabouts, please write to R. E Wright, 509 Leonard Street, Bradentown, Fla.

R. E. L. Taylor, Zolfo Springs, Fla., March 3: "I closed a two-weeks' meeting at Sweetwater, Fla., with nineteen additions. Of this number, fifteen were baptized, among whom were five Baptists, one Methodist, and one Roman Catholic."

It is said that the great statesman, Henry Clay, who was chosen chairman of the beard of moderators of the Campbell and Rice debate, was immersed after hearing the debate. A great stir was later created among the Presbyterians because Mr. Rice's son became a Christian.

Willie Hunter, of Tompkinsville, Ky., is in Room 427, St. Thomas Hospital, this city. Brother Hunter, who is one of our best young preachers, successfully stood an operation, and we are glad to say he is on the read to recovery. He would appreciate a visit from some of the Nashville brethren.

W. T. Hines, Neosho, Mo., March 6: "The work in Southwest Missouri is slowly advancing. Since my debate with a Russellite the crowds at home are a third larger. I will conduct my third meeting with my home congregation, March 15-29. Will W. Slater, of Irving, Texas, will be in charge of the song service."

H. F. Pendergrass, Houston, Texas, March 3: "I was with the West End congregation, Birmingham, Ala., the first Lord's day in February, and preached twice daily till the following Wednesday. The Lord willing, I will begin regular work with these brethren on May 1. There have been twenty added here in Central Park since my last report."

John F. Crews, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., March 2: "I preached at Shiloh, in Alabama, on Saturday night and on Sunday to small but attentive audiences, with one reclaimed. My first summer meeting is to begin at Sherrod Schoolhouse, in Alabama, the fourth Lord's day in July. I would be glad to arrange some work before that date. I am willing to go to any place. I am busy each Lord's day. The harvest is ready, but the laborers are few."

Suppose we grant, for argument's sake, that "psallo" means "with or without." What then? It cannot mean "with or without" at the same time and place. When "psallo" is used by inspired men in the New Testament, it means "with or without," one or the other; it cannot mean both at once. What it means may be learned from what was done by the people to whom it was written. They sang. The organ was not introduced until the seventh century. Why should not this one, simple, incontrovertible fact settle the question?

J. W. Roberts says: "Whenever the church of Christ is completely annihilated; the Bible obliterated by God himself; the angels in heaven cast down to hell; Christ proven to be an impostor; murder made obligatory upon all; 'Good Shepherd's Homes' indorsed by God; nunneries approved by Heaven; the 'confessional' sanctioned by God; drunkenness, profanity, adultery, gambling, etc., indorsed by Heaven's laws; the 'Knights of Columbus' acceptable to God; the Roman Catholic Church (with their popes, cardinals, bishops, and priests to give orders, commands, and boss) indorsed by the God of heaven; etc.—then I may join the 'Roman Catholic hierarchy,' but not before."

E. E. Shoulders, 1324 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York City, March 5: "Our Sunday services have been very fine, except on cold, rainy Sundays. Our midweek Bible classes are moving along nicely, but the midweek song drill has been suffering considerably for several weeks on account of bad colds and sore throats. I would like to urge a more hearty coöperation on the part of all, both in prayer and thanksgiving and in financial support, in behalf of the New York work. We are always glad to have visiting brethren in New York to meet and worship with us. The address is 226 West Fifty-eighth Street. Bible study at ten o'clock every Sunday morning; preaching and communion at eleven."

Samuel E. Witty, Los Angeles, Cal., March 2: "S. H. Hall closed a fifteen-days' meeting with the Central church of Christ, this city, on March 1. The attendance and interest were fine from the start. There were fourteen confessions, five restorations, and two by membership. Two more elders and five deacons were appointed to serve the congregation, a committee selected to look for a suitable location for a permanent home, and several thousand dollars subscribed to the building fund. In addition to the work with the Central congregation, Brother Hall devoted much time to the Japanese mission. He also preached once for the colored brethren at Watts, where S. R. Cassius has done a good work, and once for the brethren at Ontario. Brother Ishiguro's work among the Japanese of this city is growing. We need larger quarters for this work now. Sister Hettie Lee Ewing will reach here about the first of June to learn the Japanese language, customs, etc., preparatory to her work in Japan. It is hoped that the Texas brethren will supply her every need. The Lord willing, Foy E. Wallace, Jr., will hold our meeting next year, beginning the first Lord's day in January."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sawell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy,

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sont by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter. Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

WOMEN PREACHERS AND THE MAJORITY RULE. No. 2.

BY E. A. ELAM.

These questions might be answered in a laconic manner, but I prefer to give more fully the teaching of the Scriptures in regard to them, that all may learn for themselves the will of God.

Let it be further understood that if the old women do not teach the young women the lessons which God directs, and if the young women do not practice these lessons, it matters not what else they may do of what is called "church work" by the religious world, they blaspheme the word of God. (See, again, Tit. 2: 5.) The only way to please and honor God is to live and work as He directs.

We are asked how we know that Philip's daughters prophesied in private. We know because that is the way in which God said women should teach. How does any one know that they preached publicly—that is, to mixed audiences of men and women, saints and sinners-when there is no command in the New Testament to them to do so, and no example of any woman's doing so? The burden of proof rests upon the one who affirms that the New Testament authorizes women to so preach.

According to the letter in which these questions are asked, it is claimed "that all references to women keeping silence had reference to the old law and could not be binding in this enlightened age." This is absurd, because all commands to women to "keep silence in the churches" are in the New Testament and not in the law of Moses. But the law of Moses required women to be in subjection, and this is also enjoined by the New Testament. 14: 34.)

An age can never become so "enlightened" that women are justifiable in doing that which God says it is shameful for them to do. This is not enlightenment. When some people cannot sustain that which they are set on doing by the New Testament-that is, by the wisdom of God-they try to do so by "this enlightened age." "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all;" Jesus Is "the light of the world;" "the opening of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple" (Ps. 119: 130); hence, no age or person can be more enlightened or possess more light than God, Christ, and the word of God. The enlightenment or wisdom of this world is foolishness with

For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and the discernment of the discerning will I bring to naught. (1 Cor. 1: 19.)

It would prove helpful to study 1 Cor. 1: 18-31; 3: 18-23. Every one must decide for himself whether or not he will follow the "enlightenment" of "this present evil world," or age (Gal. 1: 4), or walk in the light of God.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and light unto my (Ps. 119: 105.)

So long as the New Testament in Christ's blood stands, just so long God's word is our lamp and light; and just so long as "the church of God" (1 Cor. 1: 2) continues, just so long this requirement that women "keep silence in the churches [congregations] of the saints" must be observed, and will be observed by all God-fearing women. The divine test in this, as in all other "things that pertain unto life and godliness," is, will women obey God?

WEAK AND STRONG CHURCHES.

The author of the letter says: "They think I ought to help [the woman preacher] because the majority want her, and because the church is weak," etc.

Indeed, any church is weak which turns aside from the will of God in its attempts to make itself strong. If a church which does this had a thousand members, and every member possessed a million dollars and stood high in social circles, it would be weak. On the other hand, a church of only two or three members, poor in this world's goods and of no social standing at all in the conventional meaning of the term, but who fear God and faithfully practice his word, is a strong church-strong in the Lord and the power of his might. In this way one can chase a thousand, and two can put ten thousand to flight. The power is in the word of God.

THE LAST RESORT.

Driven from every other false position, it seems that some will fall back on the claim that the majority should Brother Lipscomb very truly says: "A church in which majorities rule is not a church of Christ. In his church his law rules, and the elders see that it is carried out." This is the truth on this question in a nutshell.

If by a majority simply a congregation can select a preacher, and if for that reason only the preacher should be accepted and supported, then by the same rule any congregation can have a woman preacher, and she should be accepted and supported. By the same rule women elders can be chosen. But in selecting preachers, evangelists, or elders, the word of God and not the majority must be the rule.

The voice of the majority is not the voice of God. If the majority obey the voice of God, the majority is in the right; but not because of the majority, but because of obedience to God. To Israel, God said: "Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil." (Ex. 23: 2.) In his parting words to the rebellious people, Joshua said that if they chose to serve idols, he and his house would still serve Jehovah. Jesus declares that the many travel the broad road and pass through the wide gate unto destruction; the ones who travel the straitened way and pass through the narrow gate are few. (Matt. 7: 13, 14.) While Paul was a Pharisee and persecuted the church, he pleased men and was popular; but as a Christian, he says if he "were still pleasing men," he would not "be a servant of Christ," and that one cannot seek "the favor of men" and strive "to please men" and at the same time please Christ and enjoy the favor of God. (Gal. 1: 10.)

Jesus was woefully in the minority when forsaken by his disciples and all religious sects and political powers combined to crucify him. Later, Peter and John, prisoners for Christ's sake, filled with the Holy Spirit, declared before the supreme court of the Jews that they "must obey God rather than men."

These passages and examples show that neither the voice of those out of the church nor that of the majority in the church can reveal the will of God or determine one's duty as a Christian. This can be settled only by the voice of God.

Of many church members Paul declares:

For many walk, of whom I told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is perdition, whose god is the belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." (Phil. 3: 18, 19.)

"The many" who were so walking as to cause Paul to weep, who were serving their appetites and passions, who were glorying in their shame, who were "enemies of the cross of Christ," and whose end was perdition, were all church members. Think of such members-many indeedvoting on who is to be the preacher, whether woman or man, of the church of Christ, or on the settlement of any other question! Cannot all see that their vote would carry the whole church with themselves to perdition? It indeed grieves the faithful in Christ Jesus to learn that not a few are contending for just such a ruinous course. The contention is that all such members in any congregation to-day should have an equal voice in selecting teachers and preachers, and in settling other like questions, with those who by the study of the Scriptures are wise unto salvation, and with godly elders, whose duty God has made it to teach and to provide teaching for the church. Their votes could destroy the votes of all the elders and all the other older and wiser ones in the church, and then have a majority to spare. Think of these many frivolous and worldly members "that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter," and "that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight" (Isa. 5: 20, 21), together with babes in Christ, who are unable to discern truth and error, good and evil, because their senses have not been sufficiently exercised (Heb. 5: 11-14), deciding who are to be teachers and preachers of the will of God in his church! To think that such procedure is the teaching of Christ is preposterous. But this is not all. Frequently people not in the church at all have a voice indirectly in helping to select preachers for a congregation. They say to the members that they like to hear a certain preacher, not because of his knowledge of the Bible, or that he preaches the gospel in its simplicity and power and with dignity and love of the truth, but because he is "snappy," is a pleasant speaker, is entertaining, and antagonizes nothing or nobody, not even sin and Satan; and in the deception that they may be interested in the gospel, those in the church who manage such things by majority vote select the preacher these people of the world like to hear. Thus people of the world have a voice in selecting the preacher.

Of all plain teaching of the New Testament, there is nothing clearer and plainer than that elders, with their scriptural qualifications, are held responsible by the Lord for the teaching of the congregation. Paul's address to the elders at Ephesus shows this. They were to keep away grievous wolves (false teachers) from without and to overcome any perverse teaching which might arise among themselves. (See Acts 20: 28-30.) Attention is called to another passage among the many which might be quoted. It is Tit. 1: 9, 10. Paul teaches that an elder, with all other qualifications, must "be able both to exhort in the sound doctrine, and to convict the gain-sayers," giving the reason: "For there are many unruly men, vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision, whose mouths must be stopped; men who overthrow whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake."

Let us note that the elders must hold "to the faithful word which is according to the teaching," and that they must do this in order to be able to do two things: (1) "exhort in the sound doctrine" and (2) "convict the gainsayers," They must stop the mouths of the many unruly men, vain talkers and deceivers. This must all be done by the word of God.

Then, we see that since there were "gainsayers" in Paul's time, there may be such now, and since there were then "unruly men, vain talkers and deceivers," who overthrew "whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake," there may be such now. These whole houses, whose faith was overthrown by these mercenary teachers with their smooth and fair speech (see Rom. 16: 17, 18), are church members, and whom such sleek gentlemen can easily manipulate so as to outvote the faithful elders and the few other true and tried ones. Trouble and division necessarily follow such a course.

We thank God for appointing in his wisdom scripturally qualified elders, who, by the counsel of other wise and godly persons in the church, are able to see at once the difference between the will of God and the theories and ways of men; who can detect the "gainsayers," the "unruly men," the "vain talkers and deceivers," teaching for money; and who have the courage and faith to discharge this and other duties.

There is nothing in the New Testament but condemnation for elders who love authority and who "lord it over the charge allotted" to them, and the persons who cannot see the difference between this and the work of true elders should never attempt to speak and write on the subject. The church will be torn to pieces continually until scripturally qualified and courageous elders arise in the strength of God and faithfully discharge their duties, also until all preachers who claim to preach the gospel strive constantly indeed to build up the New Testament church in all of its parts.

The preacher who teaches that the majority ought to rule in the church in anything cannot build up the New Testament church, for this course proves that he does not understand the government of this church. Elders are to rule well, labor in word and teaching, tend the flock, feed the church, exercise the oversight of it, set a good example, advise with others in the church concerning the welfare, the best interest, the harmony and peace of the church; but they are not to take the vote of babes in Christ and of the frivolous and worldly-minded of whom Paul writes in 1 Cor. 3: 2, 3; Phil. 3: 18, 19; Heb. 5: 11-14.

There is not one command in the New Testament to take the vote in any way of a congregation in regard to any question; there is not one example of any congregation's doing so, and there is not a necessary inference that such a thing was ever done. So clear and strong a Bible teacher as Brother Lipscomb says this was never done. I know of no scholar and teacher in the church of any reputation who thinks that any question should be pressed to a vote in order to carry a point. A few think a vote may be taken in order to ascertain the sentiment of the congregation, but not by arguing different sides of a question and as votes are taken in political meetings or ordinary meetings of any kind. All urge consultation, the study of the Scriptures, prayer, yielding of opinions, surrender of preferences, forbearance, unity, peace, and love-all of which the Bible teaches. Since no teaching of the word of God can be settled or set aside by majority vote, and since no opinions, preferences, and prejudices of any one should be forced upon others, but should be held as private property, then how must questions of "expediency," as they are called, be settled? By God's rule. The "younger" in the church are commanded to "be subject unto the elder," or older and wiser ones, and all to gird themselves "with humility" and to "serve one another: for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." In doing this, all humble themselves "under the mighty hand of God." (1 Pet. 5: 5, 6.) Not doing this—all of this—is disobedience to God. How can church members, as well as those not church members, be saved in disobedience to God?

But some things, such as choosing elders and other teachers and preachers, are matters of faith, and not, as some now think, "matters of expediency." The qualifications of elders and of all other teachers (study Rom. 15: 14; 2 Tim. 2: 2) are given, and how to check and to stop all teachers of error is also given; hence, such most important matters cannot be left to the preferences, prejudices, whims, and lack of Bible knowledge of any number, small or great. In this, as in all other things, the will of God must be done.

In the light and spirit of these scriptures, there is no room for voting in the church in regard to the management of its affairs; but there is room for, and great need of, consulting, forbearance, gentleness, patience, surrendering of preferences and prejudices, too, and of continued prayer until all come to one mind and soul. In contending for the faith, fighting the good fight, preaching "the word," and knowing nothing, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified, it must not be forgotten that the gospel of the Prince of Peace teaches all these duties and virtues and graces. Without these, no one can have the Spirit of Christ.

From what we have learned, I suppose the brother who has asked these questions will see that he is justifiable in not supporting the woman preacher and in his effort to teach the congregation "the way of the Lord more accurately."

It is true, there are some counties in Tennessee in which there is no church of Christ only and simply, but that is not because there are no women preachers here; but to say that there are counties in Tennessee in which there are "no schools and churches" is a slander upon the school system, the intelligence, and the religion of the Volunteer State, which has furnished three Presidents of the United States. There were people in the days of the apostles who could not be reached by the gospel. We admit that not all has been done which should have been done to preach the gospel in every county in Tennessee, but in our humble judgment there are places in Tennessee where the New Testament church stands forth in its dignity and strength without additions of innovations or departure from the word of God in as clear light as any place on earth, and where there are in ratio to the population more people who are only Christians, discarding all denominational names, organizations, and machinery, than any place on the earth.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON. BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Since last week Washington City, as well as the entire country, has had a holiday in commemoration of February 22, the one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of the birth of George Washington, our first President. As the twenty-second was Sunday this year, Uncle Sam granted to his army of workers Monday as a holiday, and there were various and sundry meetings in honor of the day. Many went to Mount Vernon, Washington's home, and placed flowers on his tomb there, and boats passing on the Potomac River tolled their bells or whistled a salute.

Mrs. Larimore and I attended a memorial service held in the new Washington Auditorium, which is in process of completion. We were glad we went. The exercises were interesting and instructive, the music very fine, and the big audience itself well worth going to see. For an hour previous to the opening of the exercises, the Marine, Army, and Navy Bands discoursed sweet music, playing many of the old popular war-time pieces, including "Dixle" and "Yankee Doodle."

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 by the president of the Board of Commissioners of the District, followed by a prayer by Bishop William F. McDowell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the presentation of the colors, while the Army Band played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

An introductory address was delivered by John Barton Payne, of Illinois, who declared: "In the opinion of the world, George Washington stood alone—without a rival. Only Lincoln holds a place in popular esteem comparable to him. It is hardly too much to say George Washington was the Revolution."

The District Sons of the American Revolution offer every year a prize for the best essay on a given subject by a pupil of some public or private school in the District of Columbia. The subject selected this year was: "The Surrender of Yorktown, October 19, 1781-Its Influence on the Welfare of the British Empire." The contest was open to two hundred and fifty schools, about ten thousand pupils. The prize was won by Miss Katherine Parsons, seventeen years of age, a pupil of the Gunston Hall School, one of the private schools here. She read in a clear, distinet voice her views of the influence the Yorktown victory had on the ultimate welfare of the vanguished in that historic struggle. She handled the struggle well, showing, by citations from subsequent history, that the British Empire profited greatly by that decisive battle, in loarning, by the loss of its American colonies, how better to govern its remaining possessions-seeking to do so by friendly, rather than coercive, measures.

The British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, presented the medal to Miss Parsons, that fact being a token, as he himself suggested in an appropriate presentation speech, that all bitterness engendered by the War of the Revolution between England and America has entirely passed away. The music that followed his speech was the national hymn of Great Britain: "God Save the King."

The principal address of the day was made by George W. Wickersham, of New York, a former Attorney-General of the United States. He presented George Washington "as a great human personality, instead of in the too austere, too perfect lines in which he is usually presented to posterity. His letters reveal him as strong, steadfast, controlled, it is true, but also passionate, fiercely attached to great causes, an intense lover of country, a hater of shams and pretenses; a man of warm human loves and friendships; a character lined in heroic proportions, yet tender at heart and tolerant of the faults and foibles of common humanity."

Quotations from the state papers of George Washington were read by Hampton Gary, of this city, showing that he foresaw many of the problems that confront the nation to-day. The exercises were interspersed throughout with music. Songs were rendered by Emilio de Gogorza and Charles Trowbridge Tittman, and the national hymn of France, the "Marseillaise," was sung by a Frenchman, Lieut. Jean Labat. The meeting closed about 12:30, with the singing of "America" by the audience, accompanied by the massed bands, and a benediction by Rector Edward L. Buckey.

We were interested, not only in the exercises, but also in the Auditorium in which they were held—a beautiful white concrete building not yet entirely completed, of which Washingtonians are justly appreciative. The capital city of our country is logically the Convention City of the entire country. It is a show place in which every resident of the United States has an interest and should see, if possible. Its broad streets and avenues, well-paved and shaded; its beautiful parks; its statuary erected in memory of men who have served the nation in war or in peace, and have thereby contributed to the greatness and influence of our country; its display of magnificent public buildings-all serve to make it the natural Mecca for conventions. Heretofore, however, the city has lacked a suitable assembly hall to meet the demands of conventions, but in the Washington Auditorium this demand is fully met.

The building is well located, occupying a triangle formed by Nineteenth Street, New York Avenue, and E Street. It is within five or ten minutes' walk of the White House, the State, War, and Navy Building, the Treasury, and the leading hotels, and diagonally across the street from the three-million-dollar Interior Department building. street car lines pass the door, and parking facilities are excellent.

The building is fireproof, constructed of concrete and The ground floor, which is partially below the ground on the E Street or north side is designed for an exhibit hall. It contains approximately twenty-eight thousand feet of floor space, and is well lighted and ventilated, as is the entire building. Occupying an entire block, the building has exceptional daylight advantages, and care has been taken to make its ventilation and artificial lighting facilities as good as the best.

The auditorium, like the entire building, is shaped like a flatiron. There is a stretch of one hundred and fiftytwo feet from wall to wall at the entrance to the auditorium, and it narrows to a width of forty-three feet at the front of the stage. Notwithstanding the width of the room, only two columns appear in it. The roof is supported by huge steel trusses of railroad-bridge type, strength, and endurance, securely riveted to the steel columns encircling the building. The gallery is cantilevered with immense beams and trusses. The building as a whole is recognized as an unusual engineering success for strength, durability, and practical utility. Its seating capacity is six thousand; but, to accommodate small gatherings, the seating capacity of main floor and gallery combined can be reduced to half that number.

As the demands upon the Auditorium will be many and varied, space was allowed by the architects for thirty-five rooms, to be used as dressing rooms, committee rooms, and conference rooms; and on the top floor of the building a five-room apartment has been arranged for the superintendent and his family-an important addition to their comfort and convenience and to the efficiency of the service.

The building is said to be fireproof; but, to provide for emergencies, the architects provided twelve exits from the auditorium and two at the back of the stage; hence, the entire Auditorium can be emptied of a capacity audience in a few minutes.

The Washington Auditorium is not one of Uncle Sam's buildings, but is owned and controlled by a corporation composed of business men and women of the city. The grounds and buildings represent an outlay of approximately eight hundred thousand dollars.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

See the advertisement on another page of our new collection basket. Price, $3.75. Mail us your order at once. once.

We have recently printed the second edition of "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," Volume I. Price, $1.50. Mail us your order for a copy of this splendid book.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

A REMARKABLE DOCUMENT.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Some documents are remarkable for some things, while others are remarkable on entirely different grounds. The following, which appeared in the Nashville Banner of February 7, belongs to the remarkable class:

STATE LEGISLATURE VS. TRUTH.

Some of our silly, incompetent, and bigoted legislators have stirred up the cosmic dust about evolution, Darwin's theory, and some have connected it all with the Christian theory, and some nave connected it all with the Christian religion. And let me say here that I am inclined to believe that the leaders in the escapade are about as much informed on the subject as Ingersoll was about "death" at the age of three, when his mother died, and he looked at her in quietness and asked, "Why doesn't mother move?"

her in quietness and asked, "Why doesn't mother move?" and was informed by a dressed-up man that she was dead.

No one needs better proof of the truthfulness of Darwin's theory than to visit Capitol Hill and view some of its occupants (I will not mention any in particular, as they need little, if any, free advertisement). Some one said they sprang from the monkey and that one would be forced to believe that they had not sprung very far. Now, don't misunderstand me. I said "some one else said this to me." But seriously, as men of reason, men who believe in the freedom of thought, action, and expression, and men who accept only facts, men who believe the human race has not lived and strived in vain and that we have advanced, these are the men who accept facts rather than advanced, these are the men who accept facts rather than miracles, who accept the known rather than the unknown who accept the "I know" rather than the "I believe"

There is little wonder that certain religious fanatics, There is little wonder that certain religious lanatics, through selfish bigotry, would force us to live under their rule and believe and accept their damnable creeds; they have made their living for the past twenty centuries by keeping us in ignorance; and when we throw off the yoke of superstition, discard myth and miracle, the supernatural and the scheme of redemption, and refuse to fill their referre, they would raise a howl and try to force us their coffers, they would raise a howl and try to force us to live, accept that which we do not believe, and to try to keep our children from being taught the facts and truths of science by means of placing such laws of force and crime on the statute books.

I don't think that a divine power needs any State Legislature to help solve its problems, nor to help keep the sons of man in ignorance for the benefit of the "self-appointed chosen few."

All the thinking men of the world to-day accept evolution as a proven fact, and they know that it does not conflict with the teachings of Christ, as some would have you believe.

Out with ignorance, superstitution, force, and fear! Facts, truths, and science are the things.

THOMAS PAGE GORE.

SWEEPING STATEMENTS.

The foregoing is remarkable for its sweeping statements unsupported by authentic documentary evidence. It is very easy for one who is himself uninformed to berate the men chosen by an intelligent constituency to represent them at the Capitol of their State as "silly, incompetent, and bigoted legislators," Such designating terms were used to make the impression on the public that their author is an exceedingly wise and profoundly learned man, but to all really thoughtful people who know a few things he has advertised himself as a dealer in secondhand, wormeaten theories.

His effort to compare the men in the Legislature to a boy of the tender age of three years is a reflection upon the common sense of the voters of Tennessee; and while it was intended to be funny, it is, in fact, "silly."

In all "seriousness," has the author of the document before us ever read Darwin's writings on the subject of evolution? The suspicion is that he has not, else he would not rush into the public prints as he does in the article under review. Does he not know that Darwin himself disclaimed the theory of evolution as a proven fact and said it was a theory that had not and could not be demonstrated? No sensible person has ever connected the theory of evolution with the Christian religion, and the very fact that the legislators introduced a bill to prohibit the teaching of evolution in our public schools shows that they regard such teaching as opposed to the Christian religion.

He who has the slightest conception of the Christian religion knows that the theory of "evolution" is diametrically opposed to the Bible. But since Mr. Gore is demanding the exercise of his "freedom of thought, action, and expression," he should not fall out with the legislators for doing the same. The taxpayers of this State who support the public schools most certainly have the right, or freedom, to say what shall be taught their children in these schools regarding their origin. If Mr. Gore or any other evolutionist wishes to conduct a school upon his or their own initiative, relying upon public patronage for support, let him or them go to it, and exercise all the "freedom of thought and action" desired, and I am sure the legislators (if they are "monkeys") will not interfere.

He informs us that he is of the class of "men who accept facts rather than miracles, who accept the known rather than the unknown, who accept the 'I know' rather than the 'I believe' theory." Wonderful statements coming from a man who terms the legislators a lot of "monkeys!" Does Mr. Gore know that he sprang from a monkey, or does he simply believe it from the theory of evolution? Does he even "know" that such a man as Darwin ever lived and wrote, or does he "believe" it because some one else has told him?

No, no, Mr. Gore, not any "religious fanatics, through selfish bigotry, would force" you "to live under their rule and believe and accept their damnable creeds." You can believe anything under the heavens you may wish, but you have no right to teach your infidel theory of evolution to the children of those who oppose it. God permits men to believe a lie and be damned if they so desire.

But really, does Mr. Gore reject miracles? The very fact that he accepts without question the miracle wrought through the grass in the same pasture causing wool to grow on a sheep's back, hair on a hog's back, and feathers on a goose's back, estops him in the denial of miracles.

His sweeping statement, "All the thinking men of the world to-day accept evolution as a proven fact, and they know that it does not conflict with the teachings of Christ as some would have you believe," shows how little he knows of the subject he attempts to handle.

None who believe the Bible accept any such thing, but are exceedingly emphatic in denying and combating the doctrine of evolution. Among these, who can be counted by the thousands, are some of the brightest intellects this world has ever known.

For man to deny the Bible account of miracles, while at the same time living, moving, and having his being in the midst of powers and forces as profoundly mysterious and inexplicable as that of any miracle recorded in the Bible, does not be peak a very high order of candor.

Can Mr. Gore explain upon any rational grounds how the food upon which he subsists is transmuted into blood, bone, flesh, sinew, and every constituent element of his physical being? If not, why deny that the power thus working through such mysterious laws could not have wrought the miracles recorded in the Bible. Infidelity is the most unreasonable and foolish thing that was ever propagated by man.

CHARLES CHRISTOPHER KLINGMAN.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

When Brother Klingman was satisfied with "what is written," it was "C. C. Klingman;" but since, like our digressive brother, John Cowden, he has become broadminded enough to do as he pleases, he writes himself down as "Charles Christopher Klingman." I confess I like "Charley" or "C. C." better than I do "Charles Christopher." This brother had an article in a recent issue of the Christian Standard, in which he went so far that the editor called him down. The article was labeled, "The Authority of Christ—Is It Fixed or Flexible?" I knew when I read that question at the head of the article, "Is it fixed or flexible?" that Brother Charley thought it was not "fixed" and that he was the very man that could fix it; and he certainly fixed it—fixed it so well that the editor of the Standard "fixed" him.

Brother Charley begins on "apostolic authority" in these words:

Organic unity is possible only on the basis of doctrinal agreement, and doctrinal agreement is possible only on the basis of some fixed authority, something extraneous to or helpfully supplementing the authority of the individual conscience. In the first century of the Christian era the apostles of Christ furnished just such an authority. Their decisions were final because they were believed to be inspired men, supernaturally endowed by God's Holy Spirit,

If the apostles furnished just such authority as was needed in the first century, why would not that same authority meet the demands of the second century and of every succeeding century? Brother Klingman cannot argue that the change in conditions of the centuries that followed made a change of authority necessary; for Christianity is for the spirit of man, which is from God and changes not. The bodies of men and their needs change; but the body came from the earth, while the spirit came from God who gave it. It is evident that the Lord understood that the authority of the apostles would continue through all the centuries, for when he gave them the commission he said: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," Brother Klingman says that that authority was all right for the first century; but the Savior seemed to think it would do "always, even unto the end of the world." It will be noted that Christ declares here that all authority in heaven and upon the earth had been given to him, and he delegated that authority to the apostles for all time, even to the end of the world. Our erring brother has discovered that it was all right for the first century, but he seems to beg leave to differ with the Savior about its being sufficient for all time. He says: "Their decisions were final because they were believed to be inspired men, supernaturally endowed by God's Holy Spirit." Some of us still believe that "they were inspired men, supernaturally endowed by God's Holy Spirit;" and with those who believe that, their decisions are yet final. This would indicate that Charley does not believe that these men were inspired by God's Holy Spirit, and, therefore, he is hunting for some flexible authority that he can fix to suit himself. If this is the trouble with the gentleman, I have but one quotation that exactly fits the case, and it is this: "But he that disbelieveth shall be condemned."

The brother says: "When Christianity became the state religion of the Roman Empire, this apostolic authority was claimed by the papal hierarchy." What if it was claimed by the Catholic Pope? That does not give it to him. That authority is yet for every believer, and I do not propose to surrender it to the "papal hierarchy." The brother seems to think that because the Pope claims it he is compelled to give it to him and turn out and hunt up some other authority that is flexible and that he can fix to suit his broad-gauge machine. You had better cut your machine down, Brother Klingman, to fit the gospel track.

The brother then speaks of "Protestant authority" in these words:

The authority of the apostles is also the theoretic authority for harmony in doctrine among Protestants. But that authority rests with the sacred literature of the New Testament, rather than with the personal successor of the

The brother talks about "the personal successor of the apostles," as though there could be successors to the apostles. The apostles were witnesses, and a witness cannot have a successor. Besides, when their testimony was given and submitted to writing, it was not necessary that any further testimony be given. The brother says: "The authority of the apostles is also the theoretical authority for harmony in doctrine among Protestants." Why should I make the authority of the apostles only theoretical because the Protestants have done so? The authority of the apostles should not be theoretical, but real and actual in controlling the life and teaching of the Christian. The brother had better let the Protestant and the Catholic rest a while and try to save Charley Klingman.

The brother then speaks of the authority of silence, as though silence could bestow any authority. point is too fine for me to get a bead on it, and so I pass it in silence. If silence has any authority, I hope to exercise it by being silent on this point.

The climax to the brother's article on authority is the authority of love, and he expresses himself in these words:

The fundamental principle of the Campbells is undoubtedly the only principle that will last, but the best things of earth are most easily ruined by extremists. For the most part, our editors do not want to be made our bishops. The Campbell principle is all right, but it must be made flexible by the authority of love. If it had been, "instrumental music in the worship" would never have been made a test of fellowship, editors or no editors.

"The authority of the silence of the Scriptures" might have forbidden its use, but the authority of love for one another, based on our individual worth to God, in the light of our blood-bought salvation, would surely have prevented of our blood-bought salvation, would surely have prevented us from letting it divide us into two hostile brotherhoods.

I am not as much concerned about "the fundamental principle of the Campbells" as I am about the fundamental principle of Christ and the apostles. I sometimes think it is a pity that some men ever knew that the Campbells lived. What right had these uninspired men to originate or arrange any principle that "must be made flexible" so our brother can have an instrument in his worship which was not authorized by Christ and his apostles? Whenever these fellows depart from the word of God, they begin to talk about "love," when the Bible says: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." do not these digressive brethren practice some of this "love" for their brethren, if it is such a fine thing? The brother says that if the authority of love had been practiced, instrumental music never would have been made a test of fellowship. He may be right about this; for if these brethren loved God like they should, they would obey him and not do something in their attempt at worship which he has not commanded; and if they loved their brethren as they should, they would not introduce a thing into their worship which they can conscientiously leave out, when they know as good people as live cannot use it without sinning against God and their own consciences. There is no authority in the silence of the Scriptures; but one who worships God should worship by faith, and no man can have faith where there is no command.

Brother Klipgman closes his article with the following:

We, the disciples of Christ, of all people on earth, ought to place "the authority of love"—the highest form of authority—above all others, and ought to remember that Christ said: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another." We need to add to the slogan of the Campbells the slogan of the church of China: "We agree to differ, we resolve to love, we unite to serve." This makes it flexible and fruitful.

This, "the authority of love," is new only because it has not been practiced. It is as old as its author—the Christ. Until we practice it among ourselves, our eloquent pleas for Christian union will still fall on deaf ears.

I could answer this very easily, but the editor of the Standard did it so well that I here give his answer in his own words:

We unreservedly acknowledge Brother Klingman's authority for the statement, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another;" but the same authority has also said, "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments," and, "If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples." The commandment to love one another is only one of the many commandments that Jesus left for us. If we abide in his word, we will, of sheer necessity, love one another; but we will also do those things whatsoever he has commanded us to do, so that he may be with us even unto the ends of the earth. Therefore, Brother Klingman's "authority of love" by itself is hardly broad enough to carry out Christ's will.

We can regard the reference to the slogan adopted by itself is hardly broad enough to carry out Christ's will.

We can regard the reference to the slogan adopted by the church of China in no other way than unfortunate. It may be a very pretty sentiment to "agree to differ, resolve to love, unite to serve," but no one familiar with the church of China and the New Testament church would be audacious enough to say they were identical in doctrine or in practice. That such a sentiment is "flexible" is perfectly obvious. The trouble is that it is too flexible. We regard it as at least debatable whether or not it is "fruitful," for what is it the China church has agreed to differ upon? That man's inner conscience is the authority in all moral and spiritual matters, and that, therefore, one can believe what he pleases and practice anything he chooses. On this principle the hope of any resemblance of cohesion can only be kept up by agreeing to differ, for there will be as many different doctrines as there are "inner consciences," whatever they are. The authority of Jesus Christ is set aside for the vagaries of the human mind. No one who understands the human hearts that have abiding convictions and loyalties will rehearts that have abiding convictions and loyalties will regard such a principle as a unifying force, and it makes little difference whether we call it "love" or any other name. You can perfume the thing with all the sweet odors of Arbia, but in essence it remains the same nauseating thing.

The editor of the Standard very naturally resents the allusion to the church in China, because that is the church supported by the United Christian Missionary Society, which has indorsed open membership, which means receiving members who have never been baptized. What will Brother Klingman contend for next? When one leaves the word of God, there is no stopping place. Good-by, Brother Charley; I feel for you, but I cannot go with you. I shall abide in the authority of Christ and his apostles.

Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, mar-riage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

selected these references.

320 pages. Price, $1, postpaid. Address Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book -merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid: $2.25 per Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Cabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy _____ $0.80 | Per 50, per copy ____ 27
Per dozen, per copy ___ 28 | Per 100, per copy ___ 25

All prices f. o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

THE TYNDALE TRANSLATION.

"If God spare my life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth a plow shall know more of the Scriptures than thou doest."

This stirring statement Tyndale made to an opponent, probably early in the year 1522. It seems to illuminate the daring, courageous quality of his spirit, and reveals the fact that he realized what an influence his work was to have in the lives of individual men and women down through the centuries:

William Tyndale studied Greek at Oxford and Cambridge, in the early sixteenth century, and in the course of his preparation for the priesthood became acquainted with Erasmus' edition of the New Testament in Greek, which had first been printed in

After completing his studies, Tyndale became tutor and chaplain in the household of John Walsh in Gloucestershire, and it was there that he "perceived by experience how that it was impossible to establish the lay people in any truth, except the Scripture was plainly laid before their eyes in their mother tongue, which thing only moved me to translate the New Testament."

He hoped to find other scholars and priests willing to cooperate with him; but after vainly trying to interest the Bishop of London in his plans, he abandoned the idea of translating the Bible under English patronage and went to Hamburg and then to Wittenberg, where he visited Luther, Finally he began printing his translation in Cologne; but after ten sheets were completed, news of his work reached the authorities, and he was obliged to flee to Worms, where, with funds supplied by a number of English merchants, he completed an edition of his Bible in 1525.

Copies were bought eagerly and widely circulated in England, but the bishops publicly denounced the translation in 1526 and burned every copy they could find. Their work was so thorough that only one complete copy of the first printing of the translation remains. It is at Bristol, England.

During the following years efforts were made by Cardinal Wolsey and others to bring Tyndale back to England for punishment. For a time he was enabled to work in safety in Marburg and produced several important works there, which were discussed with great interest in England.

He lived in Antwerp for a time, working on a translation of the Hebrew Old Testament and bringing out revised editions of his New Testament, but eventually he was betrayed and imprisoned in Vilborde Castle, near Brussels. He was condemned for heresy, and was strangled and burned on October 6, 1536.

One hundred and fifty years before Tyndale, in 1381, Wycliffe had produced a New Testament from the Latin, but his work was never published and exerted no influence, except upon a small group of people.

The popular distribution of the Bible in English which began thus in 1525 has been the greatest movement in history in encouraging the use of the printed book.—Selected.

HELPING OTHERS.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

Often many people need our help, and we frequently need the help of others. This cannot be questioned.

What is called the "Golden Rule" applies in this matter with great force. Much suffering has been in ages past and still continues. It matters not how this suffering came to pass, it is with us and needs our attention, and this calls for discretion in order to be of benefit to those we desire to help. There are often instances where a little help will enable some to help themselves; and this is very important, because if any who are able will not make any effort to do so, it is unwise to help them, lest we encourage them in idleness. There are also those who impose on the generosity of others; and these should be detected and rejected.

Again, we find others who are in distress through no fault of their own; but even if it is their own through mistakes, they need and should have help. There are none who do not make mistakes from which bad results follow. It is often heart-rending to those of a sympathetic nature to see suffering they cannot relieve. Such will do all that is in their power to do. This is their positive duty, trying to follow the actions of the Lord Jesus.

There are some instances where a child has been unfortunate in its parentage, and such a child is disdained because of the sins of its parents. This is very wrong. Such a child needs that much more sympathy and help, for it had no choice in its parentage; nor can any one have such a choice.

Of course, the widows and orphans should not be neglected. They call loudly for our sympathy and protection.

Our first duty is to provide for our own who are unable to do this for themselves, whether they are widows or others in suffering. (See 1 Tim. 5: 6.) Our next duty is to those of the household of faith. (See Gal. 6: 10.) Our next duty is to all men, beginning with those nearest to us and extending on as far as we are able, and to keep ourselves unspotted by sin in any of its forms. We find this last, because of the influence of sin, the hardest to do, even while helping others. (See James 1: 27.)

Life is made up of little things. It is but once in an age that occasion is offered for doing a great deed. True greatness consists in being great in little things.—Exchange.

BOILS

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE RIGHT MAN

has a wonderful opportunity selling COGGINS MEMORIALS. Their superior quality overcomes sales resistance. Experience unnecessary. Write for confidential contract and full particulars. Liberal commission.

In spare time, Mr. Atwell, in Pennsylvania, made over $200 in January; Mr. McClesky, in Texas, over $150. Many others doing equally as well. Quit hunting excuses; seize opportunities. If your application is accepted, full supplies will be furnished without cost. Write immediately to

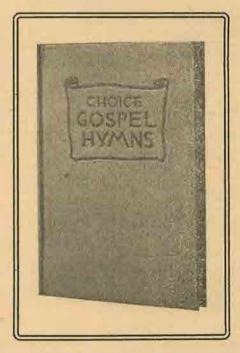

COGGINS MARBLE COMPANY

MAIN STREET, CANTON, GA.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding ____$0.40 Per copy, cloth binding ____$0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY
NASHVILLE, TENN.

ORETHROAT Gargle with warm salt water then apply over throat-VAPORUB Over 17 Million Jars Used Yearly

If you are troubled with Dandruff, Relling Scale and Falling Out of the Hafr, why not try DANDRUFF CHECKER? A scientific remerly and the result of many years of experimentations. Just rub a little on at eight according to directions. The Relling will dispose as it by magic and the Dandruff will somigener. Dandruff Checker rejuvenates the Hair and prolongs its life. Your money refunded it Dandruff Checker fails. By math only, postpaid, 75c per bottle.

The Hed-Eze Remedy Co.

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Seventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1865

B. E. HAINS

H. S. PETTUS JOHN 5. BURNETT

CHURCH OF CHRIST 921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fig.

SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 10:00 to 10:45;
Communion and Sermon, 11:00 to 13:00.

Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)

A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Euclid Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 880 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

is a prescription for

Colds, LaGrippe, Influenza Dengue, Biliousness, Malaria

It is the most speedy remedy we know

CHRISTIAN WANT 5,000 CHRISTIAN WORKERS

To sell Bibles, Testaments, good books, and handsome velvet Scripture mottoes. Good commission. Send for free catalogue and price list.

GEORGE W. NOBLE, Publisher, Dept. 3H, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Order the New Song Book for 1925

Heavenly Echoes No. 9, 25c each, $18.50 per hundred. This book contains only the best, new live Gospel songs. For your regular Church work order Resurrected Songs, 50c each, or Vaughan's Revival, 75c each, books that contain the old-time hymns as well as the new songs. John B. Vaughau, Athens, Ga.

OBITUARIES

LAMB.

On October 1, 1923, the angel of death came and bore away the spirit of my aunt, Mary Jane Lamb, who lived in West Tennessee. She was the oldest child of William West-brooks, a true and faithful preacher of the gospel. About the age of twenty-one she became the wife of William Lamb. To this union were born six children, all of whom were left to mourn her loss, except one who died when small. Aunt Mary Jane had been in ill health for a number died when small. Aunt Mary Jane had been in ill health for a number of years, but she bore it patiently. She had been a soldier of the cross, a follower of the Lamb, for something like fifty years. She lived in this world of sorrow and disappointments sixty-seven years. Let us all remember the example she left, and strive to so live in this world as to meet her in the sweet by and by. Market. in the sweet by and by.

ARMS.

On September 2, 1924, little Christine Arms, daughter of Brother Roy Arms, of Celina, Tenn., was called from earth, lacking one month of being three years old. Her mother died when little Christine was only three weeks old, and she was placed in the home of her uncle and aunt, Brother Mark Hayes and wife, a better home mark Hayes and wire, a better home than which no child could have. All of her childish needs were abundantly supplied there. Little Christine was the granddaughter of Brother John Arms, one of our preachers, who is doing a great work in this section of the country. Funeral services were conducted at the in this section of the country. Funeral services were conducted at the Bethany meetinghouse by the writer, in the presence of a number of sorrowing friends and relatives, and she was laid to rest in the family burying ground near by. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God." WILLE HUNTER.

BRANDON.

Mr. M. A. Brandon, of Hunting-Mr. M. A. Brandon, of Hunting-don, Tenn., who had reached the ripe age of seventy-eight years or more, responded to the call of the death angel on November 26, 1924. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. J. W. Jarrett, and two sons, Rowland Bran-don and Sherman Brandon. Early in life he became a Christian, and con-tinued faithful until the end came. With the passing of Brother Brandon. With the passing of Brother Brandon, the town loses one of its finest citizens; the citizens, one of their best neighbors; the church, one of its most loyal and ardent supporters; and the Gospel Advocate, one of its oldest readers. Brother Brandon had been a reader of the Advocate for years, and always looked forward to its coming with great pleasure. He loved the church and its membership and never lost an opportunity to speak a word of encouragement. While he has gone from among us, yet his influence and the fatherly advice which he gave from time to time will continue to live, to encourage, strengthen, and edify the ones left to carry on the work. JOE L. NETHERLAND. With the passing of Brother Brandon,

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

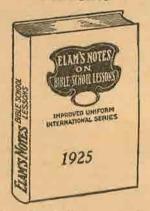

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x534 inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard E. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living .-R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound .- N. B. Hardeman.

I am giad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits.—H. Leo Boles.

Greatest aid to Bible study known to me Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

Why He Succeeded

From hard work on a farm to the study of medicine in Cincinnati, where he was graduated in 1862, was the course which Dr. R. V. Pierce took.

In his younger days he practiced medicine over a large district. It was then the new oil fields near Titusville, Pa. Finally he determined to put up some of his prescriptions in ready-to-use form in order to reach a larger number of families.

He thus early moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and established the World's Dispensary, where he put up Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the blood as well as the Familie Programme of the Programme Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the blood as well as the Favorite Prescription for women, carefully preparing them from roots, barks and herbs and placed them with druggists everywhere.

During the last sixty years Dr. Pierce's Discovery, for the blood, has been sold in larger quantities by druggists all over the United States than any other medicine. It is a tonic in its effects on the stomach and digestive apparatus; an alterative in its action on the blood, liver and skin. It increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, enriches the blood, and makes both men and women feel as they did when they were young and care free.

Ask your nearest druggist for Doctor Pierce's Discovery, in tablet or liquid form or send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.

School Desks Opera Chairs Folding Chairs

Kindergarten Chairs School Supplies Blackboards

OFFICE Hours 10 to 12-2 to 5

PALMER

R. H. BENEDICT, D. C. CHIROPRACTOR

CHRONIC AND NERVOUS DISEASES

Office 176 Eighth Avenue, North

Itisa mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper,

SHELLEY.

Brother Isaac Robert Shelley was born, in Knoxville, Tenn., on October 26, 1850, and died, at his home in Rocky Comfort, Mo., on December 28, 1924. He was married to Fannie E. Morgan on April 27, 1887. Three daughters were born to this union—namely: Mrs. Wanda Carter, Stella, Mo.; Mrs. Ada McDonald and Mrs. Blanche Lamberson, Rocky Comfort, Mo. Besides these, he left behind three sisters and one brother. They Mo. Besides these, he left behind three sisters and one brother. They are: Mrs. E. H. Goodner and Mrs. Hodge, Viola, Idaho; Mrs. Culp, Rocky Comfort, Mo.; and B. F. Shelley, Joplin, Mo. When six months old his parents moved from Tennessee to McDonald County, Mo., where he was a resident seventy-four years. he was a resident seventy-four years. he was a resident seventy-lour years. For thirty-eight years he was a successful business man at Rocky Comfort, Brother John T. Hinds baptized him into the one body in 1905, and he was constantly at his post as an active worker. The writer officiated.

W. T. HINES.

MOORE.

Brother M. J. Moore was born in Van Buren County, Tenn., on June 18, 1842. He was married to Miss Berilla Cooper, in Tennessee, on February 14, 1867. To this union five children were born—two sons and three daughters. The two sons and one daughter still survive. He was married the second time to Mrs. Lou Wilder, on February 9, 1924. He had not been able to do much preaching for the past two years. He was confined to his bed for two months, and on July 21, 1924, the death angel came and relieved his suffering. I was intimately associated with Brother Moore for the past thirty years, and for the past several years he made my home his headquarters. He was a fearless defender of the truth, and perhaps he did more preaching and went through more hardships for the sense of Christian territorial does. Brother M. J. Moore was born in went through more hardships for the cause of Christ, in territorial days and since Statehood, than any other man in Oklahoma. He fought a good fight, he kept the faith, and now he has gone to receive his reward. I pray that the loved ones left behind may so live in this world that they may be able to join him in the world to come.

J. D. Mathews.

SMILE AND THE WORLD SMILES ON YOU.

It costs nothing, but creates much. It enriches those who receive without impoverishing those who give.

It happens in a flash and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever.

None are so rich they can get along without it, and none so poor but are better for its benefits.

It creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in business, and is the countersign of friends.

It is rest for the weary, daylight to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and nature's best antidote for trouble.

Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed, or stolen, for it is something that is no earthly good to anybody till it is given away!

Nobody needs a smile so much as those who have none left to give .-Selected.

COULD NOT WALK BECAUSE OF PAIN

Bad Case of Woman's Illness Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Missouri.—"I had such a bad case of female trouble that I could not walk because of the pains from in-flammation. My back was all done up. I could hardly bend, could not go up stairs because of weakness, and no one could possibly be in worse shape than I was. I have taken twelve bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am a strong woman now and can work down any of my neighbors. They wonder how I can do so much work. I dare say that I have recommended your medicine to a thousand women. A little book was thrown at my door, and that is how I first learned of it. "—Mrs. D. M. BEAUCHAMP, 1104 Morrison Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Letters like this bring out, the mark

Letters like this bring out the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and aliments after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. 98 out of every 100 etable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Over-Runs and Mill-Ends

AT MONEY SAVING PRICES

Cotton Flannels, Pillow Tubings, Sheetings, Crinkled Cloth for Bedspreads, Pajama Checks, Chambrays, Tinted Dinities, Ginghams, Art' Silk Striped Madras for men's and boys' Shirts. Write for FREE samples and prices. MONAGHAN MILL STORE, Dept. A., Greenville, S. C. "Textile Center of the South."

Take KOZOL instead of aspirin for Headache, Colds, Elu, Neuraleis, Rheumatism and pains from similar allments. It is safe and does not affect the heart. Not lashiforming—25c at your Druggist, or by mull from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, Nashville, Tenu. Manufactured by KOZOL LAB., Nashville, Tenn.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

- AND A BIBLE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. The type is large and clear and is easily read. The size—5x734 inches—is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps; 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

$6.00

In ordering, order Bible No. 102—Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 1½ inches deep, 9¼ inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

THE CONVENTION AT FLORENCE.

BY C. A. NORRED.

Recently there came into my hands a copy of Truth in Love, in which Brother Lewis has something to say about the convention the "Christian Church" held this year in Florence, Ala. Inasmuch as I live in Florence and had the opportunity of attending the sessions of the convention, I am moved to submit to the readers of this paper a report of the proceedings. I did not attend some of the sessions. Further, it would be impossible to make this report comprehend everything which came under my observation. I shall, therefore, confine myself to what appeared to me as the outstanding features.

The first session included a report of the work done by the missionary society in Alabama during the year ending with the convention. Brother H. O. Bernard, of Birmingham, in making the report, stated there were about fifty contributing churches in this State. I think the exact number named was fifty-two. He reported that about seven thousand dollars had been expended by the society during the year. He reported that two churches had been planted and one lost.

When I heard the report, I felt sure that the gains reported were not commensurate with expenditures reported. Later in the convention I learned that some of the funds expended went to maintaining the Central Christian Church in this city. In fact, the pastor of the Central Church likened their work here to the work on Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, declaring that they who are carrying on the Central Christian Church have been chiseling on a mountain of "conservatism." He declared that what they had done here was due to the U. C. M. S. (United Christian Missionary Society).

In order to appreciate the meaning of what was said in the preceding paragraph, some elaboration is necessary. The pastor of the Central Christian Church declared before the convention that almost "every other" family in this county belonged to the "conservative branch of the Christian Church." I am informed that there are between thirty and forty churches of the New Testament type in this There are three white county. churches and one colored church in this city laboring after the apostolic order of things. Yet in this field the U. C. M. S. supports a mission work that is "chiseling on a mountain of conversatism." The work of the churches of the New Testament type is such that the Central Christian Church and its supporters could labor with them without doing anything unscriptural. Further, the churches of the New Testament order are, the "society brethren" must admit, accomplishing the salvation of souls. Yet, among these churches laboring in this scriptural and effective work, the U. C. M. S. supports a man who spreads division. This one incident is enough to condemn the U. C. M. S. in the eyes of all who fear God. How a people can profess to love "unity" and at the same time contribute to a divisive institution such as the U. C. M. S. has shown itself to be is strange indeed! From this time on, when you find yourself thinking that the missionary society is not planting many churches, considering the funds she is expending, just remember that her poor showing is probably due to the fact that a considerable portion of those funds was needed to chisel the conservatives!

Another feature of the convention was an address on "The United Christian Missionary Society," delivered by Dr. George W. Muckley, of St. Louis, Mo. Brother Muckley first gave a history of the origin of the missionary society. Then, in explaining what he considered the advantages of the U. C. M. S., he called attention to the fact that while heretofore there had been different societies for the different phases of the work, one society for home mission work and another for work in foreign fields, under the U. C. M. S. all this work was intrusted into the hands of one society whose departments were all in one building in St. Louis. Then, passing to a discussion of the work of the society, the speaker recited figures concerning the missionaries supported, conversions claimed, hospital and benevolent services performed, and church buildings erected.

Brother Muckley revealed the fun-damental fault of the U. C. M. S. when he referred to the fact that the work done by the contributing churches is under the supervision of one society. According to the New Testament, the work of the church is under the oversight of the elders of that (Acts 20: 28.) Under the U. C. M. S. the supervision of the missionary work of a church is exercised by the society. Let the friends of the U. C. M. S. take note of this point of disagreement. An intelligent opposition to the society is not based on any good the society may do, for the individuals and churches opposing engage in the same work; but the opposition is against the practice of taking the supervision of the missionary work done by a church out of the hands of the elders of that church, where the Holy Spirit placed it, and placing it in the hands of a society. Let those who would conciliate the opposers of the U. C. M. S. address themselves to this point of disagreement pointed out.

I cannot refrain from saying that during the convention I heard much said about "our people." The atmosphere was distinctly sectarian and denominational. When a group of Christians in different congregations come to think of themselves as a "church" among the " different churches" of Christendom, they have become sectarian; when a sect appropriates a distinctive name, it becomes a denomination. The convention here convinced me that the persons it represented had done both. The group of persons calling themselves the "Christian Church" is simply another denomination. When one of that persuasion seeks to fraternize with one who is laboring for New Testament things and insists "we are all brethren," he should be shown gently and clearly that his claim is simply that of a baptized believer in any other denomination.

Whatever may be said of the past, these are "times that try men's souls." Let all who love the Lord realize the enormous obligations and responsibilities the present time imposes, and let them "watch and pray." There is great need for persons who will shun everything human in religion and give themselves to the work and worship set forth in the New Testament.

8888888888888

CUT ME OUT

SEND ME HOME

MEMORIALS, INCORPORATED

P. O. Box 278, Canton, Ga.

I want to use all or part of my time selling monuments, and to get good pay for my work. Please send me a copy of "WHILE THE IRON'S HOT," together with your Special Agents' proposition.

$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, men-tion this paper.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

When God beckons you forward, he is always responsible for the transport.

It is not enough that women should be home makers, but they must make the world itself a larger home.

The friendship kindness brings is much more satisfactory and abiding than friendship that money wins.

Did you ever think that the "cup of cold water" for Christ's sake may be needed right in your own home?

The hardest of all tasks is to come to a place of such perfect surrender that God can have his way with us.

May we sow the seed praying that the reaping after a while may result in something worthy of His glorious

A strong worker was sawing wood, when suddenly his saw collapsed. The wooden frame fell to the ground in three pieces, together with the steel crosspiece and the saw blade. The sawyer wasted no time, but began peering about on the ground amid the sawdust. His search was at last rewarded by finding a steel pin about an inch long. This, when passed through holes in the saw blade and the wooden frame, held the whole together, and the work proceeded briskly., The saw and the sawyer depended for efficiency upon that inch of metal. Indeed, efficiency in any task is likely to depend upon some little, unnoticed factor, like politeness or promptness or neatness or health.—Selected.

Gas in the Stomach is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach, accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating, are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach; creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because to much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis, accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids, which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind, and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the atomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take, and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people, who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

TICKLING THROAT

is always an annoyance; worse when it afflicts you in the night, preventing sleep. You can stop it quickly with which puts a soothing, healing coating on the dry, inflamed throat and stops the irritating mucus that causes the tickle.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

Keep a bottle in your home all the time No Narcotics. Sold everywhere.

From the Brethren

Monterey, Tenn., March 2.—On the first Lord's day in this month I preached, morning and evening, at Monterey; on the second Lord's day, morning and evening, and on Thursday night before, I preached at Crossville, and baptized one lady; on the third Lord's day I preached at Monterey, both morning and evening; and on the fourth Lord's day I preached twice at Algood and once at Netherland. We are having midweek prayer meetings and Bible study at two of these places. May God help us to teach "publicly, and from house to house," the things of the Lord.—J. D. Jones.

the Lord.—J. D. Jones,

Union, S. C., February 24.—We had to close our meeting for a few days because so many took the "flu." Our song leader and Brother Burton and my wife took sick. All are about able to go again, except Brother Burton, and he is improving fast. We baptized fifteen while the meeting lasted. Others are expected later. Brother Burton says that this makes twenty-nine baptisms since January 1. This is certainly a good church—no divisions, no strife, no quarreling, no hatred that can be seen. They contributed about eleven hundred dollars last year, and they are trying to increase the amount this year, so they will soon have three church houses paid for, and they are good ones.—J. C. Mosley.

San Francisco, Cal., February 28.

J. C. Mosley.

San Francisco, Cal., February 28.

I was called to Oakland on February 4 to assist in conducting the funeral of Sister D. C. Allen, the wife of our colored preacher in Oakland. She was a good woman, and she will be greatly missed by her husband and the little band of colored brethren in that city. I also had an appointment to preach for these brethren on Sunday night, February 22, but we were rained out. They invited me to return later when the weather becomes more favorable, and, the Lord willing, I shall accept the invitation. The work moves along very nicely at Fourth Avenue and Clement Street. Brethren, if you have friends in this city that should be meeting with us, please write to me, and I will endeavor to see them and invite them out to our services. My address is 1281 Sixth Avenue.—W. Halliday Trice.

Livingston, Tenn., March 3.—We are much encouraged over the outlook in Livingston and vicinity. We had three good services yesterday, two in town and one at our mission eleven miles in the country. As stated before, the strongest opposition comes from our transgressive brethren, who are on the war path at times (I mean some of their preachers), but with an unfair mode of battle, that of bushwhacking, failing to come into the open and meet the issues, but steadfastly denying that they are guilty as charged, thinking, I suppose, that a denial proves them innocent. To those who think for themselves there is no more convincing proof of the guilt of an individual than pleading innocence and refusing to allow his case to be examined before the public. These are the tactics

COMMERCE UNION BANK

Nashville
Lebanon
Sparta
Spring Hill
Lawrenceburg
Springfield
Gallatin
Gladeville
Woodbury
Murfreesboro

Buy Your

Bibles, Testaments, Song Books, Bible Lesson Helps, and Other Books

From Gospel Advocate Company

Let's make it mutual; we will help you, you help us

Address all orders to GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tennessee employed by a preacher in this part of the country who is under the direction of the missionary board.—Will J. Cullum.

Irving, Texas, February 23.—We had some five or six members at Paxton. I held a meeting for them last summer and baptized seven persons. The work was started for the first time, and regular Lord's-day meetings have been carried on since. Two men, Brethren Don and Jesse Hooper, paid me one hundred dollars. The other contributions made the meeting pay me more than any meeting I held last year, and I preached for some good churches. These two men also subscribed twelve hundred and fifty dollars toward a church building. The building is now under construction. These are all poor people financially. Brother Frank Grammer and I are to be there for a meeting this summer. They will support me and will pay Grammer for half time. I promised to raise the balance of the support for him. I always did like to help those who were doing their best to help themselves. These good people need some help to finish their house of worship. There is just one other church in the county, so far as I know. Brethren, if you find it in your heart to help them, send money to Jesse Hooper, Paxton, Texas.—Will W. Slater.

Santa Rosa, Cal., February 20.—
Brother F. H. Stringham, of Caldwell, Idaho, preached here on the first Sunday in February, morning and evening, and also the following Wednesday and Thursday nights. He also visited the Santa Rosa Christian Academy and made a chapel talk. We now have five classes in our Sunday-morning Bible study, with an attendance of fifty or sixty. Brother O. W. Gardner, principal of our school, started a Japanese mission here on Sunday afternoon, February 15, with an attendance of about thirty-five at the first meeting. The Santa Rosa Christian Academy is moving along nicely. Our enrollment lacks only one of reaching the half-hundred mark. We have three devoted, whole-hearted, self-sacrificing Christian teachers. A goodly number of our pupils are orphans and children who need a little bit of love and personal attention, and I believe they are getting this attention. Our two schools are now preparing a joint literary program to be given about the first of March. The interest and fellow feeling that exists between the two schools is very gratifying. May the Lord bless and prosper those who are working and sacrificing to make these schools possible.—Felix G. Owen.

Santa Rosa, Cal., February 24.—
When I came home from work this evening, Brother Kindig, one of our elders, had been here to know if I could attend to a baptism at half past seven o'clock. We had a short service, and I baptized the woman. She is an elderly lady who has been helping at Brother Sinclair's on account of sickness in his home. She made it known that she wanted to be baptized, and the service was attended to. This looks good to me. It shows the good influence of private teaching that has been done. The Santa Rosa Christian Academy is progressing nicely. The birthday of our primary teacher, Mrs. William T. Owen, comes the same day as Washington's birthday. This date being on Sunday, the Saturday before she gave a little party for her pupils. There were about thirty present, and they had a great time. A little work of this kind has a great influence for good. Brother O. W. Gardner's Japanese mission in Santa Rosa met for the second time, with good interest and attendance. This work, though just started, looks very promising. Brethren, when you visit California, remember Santa Rosa and the Santa Rosa Christian Academy, also Graton and the Pacific Christian Academy. We are expecting Brother N. B. Hardeman to do some preaching here in the summer of 1926.—Felix G. Owen.

It is a mark of distinction to be a reader of this paper. Don't fail to let our advertisers know it. When answering their ads, mention this paper.

EVERY CHRISTIAN AN EVAN-GELIST.

We are slowly getting away from the idea that preachers and missionaries alone are included in our Lord's command to go forth and disciple. It is at last dawning upon the consciousness of some that every Christian is a potential missionary and evangelist, whether specially commissioned or not. Christian fathers and mothers who hold themselves responsible for the religious nurture and training of their children are such, whether conscious of it or not. All Bible-study teachers who lay to heart their task of seeking to influence and win their scholars for Christ are such. But how about men and women in their business and social relations? To what extent do they as Christians recognize their obligation to influence religiously those with whom they come in contact?

Recently a Christian philanthropist, for many years at the head of a large industry, passed away, mourned by a large circle of employees whose lives had been made richer because he was deeply interested in their spiritual welfare. He had been to them a constant and living sermon. Another employer, for years a foremost member in the church, had seldom approached his daily associates on the subject of religion. It happened that one of his trusted employees suddenly took sick, and he hastened to his bedside. Almost the first words that greeted him from the man who knew he was about to die were: "O, why is it that you, a Christian, never spoke to me about the needs of my soul? I am near death's door and am not prepared to meet my God." The employer was struck with a deep sense of remorse which clung to him throughout life. Even his later endeavors to atone for his past sins of omission could not wipe out that sense of remorse. How little do we as Christians think of witnessing for Christ in our daily contacts with men! -Lutheran.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds Headache Pain Toothache

Neuralgia I Neuritis I

Lumbago Rheumatism

Safe

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions. Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

Help us increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Send us a new subscriber. $2.00 per year, in advance.

102

PLEASE DO NOT OVERLOOK PLACING YOUR MONEY IN THE ENVELOPE WITH YOUR ORDER

ORDER BLANK

BIBLE LESSON HELPS

Please enter the following order to be sen	t to the address below:
For, 19	2, to, 192
Name
P. O
Streef Ro	uteState
Remittance inclosed in payment of this order, $
NO STANDING ORDERS TAKEN
ELAM'S NOTES FOR 1925 (Five or More to One Add (Single Copy, 90	@ 85 cents per copy, $
ADVANCED QUARTERLY, 64 pages (Five or More to One Add (Single Copy, 20c Per	@ 12 cents per quarter, $
INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY, 32 par (Five or More to One Add	ges @ 6 cents per quarter, $ iress, Each)
PRIMARY QUARTERLY, 32 pages (Five or More to One Add	@ 6 cents per quarter, $
LITTLE JEWELS (mailed quarterly) (Five or More to One Add. (Single Copy, 20c Per	@ 12 cents per quarter, $ dress, Each) Quarter)
THE YOUNG PEOPLE (mailed month (Five or More to One Ad- (Single Copy, 20c Per Quarter, 80c Per Year—Fore
LESSON LEAVES	@ 5 cents per quarter, $
SETS LESSON PICTURE CARDS (Five or More to One Ad	@ 4 cents per quarter, $dress, Each)
LESSON PICTURE CHARTS	@ $1.00 per quarter, $
CLASS BOOKS (7 cents each)	@ 75 cents per dozen, $
SUNDAY-SCHOOL RECORD (for enti	re year) $2.50 per copy,$
COLLECTION ENVELOPES	@ 75 cents per dozen, $
Total
(1/2/10/20/20/20/20/20/20/20/20/20/20/20/20/20

Literature should be ordered to expire with the end of the quarters. Quarters begin January, April, July, and October; expire March, June, September, and December.

Remit by Post-Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or Express Money Order, otherwise at the sender's risk.

CAREFULLY EXAMINE YOUR ORDER BEFORE MAILING

Cut Out Order Blank and Mail To-Day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)

 "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criticism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Com-pany. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)
- "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use," (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- McQuiddy.)

 "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

 "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, soriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Puillias.)

 "At the Central church of Christ in Fort
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quartariles for years.
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much folier than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many leasons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not heeltate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

Volume LXVII. No. 12.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH 19, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENT	263
OUR CONTRIBUTORS	266
How Unity is Obtained and Kept-Walker Brewer De- bate-Dr. G. F. Cullum-Fallen Asleep-Commentary on First Corinthians (No. 12)-Mr. Bryan's "Bible Talks." OUR MESSAGES
EDITORIAL Word from Washington—The Sin of Misrepresentation —Christian Unity—The "Shoot" or "Branch" (No. 1).	27
OBITUARIES	28
Ballard-Wyatt-Wallace-Hope.
The Columbia Debate	28
FROM THE BRETHREN.	28
The Divine Missionary Policy	28
From East Tennessee.	28

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

As this is an age of investigation, religiously as well as politically, we wish to draw a lesson from an article published in "The Searchlight on Congress," and entitled, "Let There Be Light," an extract of which reads thus:

"Why should we shut the Senate's doors?" Dill asked his colleagues. "Is it that we want to show our importance? Does not closing the doors have exactly the oppo-site effect?" Nobody answered, of course, and the young Senator went on:

"When the onlookers go scurrying from the galleries that we may meet in secret, our importance shrivels in the eyes of the people, no matter how it may appear to our-selves. We are defying the doctrine that public business should be performed in public and that public officials should vote and speak publicly on all of the activities of government in which they have a part.

"Mr. President, the idea of publicity is closely allied with the practical workings of democracy. Publicity and with the practical workings of democracy. Publicity and democracy are as closely joined as secrecy and tyranny. That is why that, regardless of Senate rules, secret sessions of the Senate are not secret, and they never will be except when the business transacted is so grave that all Senators believe the public interest demands it be kept confidential. In the face of these facts, what is the Senate going to do? Shall it go further in its efforts to compel secrecy by more rules, or shall it turn its face toward publicity by opening the doors?

We offer no comment on the state of the secrecy and tyranny.

We offer no comment on the political aspect of the Senate, either opening or closing its doors. The church is not in politics, but elevates and blesses politics by devoting all of its time to the propagation of the gospel; and the propagation of the gospel creates the public sentiment that compels politicians, in most cases against their will, to make and enforce better laws. The country loses when a Christian ceases to devote all of his time to Christianity. The country owes more to the people who manufacture a healthy public sentiment than it does to the politicians whom that sentiment compels to conform to it.

But it is a most important fact that, of all else, the light of publicity should be thrown, in the most unprejudiced and unreserved way, on all things religious. A man may be deceived in business, or in some of the fleeting and transitory affairs of this life, and yet not be ruined eternally. But a deception of a religious nature, causing him to either ignore or to refuse to obey the things that God commands, involves him in a ruin that is irreparable and eternal. Error and falsehood thrive only in the dark. The precepts of men, the dogmas of a dark age, lose their force and power the moment they are brought out into the pitiless light of investigation. Things long held as sacred by great religious denominations would be immediately repudiated and discarded if the rank and file of those great denominations were brought face to face with the fact that such things are neither authorized nor taught in the word of God. No man who hungers for truth would accept sprinkling for baptism if publicity revealed to him the fact that the whole religious world, from the days of the apostles until the thirteenth century, universally practiced immersion; and no man who seeks to do that which is pleasing to God would have water sprinkled on his baby if he were made aware of the fact that no inspired man ever taught or practiced such a thing. By all means, along with the political publicity, let the country have some religious publicity, and let the people know the truth as it was "once for all " taught by inspired men in New Testament times.

The Christian Courier, giving an account of a conference recently held at Dallas, Texas, "between representatives of the United Missionary Society, St. Louis, Mo., and a number of ministers and other church leaders of the Christian Churches of North Texas, known as the Dallas District," the purpose of which conference was to raise the huge deficit that has been rolled up by the said United Missionary Society, says:

In his opening address Brother Booth stated the object of the conference, as would be the case in the other three conferences to be held in Texas, at Waco, Houston, and El Paso, respectively, and in similar ones over the nation.

conferences to be held in Texas, at Waco, Houston, and El Paso, respectively, and in similar ones over the nation, was to devise ways and means of paying off, or at least to very materially reduce, the deficit of $358,000 in the general fund of the United Society, which deficit is blocking the progress of our missionary and benevolent enterprises.

Further discussing the deficit which has been a millstone around the neck of the United Society, Brother Booth showed how it had come about. He said that the United Society, which was made up of the old boards, such as the Foreign Missionary Society, the American Missionary Society, Board of Church Extension, etc., started on its career in 1920, which was the best year in the history of the old boards, and when the country was at the peak of prosperity and the Men and Millions Movement was at the high point of its collections; that the budget for the new United Society was based upon that year's receipts; that this new society inherited the $600,000 deficit of the old boards because of the failure of the Interchurch World Movement, which had to be raised in cash and which was raised and paid before any other communion paid its share, much to the credit of our people; for while it was a bitter pill and our leaders sweat blood over it, there was no other honorable course open to us but to pay it. us but to pay it.

That sort of a state of things could hardly be classed as the work of New Testament churches. The rolling up of such a deficit sounds more like the work of some worldly corporation or monopoly endeavoring to corner the missionary market of the world than it does like the work of those people we read of in the Scriptures who "went everywhere preaching the word." The talk about "its collections," "the budget," "receipts," "disbursements," and "overhead" is not the kind of talk New Testament churches heard from inspired men. A huge debt of $358,000 is quite a large "millstone;" and, as it is "around the neck of the United Society," the Gospel Advocate is inclined to think that the best thing to do, under the circumstances, is for the churches to keep their money in their own hands and let the "United Society" go where the "millstone" is taking it. Indeed, there is "no other honorable course open to us but to pay it;" but the point we are making is that the ones who made the debt are the ones to do the paying, even though it be "a bitter pill" and cause "our leaders" to "sweat blood over it."

But the United Society feeds upon the churches. It is itself "a millstone around the neck" of the churches; and while it now has "a millstone around" its own "neck," it is brazenly trying to transfer the said "millstone" to the "neck" of the churches. When churches cease to handle their own business, under their own elders and deacons, and permit themselves to become the prey of a missionary trust, they need not expect anything else than to get it in the "neck."

The Bible teaches that every church ought to be in the missionary business on its own account. To the church at Thessalonica, Paul wrote: "For from you hath sounded forth the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but in every place your faith to God-ward is gone forth; so that we need not to speak anything." (1 Thess. 1: 8.) If a church not able financially to send an evangelist of its own into the field, it should send "once and again" directly to evangelists already there. The New Testament churches kept in direct contact with evangelists. They did not permit an outside organization to come between them and the workers in the field. An evangelist is a missionary.

But the United Missionary Society usurps all the functions of the church except to give the money. The only part the church has in missionary work under the society is to give the money. The church misses the blessing that would come from actually participating in the work, and the work loses the efficiency and high character it would have if done directly by the church. The paid officials of the society employ and discharge all workers. The elders of the churches have no part in it. The whole thing is put on a mercenary basis. The personal purity, individual piety, goodness, and activity that can be developed only in the church cease to be factors in the work. The individual is swallowed up in the institution. Without consulting the churches or their elders, the society employs and discharges whom it pleases. On its pay roll are persons dectrinally unfit for membership in the church, much less to go as missionaries to teach and preach the word of God. Among these have been men who teach open membership and who accept sprinkling for baptism.

Christian people contribute their money to what they think is the service of God, and only find out through the disclosures of some investigation that they have been contributing to the support of such men. Things like this would not occur if the elders of congregations, instead of the salaried officials of a worldly corporation, passed upon the fitness and qualifications of workers.

We cannot but feel that if the churches really understood the nature of the society they would cease pouring their money into it. Still, when a church becomes filled with the spirit of the world and is dominated by the women, it is difficult to tell just what it will do. The men who are mostly interested in promoting the society are men who draw salaries from it, or are men who are aided by those who do.

Christianity can be successfully propagated only by the church. When the work of teaching and preaching it is left to other hands, it becomes contaminated and corrupted. "And to make all men see what is the dispensation of the mystery which for ages hath been hid in God who created all things; to the intent that now unto the principalities and the powers in the heavenly places might be made known through the church the manifold wisdom of God." (Eph. 3: 9, 10.) It can only "be made known through the church." Anything that interferes with, or that usurps the work of, the church, corrupts Christianity and hinders its spread. The churches should flee from the clutches of the missionary trust and do their own missionary work. Then they would truly be "the salt of the earth," and, as "the light of the world," their light would shine out as "a city set on a hill."

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

HOW UNITY IS OBTAINED AND KEPT. BY S. H. HALL.

In connection with what has heretofore been said on the subject of Christian union, let us now study how unity is obtained and kept.

It is claimed by some that we cannot understand or see the teaching of the Bible alike. This thought is from God or the devil. If from the latter, we must give it no room in our hearts. "Neither give place to the devil." (Eph. 4: 27.)

Turning to 1 Cor. 1: 10, we have a very plain and positive command. "Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." There is one of two things that we must admit—viz., that we can or we cannot obey what we are here taught to do. If you say we cannot, then you have accused Paul of asking us to do something in the name of the Lord Jesus that is impossible. Are you ready to thus accuse the Holy Spirit of so leading him to speak? But if you say we can do what we are here commanded, down goes the contention that we cannot see the Bible alike, for this is exactly what we are commanded to do. The same is true of the command in Phil. 3: 16: "Let us walk by the same rule."

This rule by which we should walk is simple and can be given in three sentences. First, preach only what is revealed on each subject that you, as a teacher, handle; second, preach all that is revealed on that subject; and, third, be careful to make no additions to what God has revealed on that subject, and just as careful to take nothing from the revelation. Deut. 29: 29; Acts 20: 27; 2 Tim. 4: 2; Deut. 4: 2; and Rev. 22: 18, 19 abundantly sustain the rule here stated. This rule gives the teacher the right to teach on any subject upon which Jehovah has spoken; in fact, it demands this. If to preach all that is revealed on each subject you undertake to teach to the people is right (and this cannot be denied), then it is just as certainly true that we should speak upon all the subjects that God has used in talking to man about how to be saved and how to live the Christian's life, and all that God has said and done to deepen man's joy and brighten his hope. Whatever is revealed belongs to us and our children. The fact that it is revealed is proof enough that it should be taught. And it should be remembered that those elders and preachers who teach the local church are coming dangerously near taking from God's word when they ride one or two subjects to death and leave the congregation untaught on many others. Give them all of God's will, or, as did Paul, "the whole counsel of God" and anything that is profitable unto the brethren. (See Acts 20: 20, 27.) The man that teaches only what is revealed and all that is revealed on each subject he handles is a faithful teacher, provided he takes all the subjects and so handles them.

Let us exemplify this rule and see how it works. Take any two preachers-or a dozen, for that matter-and let each of them speak on the same subject to the same audience, pledging themselves to give only what is revealed, all that is revealed, without addition or subtraction, on each subject upon which God has spoken. What will you hear? You will hear them speaking "the same thing," just as they are commanded to do in 1 Cor. 1: 10; and as long as they so continue to do, there will be no divisions among them. This is exactly how we obey the command named and let in us our Lord's prayer be answered. How gladly we should do this! When divisions arise, it is always due to some one one or more transgressing God's law and getting out of this rule instead of remaining in it by living by it. Read the following warnings and admonitions: (1) commands to stay with what is written-Gal. 1: 6-9; 1 Tim. 1: 3; 2 John 9, 10; (2) commands to leave out of your teaching foolish and unlearned questions-1 Tim. 1: 3-7; 6: 3-5; 2 Tim. 2: 14, 23; Tit. 1: 10; 3: 9, 10. We are commanded to try the spirits, or teachers, and see whether they are of God or not, and not to be tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine. (See 1 John 4: 1; Eph. 4: 14.) Those who embrace and live by the rule named above are the only ones that can prove the spirits, whether they are of God. All others will be carried away with winds of doctrine.

It might be well to test the rule before we close. Baptism is said to be a question that we cannot see alike, and, hence, upon which we cannot speak the same thing. Let us put this rule to it and see.

We call for two preachers, I care not with what religious order they stand identified, and let each speak on what it takes to constitute the scriptural act of baptism, agreeing to give only what is revealed and all that is revealed, and make not a single addition or subtraction. What will you hear them teach? Open your Bible and let us read it together. (1) You will hear them teaching that John baptized in the river Jordan. (2) You will also learn that, while baptizing there, our Lord came and was baptized of John in the Jordan, and, coming up out of the water, the Spirit acknowledged him to be God's Son. (Mark 1: 5, 9.) (3) You will also learn that John baptized at other places where there was "much water" and because there was "much water" there, and that the people came unto him there and were baptized. (John 3: 23.) (4) You will hear them teach that the one baptized and the one doing the baptizing went down into the water together in order to attend to the act called "baptism." (Acts 8: (5) You will learn that the specific act itself is a burial, or planting, in the water, and a resurrection therefrom, and was followed by a coming up out of the water. (Rom. 6: 4, 5; Col. 2: 12.) (6) You will hear them speak of a birth of water in connection with baptism; and, knowing that when our Lord arose from the dead his resurrection was called a birth from the dead, you will have no trouble in seeing why this resurrection from the water is called a birth of water. (See Col. 1: 18; John 3: 5.) (7) And not one time will you hear them say anything about sprinkling or pouring a little water on a person's head being called "baptism." No two souls can follow the "same rule" and preach on baptism or any other Bible subject and fail to "speak the same thing." And, following this rule, they will certainly obey God in 1 Pet. 4: 11-viz.: "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." Here is loyalty to Christ; hence, absolutely safety. And it is well to say that all churches on earth admit that when the proper subject goes where there is much water, down into the water, and in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit is buried, planted, in the water, and then resurrected from the water, that that person undoubtedly has been baptized. And another thing: this soul will forever be satisfied that he is baptized, it makes no difference how much more he may study and pray over the question, and will be satisfied on the subject, living or dying.

And not only will such preaching on baptism establish and maintain unity, but such preaching and living will reconcile all brethren who are at war with each other. "Brethren, even if any man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in a spirit of gentleness; looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted." (Gal. 6: 1.) "And if thy brother sin against thee, go, show him his fault between thee and him alone: if he hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he hear thee not, take with thee one or two more, that at the mouth of two witnesses or three every word may be established. And if he refuse to hear them, tell it unto the church: and if he refuse to hear the church also, let him be unto thee as the Gentile and the publican." (Matt. 18: 15-17.) Many other scriptures on this duty could be given, but they are all just as plain and simple as those on baptism. But I had as soon try to get a prejudiced soul who wants to prove that sprinkling is baptism to love the simple teaching on baptism as to try to get some of my own hard-headed brethren to see, appreciate, love, and live the simple teaching on how to settle personal troubles. And when we let our own personal troubles slip away from home into other churches and communities and try to bring the whole brotherhood into them, we are as big sinners as the teacher of sprinkling and pouring for baptism is. So I close by asking the question again on unity: Are we who claim to speak where the Bible speaks and to stay silent where it is silent faithful here? I think the Book speaks of our telling our troubles to our home congregation and keeping them there; but if it says carry them all over the brotherhood, I have not read it. So let me beg that you stay silent here.

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, mar-riage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references. gregation to supply the correct scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

320 pages. Price, $1, postpaid. Address Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

WALKER-BREWER DEBATE.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

This debate was held at Columbia, Tenn., in the courthouse, beginning on March 4. J. J. Walker affirmed the proposition: "Instrumental music in church worship is scriptural." G. C. Brewer, of Sherman, Texas, denied this proposition. Five sessions of two hours each were held. Each speaker occupied thirty minutes. Walker made ten thirty-minutes' speeches on the affirmative side of this question, with a ten-minutes' speech as a rejoinder at the last session. Brother Brewer made ten thirty-minutes' speeches, with a five-minutes' rejoinder the last session.

Good audiences attended every session, the audiences increasing in size at each session. The last two nights the house was not sufficient to accommodate the audiences, and many were turned away. A keen interest was shown throughout the discussion by the audience. Local conditions at Columbia prevented many from hearing the discussion who ought to have heard it.

The debate was on a high plane. Both the speakers seemed anxious to keep the debate on a high plane. The Columbia Herald gave daily reports of the debate and commended the high-toned Christian conduct of the participants. It was demonstrated that a debate may be had without any disreputable things or conduct marring the discussion. Each speaker deplored the idea of any religious people not willing to encourage a full, earnest, Christian investigation of any Bible subject.

Brother Walker had nothing new to present. He used the same arguments and charts which had been used by him in four other debates. He has what he calls six arguments in favor of his proposition, "Instrumental music in church worship is scriptural." His first argument is based on the Hebrew word "zamar." His argument is that "zamar" was used in the Hebrew text to include instrumental music, and that the Septuagint Version translated "zamar" by the Greek word "psallo," and that "psallo" must mean the same thing or have as full a content as "zamar" has; and since "zamar" includes the instrument "psallo" must also include the instrument. Brother Brewer answered this argument by showing that the word "psallo" was employed to represent, not only the Hebrew word "zamar," but also "nagan" and "shir," and that these words were sometimes used without the instrumental idea, and, hence, "psallo" was employed to represent the idea of music without the instrument. Again, Brother Brewer met Walker's argument by showing that the translators translated "psallo" "to sing," and not to sing and play. He pressed Brother Walker to show that his proposition was scriptural.

Walker's second argument was based on what he called the "four dispensations." The patriarchal dispensation, Jewish dispensation, Christian dispensation, and heavenly dispensation were presented by a chart. He contended that God had authorized instrumental music in the patriarchal and Jewish dispensations. He turned to the book of Revelation and read where there would be harps in heaven. His contention was that, since instrumental music was found in the patriarchal and Jewish ages and that by prophecy it would be found in heaven, therefore it ought to be in the church to-day, or Christian age. Brother Brewer replied that his conclusion was not warranted from his premises. He pointed out many things which God authorized under the former dispensations which are not to be used in the church to-day. Such things as animal sacrifices and incense were authorized under the law of Moses, but these things are not to be used in the church. He also showed that there would be infants in heaven, and also read of incense in heaven. There will be things in heaven which are not authorized to be placed in the church. He demonstrated conclusively that Walker's argument was fallacious. Walker replied to the point of infants in heaven and boldly took the position that infants were in the "kingdom of innocence," or the church. Brother Brewer replied to this point by saying that it betrayed a woeful ignorance of what constitutes the church, and said that he wished that Brethren J. B. Briney and Z. T. Sweeney could know that Brother Walker was contending that infants are in the church. He entertained the hope that these brethren would severely castigate Brother Walker.

Brother Walker's third argument was based on what he called "the lexicons." He quoted, in part, a number of lexicons, showing that they defined "psallo" to mean to accompany with musical instruments. He claimed that all of the lexicons were on his side of the question, and that they all taught that "psallo" meant to include the instrument. Brother Brewer replied that Walker was "scrapping" the lexicons. Brother Brewer said that there was a difference to be observed between the classical meaning of "psallo" and the New Testament meaning. Walker confused the two and scrambled the two meanings. Brother Brewer claimed that not a one of the lexicons which Walker introduced sustained Walker's position. Walker got into the habit of saying that "psallo" meant to "sing with or without the instrument." Brother Brewer pressed him hard to find a single author that said that "psallo" meant "to sing with or without the instrument."

Brother Walker's fourth argument was based upon the "translations." He produced a number of translations which he claimed were for the use of the instrument in worship. Brother Brewer replied that every one of his translations, except one (Rotherham), translated the word "psallo" "to sing." He showed that the translations which Walker introduced were not standard translations; that they were translations of individuals and did not represent the profound scholarship of the age. Brother Brewer cited the Authorized Version and the American Standard Version as being standard authority, and that both these versions translated "psallo" "to sing." He pointed out that these versions represented the scholarship of about one hundred and one, and that these committees on translation represented all of the largest denominations. Brother Walker tried to reply that the committee on the Revision was hampered by the rules which governed the revisers of the King James Version. He further tried to offset the force of Brother Brewer's point by reading comments and letters from a number of the Revision Committee. The comments that he read from these revisers favored the use of the instrument. Brother Brewer replied that when their scholarship was at stake, they invariably translated the word "psalle" "to sing." He showed that in their comments they were expressing their theological bias and opinion. He contended that the integrity of their scholarship in translating the Revised Version should be respected more than their opinions as expressed in private letters.

Brother Walker's fifth argument was based on "apostolic examples." He claimed in this argument that there were musical instruments in the Jewish temple, and that Christ worshiped in the temple with these instruments. After the death of Christ, or after Pentecost, Brother Walker claimed that Peter and John and others worshiped in the temple, and worshiped with instruments of music. Brother Brewer replied that all that pertained to the Jewish worship was in the temple, and that, if they worshiped with musical instruments, does it not also follow that they also worshiped with the burning of incense and the offering of animal sacrifices? He asked: "Why should Brother Walker contend for the use of instrumental music in church worship now and not contend for the burning of incense now?" Walker failed to reply to this.

Brother Brewer pressed Walker hard on his proposition that "instrumental music in church worship is scriptural." He called upon him to put his finger upon the scripture that authorizes the use of an instrument; he called upon him to name a scripture authorizing the use of instrumental music in church worship to-day—one that the auditor could go home and read from his Bible. He offered to lay aside all commentaries, lexicons, and inferior translations and settle the question with the Bibles which all could read in their own home. Of course this challenge was not met.

Brother Brewer ranks high among the best debaters. He is a rapid speaker, a clear thinker, a logical reasoner, a well-informed speaker, and a Christian gentleman. He is courteous toward his opponent and very considerate toward his audience. I commend him to any church as an able champion of the truth.

Of course, the debate did not close without the usual vaunting and boastful challenge from the advocates of instrumental music. The State Secretary of the Christian Church, Brother Clubb, issued a challenge to carry the debate into every county in the State. His challenge was met with counter challenge, and he was reminded that there were a number of places which were waiting for the discussion-places which had invited a debate more than two years ago, which had not been accepted by them. A challenge is hereby made to the advocates of instrumental music to have a written discussion on this question, this written discussion to be published in the Gospel Advocate and in the Christian Standard or any other paper that favors instrumental music in worship that has as large a circulation as does the Gospel Advocate. The proposition to be the same for the written discussion that it is for the oral discussion-namely, "Instrumental music in church worship is scriptural." Shall we have a written discussion?

DR. G. F. CULLUM.

BY J. A.

Solomon declares that "the day of death" is better "than the day of one's birth." (Eccles. 7: 1.) "Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints." (Ps. 116: 15.)

After a long and useful life, in a good old age, and at peace with God and man, on August 22, 1924, Dr. G. F. Cullum, a devoted servant of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, resigned his spirit into the hands of his Redeemer and passed into the great beyond.

Dr. Cullum was born on August 10, 1844. He was baptized in 1867, at South Harper, Tenn., by R. B. Trimble. On December 30, 1874, he was married to Miss Mollie Lovell, who survives him and remains to mourn his loss. The ceremony was performed by the venerable and lamented E. G. Sewell. To this union were born five sons—viz., Edward, Luther, Duncan, Eugene, and Frank—upon whom he, together with his noble wife, betowed the care and thought incident to bringing them up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord."

For many years Dr. Cullum was one of the most active members of the church of Christ at Watkins. I had the pleasure of stopping in his home through two protracted meetings held at Watkins, and thus, through intimate acquaintance, was enabled to form a very high opinion of his integrity and character. The cause of Christ was near and dear to him and was ever cherished in the inner recesses of his heart.

Funeral services were conducted at the Watkins meetinghouse and were attended by a large concourse of neighbors and friends. We rejoice to believe that Dr. Cullum so lived as to enable Sister Cullum and her sons to receive that comfort and consolation from the word of God that robs grief of its venomed sting, and that commingles with their sorrow an inexpressible joy that shall ultimately find its fullest fruition in a blessed immortality.

WHAT YOU MAY DO.

Just a smile when the road seems hard,
Just a laugh in the gloom;
Just a hope when the soul seems scarred,
Like a light in a darkened room.
Just the touch of a tender hand,
And a song and a bit of prayer;
Just the courage to understand;
And the hear! to truly care!

Just these things, and your life may be
A perfect poem to the world;
Just these things, and the earth can see
Your mind like a flag unfurled.
Just the touch of a tender hand,
And a message from God above;
Just the courage to understand,
And the heart to truly love!

Never a man will pass you by
That does not take of your cheer;
Never a woman will meet your eye
That does not hold you dear.
Poets and artists, they do their best;
But yours is the better part;
For you give of a friendship Christ has blessed,
And the love of a helping heart! —Selected.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

On Sunday, February 1, during my sermon at Seymour, Texas, I received a telegram from Sister Wilkinson calling me to Comanche, Okla., to conduct the funeral of Brother U. G. Wilkinson, who fell asleep in death, Saturday evening, January 31. He died at Dallas, and before sending the body home he was carried to Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ and a suitable memorial service was held there for him by Brethren Oliphant, Colley, and others.

But it was at his home town and home church that the grandest tribute ever received by man was paid to him. I mean the tribute was of the grandest sort—that hundreds of his neighbors who had known him twenty-four years as a resident of that town turned out to pay him their last respects.

The house was packed, many could not get inside, and there was grief beyond words in every heart, it seemed, for truly did those people know him and love him. The writer, assisted by Brother J. M. Childress, of Bowie, Texas, spoke such words as were best calculated to comfort sorrowing ones and point others to the home to which Brother Wilkinson has gone. Brother W. H. George, of Marlow, Okla., led the opening prayer; and Brother C. L. Taylor and Brethren Armstrong and Duncan were with us.

Brother Wilkinson left his faithful wife, his aged mother, four brothers and two sisters, with hosts of brethren and sisters, friends and neighbors, to mourn his departure, and yet to rejoice that his suffering is over. In all my life I never felt so keenly the loss of any one who was not related to me in the flesh, for Brother Wilkinson was one of the truest and best friends I ever had. I loved him as a child does his father, and I love his memory.

But he rests from his labors and his works will follow him. The church has lost a hero, whose back was never turned to the foe of the gospel. God give us more men like him!

He was sixty-one years old and had been a preacher of the gospel for thirty years. A record of honor is his.— Tice Elkins, in the Firm Foundation.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Send in your orders for Bibles and good books at once.
Write us to-day for sample copies of The Young People, for boys and girls. The price is in reach of all.

We are at work now on a new and enlarged edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachman. It will be ready by March 15.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 12.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter II .- Continued.

THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT, AND NOT ELOQUENCE OR HUMAN WISDOM, NEEDED. (Verses 6-9.)

6. We speak wisdom. "We" includes Paul and the other apostles. They preached the whole doctrine or scheme of redemption planned by the wisdom of God, which is here called "wisdom," and elsewhere "the word of wisdom" and "wisdom of God" (1 Cor. 12: 8; 1: 24). Among them that are perfect. Those who are fully initiated into the service of God and fully instructed in the teaching of the gospel; experienced Christians, instead of babes in Christ; those sufficiently developed spiritually to eat and digest the strong meat of the gospel. For such there is a depth of wisdom revealed in the gospel, yet not the wisdom of this world. The wisdom admired and taught by the men of this world. Nor of the princes of this world. Political rulers, Jewish or heathen. These come to naught.

come to naught. 7. But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery. The teaching of the gospel, called "the wisdom of God," lay long hidden in the types and figures of the law of Moses and in the Old Testament prophecies. These, therefore, constituted the mystery of which Paul speaks-that is, the salvation which was hidden or kept secret until revealed through Christ and the apostles. The wisdom of God concerning the redemption of man was kept hidden during the Mosaic dispensation. The thought is, we speak the mysterious wisdom of God, which was hidden for many ages from all the world. The wisdom of God in the gospel was a mystery hidden until Christ, but now fully revealed in the gospel. A mystery is a secret as yet not made known, but God revealed his secret through Christ and the apostles. Even the hidden wisdom. God's wisdom which lay hidden in the types and shadows in the Old Testament prophets. The apostles also revealed God's wisdom not hidden in these types and shadows. things hidden in the types, shadows, and prophecies of the Old Testament were ordered, or foreordained, by God before the world unto our glory. There are two views held relative to "our glory." (1) To the future glory and happiness of the saints. (2) That Paul's design is to show that none but the apostles enjoyed the glory of revealing the doctrine of the gospel in an infallible manner, and that the false teacher and all others who set themselves in opposition to the apostles were impostors not to be gloried in. The wisdom of God spoken by the apostles was ordained of God "before the world"that is, before the new, or Christian, dispensation came. The old dispensation is one world and the new dispensation is another. (Heb. 9: 24-26.) The cross is between the two, and is the ending of the one and the beginning or foundation of the other. The preaching of the ablest ministers may seem dry to carnal hearts because of the lack of human wisdom and eloquence, yet it has an excellency of wisdom and depth of judgment in it to the truly converted. The message delivered by the apostle is "the wisdom of God" because it makes men truly wisewise unto salvation-directing them to use the best means in order to the best and highest end. It is the "hidden wisdom" of God because it first lay hidden in the secret counsel of God, and afterwards lay hidden in the Jewish types and shadows, but is now revealed by the preaching of Christ and the apostles in due time to "our glory"that is, to be the means of our happiness and glory. The purpose and design of God in redeeming lost man to happiness and glory by the sufferings and death of his Son was so mysterious and surprising that it could never have entered the thoughts of men or angels, had not God himself revealed it by the gospel. The learning of all the admired philosophers shall "come to naught"-that is, it is of no use at all in order to the best and highest end, the salvation of the soul. Christianity, or the knowledge of the gospel, is the best knowledge of the truest and highest wisdom, because it contains the knowledge of God and our duty, which is the most excellent, the most necessary, and the most useful. It is the truest wisdom, because it is to be wise for ourselves and to our chief interest. It propounds to us the noblest end—to wit, the glory of God and our soul's salvation; and it directs us to use the best, the surest, and the wisest means for the certain obtaining of that end.

8. Which none of the princes of this world knew, etc. The political rulers were perfectly ignorant of God's wisdom revealed through Christ; for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. Neither Caiaphas, Herod, Pontius Pilate, nor any of the Jewish or Gentile rulers understood the divine wisdom. The learned rabbis, the admired philosophers among the heathen, and the celebrated doctors among the Jews are here called the "princes;" but Paul adds a diminutive term which darkens all their glory-namely, "the princes of this world." They were wholly unacquainted with the other world. He proceeds and gives proof of their ignorance of the divine wisdom by saying: "Had they known it "-that is, practically known it, so as to believe it, to be influenced and persuaded by it-"they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." This puts a seal of ignorance upon them. They crucified him, they nailed him to the cross and put him to death, as the vilest criminal, as the greatest malefactor. This crime was based upon ignorance. Their ignorance was not a sufficient excuse for crucifying him, for it was a willful ignorance. They had sufficient means of instruction by which they might have come to the knowledge of the truth relative to Christ and of their duty to him; but they closed their eyes and would not see. Thus many act to-day relative to rejecting the church, the blood-bought institution, and the direction of the Lord that leads from earth to heaven.

9. As it is written, etc. (Isa. 54: 4.) The meaning of the prophet's words, as applied by Paul, is that those blessings which God prepared for them who love him, and which in the gospel he has revealed and promised to bestow on them, are so great that nothing like them has ever been beheld by men or reported to them under the cld covenant. The mind of man, by its own powers, was not able to form the faintest idea of them until revealed through the gospel.

MR. BRYAN'S "BIBLE TALKS." BY A. M'GARY.

I read, regularly, William Jennings Bryan's "Weekly Bible Talks" in a Houston paper. I never read after his facile, fluent pen that I don't say to myself: What a wonderful man he is! And how regrettable it is for him, and for the cause of Christ, and for the entire world of lost sinners, that his mind and heart and soul are shackeled by the chains of delusion to the false gods of the gigantic system of sectarianism, whose doctrines are "the doctrines and commandments of men," which are making "the commandment of God of none effect" to the confused millions of earth!

No reasonable mind that has read after Mr. Bryan as much as mine has can entertain a doubt as to his sincerity and warmth of heart and benevolence of purpose. If he could shake off the fetters of delusion, unbolt the door of his sectarian prison house, and walk out into the beaming effulgence of the "marvelous light" of the unperverted gospel of Christ, and from the hilltop of Christ's authority and God's grace teach and "contend for the faith" which Christ "once for all delivered unto the saints," in the affable, enchanting, and winsome style that he is now devoting to the Christ-hindering, world-"blinding," "key-of-knowledge"-hiding, kingdom-shutting cause of sectarianism, what a wonderful, God-glorifying, and Christ-helping work he could accomplish! To find teaching that would surpass what he could do for the Master's cause, if he could divest himself of his sectarian preconceptions and environment and receive into his heart the full measure of the gospel of Christ, one would have to look back beyond the days and ages of theologians to Paul's time and teachings, and to that incomparable "Sermon on the Mount."

I've often wished in my heart, when reading after Mr. Bryan's pen, that I could swap my rugged, inelegant, ungraceful style of delivery for one fashioned in some degree after his simple, fluent, elegant, and charming style, which fills the minds and hearts and very souls of his sectarianized readers with a benison of ecstatic delight; but I know that such wish on my part is vain, for I realize that I'm "not built that way." But I would not, as much as I admire Mr. Bryan's style of deliverance, swap my style for his, if my faith in the unadulterated gospel of Christ had to go with my style, in the swap, in exchange for his adulterated faith.

The history of Mr. Bryan's political career bespeaks his natural greatness and towering courage, indisputably. His superabounding political ambition has ever been to become President of this nation—a quite worthy ambition. But thrice has his ardent and enthusiastic expectation of gratifying this craving ambition been dashed to the ground and ruthlessly and pitilessly and gloatingly trampled under foot by his political enemies. Yet, each time and all the while, Mr. Bryan's splendid and supreme degree of courage has enabled him to possess his soul with patience and pursue the even tenor of his course sedately, complacently, pleasantly, smilingly, and optimistically, facing both friends and foes in a spirit of good cheer. And besides these undeniable evidences of greatness, Mr. Bryan passed through that most trying crucible of twenty-nine years of acrimonious, political turmoil, and came out of it all with an absolutely stainless character and reputation! In view of these facts, so well known by all Americansand, I might add, all the world-I can't refrain from repeating my exclamation: What a great man, as the world counts greatness, he is!

After having said all the complimentary things I have about Mr. Bryan—which I've said as sincerely as I ever said anything in all my life—doubtless some readers will accuse me of gross inconsistency, if not insincerity, when I shall condemnatorily criticize some of his teachings in his "Weekly Bible Talks." If so, it will be so, because such readers have no acquaintance with the spirit of Christ, the spirit of real Christianity.

Just at this point I'll say that when I began this writing it was my purpose to herein quote some from Mr. Bryan's "Weekly Bible Talks" and criticize the same at some length. But since I have said what I have about the lack of "acquaintance with the spirit of Christ"—which fact is, I think, getting to be quite prevalent in the church—I'll devote the remainder of this article to the consideration of this fact, asking the editor of the Gospel Advocate to grant me space in a subsequent issue in which to make my intended criticism of some of Mr. Bryan's "Talkings."

To get "acquainted with the spirit of Christ," one must get acquainted with Christ, with his teachings, his words. He said: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." When he said to the scribes and Pharisees, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation," his "spirit" was in those words. Brethren, while "the spirit of Christ" is a loving "spirit," it is in no sense of the word a flattering "spirit," but is always as candid as it is loving.

Christ loved Peter-in fact, everybody; yet, on one occasion he said to Peter: "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offense unto me: for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men." Christ's "spirit" was in those very words—don't you know it, brother? If you don't, you'll never know the truth, as you ought to know it, till you do.

Paul and Peter loved each other; yet, on one occasion Paul charged Peter with dissimulation, hypocrisy, to his face. "The spirit of Christ" was in those words with which Paul reprehended Peter's action. And Peter received Paul's reprehension in "the spirit of Christ," writing of Paul afterwards as "our dearly beloved Brother Paul."

While I know I'm too weak and faulty and fallible in every way to be comparable in any sense to Paul, yet I do say that when I write criticisms of false teachings by my brethren, if I am not woefully self-deceived, I'm prompted in such criticisms by the very same spirit that prompted Paul to criticize Peter on the occasion referred to.

I've been criticized for the style in which I replied to Brother Harper with reference to the Sunday school. At the time I wrote that reply I was his warm friend, had been for several years, and am yet. I admire him for his ability and courage. He and I have kept up a mutual correspondence with each other for many years. He took no offense at my reply to him; he was too big of mind and heart and courage to do so.

One brother has expressed disapproval of some things I said in my recent discussion with Brother Smith. I've admired and loved Brother Smith for many years, and think none the less of him since our controversy, though I think he said worse things to me than I did to him. I'm sure he believed what he said, and felt that what he conceived to be the truth in the premises demanded his saying what he did.

Now, in conclusion, I'll say that if I ever had a political idol, William Jennings Bryan was it. I followed his banner with unfaltering fidelity through all three of his campaigns for the Presidency. And to-day I regard him as one of the most conscientious and trustworthy politicians this nation has ever known. So I trust that the readers of the Gospel Advocate who may read my contemplated criticisms of some of Mr. Bryan's teachings in his "Weekly Bible Talks" may keep in mind the fact that I'm criticizing the teachings of one whom I greatly admire.

PUBLISHERS' ITEMS.

Write us for our new catalogue of good books. It is yours for the asking.

Send us a new subscriber to-day for the Gospel Advocate. Price, $2 a year, in advance.

If you have friends who are not subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, kindly furnish us their names and addresses so that we may send them sample copies.

Brother McQuiddy's book, "The Profitable Word," is a gem. It contains the cream of Brother McQuiddy's writings, and will be ready for distribution in the near future. Price, $1.50. Send in your order at once.

We are bringing out a new edition of "Sermon Outlines," by A. J. Bachman. It contains three hundred outlines for sermons, a supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, "Hedge's Rules of Debate," and forms of church letters. Price, $1. Order to-day.

"The Profitable Word," containing some of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, will be ready for distribution in the near future. It will be nicely bound in cloth and will contain about two hundred pages. The price of the book will be $1.50. We shall be glad to have our readers send in their orders at once and be sure of receiving a copy.

Order from the Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

" Preach the word."

Send us a subscriber.

"Repent, and be baptized."

"He that believeth and is immersed shall be saved."

"Many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized."

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine,"

One person united with the congregation at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Herbert E. Winkler preached at Green Street, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night.

Lytton Alley began a meeting with the congregation on Twenty-second Avenue, North, this city, last Lord's day.

S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Sunday, morning and night. One was added by statement.

Price Billingsley recently closed a splendid meeting at Jackson, Tenn. He began at Frankston, Texas, last Lord's day.

G. W. Jarrett, Ackerman, Miss., March 13: "I recently held a good meeting at Shady Grove. I am to preach at Reform next Lord's day."

Leslie G. Thomas preached twice at Lawrence Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. On the Sunday before he preached at Green Street.

If some belligerent brethren would devote their time to the finding of the good in each other, they would soon be smoking the pipe of peace.

Married, at the home of W. R. Hassell, near Trenton, Tenn., on Friday, February 20, Robert L. Hammond and Ira Gill, Brother Hassell officiating.

Americans spent half a billion dollars for candy and ice cream during the past year. How much did the same people spend for preaching the gospel?

L. L. Brigance, Henderson, Tenn., March 11: "It seems to be the general opinion that the Gospel Advocate was never better nor more ably edited than now."

By special request, A. B. Lipscomb will preach on the theme, "Shall We Know Each Other in Heaven?" at the Charlotte Avenue church of Christ, next Sunday night.

F. B. Shepherd, Abilene, Texas, March 13, to F. W. Smith: "I like your article, 'On what does acceptable obedience depend?' It looks like you are hitting true to the line."

A. A. Bunner recently preached at Akron, Ohio, and reports the church there as being in a splendid condition. Next week we will publish a short article from Brother Bunner about the work in Akron.

E. A. Elam preached at Chapel Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Elam preached on the subject, "Heaven is a Prepared Place for a Prepared People," at both the morning and night services.

J. A. Hall, Schoolfield, Va., March 9: "J. A. Oneal, of Covington, Ind., will begin his work here about May 15. We have not secured a tent as yet. I am trying to get the one W. S. Long, Jr., used last fall."

W. G. Wilson, Daylight, Tenn., March 11: "I recently preached in McMinnville, Tenn., and will preach at Bluff Springs next Lord's day. I am preaching all of the time. I want the brethren everywhere to write for me to hold meetings."

R. L. Colley, Union City, Tenn., March 12: "The church is doing some fine work here. Our crowds are increasing almost every week. Charlie Taylor, of Paducah, Ky., will begin a series of meetings here on the fourth Sunday in this month."

J. Fairs Nichols, South Sixth Street, Murray, Ky., March 9: "I spent yesterday with the church at Dexter, Ky. We had two splendid services. The Lord willing, I shall go next Lord's day to Antioch, Ill., and to Friendship on the fourth. Brethren, I want your prayers to accompany me."

E. N. Glenn, San Diego, Cal., March 9: "We have had a pleasant winter in San Diego. Interest in the church is on the increase. We had preaching service at El Cajon, ten miles out, yesterday, and will conduct this service each alternate Sunday afternoon till we 'lose out' or establish a church. We need a song leader."

George W. Miller, Chandler, Okla., March 12: "I closed my last meeting at Granby, Mo., with two confessions and good interest. I am expecting a call at Stella, Mo., the last of this month. I am giving all my time to the ministry of the word. I have some time not taken. I would be glad to hear from any congregation."

H. S. Lipscomb preached to two large congregations at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. V. E. Gregery is scheduled to preach there next Lord's day and F. B. Srygley on the following Sunday. There is a steady growth in interest and attendance at the Bible study on Sunday mornings.

Telegram from E. C. Fuqua, Pasadena, Cal., March 12: "Twelve years ago Mrs. Fuqua had a nervous collapse, and I requested the prayers of the churches. Scores responded. She was restored again. She has suffered a similar collapse. I earnestly ask the prayers of all for her recovery again. Pray earnestly; it is urgent."

The meeting at Woodsfield, Ohio, conducted by F. B. Srygley, resulted in nine baptisms. The audiences were good throughout the meeting. The congregation at Woodsfield will stand nobly behind a man who preaches the plain word of God. This is the home of our good brother, H. H. Adamson, who for several years made his home at Lewisburg, Tenn.

Vernon M. Spivey, of David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn., will be ready, if the Lord wills, to lead singing in protracted meetings, beginning in the early summer. Brother Spivey has been studying singing for some time in David Lipscomb College and has been leading singing in and around Nashville for quite a while, and is deeply interested in this work.

From the time the first part of the Bible was written till the time the last part of it was written was a period of more than fifteen centuries. There is one line of thought and one chain of ideas running through the entire work of more than forty men who lived in different parts of the world and who wrote in different languages. Does any sensible man think that mere, fallible, uninspired men could do that?

F. L. Paisley, Louisville, Ky., March 14: "After May 1 I shall do what I have wanted to do for some time—that is, give up local work and enter 'the field' for meetings. During all my efforts to preach I have been obligated to some local work, so that I held fewer meetings than called for. I hope to be able to go anywhere needed, regardless of the weakness of the cause in the place to which I may be called. My address will be 1126 Jefferson Street, Paducah, Ky."

Ernest D. Shelton, Indiahoma, Okla., March 11, sends two subscribers and says: "I am glad to help along with the good work. I certainly enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate, and find a peculiar pleasure in passing it on to the other fellow. Last Sunday I filled my regular appointment at Otter Creek Schoolhouse. Two lessons were given to large and attentive audiences. Next Sunday I am to go to Deep Red Schoolhouse, and so on to my various appointments throughout the month."

J. B. Nelson, Dallas, Texas, March 10: "A. O. Colley has been appointed superintendent of the Boles Orphan Home, near Greenville, Texas, and will also act as the regular minister for the Greenville church. I will give up the work that I have been going from Dallas and doing, in order that Greenville may have Brother Colley to live there. I am to take Brother Colley's place with the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church in Dallas until June, in order that the church may have time to secure a man. A better man than Brother Colley could not have been chosen to serve the Home."

Horace W. Busby, Fort Worth, Texas, March 11: "Tillet S. Teddlie and I have just closed an eight-days' meeting at Italy, Texas, with about twenty added to the congregation—thirteen by baptism. Ira D. Brister and I are to spend the month of June in Fort Worth, with the North Side and the Polytechnic congregations. I am to be at Chillicothe, Texas, the third and fourth Lord's days in March; at Waxahachie, Texas, the fifth Lord's day in March and the first in April; at Brownwood, Texas, the second and third Lord's days in April; and at Burnet, Georgetown, and Lometa, in May. The work is unusually good at all places visited so far this year."

The wise thing to do is to do the right thing.

A loose man is nearly always in a tight place.

No man can overestimate the value of good books.

The apostles did not teach nor practice sprinkling.

It is never right to do wrong, and never wrong to do right.

Every time a man tries to justify a bad act, he exposes a mean principle.

A man who is depending on sprinkling for baptism can get no comfort from the Bible.

A man who finds no pleasure in reading good books does not realize what he misses.

For nearly three-quarters of a century the Gospel Advocate has been in the midst of the battle.

There are only two classes of people in the world—the good and the bad. To which class do you belong?

It is wonderful how wicked a race for money becomes when the other fellow is in a fair way to win the prize.

The man should talk less whose expenditure of speech is too great for his income of ideas. Think more, say less.

The man who adopts an orphan in order to make it a slave is a very depraved being. Such conduct is criminal.

W. Silas Moody closed a splendid meeting at Joseph Avenue, this city, last Lord's-day night, with four baptisms. T. B. Simpkins led the song service.

Some are complaining of the fact that the Bible is being left out of the schools. They ought not to overlook the fact that the Bible is being left out of the churches.

Brother McQuiddy's book, "The Profitable Word," should be in every library. It contains some of his best writings, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. The book has three hundred pages and is neatly bound. Price, $1.50. Send us your order.

M. C. Cuthbertson, Dallas, Texas, March 10: "The work at Garrett Avenue, this city, is doing fine. We have almost a one-hundred-per-cent attendance of our membership on Lord's days. Fourteen have been added to our local congregation since February 1."

R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, March 11: "The meetings last Sunday were well attended and interest generally good. Three were added to the local body by membership. We are to begin a meeting on the last Sunday in the month, to run about two weeks."

A. F. Thurman, Austin, Texas, March 13: "I am working with the University church of Christ full time. Yesterday was for us a good day. Brother Straiton was with us and preached two splendid sermons. My address is Austin, Texas, P. O. Box 963; house, 2803 East Avenue; telephone 2088."

Samuel H. Austin, Munfordville, Ky., March 16: "I preached at Summit, Ky., Saturday night and yesterday. By request of the brethren there, I will visit them on the second Lord's day in each month. These are fine, loyal people, contending earnestly for the faith. I have some time not taken for meetings during the summer and fall. Write me at Munfordville, if you need my services."

A young preacher, who has had several years of experience as a school-teacher, would like to locate in a town where there is an active church of Christ. He is at present superintendent of a school with an enrollment of three hundred and fifty students. He is active and full of energy. Recommendations will be gladly furnished. If there is an opening in your school, write this office at once.

F. L. Young, Oklahoma City, Okla., March 12: "The meeting is very fine. This is a great church to work with. You notice that my name in the 'Preachers' List' is 'Floyd L. Young.' That is a mistake. I have not changed my name. My mother named me 'Fountain Livingston Young,' and I am satisfied." We regret that Brethren Shepherd, Rowe, and Showalter, who compile the "Preachers' List," got Brother Young's name wrong.

Joe Ratcliffe, Bardwell, Ky., March 12: "I have been reading the Gospel Advocate for more than thirty years. I think it gets better every year. I think it should be in every Christian home. I preached for the church in Cairo, Ill., last Lord's day, morning and evening. I know of no church that is more zealous and liberal than this one. I have some time for meetings in the summer and fall. Brethren, if you need me, address me at Bardwell, Ky. I would like to be kept busy to the end of life."

G. A. Dunn, Jr., Gainesville, Texas, March 11: "Last Sunday was a great one for the Central congregation here. There were five additions—one restoration, two by letter, and two baptisms. Yesterday our concrete side walls were poured, and on Monday we will begin the bricklaying on our new building. The last five Sundays that I have preached here we have had additions, there being thirteen during the time. The congregation has asked me to hold a meeting for them before I leave for my evangelistic campaign."

B. M. Taylor, Irving, Texas, March 10: "We are in the second week of our meeting at Roland, Okla. Large crowds at every service. This is a missionary effort upon our part. We have a few members at Roland. Brother Slater is giving a series of powerful lessons, making the plan of salvation very plain and easy to be understood. We have had one confession to date. The meeting will continue several days yet. I have some time open in April and May, also the last half of July, in which I would be glad to sing for meetings or teach singing schools."

J. O. Barnes, Lake City, Fla., March 10: "I am to do some real mission work on the East Coast during the month of April, also to assist the church at Mims in a meeting. In my work I use many religious tracts, distributing them among the people. I believe this to be one of the most effective ways to spread the gospel. In my last meeting I distributed more than one thousand tracts. If any one wants to have fellowship with me in this work by sending me some tracts for free distribution or more substantial support, it will be greatly appreciated."

Clark Burns, Bishop, Ala., March 15: "While talking with a brother to-day, who is a strict believer in the teaching and practicing of the 'old Jerusalem gospel,' I learned that it was very hard for him to break loose from sectarianism and follow Christ. I asked him from what source, or in what way, he received the first light of the true gospel. His reply came quickly: 'I was first influenced by reading the Gospel Advocate.' He further added: 'I have been a subscriber for that paper for fourteen years and haven't missed a copy of it. I believe that it should be in the home of every person.'"

G. W. O'Neal, Clarita, Okla., March 10: "The church of Christ at Clarita, Okla., and at Paxton, Texas, have contracted with Frank Grammer to teach them an eighteen-days' vocal-music school at each place. The school will begin at Clarita on April 13 and at Paxton on June 29. Will W. Slater will be one of the teachers in the Paxton school. Several teachers are expected to attend both schools and assist in the work. The brethren throughout the country could do no better work than to send one or more young men from their respective congregations to those schools. I am the secretary for the Clarita school, and Don Hooper, Joaquin, Texas, is secretary for the Paxton school."

L. L. Brigance, Henderson, Tenn., March 11, to F. W. Smith: "I just want to thank you for that masterly article you wrote in reply to the Christian Standard's comment about Brother Calhoun. I do not know when I ever read anything I enjoyed more than that. You hit the nail square on the head every lick until you drove it up and clinched it. It is hard to believe that the Standard can fail to see its inconsistency and, as you said, 'its downright wickedness.' In every skirmish or battle their last line of defense is 'liberty in Christ.' You certainly shot it full of holes in that article, but I suggest that the next time the opportunity comes you 'swat it' again. I doubt if enough attention has been paid this great hobby of theirs. I want to congratulate you, Brother Allen, and Brother Srygley on the great work you are doing, and to say to you, 'Lay on, McDuff.'"

H. D. Jeffcoat, Ackerman, Miss., March 12: "I assisted the little congregation near Brewer, Miss., in a meeting Christmas week. We had with us a Baptist preacher. He was interested. I spent one night in his home. He asked some questions about the name and the Supper. I told him the church was the bride, the Lamb's wife, and that no true wife would want to wear any name save that of her husband. I also told him that when the Supper was observed just as the Lord directed, it was the Lord's Supper; but if we changed his order, it ceased to be the Lord's. Therefore, the Baptists do not have the Lord's Supper, but a Baptist supper. I was called back there the first Lord's day in March to baptize him. He made us a good talk at three o'clock that afternoon, and promised to be with me at Duffee the first week in April. I believe he will be a useful man in the church. I was with the mission at Nile last Lord's day, with a large crowd. May God bless his true workers."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy,

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50,

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 116 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashyille, Tenn.

Entered at post office at Nashville, Tenn., as second-class matter, Published weekly at Nashville, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

"We Washingtonians" have had another holiday, this to inaugurate the President and give him a running start on his work for the next four years, and, incidentally, to "swear in" a Vice President. I shall not attempt to tell you of the proceedings of Inauguration Day, as that subject has, of course, been fully set forth in the newspapers all over this fair land of ours, as well as elsewhere. Indeed, I saw so little of the proceedings of that day that I could give you only a faint idea of the various incidents that enlivened it. I did not see the President or the Vice President take the oath of office; but in the afternoon I saw, from an upper window of a building on Pennsylvania Avenue, the Presidential party returning from the Capitol to the White House, and saw the parade that passed up the Avenue shortly thereafter-a brave show of soldiers, sailors, marines, visiting governors, and others, with the accompanying bands in their gay uniforms.

Among the bands was the justly celebrated Marine Band, which, no doubt, many of you have heard over the radio, and are, therefore, already well acquainted with. This band is said to be the best military band in the world -you remember Washingtonians are fond of the superlative degree—and it has a history in which all lovers of music will be interested, I am sure. I have obtained the information herein given concerning the Marine Band from an article written by Major Edwin North McClellan, historian of the Marine Corps, and have used in some portions of this article the language of the historian.

There is a false tradition that the Marine Band had its origin in a group of kidnaped Italian musicians, and this tradition has robbed the band of a small degree of its glory as an American musical organization. "The music of a nation expresses its soul and interprets its history, its religion, its patriotism, and its social customs as do few single mediums;" and in America the Marine Band has most aptly illustrated this. The foundation of the Marine Band is American-not transplated Italian-an American growth in root as well as in branch.

In November, 1775, when the Continental Congress said, "Let there be marines," on the drums of those marines in Philadelphia appeared a rattlesnake, and under it the motto: "Don't tread on me!" That motto appears to-day on the drums of the Marine Corps, and those drummers and their fifers were the forerunners of the now famous Marine Band.

Fifes and drums were the only musical instruments used by the military in the Revolution. A group of ten of them was called a band, and the marines had as fine a band as any other military organization of that day. But with the close of the Revolutionary War came the end of all things military in our country, and not till 1794 were there marines and "musics" serving on the frigates of the new navy Congress had that year authorized. In 1798, President John Adams approved a bill that brought into being the New Marine Corps, authorizing a drum major, a fife major, and thirty-two drums and fifes, and a fife and drum corps was formed under Drum Major William Farr, in Philadelphia.

When the capital was moved to Washington in 1800, the fife and drum corps came also, and in July of that year was camped on "a beautiful hill overlooking the Potomac," the hill on which the Naval Hospital now stands. The capital city was then aptly described as a "barren desert;" and with a view to dispel the monotony, the first commandant, William Ward Burrows, determined to organize a real military band. The first record of an open-air concert by the Marine Band in Washington City was August 21, 1800, when all the city thronged the camp on the hill to hear the band, led by William Farr. The band then consisted of two oboes, two clarinets, two French horns, a bassoon, and a drum. Efforts to secure a bass drum were unsuccessful for several months.

The Marine Band made its official début when President Adams received at the White House on New Year's Day, 1801, and from the time of John Adams to that of Calvin Coolidge it has played at White House receptions and other functions at the Executive Mansion. It was the only band of a public nature in Washington till about 1880.

It played at the first inaugural ball, March 4, 1809, in Long's Hotel. The ball opened at seven o'clock; and when Thomas Jefferson, whose term as President had that day expired, entered the room, the band played "Jefferson's March." As the newly inaugurated President, James Madison, entered with "sweet Dolly" on his arm, the band struck up "Madison's March."

During the second war with Great Britain, the Marine Band, with its martial strains and national airs, did good work in maintaining the national morale in the capital; and some of the bandsmen fought in the battle of Bladensburg, while others helped to save the records of the corps when the British burned the city.

It played several times for Lafayette in 1824 and 1825. On September 6, 1825, the birthday of Lafayette, at a dinner in his honor, when President John Quincy Adams rose and proposed the first toast ever drunk at a dinner in the President's house, "The twenty-second of February and the sixth of September," the Marine Band played "The Marseillaise," and played also an appropriate air after Lafayette's happy response: "The Fourth of July, the birthday of liberty in both hemispheres."

The Marine Band often played for President Andrew Jackson his favorite air, "Auld Lang Syne," and played for President Polk and the nation during the Mexican War, buoying national spirit and assisting in recruiting. It played frequently for Lincoln during the Civil War; and he insisted that it continue its outdoor concerts, and often called for it to play at the White House, and it was at Gettysburg when he made his famous speech there. It played at the first egg rolling on the White House grounds, for the first children's party at the White House, when Andrew Johnson was President, and for many important weddings at the Executive Mansion.

Not only on gala days has the band played for the President and "the lady of the White House," but also in times of bereavement. It led the long funeral procession that mourned for William Henry Harrison, played the funeral dirge for Zachary Taylor, for Abraham Lincoln, and for James A. Garfield. It played at the funeral of William McKinley the hymns he loved, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." It played for President Harding in life his favorite air, "Perfect Day," and played at his funeral the hymn he liked best, "Lead, Kindly Light."

The Marine Band has visited in its annual tours practically every State in the Union. It has never gone abroad to play, but many noted foreigners have heard it. When President Buchanan entertained the Prince of Wales—afterwards Edward VII.—the band almost lived at the White House that week.

Every President of the United States, except George Washington, has heard the music of the Marine Band; and he, no doubt, listened to the music of its forerunner, the old fife and drum corps, in Philadelphia. John Adams was the first President to hear it play at the White House; Thomas Jefferson was its "godfather" and greatest friend; President Van Buren instituted the formal outdoor concerts at the Capitol, and President Tyler, the concerts on the White House grounds. President Pierce, in 1856, approved legislation giving the band extra pay for playing at the White House and the Capitol; in 1861, Abraham Lincoln signed an act of Congress that gave the band the official status it deserved; in 1899, President McKinley approved an act that doubled the strength of the band, authorized that the leader should have the pay of a first lieutenant and provided a second leader; and in 1916, President Wilson signed an act that established the strength of the band at sixty-five musicians and provided that the leader should have the pay and allowances of a captain in the Marine Corps.

During its one hundred and twenty-five years of existence the Marine Band has had fifteen leaders, one of whom was John Philip Sousa, the "March King," and under his leadership it rose to heights never before reached by an American military band. In 1889, under its present leader, Captain William H. Santelmann, the development of the band as a symphony orchestra was begun and has steadily advanced till it now compares favorably with the best symphony orchestras of the country.

Every Wednesday evening the Marine Band Orchestra gives a concert of classical music at the Marine Barracks, and those concerts are a treat to all lovers of music. Washington throngs gather wherever the Marine Band plays.

THE SIN OF MISREPRESENTATION.

BY F. W. SMITH.

One of the most unenviable failings of humanity is the proneness to distort, magnify, color, and misrepresent persons and things. Sometimes this is done deliberately and with the intention to injure the reputation of others, and sometimes it is done from a misunderstanding of what is said or done by another.

No matter from what cause the misrepresentation emanates, the effect is the same; and often innocent persons who have become the victims of this injustice have no way, even if made known to them, of correcting the jalse reports. The saddest part of it all is the fact that God himself is misrepresented many times by those who really think they are honoring him.

FALSE TEACHERS OF RELIGION.

The Jews who crucified the Son of God labored under the delusion that they were putting to death a blasphemer, and the Savior charged it up to their ignorance, as follows: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Luke 23: 34.) The apostle Peter also laid the crime of crucifying Jesus at the door of ignorance: "And now, brethren, I know that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." (Acts 3: 17.) Saul of Tarsus misrepresented the Lord Jesus Christ before the world to the extent of murdering Christians, and tells us why he obtained forgiveness for it: "I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief." (1 Tim. 1: 13.)

Jude tells us of religious teachers who so misrepresented the "goodness" of God by making the impression that God was too good to punish sinners that they turned the grace of God into lasciviousness, thus denying the Lord who bought them. (Jude 4.) To counteract this false representation of God, the apostle cites God's punishment of angels, the Israelites, and the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. (Jude 5-7.)

The apostle Peter misrepresented the truth of God to the extent of acting a hypocrite, for which Paul rebuked him to his face. "But when Cephas came to Antioch, I resisted him to the face, because he stood condemned. For before that certain came from James, he ate with the Gentiles; but when they came, he drew back and separated himself, fearing them that were of the circumcision. And the rest of the Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that even Barnabas was carried away with their dissimulation." (Gal. 2: 11-13.) Peter knew better, for God had shown him that he was no respecter of persons. (Acts 10: 34, 35.) But because of the religious prejudices of the Christianized Jews against Gentile Christians, Peter misrepresented the truth, and acted a hypocrite by dissembling.

Every false teacher of religion in the world to-day is engaged in misrepresenting God, whether he so intends it or not, and the effect of such misrepresentation is the same as if deliberately done. "Let them alone: they are blind guides. And if the blind guide the blind, both shall fall into a pit." (Matt. 15: 14.) When we read such passages of holy writ, we shudder at the consequences, but seem to lay no great stress on the same sin so patently manifest in our own day and lives.

Very few indeed there are who have not at some time and in some way been made the victim of either willful or ignorant misrepresentation.

THE MISREPRESENTATION OF CHRIST.

Jesus was the most misrepresented character that ever lived on the earth. He was accused of being a winebibber and a glutton-"Behold, a gluttonous man and a winebibber" (Matt. 11: 19); and he was represented as working in conjunction with the prince of demons-" But the Pharisees said, By the prince of the demons casteth he out demons." (Matt. 9: 34.) He was accused of teaching contrary to Moses and the law, and charged as being a sinner: "We know that this man is a sinner." (John 9: 24.) Now, men can see the great wrong and wickedness in these misrepresentations of our Lord, and in their righteous (?) judgment pass the sentence of condemnation on the guilty parties, while at the same time engaged in the ugly and sinful conduct of misrepresenting both the "living" and the "dead" either knowingly or from ignorance of the facts in the case.

AN UNTRUTHFUL STATEMENT.

A certain preacher was represented by another preacher in public print as teaching "that if a person believed Heb. 10: 22 and other scriptures taught sprinkling for baptism and acted accordingly, he would be safe in taking this course." Never did anything further from the truth find its way into public print or fall from the tongue or pen of man. I am writing this, not from hearsay, but from absolute knowledge.

What the preacher did say was this: "That if a person believed Heb. 10: 22 and other scriptures in which sprinkling is mentioned taught sprinkling only for baptism, he would have to be sprinkled or violate his conscience." The preacher that rushed into print with his misrepresentation put into the mouth of the other preacher the words, "he would be safe in taking this course." The preacher misrepresented never believed for one moment that any one would be "safe" in practicing a substitute for what God commanded. I place the above misrepresentation on the ground of ignorance—that is, a misunderstanding of what was really said; and yet it seems almost a mystery that it could have been misunderated.

During the World War the same brother, who became so critical of others he charged as being in favor of the war, positively violated the law of the land by procuring and reading a book censored by the government. But all at once his "bravado" and "defiance" of the government vanished into thin air when he thought he was in danger of being apprehended, and he quickly hid the book. Now, while he was severely criticizing others for their "cowardice" during the war in not openly and unnecessarily defying the government, he was pressed to tell why he hid the book, and he seems now to take delight in misrepresenting the matter by saying he was "abused" by this questioning.

Another palpable misrepresentation of one whose lips are sealed in death has, within the last few months, been broadcasted through several religious papers. The victim of this great injustice to his sincerity and Christian character was sleeping the sleep of death when this was done. The statement was made by one who is an editor, college professor, and preacher, and is as follows: "One of Boll's severest critics is known to have encouraged the putting of this teaching (speculative teaching that caused division) in book form by telling Boll that he would advertise and sell the book through his paper."

Repeated efforts have been made to get the author of the above statement to publicly correct the wrong he has done in holding up before the public one who cannot speak for himself as a man guilty of "insincerity" and a gross "inconsistency," for the one thus accused did no such thing.

It is bad, even in our ignorance and with no intention of doing an injustice to others, to make statements either privately or publicly which misrepresent the facts in the case, but still worse, when our attention is called to such misrepresentation, to refuse or make no effort to right the wrong.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The Christian Standard and other papers of our transgressive brethren make much ado over Christian union and Christian unity, and seem tol ose sight of the fact that the only way to bring about scriptural unity is to cease to teach or practice anything except what the Bible teaches. The Standard seems to think that some kind of a unity which appears to be very desirable to it can be brought about in some way by some kind of amalgamation, and still all have about anything they want under the guise of "Christian liberty." In commenting on the step which Brother Calhoun took in leaving these would-be liberal brethren—liberal not especially with what is their own, but liberal with that which belongs to God—the Standard says:

With Professor Calhoun our hearts have ached over the evil and insidious abuses that are clothed under the cloak of "Christian liberty," but any one ordinarily intelligent is capable of distinguishing between liberty and license. Without the least intention of giving offense, we can truthfully say that there are very few intolerances greater than some to be found among those who insist that the organ or missionary society is an evil. On his own account Professor Calhoun has never been hampered in his message or his beliefs in the years he has been associating with the people he now regards himself as leaving. Of course, Professor Calhoun is within his full rights in the action he has taken, and his manly stand in publicly announcing his decision sustains the high admiration in which we have always held him. We cannot avoid the conviction, however, that the Professor, in his change, if it can actually be regarded as a change, is hampering his usefulness. He has a full New Testament right if he lifts up his voice against the organ or the missionary organization, but, when he makes either of these issues a test of fellowship, then he is, in our humble judgment, violating the spirit of the New Testament church, and delaying that much the answer to the Savior's prayer, that his followers might be one even as he and his Father were one. This, we know, Professor Calhoun would not intentionally do.

I would not claim that those who have opposed the use of the organ in Christian worship have always done so in the right spirit, or that they have been as wise in their opposition to it as they should have been. I cannot claim for myself that my manner has been perfect; in fact, I have never been entirely satisfied with my way of preaching the truth or opposing error, and I am perfectly willing to make confession for my manner; but I cannot confess to an error in matter, neither should I quit preaching the truth or opposing error because my "manner" of doing both is not perfect. But, for the benefit of the Standard and others, I must say that it is easy to complain of the "manner" when it is impossible to answer the position. My Methodist friends make the same complaint at me when I preach the truth and oppose their error on sprinkling for baptism, but none of these things move me. These good Methodists think we are intolerant when we oppose their infant sprinkling and other unscriptural practices. But what can we do but preach the truth and oppose the error as best we can and let them complain? They, like the Standard, believe that we are standing in the way of Christian unity, when, as a matter of fact, we are contending for the only way it can be scripturally brought about.

The Standard says: "On his own account Professor Calhoun has never been hampered in his message on his beliefs in the years he has been associating with the people he now regards himself as leaving." I would prefer Brother Calhoun's statement on that point to the Standard's, as he knows more about his work and the conditions surrounding it than the Standard does. The difference is, the Standard has no convictions on the matter of adding to the worship, while Brother Calhoun has; and that is the reason the Standard does not feel hampered when the worship is corrupted, while Calhoun does. Some people would not feel hampered if the church burned incense in the worship. Nothing can hamper some people, because they are not bothered with convictions; but a good man will always feel hampered when he is forced to become a party to a thing which he does not believe. But the Standard seems to think that Brother Calhoun could have stayed where he was and preached against these thirgs. He might have done so, if he had touched lightly on tlese things; but what effect would his preaching have had, if he had continued to practice the error against which he was slightly objecting? No doubt it would have been very pleasing to those who are using these unscriptural things to have had the "minister" lamely object to them, and then go on and use them. I have no doubt the Standard feels that Brother Calhoun has made a mistike; but why does it feel that way? Simply because it pursues a different course. But what good is the Standard doing in mildly objecting to the United Christian Mssionary Society and pointing out the abuses in the use of the organ, and still trying to go on with the crowd aid giving its influence to the building up of the things to which it objects? No, Brother Calhoun has taken the only course that a man of deep convictions could have taken and be true to his convictions. It is not only his duty to sever his connection with those who have corrupted the worship, but he should make every effort which he can to correct the evil influence which his association with these brethren has caused. By his association with them he may have led others into these errors; and if so, he owes it to them, to himself, and to his God to do all that he can to correct it.

The Standard further says: "He [Calhoun] has a full New Testament right if he lifts up his voice against the organ or the missionary organization; but when he makes either of these issues a test of fellowship, then he is, in our humble judgment, violating the spirit of the New Testament church, and delaying that much the answer to the Savior's prayer." What good does it do for one to raise his voice against a thing and then go right on and indorse it by using it? Under such conditions the voice is never heard. Brother Calhoun does not have to make the organ a test of fellowship by refusing to use it or refusing to worship with those who do use it, for they did that when they introduced it into the worship. They knew it would debar good men and women from their worship, and they were implored not to do it, but they thought more of their unscriptural instrument than they did of the fellowship of those who could not use it. Now they want to shift the responsibility upon those who could not follow them in their wicked course. All this effort to cast odium upon those who remained true to the New Testament is a complete failure. We who oppose the use of the organ and human organizations are standing where they all stood fifty years ago; and because we will not indorse their departures they want the world and themselves to believe that we are in some way responsible for the divi-

But the weakest thing in the quotation from the Standard is the charge that Brother Calhoun by his course is delaying the answer of the prayer of the Savior that his disciples might be one. He never prayed that they might be one in error, but that they might be one in the truth. In that same prayer the Savior said: "Sanctify them in the truth: thy word is truth." When the apostles found people in error, instead of trying to unite them in error, they always tried to get them out of the error and unite them on the truth. Error is the only thing that causes division. Then why try to unite the world on the only cause of division? If the religious world were to get together with all their error, they would still all be wrong. The Standard needs to be called back to the New Testament, and to it alone, as the basis of Christian unity as badly as the denominational world did in Alexander Campbell's day. Brother Calhoun is now back where he can preach the Bible, and the Bible alone, as the basis of Christian union.

THE "SHOOT" OR "BRANCH." No. 1.

BY E. A. ELAM.

(Read Isa. 11, 12.)

"And there shall come forth a shoot out of the stock of Jesse, and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit." (Isa. 11: 1.)

In the preceding chapter (Isa. 10) Isaiah foretells the invasion of the Assyrian army, the chastisement of God's people for their sins, the implous vaunting of Sennacherib, and the destruction of the great Assyrian host as a vast forest cut down. In contrast with this forest, the "shoot," or "branch," of this verse is represented as coming forth from the stump and roots of an old tree, which represents the remnant of God's people at the time; but, a twig and tender plant to begin with, it will become fruitful.

This "shoot" will come from "the stock of Jesse," and this "branch" from "his roots."

There can be no doubt that this refers to Jesus Christ and his work in seeking to save sinners, both Jews and Gentiles, in his church; for Paul says: "And again, Isaiah saith, There shall be the root of Jesse, and he that ariseth to rule over the Gentiles; on him shall the Gentiles hope." (Rom. 15: 12.) Let us note that he is to rule over the Gentiles as well as the Jews.

We know that David was the son of Jesse (Ruth 4: 18-22), and Jesus was "of the seed of David." (2 Tim. 2: 8; see, also, Matt. 1: 1.) He says of himself: "I am the root and the offspring of David, the bright, the morning star." (Rev. 5: 5; Rev. 22: 16.) He is the "tender plant" and "root out of a dry ground" mentioned in Isa. 53: 2. Jeremiah (23: 5) says: "Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and he shall reign as king and deal wisely, and shall execute justice and righteousness in the land." Let us study Jer. 33: 15, 16; Isa. 4: 2; Zech. 3: 8: 6: 12, 13. In his speech in Antioch of Pisidia, Paul declares that these promises concerning this "tender plant," this "root out of a dry ground," this "shoot out of the stock of Jesse," this "seed" or "offspring of David," are fulfilled in Jesus.

And when he had removed him [Saul], he raised up David to be their king; to whom also he bare witness and said, I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after my heart, who shall do all my will. Of this man's seed hath God according to promise brought unto Israel a Savior, Jesus. . . I will give you the holy and sure blessings of David.

Read Paul's entire speech in Acts 13: 16-41. The one point reached in Paul's argument is that Jesus is the fulfillment of these promises to David, is therefore the Christ and Savior, and all should accept him as such and obey him in order to be saved.

To preach that this "Shoot" or "Branch" from the stem of Jesse is yet to come and this righteous reign of peace and good will is yet to begin was to preach nothing which the Jews did not already believe; they crucified Jesus believing that, and they still believe that at this time. If they had been told that Jesus was yet to fulfill all this in the distant future, would they not have said: "We will wait and see; and if so, we will then accept him?" But the apostles preached as follows:

Brethren, I may say unto you freely of the patriarch David, that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us unto this day. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins he would set one upon his throne; he foreseeing this spake of the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was he left unto Hades, nor did his flesh see corruption. This Jesus Inot some other man, whose name was Jesus, but Jesus of Nazareth] did God raise up, whereof we all are witnesses. Being Inow is] therefore by the right hand of God exalted, and having received Inow has] of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath poured forth this, which ye see and hear. For David ascended not into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies the footstool of thy feet. Let all the house of Israel therefore know assuredly, that God hath made him Ithis has been done] both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified. Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, Brethren, what shall we do? And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. (Acts 2: 29-38.)

This promise, too, was to both Jews and Gentiles, "even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him."

Kind reader, let me insist upon your reading this and all other passages which this article points out, together with all others relative to this matter under consideration. And let me say, too, that when the Holy Spirit says certain promises and prophecies have been fulfilled in certain ways, they have in this way been fulfilled and there can be no controversy about their fulfillment.

Let it be understood that sometimes, on account of sin, the people of God were so reduced and scattered that they were represented by only the stump of a tree cut to the ground, or even a root in the dry dirt; but there was always a remnant. Out of this root or stem was to come forth this "shoot" or "branch," which the New Testament says abundantly is Jesus Christ.

On this prophecy Clarke's "Commentary" remarks:

We have here a remarkable instance of that method so common with the prophets, and particularly with Isaiah, of taking occasion, from the mention of some great temporal deliverance, to launch out into this display of the spiritual deliverance of God's people by the Messiah; for that this prophecy relates to the Messiah we have the expressed authority of St. Paul. (See Rom. 15: 12.)

We must see this—that is, we cannot fail to see it. It is a great mistake to make these many references of the prophets to deliverance through Christ apply to some future temporal deliverance and restoration of the Jews—Israel after the flesh—to temporal blessings and power in Jerusalem in Palestine.

It is very necessary, too, to know that "they are not all Israel, that are of Israel: neither, because they are Abraham's seed, are they all children: but, In Isaac shall thy seed be called." (Rom. 9: 6, 7.)

For ye are all sons of God, through faith, in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ. There can be neither Jew nor Greek, there can be neither bond nor free, there can be no male and female; for ye all are one man in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to promise. (Gal. 3: 26-29.)

Gentiles as well as Jews, and all alike, are the children of God now in Christ; Gentiles as well as Jews are thus Abraham's seed and "heirs according to promise." And all to-day are, have been since Christ's reign began, and will be forever "the Israel of God." (Gal. 6: 15.) So many times, too, in regard to Gentiles and Jews, God declares that he is no respecter of persons, "but in every ration he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him." Will God ever favor Israel after the flesh above Israel after the Spirit—the true Israel in Christ?

THE SPIRIT AND JUDGMENT OF CHRIST.

Verses 2-5 of this chapter (Isa. 11) give the Spirit and judgment of this One to come from the family of Jesse. His Spirit was to be "the Spirit of Jehovah," "the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah." God sent the Spirit upon Jesus when he was baptized, and by this John the Baptist knew that he was the Christ. (Matt. 3: 16; John 1: 32-34.) God gave the Spirit without measure to Jesus. (John 3: 34, 35.) Jesus was the power and wisdom of God, the righteousness and justice of God, the tenderness and mercy and love of God. His teaching and wonderful works on earth and his reign in heaven show his wisdom and power, his grace and godly fear. His delight was in "the fear of Jehovah." In his prayers, tears, and agony he was heard for his godly fear." (Heb. 5: 7-9.)

With the Spirit of Jehovah, delighting in the fear of Jehovah, this One, coming from the stem of Jesse, would judge according to the righteousness, equity, and faithfulness of Jehovah. He would not be partial, would not respect persons, would "not judge after the sight of his eyes" or "decide after the hearing of his ears."

Righteousness and faithfulness would be his girdle. The loose, flowing garments worn then made it necessary to wear a girdle in order to bind these garments about the body out of the way for action. To have the loins girded was to be ready for action. (Luke 13: 35.) Hence, the girdle represents activity and strength. This is a frequent figure of the Bible. Christians, as soldiers ready for action, are to have their loins girded with truth (Eph. 6: 13-15), the loins of their mind girded (1 Pet. 1: 13), and to gird themselves with humility (1 Pet. 5: 5.) Girded with righteousness and faithfulness, this Judge would be zealous and active and strong in executing justice and in doing all his righteous work.

In this judgment the earth will be smitten with "the rod" of the mouth of this Judge, and "the wicked will be slain with the breath of his lips." It is clearly seen that "the rod of his mouth" and "breath of his lips" represent his word, which pronounces the judgment and doom of the wicked.

Let us take the pains to read Isa. 42: 1-4 and to find its fulfillment in Jesus the Christ in Matt. 12: 18-21. Also, let us read Isa. 61: 1-4 and find its fulfillment in Luke 4: 18-20. Just as Jesus Christ is the fulfillment of these passages, as Luke and Matthew declare him to be, he is the fulfillment of Isa. 11, as Paul and others say he is.

A LESSON OR TWO.

Since the delight of this Judge was "in the fear of Jehovah," all Christians should endeavor to "offer service well-pleasing to God with reverence and awe: for our God is a consuming fire." (Heb. 12: 28, 29.) All who fear Jehovah, respect his word, honor his will, come into his presence with awe, are afraid to disobey him, and delight in his service.

There is to-day a widespread lack of the fear of God, even among his professed children—among preachers even.

It is encouraging and rejoicing to know that Christ, and not man, judges us; and he judges us, not in the prejudice and partiality, presumption and ignorance, of men, but in the equity, righteousness, and faithfulness of God. Both the poor and rich, the meek and arrogant, will be judged alike.

NELSON COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

Bound in Strong Cloth. Regular Price, $5.00

Our Price, $4.00

WE WILL SEND FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY

SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

If you will send us eight new yearly subscribers to the Gospel Advocate at the regular price of $2.00 each, we will send you this Concordance FREE.

SEND YOUR ORDER AT ONCE

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Brother Elam: 1. I have been taught and understand that the church of Christ was set up on Pentecost. If this be correct, please harmonize the fact with Matt. 18: 17. Here Christ instructs his disciples to "tell it unto the church" before his crucifixion and before Pentecost.

2. If prophecies and their fulfillment are intended to convince and convict the unbeliever, the skeptic, and the infidel, and to confirm the believer, and you should know of fulfilled prophecies, and just how and when fulfilled, would you not be committing a sin not to make them known? Would you regard the teaching as "speculation?"

3. Do you know or believe that the words, "But of that day and hour knoweth no one," written nearly nineteen hundred years ago, are still in force and apply to all

4. Do the words "time shall be no more" convey a true idea?

I ask these last questions because I know that the usual

I ask these last questions because I know that the usual interpretations are calculated to make men skeptical.

I am seventy years old, and have been reading the Gospel Advocate regularly since I was about sixteen, and have nearly always accepted as true and good its teachings. I think, however, I detect a tendency to "negative" some propositions before the "affirmatives" are understood. This seems to be a fault with everybody.

Now, dear brother, I will state a few things that I know to be facts, and I also know that you will recognize them as facts. For after use, I will number these facts in regard to occurrences beginning in 1914.

1. The Germans shot blazes of fire, mingled with hall (bullets and shells) and blood, into French trenches.

2. The U-boats made the sea blood and destroyed ships

2. The U-boats made the sea blood and destroyed ships and lives.
3. The United States planted nets and mines in harbors and mouths of rivers.

4. Hindenburg made his drive from March 21 to July 18 (four months, or one-third of the time), so that the allies had no rest and gave no light by day or night. Then, after Hindenburg"s drive, the allies "scorched" the after Hindenburg's drive, the alines scorened the Germans.

5. There was a revolution in Russia—the people gnawed their tongues, and the United States sent supplies. Bolshevism is still spreading.

6. In the fall of 1923 nations met at Lausanne and made a treaty which was to go into effect when ratified by a third nation. The third nation ratified the treaty in the fall of 1924. Hence, in the fall of 1924 the treaty was put into effect. That treaty expressly stipulates that Turkey should give up her rule over Judea, Syria, and Mesopotamia. Thus was the Euphrates, or the power that controls the Euphrates, dried up.

Mesopotamia. Thus was the Euphrates, or the power that controls the Euphrates, dried up.

Now, brother, I think I am not overly presumptuous when I say that you know these six statements are all new and unprecedented facts. I cannot conceive of any intelligent negation of these statements. Now, the book of Revelation, under the subjects of the seven vials of wrath and the seven trumpets, foretells these things, and numbers them just in the order in which they occurred.

Now, if I should go ahead and tell just what I think will occur when the following is fulfilled, one might have a right to cry out "speculation:" "Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates. And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men."

I am sure I could give an intelligent explanation of the

I am sure I could give an intelligent explanation of the next things to occur as prophesied, but I might possibly make some slight mistake. Anyway, no use to venture on "speculation."

One of the best writers among our brotherhood assures me that his views coincide with mine. But that doesn't make them right. But they are right regardless of any or all others' opinions. They are the strongest possible evidence of the inspiration of the Bible, to combat the skepticism and infidelity that seems to be playing havor with the world.

May God bless the whole Gospel Advocate force.
G. M. SCALES.

We publish this letter in order to show how uncertain speculations on unfulfilled prophecy are, and how certain those who indulge in such speculations are that their speculations are the very oracles of God.

No one can doubt any historical fact connected with the World War, or the whole thing as one stupendous and awful fact; but who outside of inspiration can tell that these facts are the veritable fulfillment of unfulfilled prophecy? Each man who undertakes it clearly figures it out to his own satisfaction; but the world moves on, and these prophecies have to be fulfilled over and over again. I do not doubt that in the vision of God they prefigured wonderful things to take place upon the earth in the great plan and purpose of God, and that in his love and grace they will come to pass according to his will, and that in the same love and grace he has not pointed out their fulfillment more plainly than he has seen fit to do. My great confidence and faith in him are such that I know that he will bring everything to pass according to his own counsel for his own glory and the salvation of his people. It occurs to me that anything more than this is a lack of faith and trust in him.

I appreciate Brother Scales' reference to the Gospel Advocate and his high regard for it, and take pleasure in trying to answer his questions, which I number so as to answer in order.

1. A few days before Jesus gave the advice of Matt. 18: 17, he said, "Upon this rock I will build my church," and, "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of (See Matt. 16: 18, 19.) Between this and Matt. 18: 17 he certainly did not build his church. In Matt. 18: 17 he was directing his disciples how to act when the church should be established.

2. No. When God says a prophecy has been fulfilled, we know it has been, and in the way which God has pointed out. It is not speculation, therefore, to teach this fact, but the truth. If some brethren would spend more of their time in studying and teaching the many prophecies which God shows has been fulfilled and less time and talk about unfulfilled prophecy, they would much sooner convince skeptics and infidels. In this way the apostles proved that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ. By diligent and prayerful study one may understand something about prophecies which God says have been fulfilled; but no mortal man, however learned and wise and great he is, can tell when and how God will fulfill unfulfilled prophecies. I prefer to walk by faith, knowing that God does all things well.

3. Yes, I believe these words mean now just what they meant nineteen hundred years ago.

4. I think so, or God would have used such words as he wished to convey "the true idea." The American Revised Version says "there shall be delay no longer," but the margin says "time" instead of "delay," which would be "there shall be time no longer."

0 0 0

Brother Elam: We will greatly appreciate all the light you can give us on these questions. We are studying "Outlines of Bible Study," by G. Dallas Smith. Our lesson is No. 37, page 103. (1) Were any baptized in the Holy Spirit besides the apostles? If not, what is the meaning of Acts 1: 14, 15, 21, 22; also, Acts 2: 16-21, especially verse 18? (2) When and where did the Lord pour out his Spirit on his handmaidens? (3) Could any but the apostles impart the Spirit to others? If not, was Ananias an apostle? (See Acts 9: 17.)

1. None except Cornelius and his household. (See Acts 10: 44-48; 11: 15-18.) Acts 14: 15, 21, 22 and Acts 2: 16: 21 have no reference whatever to the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

2. There are different measures or gifts of the Spirit, which we learn from 1 Cor. 12 and Eph. 4: 11. All miraculous gifts of the Spirit were not baptisms of the Spirit. Baptism in the Holy Spirit was the fullest measure of the Spirit. God poured forth of his Spirit on his handmaidens when they prophesied, as in the case of the four daughters of Philip the evangelist. (See Acts 21: 9.)

3. Yes. Ananias was not an apostle.

Order the New Song Book for 1925

Heaventy Echoes No. 8, 25c each, 518,50 per hundred. This book contains only the best, new live Gospel songs. For your regular Church work order Resurrected Songs, 50c each, or Vaughan's Ravival, 75c each; books that contain the old-time hymns as well as the new songs. John B. Vaughan, Athens, Ga.

God-sent Blessing" is what one mother writes of Mrs. Winslow's Syrup. Thousands of other mothers have found of other mothers have found this safe, pleasant, effective remedy a boon when baby's little stomach is upset. For con-stipation, flatulency, colic and diarrhoea, there is nothing like

The Infants' and Children's Regulator
It is especially good at teething time. Complete formula on every label, Guaranteed free from narcotics, opiates, alcohol and all harmful ingredients.

At all Druggists Write for free booklet of letters from grateful mothers.

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO. 215-217 Fulton St. New York

RAINS, PETTUS & BURNETT

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

209 Seventh Avenue, North

MAIN 1865

B. E. BAINS

H. S. PETTUS JOHN S. BURNETT

Send us only 10c and we will mail you postpaid one packet each of the follow-

Early Scarlet Turnip Radish Seed, White Spine Cucumber Seed, Mayo's Blood Turnip Beet Seed, Southern Giant Curled Mustard Seed, Black Seeded Simpson Lettuce Seed, Mayo's Special Mixture of Sweet Peas, with our illustrated catalog of Seeds for the South.

Or we will be glad to mail you our catalog and price list of Farm Seeds free on request, 45th year in Seed business.

U. R. MAYO

:: TENNESSEE

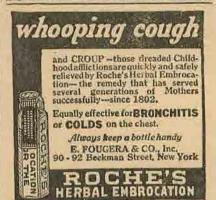

ARE CURABLE. If you suffer from Leg Sores or Varicose Ulcers, I will send you absolutely FREE a copy of my famous book that tells how to be rid of these troubles for all time by using my remarkable, painless treatment. It is different from anything you ever heard of, and the result of over thirty-five years' specializing. Simply send your name and address to Dr. H. J. WHITTIER, Suite 378, 421 East Eleventh Street, Kanaas City, Mo.

School Desks Opera Chairs Folding Chairs Kindergarten Chairs

School Supplies Blackboards

Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N. C.

COMMERCE UNION BANK

Nashville Lebanon Sparta Spring Hill Lawrenceburg Springfield Gallatin Gladeville Woodbury Murfreesboro

No disgrace to have the ITCH, it is to keep it. Got a box of derful remedy. Quick results. Mailed postpaid anywhere, large size, $2: small size $1. Guaranteed or money hack Agents wanted.

Evans Pharmany, "The Rexall Store", Anderson, S.C.

FOR PRICES ON SATISFACTORY

GOSPEL TENTS

THE ATLANTA MFG. COMPANY

West 0196

231 1-2 Stewart Ave.

Ailanta, Ga.

OBITUARIES

BALLARD.

On July 11, 1924, at the hospital in Centerville, Tenn., Brother Willie Ballard's earthly life went out and his spirit returned to God who gave it. His sufferings were intense, but he bore them with patience and resignation. Realizing that his time to go was near at hand, he told his wife he was not afraid to die, but regretted to leave her with the care and responsibility of raising their son, and to do the best she could. He was born on June 27, 1864. He was married to Eila B. Anderson on January 15, 1890. To this union two children were born, To this union two children were born, To this union two children were born, both having gone on before. On December 12, 1906, he was married to Earlie Baker, and to them one son was born. He obeyed the gospel in 1905, and was faithful until death. His intentions and desires were always to do good for humanity. He was firm in his convictions, positive in his manner of speaking steadfast and his manner of speaking, steadfast and unmovable for the right, and had many friends for being thus. He left a wife and one son, Euel. He was a useful man, and is missed both in the church and in the community in which he lived. Mrs. W. R. THURMAN.

WYATT.

My brother, A. J. Wyatt (familiarly known as "Jake" Wyatt), died on June 29, 1924, from the effects of a pistol-shot wound inflicted by another man. Brother "Jake" had been working in the hayfield all day until about three o'clock in the afternoon, when he shaved himself and went about a quarter of a mile to a picnic. A short time after his arrival a man became enraged and was trying to kill his wife and nephew with a pistol. Brother Jake started to their rescue, when the man fired the fatal shot. We laid Brother Jake's body away in the Myres graveyard, in the Winesap neighborhood, in Bledsoe County, Tenn., in sight of his home, in the presence of a large assembly of relapresence of a large assembly of relatives and friends, to await the resur-rection morning. He left five chiltives and friends, to await the resur-rection morning. He left five chil-dren to mourn his loss, his wife, Liz-zie, having passed away fourteen months before his death. He obeyed the gospel in 1917, being baptized by Brother J. C. Mosley. After their baptism, both he and his wife lived consecrated Christian lives until death. All the children are in Chris-tian homes, save one. J. S. Wyatt.

WALLACE.

WALLACE.

Charley Wallace was born on May 12, 1890, and died on May 7, 1924, after an illness of more than twelve months. All that loving hands could do was done, but death came to relieve him of his suffering. He obeyed the gospel thirteen years ago under the preaching of Brother Joe Jones, and, like Paul, straightway he began to preach Christ, the Son of God. He left, to mourn his death, a heartbroken mother, a wife, three little children, and a host of relatives and friends. Brother Wallace was indeed a gospel preacher. He was honest, upright, and firm in his convictions of right. He was a kind and loving husband and father and a friend to all. He told his loved ones not to grieve He told his loved ones not to grieve for him, for he was going to rest. Funeral services were conducted at the Charity cemetery. We sorrow, but not as those who have no hope, feeling confident that he is asleep in Jesus and will be among the ones whom God will bring with him. To Sister Wallace and the children I would say: Be true and faithful to the Lord until death, and you will have an eternal home with that loving husband and father where there will be no more toil and weariness, sickbe no more toil and weariness, sick-ness and suffering, disappointment and sorrow, and sadness and grief of heart. C. KNOWLES. heart.

HOPE.

HOPE.

On July 29, 1924, the death angel visited our home and claimed for its victim our dear grandmother, Mrs. Amanda White Hope. She was born on December 26, 1837. She was married to John G. Hope on January 2, 1855. To this union eleven children were born, six of whom are still living to help comfort the sad father, who is over ninety-two years old. Grandmother's life was not a perfect one, but she was ever striving toward perfection. She was not unmindful of her duty to her God, her friends, and strangers who came to her door. She was a faithful, loving wife and mother, thoughtful and unselfish, keeping her home peaceful and happy through her unselfishness in the service of her nome peaceful and happy through her unselfishness in the service of those about her. She accepted the gospel plan of salvation in early life, and to her there was no fear of death. and to her there was no fear of death. Her passing was as quiet and peaceful as her life had been. Her death has made our home very sad and lonely, but we are comforted by the words of our Savior: "Sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." Funeral services were conducted by Brother Harvey W. Riggs, and the remains were laid to rest in the Mount Vernon Cemetery at Sulphur Lick, Ky. May God help us to live the Christian life, so that her heart will be filled with joy when we go to meet her in the home beyond.

Two Granndaughters.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Each day a clean, white page, and we are artists whose duty it is to put something beautiful on the pages one by one; or we are historians, and must give to the page some record of work or duties or victories to enshrine and carry away .- Phillips Brooks.

There are many ways of thinking about the religious life, but only one way of living it, and that is doing good .- H. Durand Downword.

Christianity is a religion which expects you to do things .- Japanese saying.

CURING THE BLUES.

I have some little enemies;
They call themselves "the Blues;"
And, like all other kinds of foes,
They're splendid things to lose.
So, when I know they're planning
To come and spend the day,
I send the little smiles out
To chase them all away.
—Christian Observer.

elief from COUGHS Relief from coughs brings rest in the daytime and sleep at night. Since 1872, people everywhere have relied on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs; for tickling throat nervous hacking and sleep-denying night coughs; and for alarming croup coughs. More bottles used each year than any other cough medicines, Good for every member of the family. Benefits both children and grown-ups. Each ingredient of Be Sure It's this standard family remedy is a recognized healing medicine for coughs and throat irritations.

COUGH REMEDY 1 CONTAINS NO NARCOTICS Sold Everywhere

Used and recommended since 1872

CHOICE GOSPEL HYMNS

We are presenting four pages of sample songs from "Choice Gospel Hymns." This book has been very popular and much in demand from its first appearance.

Charles H. Gabriel, who has no interest in the book, and who ranks as the best sacred music composer in America, says of "Choice Gospel Hymns:" "It cannot be surpassed."

PRICES

Per copy, flexible binding ____ $0.40 Per copy, cloth binding $0.50

All prices f. o. b. Nashville, Tenn. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

The Book Sells at a Uniform Price

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

We have bought for our readers a Bible of very great value, and one that will give general satisfaction. The type is large and clear and is easily read. The size—5x784 inches—is very convenient and has been pronounced right by thousands of users. The helps are so complete that they form a veritable encyclopedia of Biblical knowledge.

Each Bible is gold stamped; Frontispiece, half tone; Helps to the Study of the Bible, 136 pages; Concordance, 40,000 references; Dictionary of Scripture Names, 24 pages; Scripture Atlas, 12 full-page colored maps; 16 page half-tone Illustrations. It is a first-class, King James, Teacher's, Bourgeois type, 8vo, Self-pronouncing Bible.

The publisher's price of this Bible is $6, postpaid.

Our price for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE one year and the Bible, postpaid, is

$6.00

In ordering, order Bible No. 102—Florentine seal, divinity circuit, headband and marker, red under gold edges. Order to-day.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North
NASHVILLE, TENN.

A HANDSOME COLLECTION BASKET

The use of a collection basket always adds dignity to the place of worship. This handsome basket is woven wicker, velvet bottom, 1½ inches deep, 9¼ inches in diam-

ter. Price, $3.75 each. Order yours to-day from

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

THE COLUMBIA DEBATE.

(Compiled from three articles in the Columbia Herald.)

Unusual interest was manifested by the large crowd that heard the debate on music in the churches which commenced at the courthouse on Wednesday night (March 4). The crowd came from all parts of this county and many from other counties. There were also some here from other States. The crowd, while deeply interested in every word that was spoken, manifested the finest spirit, and there was no disposition whatever to heckle or annoy either of the distinguished speakers, who presented the question with exceptional power and force.

The affirmative for the use of instrumental music in the churches was ably presented by J. J. Walker, of the Woodland Street Christian Church, of Nashville, who is an accomplished speaker and an experienced debater. He argued the merits of music.

The negative side was ably sustained by Grover Cleveland Brewer, former minister of the First Christian Church, who presented with convincing power the arguments that are urged for that angle of the controversy. Mr. Brewer is a keen debater, and his quick wit and power of analysis proved him a foeman in the debate worthy of his distinguished competitor. In fact, both sides of this question were presented with every force possible to summon.

It was apparent that the partisans of both sides of the issue were well pleased with the manner in which their respective champions had handled the question. At all times the debate was conducted on the very highest plane of Christian fellowship.

Judge Washington C. Whitthorne presided as the moderator, and he admonished the crowd to give both speakers an attentive hearing. In the outset both of the debaters approached the subject by expressing the hope that out of this debate would come a common ground for Christian unity. In other words, the hope of those engaged in the debate is that it will bring Christians holding adverse views on the issue together and not set them further apart.

The instrumental-music side was represented as its moderator by Louis V. Vouse, of Shelbyville, and the other side had for its representative H. Leo Boles, of Nashville.

The crowd was so large and came from over such a wide territory that it was impossible for all of them to get into the building. Many were turned away. A large delegation came from Nashville, and others from as far South as towns in Alabama. Nothing held here in a long time has attracted so much interest.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotaba, the nausealess Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family pack. thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteet by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

Mrs. Fred Irwin

-The Salyers Studio

"After motherhood I developed a weakness of the feminine organs. I became all rundown in health, my nerves gave way, I could not sleep, would be restless and flighty all night long, my back hurt and I had pains thru my side. I was nothing short of a physical and nervous wreck before I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it completely relieved. Prescription and it completely relieved me of all weakness, restored my nerme of all weakness, restored my nerves, and made me well and strong. I have never taken a medicine that did so much for me and as quickly as this 'Favorite Prescription' of Dr. Pierce's."—Mrs. Fred Irwin, 1314 W. Greenup. Ave., Ashland, Ky.

Obtain Dr. Pierce's Prescription now, in liquid or tablets, from your druggist or send 10c for trial pkg, of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, Write for free advice.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

All of the parliamentary rules and the amenities of debate between Christian gentlemen were observed in the debate. The speakers were uniformly courteous to each other, and both Walker and Brewer made splendid impressions even upon those who do not agree with the views that they presented with such force and eloquence.

After three days and nights of debate, the clash over the use of instrumental music in the churches came to a close on Friday night, the interest continuing unabated to the end. The circuit court room was again packed to hear the arguments advanced for and against the use of the instrument in the worship of God.

On such a high plane was the debate conducted, and so splendidly did the debaters demean themselves, that there was never an appeal to the moderator to decide any point or make any sort of ruling. the debaters manifested a spirit of Christian forbearance toward the position that was very highly commended by all.

While it is doubtful if there were many changes in the views of those who heard the debate on the question controverted, it is certain that the followers of each side have a clearer understanding of the faith that is in them than they had before. A mass of testimony was presented on both sides of the issue.

The crowd on the last night was just as large as the size of the house would permit. It would have been impossible to have crowded any others into the building, and many who came a long distance to hear the debate were disappointed because they could not get into the building.

Make us good soldiers in the army of the followers of Christ, our Father, that we may have our portion also in his joy of victory. In all the companionship of his suffering may we feel the beating of his great heart of love. Give us courage to go on through difficult ways and painful experiences; and may we never make our brother's lot more hard to bear by our complaining. In this fellowship of endurance make us one with all our brothers of trial, kin to all strong and patient souls on earth. And in our darkest hour forsake us not; but bring us, even by the road of the cross, to our place in thy house at last. In the name of Christ. Amen.-Isaac Ogden Rankin.

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 716 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF

FURNITURE, STOVES AND HEATERS

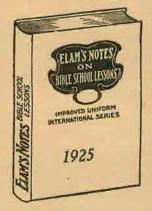

Let Us Move You-We Know How

LAWSON MOVING COMPANY

908 Eighth Avenue, South

Phone, M. 1465

A Real Help for Sunday-School Teachers and Students

Entire Year's Lessons and Comments in one substantial volume of 320 pages. Actual size of book, 8x5% inches. Order now for all Advanced Classes, Bible Classes, Adult Classes, and Teachers. Endorsed by teachers, preachers, and Bible students. The first cost is the only expense for all the year's lessons. The only complete cloth-bound commentary selling for less than one dollar. Price, single copy, 95 cents; five or more to one address, 85 cents per copy, postpaid, anywhere. Write for samples of Bible Lesson Helps for All Classes.

I regard B. A. Elam as the best, strongest, and safest Bible teacher now living.-R. V. Cawthon.

His notes and comments are full and clear, and his teaching is safe and sound .- N. B. Hardeman.

I am glad "Elam's Notes" has received such favorable introduction and reception, but that is just what it merits,-H. Leo Boles.

Greatest ald to Bible study known to me -Price Billingsley.

ORDER FROM GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send the GOSPEL AD-VOCATE as a Gift to your friend.

HELPED HER. IN EVERY WAY

So Writes Mrs. Trombley of Sharon, Vt., Concerning Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sharon, Vermont. — "I was weak and run-down, had a tired feeling and bearing-down pains.

saw an advertisement in paperabout Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began taking it. It has stopped these bearing-down pains and other bad feelings, and has helped me in every way. I have so much faith in the Vegetable Compound that I keep it on hand all of the time and recommend it whenever I have the opportunity."—Mrs. LEWIS TROMBLEY, Sharon, Vermont.

Glad to Help Others

"I had pains in my back and sides for many months, and my work would have many months, and my work would have to be left undone at those times. My sister told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing her, so I tried it, and from the third bottle I was well and every one thought I looked better. I am glad to help others regain their health, and you may use my testimonial."—MABEL HARTMANN, 1824 Greene Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. You must believe that a medicine that has helped other women will help that has helped other women will help you You should try it.

It is the drugless treatment for bronchial aliments—coughs, colds, spasmodic croup, whosping cough and bronchitis, Send for descriptive booklet 43B. Sold by druggists Vapo-Cresolene Co., 62 Cortlandt St., N. Y.

TEACHERS WANTED

We have urgent demands for hundreds of teachers for principals, grade and rural work. Salaries ranging from $75 to $250. Write to-day. SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY 905 Austell Bidg., Atlania, Ga.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

921 Ninth Street, N., St. Petersburg, Fla. SUNDAY SERVICES

Morning—Bible Study, 18:90 to 18:45; Communion and Sermon, 11:90 to 12:00. Evening—Singing, Communion, and Sermon, 7:45 to 9:00.

Midweek Service—Wednesday, 7:45 P.M. (Eastern time.)

A Christian welcome to all visitors. All Sucild Boulevard cars stop in front of the door. For further information, address W. A. Cameron, 350 Tenth Avenue, North. Phone, 1523-R.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

From the Brethren

Henderson, Tenn., March 3 .- Our services, which were held in homes, schoolhouses, and church houses, in Benton County, Miss., were very well attended. The weather was very un-favorable, yet we had a service at each appointment for about eight days. I was at Hamilton, Miss., on Sunday. One was restored to the fellowship at that place. The Lord willing, I shall be in the Mississippi field throughout 1925 and I want to be ing, I shall be in the Mississippi field throughout 1925, and I want to be busy as nearly all the time as possible. Any church desiring my services in the way of holding a meeting for them or a mission meeting may write me at Henderson, Tenn., and I will gladly arrange for such work. I would like to arrange for meetings from the first of April on through the year. I request those who are expecting me to hold their meetings to let me hear from them as soon as conlet me hear from them as soon as convenient, as I want to arrange my work as soon as possible. I hope to be able to do much good this year.— T. C. Fox.

Detroit, Mich., March 10.—I will here give a report of the work done by the St. Antoine Street Church of Christ during the past year. The total amount of money raised, exclusive of special collections for the sick, mission work, and to complete the payment on the church property, was $1,567.36, and the disbursements from the same fund amounted to $1,509.27, leaving a halves in the aburch trees. leaving a balance in the church treas-ury of $58.09. Special collections for the sick and to carry on mission work amounted to $183.46. During the year fifty members were added—twenty-seven by baptism and twenty-three by commendation—and five returned to the fold. We lost three members by death. The church now has a membership of one hundred and thirty. Besides this, at the beginning of the year there was a note of $1,500 against the church property. This note has been reduced to $150, which we expect to wipe out within the next month. The Lord's-day Bible school is one of the lively parts of the church. It has a very large attendance, and the interest shown in punctuality, attendance, and spiritual growth is worthy of all consideration. The mission at Jackson, under the direction the sick and to carry on mission work worthy of all consideration. The mission at Jackson, under the direction of Brother Echols, has done splendidly. Their collections for the year were $210.98, and the disbursements, including the financing of the revival services held there during the summer months, were $191.58, leaving them a balance in the treasury of $19.40. They have also made payments on the church property there until the present time. Three members were added to the body by baptism and two were ent time. Three members were added to the body by baptism and two were restored. They now have a member-ship of twenty-two. Brother Echols, who has labored there so faithfully for the past three years, has given up the work there, and now I will take up the work. The work at River Rouge, under the direction of Brother Mann, has progressed favorably, and there is a bright prospect for the establishing of a great work out there. tablishing of a great work out there. Three were added to their membership by baptism, giving them a total membership of thirteen. Their collections were $63.25, and disbursements from the same funds were $45.90, leaving them a balance in the treasury of $17.35. The work at Highland Park is also a progressive one and gives promise of developing into even a greater work than the mother church.—T. H. York,

THE DIVINE MISSIONARY POLICY.

BY E. E. SHOULDERS.

The New Testament is the divine missionary record. The inspired apostles were the first missionaries, divinely selected and guided into all truth. The church is the divine missionary agency to-day for the preaching of the gospel to the whole world. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a testimony unto all the nations" (Matt. 24: 14), a work which must be accomplished before we can expect the return of the Lord (Rev. 11: 15; 1 Cor. 15: 24-26).

As the New Testament is the divine missionary textbook, to it we go to ascertain the divine missionary policy. Every movement must have a definite time and place of beginning, and the church was no exception to the rule. Human institutions may have originated in other regions of the world, as in Italy, Germany, France, England, or America, but the church of the living God was established in Jerusalem. Human institutions may have originated during all the centuries of the past, but the church of the living God came into actual existence on Pentecost, A.D. 29.

Pentecost was the day when worldwide evangelism for Christ was begun, and Jerusalem was the place. The wise general, in planning a military campaign, first selects the base of operations. Jesus selected Jerusalem as his base of operations in planning the great work against the forces of evil. The Holy Spirit came on the day of Pentecost at Jerusalem to guide the apostles into all truth and to abide with the church forever. (John 14: 16; 16: 13; 14: 26.)

At the time of Christ the Jews were scattered among all the civilized nations; for on this memorable day of Pentecost, at which time the plan of work was definitely revealed (Acts 2: 1-11), these Jews had returned to Jerusalem to keep the feast of the Passover. There were seventeen different nationalities, and probably more, that were represented in the gathering that listened to Peter's sermon, and every Jew present heard and understood the gospel in his own language; for the Holy Spirit endowed the apostles with power to preach so that they could be understood by all nationalities represented.

Does not this incident have a remarkable significance? These Jews who heard and obeyed the gospel represented every nation of the ancient world. No doubt they returned and told the story of Christ to their own peoples in their respective languages. No wonder that Christianity spread over the entire ancient world in less than half a century.

In Acts 8: 26-40 we have the story of the conversion of the eunuch. From this we learn that the eunuch was a man of importance in Ethiopia. Hence, it is significant that the Lord brought Philip and the eunuch together, so that the latter might hear and obey the gospel. No doubt the eunuch took the gospel back to his own people in his own language. It was a more practical plan to send the gospel to Ethiopia through a native son, in the native language, than to send Philip, or any of the apostles, into this foreign country, without any knowledge of its language or customs.

Saul was an orthodox Jew, a Pharisee of the strictest sect (2 Cor. 11: 22); but it was in accordance with the divine missionary policy when Jesus spoke to him in Hebrew, although Greek had long been the established language. It is only natural that a man's heart can be reached through the medium of his native language more easily than through a language of alien origin. The introduction of Christianity upon the European continent, where it was destined to win its chief triumphs, began with the conversion of a handful of women on the river bank at Philippi. (Acts 16: 11-15.) Lydia was one of these women; but she was a native of Thyatira, and we know that later a church was established in that city. So, who knows but that Lydia might have figured in taking the gospel to Thyatira?

I am heartily in accord with every missionary policy that is loyal to the truth as revealed through Jesus Christ. Yet it is a very well-known fact that at least one-half of the present population of the United States is of foreign extraction. Instead of sending brethren to the foreign nations, without any knowledge of the languages and customs of those nations, I feel that it would be more practical to reach the foreign population of this country with the gospel of Christ. It occurs to me that this could be done more easily here in the homeland, and after a while the educated sons of the various foreign nationalities can take the gospel back to their respective peoples in their native languages. Then Jew can preach the gospel to the Jews, Syrian to the Syrians, Swede to the Swedes, Russian to the Russians, and so on, until this policy would soon hasten the evangelization of the world.

Your doctor advises internal cleanliness

HE WILL tell you that the first re-sults of constipation — headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.-warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. For sale by all druggists.

"Religious" or "Superstitious"?

The Apostle Paul's heart was set on winning the "Men of Athens." If he had really told them they were "too superstitions" which other versions of the Bible quote him as doing, would be have emisted their interest in this new faith that was turning the civilized world upside down? The fact is he told them, as The American Standard Version renders it, that they were "very religious." How important it is, therefore, to use the supremely accurate rendering of Holy Scriptures as found in the American Standard

American Standard Bible in your reading: In your devotion; in your of the more clearly than any version that has some before, reveals the mind of Cod.

grain Standard Bible text
THOMAS NELSON & SONS | Free Be adding Colleges, Theological | 385-U Fourth Ave., Naw York City Co. C. A., and Bible Schools in DEAR SIRS: Kindly send me a PREE copy of your control of the control of omited States.

DEAR SIRS: Kindly send sen PEFF copy.

American Standard Bible text is used by over 13,000,000 a stilled. The Worderful Sorry. Stilles he came down through the area. This docs not all, Granded or other Bible lessnits.

tional, Graded or other Bible lessons.

Name
The American Standard Bible is for sale by all book sellers. Street No.

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians 24 years for

Colds

Headache

Pain

Neuralgia

Toothache

Lumbago

Neuritis

Rheumatism

Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions.

Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets—Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Ambirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoscotlesviolester of Salleylleacid

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE AS A GIFT

Many good, liberal-hearted people, both men and women, give the Gospel Advocate to friends and relatives every year.

Why not send a year's subscription to the Gospel Advo-

Why not send a year's subscription to the Gospel Advocate as a gift to your friends? They will appreciate it, and you will be doing them and their families a real favor. The Gospel Advocate will go into their homes with a message of God's truth fifty-two times during the year. No other gift may prove such a blessing to them in time or in eternity. Send their names and addresses with your check and the Gospel Advocate will be mailed to them. The subscription price is $2.00 per year.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

110 Seventh Avenue, North

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Fill out blank below, tear off at this line, and mail to-day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE,

Nashville, Tenn.

Inclosed find $	_, for which please send the Gospel Advocate for	yearto
Name
Street or Rural Route	~~~
Paul Office	State

FROM EAST TENNESSEE.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER:

On account of poor health conditions, I have been away from the church at Cleveland quite a good deal this winter. The attendance and interest have been good all winter. Much interest has been manifested in all of our Bible study.

Brother W. C. Phillips is adminitering to the Cowart Street congregation in Chattanooga this winter. He informs me that the interest in that congregation is picking up decidedly Brother Charles Holder has recently held a meeting at Englewood. He is preaching monthly for Athens, Etowah, and Englewood, and I am informed that the work is doing well at those places.

We have made no headway at Niota this winter. We had thought when the house was so we could be into it, we would be able to many the work right on; but sickness and bad roads have put us out. The builds of the Lee Highway through their has caused the roads to be our up and much rain has made them in passable. We hope do to better now soon. We are planning to complete the house this spring and early munmer. A baptistery, cupola and front concrete steps are to be built, and the painting is to be done but below we can do this, the money had to be raised.

Niota is in McMinn Country on the Southern Railroad, and is no the Law Highway. It is in a beautiful to the valley of fine farming lands, and the interspersing ridge lands are well adapted to the growing of applied peaches, pears, and strategies.

We desire to locate a good medical doctor there who will pet in a tool of drugs. We think there is a good opening there for that, and a good location for a produce and teed man. We would like to find man sho are members of the church and would take an interest and feel a responsibility, and also would be important. Will somebody help us to find them men? We certainly believe 4 will be mutually good both for the man and also for the cause. I shall be glad to give any information and render an other assistance that I can to that oul.

I observe that up in the section in many places, the brethren and determany places, the brethren and determany places, the brethren and determany posed to give up and quit trying, and in some instances they have already given up and quit. That will never do. That is precisely what the levil and sectarians would have us do. From time immemorial they have been wanting God's people to become discouraged and give up. Shall we give up? No. no. no—a thousand times no. Then, as we cannot afford to give up, let us hang together work on, pray on, hope on. If we will be true to God, he will be true to us, and give us the victory by and by.

Since my suggestion that we put two men-one a preacher and the other a singer-in the field in upper East Tennessee, four or five preaching brethren have written me, asking about the work, and would like to take up such work. I have no doubt but each of them is well fitted and would do fine work, but we have not the necessary support. I cannot encourage any one to come up here to spend all of his time preaching in this destitute field until I can have the assurance of the support. This has been tried out, and brethren have been caught in hard circumstances. Now, let me still insist that we give this matter a very thoughtful and prayerful consideration, and yet see if we cannot get this plan to working. Some few are sending contributions occasionally and others have promised, and we are thankful for all, but we have not enough coming in and promised to be able to do much. The church at Fayetteville has promised to send Brother A. B. Barret and Brother Andy Largen, each for a month's work up in this country. Now that is fine. Will not some other churches emulate their example?

Let me insist that all scattered brethren and sisters, regardless of whether you have a church with which to meet-the responsibility is the same, anyway-I say, let me insist that each one "lay by him in store" as he is prospered. Let your money be helping to preach to the people up here. Also, let each one help in the dissemination of good books, papers, tracts, and leaflets that teach the truth. Each one, by doing so, can be teaching the gospel.

Now, I am no pope, bishop, priest, presiding elder, or circuit rider. I am just trying to be a plain and simple kind of Christian and humble servant of the church, and all the interest I have in this is to have the gospel preached and lost souls saved. May we not all work and pray for the same?

An eminent surgeon says: "Encourage your child to be merry and to laugh aloud. A good, hearty laugh expands the chest and makes the blood bound merrily along. Commend me to a good laugh, but to one that will sound right through the house; it will not only do your child good, but will be a benefit to all who hear, and be an important means of driving the blues away from a dwelling. Merriment is very catching, and spreads in a remarkable manner, few being able to resist the contagion."

Renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book -merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor. T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

PRICES

FULL CLOTH

FLEXIBLE CLOTH

Per single copy.....$0.30 | Per 50, per copy..... 27
Per dozen, per copy 28 | Per 108, per copy... 25

All prices f, o. b. Nashville. If shipped by Parcel Post, Parcel Post to be added. In ordering, state whether round or shaped note, full or flexible cloth, is desired.

ORDER TO-DAY FROM GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY NASHVILLE, TENN.

Send us a new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate $2.00 per year

102

PLEASE DO NOT OVERLOOK PLACING YOUR MONEY IN THE ENVELOPE WITH YOUR ORDER

ORDER BLANK

FOR

BIBLE LESSON HELPS

Date

Please enter the following order to l	be sent to the address below:
Formonths, from	, 192, to, 192
Name
P, O
Street	Route State
Remittance inclosed in payment of this order, $
NO STANDING ORDERS TAKEN
ELAM'S NOTES FOR 1925 (Five or More to 0) (Single Co	@ 85 cents per copy, $ ne Address, Each) pp, 90e)
ADVANCED QUARTERLY, 64 pag (Five or More to 07 (Single Copy, 20	ne Address, Each)
INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY, S	32 pages @ 6 cents per quarter, $ ne Address, Each)
PRIMARY QUARTERLY, 32 page (Five or More to Or	6 6 cents per quarter, 5
LITTLE JEWELS (mailed quarter (Five or More to Or (Single Copy, 20	ly) @ 12 cents per quarter, $ ne Address, Each) o Por Quarter)
THE YOUNG PEOPLE (mailed m (Five or More to 0) (Single Copy, 200 Per Quarter, 800 Per Year-	nonthly) @ 15 cents per quarter, $ ne Address, Each) _Foreign, 30c Per Quarter, $1.00 Per Year)
LESSON LEAVES (Five or More to 0)	@ 5 cents per quarter, $ ne Address, Each)
SETS LESSON PICTURE CARDS
LESSON PICTURE CHARTS	@ $1.00 per quarter, $
CLASS BOOKS (7 cents each)	@ 75 cents per dozen, $
SUNDAY-SCHOOL RECORD (for	entire year) $2.50 per copy, $
COLLECTION ENVELOPES	@ 75 cents per dozen, $
Total	2 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1

Literature should be ordered to expire with the end of the quarters. Quarters begin January April, July, and October; expire March, June, September, and December.

Remit by Post-Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or Express Money Order, otherwise at the sender's risk.

CAREFULLY EXAMINE YOUR ORDER BEFORE MAILING
Cut Out Order Blank and Mail To-Day

GOSPEL ADVOCATE COMPANY

NASHVILLE, TENN.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

"I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)

"We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)

"I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)

"We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Holps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criticism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)

"I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fall of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

"The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (B. P. Cufl.)

"Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)

"I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)

"The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartly recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)

"A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly commend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)

"As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)

"It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

"Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, sortptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)

"At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the acongregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

"I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the coplous citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes, I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

Volume LXVII. No. 13.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH 26, 1925.

$2 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

CONTENTS.
CURRENT COMMENTOUR CONTRIBUTORS	289
Hope of the Second Coming of Christ-The First Mis-	290 sionary Home in Shizuoka Prefecture, Japan-The Gos- pel Song (No. 1)-The Blessed Man-One by One They Leave Us.
OUR MESSAGES	296
Denominationalism-What Must Be Believed in Order	W70 : to Be Scripturally Baptized?—The "Shoot" or "Branch" (No. 2).
QUERY DEPARTMENT	303
HOME READING
FROM THE BRETHREN	306
Missionary Notes Salary, Wages, and Hire	308
The Closing of the Doors. Tipton Orphan Home.	310
Tipton Orphan Homes	JII

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

The editor of the Christian-Evangelist, writing on "The Battle Against Unclean Books," says:

Up in New York the forces of good and evil are in gigantic hattle before the Legislature over two great issues. One is to get a State enforcement law, which will save New York from being a secession and a bootleg institution. The other is to check the floods of unclean books that convert the United States mails into sewers in order that certain publishers in New York and elsewhere may profit financially. We are concerned in this article with the question of unclean books and of opening the mail to their distribution.

Here is a situation that makes one pray that another Anthony Comstock may arise to visualize and make effective the moral sentiment of a whole nation. He was the great champion of the reform to keep the mails from the term of the reform to keep the mails from the great champion of the reform to keep the mails from the term of the great champion of the reform to keep the mails from the great champion of the reform to keep the mails from the great champion of the reform to keep the mails from the great the prohibition leaders of to-day. Those who hated him were the same men and women who fostered the saloon with its degrading output. It is our conviction that a saloon is an innocent, high-toned place compared to a publishing house that issues unclean books from its presses. The poison potion of sparkling alcohol affects the body, chiefly, though it carries with it certain warnings. In the end it marks its victim with a loath-someness people abhor. But the bad book quietly and unseen instills morbid and low ideas into heart and soul that debase them in the most revolting way, and leave them morally stranded in the sordid slime.

The mind, like the body, grows upon that upon which it feeds. It is a shame that Christian people will patronize publications that reek with a filth that pagan nations would not endure. Floods of injurious, poisonous, but attractive, books and magazines are being daily poured upon the public, and are confessedly working the ruin of both youth and age by a witty, brilliant, and suggestive indecency that is tolerated for the sake of its genius.

Reformation must begin in the church. Christian parents must take such stuff from the hands of their sons and daughters as they would snatch poison from the hands of a baby. Even our schools and colleges are filled with the veriest trash because it is classical and are polluting and incapacitating the youth of the land with things a Christian publisher would refuse to handle.

Many of the great libraries have become merely clearing houses for that which is licentious and frivolous and are putting into the hands of children things nobody should read.

The Evangelist further says:

Not long since we saw a young girl going into the recitation room of a college carrying a magazine upon her left arm in quite an affectionate way. We will not mention the name of the publication, but it is a favorite with atheists, roués, anarchists, and those who skim around the fringes of a world created by insurgents against decency and order. The sight was startling to us, and we were sure we saw the explanation of why some young people lose their poise, their purpose, and their whiteness.

sure we saw the explanation of why some young people lose their poise, their purpose, and their whiteness.

The colleges and universities have come in for their share of criticism in connection with the morals and manners of the times. For the most part, and certainly in the church schools, the best ideals have been held up. We believe in the colleges and do not think they are guilty of maladministration of moral and religious ideals. But we have no doubt that one of the chief sources of corruption in modern life is bad books. They are read largely for entertainment, to while away the time, to save lazy voluptuaries from despair, to satisfy and gratify prurient curiosity, and the result is to change even pure hearts to moral cesspools and holy homes to unclean slums. Those who admit such books into the hands of the young are guilty of criminal conduct.

This question takes on another aspect. One is amazed when he sees the kind of books read with avidity by a good many ministers of the gospel. Some of them blandly wave away the supernatural and class miracle with superstition and folklore stories; some lash out at the church as if it were an evil institution; some contain the most adroit and insidious attacks upon the Bible; some question the existence of God himself. Why should a preacher waste his strength over such driveling and worthless stuff? It is not that one is "narrow-minded," but that one should prize his time and mind too highly to occupy them with unworthy literature.

No one could see the "liberality" or "progress" of it, if one were to listen to slanderous denunciation of his mother, nor or we able to appreciate the intelligence of a

No one could see the "liberality" or "progress" of it, if one were to listen to slanderous denunciation of his mother, nor or we able to appreciate the intelligence of a man who spends his energies and hours studying books that foster doubt, advocate contumacy, destroy friendship and fellowship, corrupt the home, throw aspersion upon good and great leaders, exalt unfaithfulness and moral delinquency in men and women, and encourage pessimism in general. To make such wretched compositions companions and counselors is as great a mistake as a reader can make.

The Gospel Advocate very heartily indorses the above. What a person reads largely determines what he is and in going to be. More than one preacher has been ruined by reading bad books. To read the writings of a man is to associate with that man; and, "Be not deceived: evil companionships corrupt good morals." (1 Cor. 15: 38.) Show me the books a preacher loves, and I will tell what kind of preacher he is. When I see a preacher who does not love the books of D. Lipscomb, Benjamin Franklin, A. Campbell, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, T. W. Brents, T. B. Larimore, and kindred minds, I am aware that something is wrong. There is a difference between reading a book and loving a book. When I see a preacher who loves the writings of Blackstone, Mauro, Russell, or Mrs. White, I realize there is unsoundness somewhere.

The Bible is the fountain source of all good reading. The word of God is "the seed" of every good thought and action. Bad books are a poison that takes away the taste for reading the word of God. They fill the mind with disease and make it unhealthy. The nearer to perfect health a mind is, the greater delight it finds in reading the word of God. 0 0 0

.

The Christian Advocate, "General Organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," under the heading, "Awake to the Task," endeavors to "collect the pledges that are long past due" for "the Advance World Program" in a prominent article, an extract of which says:

When Jesus Christ went back to God and left his infant church to continue the conquest of the world, he issued a definite charter for the guidance of its operations. That charter we have called the "great commission:"

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Teach them. And as ye go, heal the sick. And I will be with you always, even to the end of the world."

This is the charter of the church. The promise to be

This is the charter of the church. The promise to be This is the charter of the church. The promise to be with his disciples always was only on the condition that they went into all the world to preach the gospel, teach the ignorant, and heal the suffering. When disciples abandon that program, they are no longer fulfilling the conditions necessary to Christ's presence and blessing. They are no longer operating under the charter; hence, they do not secure God's favor.

This is not only good scripture and good theology; it is history. God's blessing has never yet rested upon any church that slighted its missionary obligation. The record is uniform from the first century to the twentieth.

is uniform from the first century to the twentieth. Churches that are not missionary shrivel up, become "hard-shell," lose their influence and leadership, and eventually die.

We refer particularly to the Christian Advocate's quotation of the language of Jesus in the commission. Christian Advocate is a great paper, one of the greatest in the world, and we feel an admiration for its industry and thrift. But why does it have an aversion for quoting all the language of Jesus?

It says, "This is the charter of the church," and quotes thus: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Teach them. And as ye go, heal the sick. And I will be with you always, even to the end of the world." It may claim that it was merely quoting the words that emphasized the points it was making. But an explanation of that kind does not suffice. It steadily and persistently minimizes a part of the language of Jesus. The command for "every creature" to "be baptized" is as much a command of Jesus as the command of Jesus to the apostles to "go" and "teach." Why does a great paper taboo a command of Jesus?

The Gospel Advocate has no prejudice or bias in favor of baptism. Nobody need charge us with wanting people to "go down into the water" because we think there is virtue in the water. But we believe all of the Bible, and the same verse that says, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," as quoted by the Christian Advocate, also says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned," as was not quoted by the Christian Advocate. We cannot see that it does a man any good to accept a part of the language of Jesus, if he is going to insult Jesus by not accepting it all. We urge the Christian Advocate to teach all that Jesus commanded, and nothing else, by "not going beyond the things which are written." Then it will teach that a man should be "a Christian" and "glorify God in his name." (1 Pet. 4: 16.)

Why should not great papers and learned preachers tell sinners what Jesus and the apostles command them to do to be saved? Why should they never quote the language of Jesus and the apostles in their columns or in their pulpits? Why? What is the public to think of great papers or great preachers that have absolutely no respect for the language of Jesus? The careless, thoughtless public seems ignorant of the awful fact that most of the preachers and papers reject a part of the Bible. And it devolves upon true, Christian people to carry the matter before the general public, before all the people, that they may really hear the gospel, which "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Every congregation, like leaven in a measure of meal, should go up and down the streets of its neighborhood, and tracts and leaflets should go into every home. Will not the churches "awake to righteousness, and sin not," by earnestly and zealously doing the work that God has put upon them?

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

HOPE OF THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. BY R. L. WHITESIDE.

The hope of the second coming of Christ, with Brother Boll, is a desire and expectancy of his coming momentarily. Hence, according to Brother Boll, if we do not desire and expect him to come to-day, even this moment, we do not hope for his coming. If he is right in thus contending, then the "national restoration of Israel" and the reign of Christ in the millennium, the sum and substance of his theory, are not matters of hope; for in his program these must follow the "great tribulation," and cannot, therefore, be momentarily expected. What, then, becomes of the much-vaunted hope of Israel and of his hope of being a ruler in the kingdom of Christ in the millennium?

If he is right as to what hope is, his program kills his hope of ruling the nations with a rod of iron and also whatever hope a pious Jew might have of "national supremacy;" for, if expectation always carries with it the idea of imminency, how can he hope to rule anybody in the millennium, and how can Israel hope for national sovereignty, seeing that neither is imminent? For be it remembered that Brother Boll holds that the dead saints must be raised and, together ith the living saints, be caught up to heaven, the world power developed, the "great tribulation" come, Christ come with his saints, and the battle of Armageddon occur, before he can rule anybody with a rod of iron and before the Jews can have "national supremacy." If he is correct as to hope and as to his program, he cannot have any hopes of that for which he longs; and a proper understanding on the part of the Jews will remove the "national supremacy of Israel" from the domain of imminency, and, therefore, destroy hope.

But he is wrong as to expectancy. True it is that it is an element of hope, but does not necessarily carry with it the idea of imminency. We may hope for a thing when we know that it cannot come at the moment. 1 Cor. 16: 10, 11.) Paul says we should plow in hope. (1 Cor. 9: 10.) Certainly one who sows and plows in hope does not expect the harvest to come at the moment. He knows the harvest is months ahead, yet he sows and plows in hope. We may lend, hoping to receive. (See Luke 6: 34.) Certainly no one makes a loan expecting the return at the moment. According to Boll, if the payment is deferred to some future time, the hope is gone.

Paul says he hoped for a resurrection of the just and the unjust. (See Acts 24: 15.) If the unjust are to be raised at the end of the millennium, a thousand years after the resurrection of the just, as Boll teaches, and if, as he says, hope includes the idea of momentary expectancy, how could Paul hope for their resurrection?

Paul wrote to Timothy: "Hoping to come unto thee shortly." (1 Tim. 3: 14.) Certainly, Paul did not mean to say that there was such an uncertainty about the time of his going that he was likely to start the moment he wrote. He hoped "to send Timothy shortly" to the Phillippians—"so soon as I shall see how it will go with me," (See Phil. 2: 19-23.) Here is hope, yet a period of time, described by Paul as "shortly" and "so soon as I shall see how it will go with me," intervening between the hope and the thing hoped for. Evidently he was waiting to see how his trial in Rome would terminate. Here was hope without any expectancy of immediate realization. Hoping for a thing, then, does not mean we must be expecting our hopes to be realized any moment. Indeed, we may do a thing hoping to benefit generations unborn.

To prove that the apostles and early Christians hoped for the coming of Christ is far from proving that they expected him at any moment. The passages, therefore, that Boll quotes, that because they hoped for his coming, therefore, they expected him momentarily, are wide of the mark. They simply prove what we all believenamely, that Christ is coming again. For a person to so twist the word "hope" in order to make it do service in his theory is enough to make any thoughtful person suspicious as to any argument he makes.

Brother Boll puts stress on the fact that the early church was looking for the coming of Christ. (See Tit. 3: 11-13.) But that by no means proves that they were momentarily expecting him. Peter says: "We look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." (2 Pet. 3: 13.) Now, this new heavens and new earth, according to Boll, is to come sometime after the millennium. Yet, Peter says, "We look"-they were looking for something, which, according to Boll, could not come till more than a thousand years had rolled round. We trust that even Brother Boll is hoping and looking "for new heavens and a new earth," though, if he is right, they are at least more than a thousand years in the future. In his tract, "The Second Coming," page 10, he says: "If I have to wait till the world is converted, and then another thousand years till Christ comes, I might as well stop teaching about his coming." Well, according to his theory, he will have to wait more than a thousand years "for the new heavens and a new earth;" but we observe that he has not quit teaching about them. But he cannot say that he hopes "for new heavens and a new earth" without destroying all the arguments he makes on "hoping" and "looking" to prove the early Christians momentarily expected Christ to come, because the Scriptures say they hoped and looked for his coming.

It seems that his theory concerning the restoration of Israel to Palestine makes it impossible for him, with his idea of hope, to hope for the second coming of Christ. In his diagram in his tract, "The Second Coming," he has the "great tribulation" immediately following the "first stage" of Christ's second coming, at which time he says the saints, both the living and the dead, will be caught up with the Lord. But at the beginning of this "great tribulation," consequently at the time Jesus comes for his saints, Boll has unbelieving, rebellious Israel in Jerusalem and their temple rebuilded. The return of the Jews to Jerusalem and their rebuilding the temple must, therefore, according to Boll, precede the "first stage" of the second coming of Christ. Should the Jews now begin their return to Jerusalem, it would require several years for them to consummate this and the rebuilding of the temple. At best, then, if he is correct, Christ will not come for several years; and the events that, according to his theory, must come first are not even in prospect now. With him, hope in the second coming of Christ includes expectancy of his appearing at any moment; but his theory concerning the coming of Christ after the Jews get back to Jerusalem makes it impossible to expect his return at any moment, and, therefore, makes it impossible for him to hope for his coming. It is bad when a man's theory about a much-desired thing makes it impossible for him to hope for that thing. When a man advocates a false theory, he is certain to involve himself in difficulties from which he is unable to extricate himself.

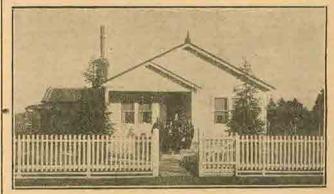

Note.—A "Review of R. H. Boll," by R. L. Whiteside and C. R. Nichol, is now in the hands of the printer, and should be ready by the time this reaches the reader. It may be had by sending fifty cents to Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas, or to the writer, Box 901, Beaumont, Texas.

THE FIRST MISSIONARY HOME IN SHIZUOKA PREFECTURE, JAPAN.

BY ROBERT S. KING.

Two years ago a movement was started toward supplying a home for Sister Andrews, our missionary in Japan, who has done such excellent work in the Master's vineyard and who has made so many sacrifices and gone through so many hardships for the cause. How well we succeeded will be seen by taking a look at the picture.

This house was bought from the Alladin Company, of Portland, Oregon, and is catalogued by them as the

From left to right: Brother Sato, Ocki Naemura (helper), orphan girl, Mrs. Naemura (housekeeper), and Sister Sarah Andrews.

"Victory;" and Sister Andrews has decided to retain the name for the new home, as it was such a long, hard struggle to get it, and so many situations had to be met before it was completed. You must remember that these houses are all cut and each piece named and numbered, and plans are sent with each house so any carpenter can put one together; but when your carpenter can't read English, somebody has to interpret it to him, and this was Sister Andrews' job. Many difficulties had to be met and overcome from the time this house reached the port of Yokohama and was taken from the ship until it was painted and made ready for occupancy.

When you read how grateful she is for the comforts of this new home, you will be glad you did what you "could" toward supplying it.

It was at first planned to make this a two-story house, and to use the ground floor for the kindergarten mission work, etc., and the upstairs for living rooms, but the great earthquake of September 1, 1923, caused a change to be made; and we feel, as Japan is subject to such spells often, that no mistake was made in making the change.

Now, that we have taken care of our missionary, we must also provide a suitable place to carry forward the work and not suffer Sister Andrews to carry this on in her own dwelling. The lot is large enough for a building of this kind, and the residence was placed so that this could be done. One thousand dollars will put this mission where it will do good. One-half of this has already been raised. Who wants a part in this great work

Shizuoka prefecture is one of the largest in Japan, and one of the most progressive, and Shizuoka is the largest city in the prefecture. Population, eighty thousand.

This is the first missionary home to be built in this prefecture. It is said that a missionary can reach fiftytwo thousand in a generation, so you see it is something to be a missionary. Here is your opportunity. Send contributions to Robert S. King, care of David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

Here follows a letter written by Sister Andrews before the beginning of this year:

Dear Friends: I wish I had time and words to express to you how very much I appreciate your interest and help in this work, but I know the Lord will reward you. May we all come together with Him in that great day with many souls rescued and saved to his glory.

I rejoice to say to all interested that I am feeling much better since moving over here, where we are not crowded in on all sides, and have good, fresh air and quiet nights to rest, and a fire these snappy mornings and evenings instead of the shivers. I am so thankful for all my blessings I cannot halfway express myself. I wrote mother the other day not to worm any more shout me for I am the other day not to worry any more about me, for I am comfortably fixed. All I lack is being worthy of it all. With these comfortable surroundings, I hope to get real strong and well, with the fervent desire that my life may be more useful in the Master's cause. My heart just overflows with thanksgiving and praise all the day long, and at eventide we come about the fire and lift up our hearts in gratitude to the throne of grace for all the blessings we enjoy

Nobody can appreciate the sensations which come over me still since moving, except tall folks who have lived in a Japanese house for six years. I feel now that I can stand my full height without fear of getting my head bumped. (Japanese rooms are 6x6x6.) The house was bumped. (Japanese rooms are 6x6x6.) The house was so long being built and took so much of my time, which seemed unavoidable, and I often regretted losing so much time from my work, but it may not have been lost in the long run. I am settled now for a life of service, and, having more comfortable surroundings, I will perhaps live longer than I would have otherwise.

live longer than I would have otherwise.

The weather has turned real cold. Our well was frozen this morning. I can never cease to be thankful for the comforts of this house. I didn't realize there was such a difference in comforts until we made the change after so long in a Japanese house. [Paper windows, paper partitions, weatherboarding one-fourth inch thick.—R. S. K.] I wonder, in my state of health, if I could have stood another winter their way of living. Truly thankful I am that I didn't have to.

I had some pictures made of the house with us on the front steps Thanksgiving Day. Brother Sato, aged seventy-five, happened to call that afternoon, so we persuaded enty-five, happened to call that afternoon, so we persuaded him to join us in the picture. He is a man of deep faith and consecration and means much to the cause at Ökitsu. The white fence divides the lot, on the front part of which we hope some day to have a building for the work. Won't that be great? I don't want to be greedy, but joy and rejoice over the prospects.

I plan to build a kindergarten and use it in general work—that is, the Sunday school and other church meetings on Sunday—kindergarten in the mornings, a night school in the evenings, Bible classes, etc.

Sorry I cannot write more at this time. I hope this will find you all well and happy, and wish you all success and happiness throughout the coming year.

Yours in hope of world-wide missions,

SARAH ANDREWS.

SARAH ANDREWS.

THE GOSPEL SONG. No. 1. BY CHARLES H. GABRIEL.

Fifty years ago such men as George F. Root, L. O. Emerson, John R. Sweney, William J. Kirkpatrick, H. R. Palmer, Robert Lowry, W. H. Doane, William G. Fischer, Ira D. Sankey, E. O. Excell, P. P. Bliss, James McGrananan, W. F. Sherwin, Philip Phillips, T. C. O'Kane, George C. Stebbins, and many others, were successfully writing and promoting sacred music.

Among the hymn writers of that period were Fanny J. Crosby, W. A. Cushing, Major Whittle ("El Nathan"), Annie Wittenmeyer, J. B. Atchinson, Kate Hankey, S. Baring-Gould, Annie S. Hawks, Lydia Baxter, E. E. Hewett, E. A. Hoffman, E. E. Rexford, and others-a noble, Christian army of poets whose lives proved to all the world about them that they labored unselfishly and without thought of financial return. All these (poet and composer), save two, have gone to their reward, and their successors-where are they?

Make a complete list of all who are at work in the field of gospel or sacred song to-day, compare it with the incomplete roster given above, and the most optimistically inclined will be startled.

Commercialism has entered into the writing and publishing of sacred music to a degree that threatens the extermination of this marvelous agent in divine worship. Must the church, because of this, go back into the past for its music, when the entire world of art, craft, science, and mechanics is advancing with such wonderful strides?

Music colleges and conservatories are much better equipped than were those of yesterday, and technical music is improving in quality and quantity as never before in our history, yet in all the land there is not one school, worthy of mention, where a systematic course of training may be had in the art of writing sacred musicthe music of the church and the entire Christian world.

In the old days composers assisted each other with advice and practical illustration in the construction of this class of song which so strongly appeals to the spiritual life of humanity and that is within the ability of the great masses of the people to sing.

These words of possible help have been written with the hope of encouraging and stimulating young authors, that the church of to-morrow may have an adequate supply and better quality of sacred music than we enjoy to-day.

The subject of song writing is as vague as it is fascinating. Were I prepared to explain the phenomenal coloring of the rose and the source of its fragrance, or exemplify the potency of the nightingale to sing so incomparably without having had training, then you might expect of me to tell you how to write a gospel song. Had the great music masters of the past been able to disseminate such knowledge, what a concert hall of music this old world would have been long ago!

There is no royal road to gospel song writing. One must have talent for composition, must possess a reasonable knowledge of musical theory, and must be endowed with an acute sense of observation, for that is the greatest teacher of all. Will power, decision, resourcefulness, imagination, and originality must be combined with purpose, courage, and a determination to succeed. Patience, endurance, self-sacrifice, and a willingness to labor without great prospect of an early monetary return are also essentials that must not be lost to sight.

The ability for evolving that which human ear has never heard is inherent, perhaps, yet there are those endowed with ample talent for its transcription who, because of exigencies to be overcome, or unappraisement, indolently fail to force the opportunity for its development. Others are not willing to pay the price required to amplify their talent for such usefulness, while many are content to do as did the servant of old-hide their talent in a napkin.

The great instructor taught the insect its tuneless chirr and the bird its minstrelsy, and to-day they continue to give forth the same genetic notes of their respective ancestors; yet, when he made man in his own image, God endowed him with a talent through which he may sing a new song in praise of his Creator.

Often the question is asked: "What book on harmony and composition will teach me to write and arrange gospel songs correctly?" To the best of my knowledge, such a book has not been written, and never will be. There are many good works on theory, harmony, composition, counterpoint, and so on; but a thorough knowledge of all these combined will not, of themselves, empower one to write gospel music successfully, or make him a proficient arranger of its voice parts. Not all the celebrated teachers of these subjects were composers. Do not conclude that I deprecate or minimize in the least the great advantage rossessed by one who has a clear understanding of these efficacious arts; but the composer must know more than these can teach him. Ours is a type of music apart from every other class; it is for the masses of the people—that great congregation of untrained singers the majority of whom sing the melody.

There are three cardinal factors that enter into the construction of a gospel hymn or song. First, it must have judgment and wisdom in its conception; second, it must display strength to support it; third, it must have beauty to promote it.

In the first place, a song must be built upon a subject that is practical and generally useful, and on a text with but a single thought or theme, and its music must be in sympathy therewith. For instance, if the theme be the love of Christ, that must be its integral thought, exemplified in the simplicity of fervency and devotion, and its music must be in perfect accord. "Lead, Kindly Light" is a perfect example of what I would impress upon you. It is a simple prayer, and no other element enters into its content, while its music is admirably adapted. "Hold the Fort" is another model of harmony in words and music.

In the second place, a song must display strength in its scriptural homogeneity, in its theoretical construction, and by its feasibility to the masses of the people.

In the third place, a song must have pleasing melody and rhythm—melody that lingers, that emphasizes the text by its concordant fitness; not merely a tune to sing, but a vehicle strong enough to deliver a message. Melody does not imply jazz or freak movement and accent, neither does it demand dance tempo or syncopation; but it does mean a tune that progresses naturally, smoothly, musically, and spontaneously, and characteristic of the text to which it is written. A "Sunshine in the Soul" melody would be entirely out of place with a "Nearer, My God, to Thee" text, as would a "Scatter Sunshine" movement be a farce with a "The Son of God Goes Forth to War" sentiment. The hymn under consideration must be the sole dictator of melody and movement.

The composer of gospel music must bear in mind that few churches, Sunday schools, or evangelistic congregations have skillful song leaders or trained singers, nor do they have necessary rehearsal; therefore, perplexities of all kinds must be avoided. One unnatural or intricate progression will destroy a song that otherwise would have been useful.

As stated before, the first requisite—given a good hymn—is a strong, enticing melody such as has already been described, to which add an alto so arranged as to make those two parts—as nearly as possible—complete in themselves, since those two voices are largely in the majority. Next, the bass part will require careful treatment, as a song without a strong foundation is faulty and weak. Make the part substantial, but not difficult, as the majority of bass singers "sing with the spirit," but not "with the understanding." The tenor might be termed a filler," and yet it is a most important part, and essential to the harmony. Sometimes, in harmonizing, the writer will find it advisible, when arranging his tenor, to change the alto part in order to get the effect desired in the tenor or the bass.

Observation, experience, and a knowledge of the musical abilities and song mannerisms of those who sing the gospel are qualifications a writer of this class of music must possess, or his arrangements are liable to assume an unnatural unfolding of the different voices.

The best method of learning voice-part arranging is a study of the works of authors of experience and ability. Analyze the progressions and voice balancing of which they make use; notice the figure and form carried out, which adds symmetry and beauty to their composition. I do not say that the work of any one man is perfect merely because he did it, but his treatment demonstrates the fact that he has sought and found some of the secrets of success. The laws of our country are not right simply because they are our laws, but they are our laws because they are right. So, it is safe to follow the pattern made through learning and experience.

Arrangements of music are written by rule, largely, although it is said that Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, and others sketched out the continuity of melody, scoring first the melodic outline with four-part harmony. Sometimes they visualized the entire work before writing a note.

Orchestral music is sometimes built around a very short theme which is embellished differently each time it is repeated; but such treatment will not avail in our style of music, from the very nature and manner of its use. It is sometimes an advantage—dependent upon the text—for the first and third lines of the verse, as did Dr. Doane in "Savior, More Than Life to Me;" or, when the stanza is of eight lines, the same theme may be applied to the first, third, and seventh lines, as in "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken." "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me" is largely repetition, while "I Love to Tell the Story" has a different theme for each respective line of the stanza and throughout the chorus.

In our hymn books may be found many tunes imperfectly represented, such as "Sessions," "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and others. They were originally written correctly, but were printed in their imperfect form by ignorant editors and so used until their imperfections became our inheritance. The very nature of music demands a multiple of sight measures.

Long tones at the ends of the lines of poetry are not conducive to good results. Therefore, when a hymn demands such treatment, it is wise, sometimes, to interpolate into the text at points of vantage one, two, or more additional words, that the flow of melody may not be interputed.

Every popular gospel song we sing to-day is of the very simplest construction. Going back to the old church tunes, we instance, "Martyn," "Dennis," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and others. It was their simplicity and melody that gave them life. "Sweet Hour of Prayer," "More Love to Thee," "I Need Thee Every Hour"—each one feasible and appealing. "The Ninety and Nine," "Man of Sorrows," "Showers of Blessings," "Let Him In," "Saved by Grace," and even "O, That Will Be Glory for Me"—each a model of feasibility. "Master, the Tempest is Raging" is an example of song elegance, with which might be classed the "Awakening Chorus." Had either of these songs been made difficult, neither would have survived.

I have known but one composer of the so-called "classic" music who also wrote gospel songs. That man's compositions were used on both sides of the Atlantic; yet C. C. Converse lives to-day through his simple "What a Friend We Have in Jesus!"

Music must be written for the words, otherwise the composer has nothing to interpret.

There are also those who, like Peter of old, deny our song while among their musical associates, but enjoy it in the Sunday service.

The real singer, the one who has music in his soul, the artist whose name is carved on the monuments of song and religion, is not captious, and has only pity and regret for the improvident scoffer who would destroy that which goes so far in making this a better world to live in, or would take from the earnest Christian that which he loves to sing.

THE BLESSED MAN.

[Sermon preached by S. H. Hall over Radio KHJ, The Times, Los Angeles, Cal.]

That Christ, without any doubt, is the One to whom we must now go for the secret of blessedness must be admitted; hence, we, as it were, shall sit at his feet for a short while this morning, and let him give us the key that unlocks the door and leads us into the way of joy divine.

In the first paragraph of the Sermon on the Mount, found in Matthew's Gospel, chapter 5, we have what has been correctly called "the Beatitudes." The word "blessed" occurs nine times in the same number of verses of that paragraph, and each time it is applied to souls for what they have done, are doing, or really are; hence, there is not the shadow of a chance for people who have merely good intentions to come into the blessedness here promised. In hunting for the "blessed" or "truly happy" man, you must look for that soul that goes beyond possessing merely good intentions. Good intentions must be crystallized into character before they can give us the blessedness of the Sermon on the Mount.

The original Greek word here that lies behind our English word "blessed" is sometimes translated by our word "happy," and correctly so. The original word is "makarioi," and when literally rendered it means "ma" or "me," equivalent to "not" in English, and "ker" or "karioi," which in English means "fate," "chance," etc. What our Lord, therefore, literally said was that the characters about whom he spoke were not subject to chance, fate, or accident, but that these souls are in the hands of the eternal Father and their lives superintended and providentially protected by him. Nothing comes into such a life except as permitted by the Father. This is the "blessed" or "happy" man. Now I want you to see this. This man lives as long as God thinks best for him to live, and God is as much in the ending of his journey here, so far as providence is concerned, as he was along life's way. I wish I could get every soul on this old earth to become and remain the truly "happy" or "blessed" man. Such souls put their all into the hands of God to be used in continuous service to him until he permits or allows our work to terminate. I am wondering how many of us have really learned what David meant when he said: "My times are in thy hand." (Ps. 31: 15.) You know the Bible speaks of the "blessed dead." In Rev. 14: 13, our Lord, through John on the Isle of Patmos, tells us clearly who the blessed dead are: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." These happy, blessed souls are those who are in the Lord, with all that they are and possess. These souls live in a continued state of consciousness that they have sold themselves wholly to the Lord; hence, they are not their own. And when we think of the price our Lord paid, it does seem that we should know that nothing can we justly hold back and call it our own. This is the sore need of the church to-day. Here it would be well to listen to Paul as he writes to the church at Corinth: "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? for ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.) And this same matchless apostle so felt about life and death. Listen to him as he speaks to the church at Philippi: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Paul believed in death as well as life, all of the modern teaching that death and physical suffering come from a diseased mind or imagination to the contrary notwithstanding. "But if I live in the flesh," said he, "this is the fruit of my labor: yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better: nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you. And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith." (Phil. 1: 21-25.) Yes, indeed, Paul's times were in his Lord's hands, and his prayer was: Father, keep me and continue me in the flesh just so long as it is your will, just so long as my staying here will bless and help others. But Paul was just as glad to go as to stay, when it was the Father's will to let life's work with him end.

But there is another scripture to which your attention is here called, and it more fully describes the character under consideration. You will find it in Rom. 8: 28: "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose," Will you now imagine it? Here is a soul into whose life nothing can come without bringing its blessing. All of your experiences in sickness and health, among friends and foes, and even in death, bring good to your soul. There is such a thing as poor fallen man's holding such a position in life. Those who hold it are "blessed," happy indeed!

And may I not here remind you of the fact that the salt of the earth and the light of the world of which our Lord speaks in the second paragraph of this wonderful sermon are nothing else than the souls named in the first paragraph who have these beatitudes?

But, before closing this address, let us look into just one of the beatitudes to get a glimpse of the secret of how we get into this blessed, happy state into which we are privileged to come even in this life.

Please note that the opening words of our Lord in pointing us to the way of blessedness are these: "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." The beatitudes are given in their natural order—that is, the first comes first. There is no such thing as having the beatitudes that are further stated without first having poverty of spirit. We must first become "poor in spirit" before Heaven's blessings can flow into our souls and out through us into the lives of others.

But what is it to be poor in spirit? Nothing is more sorely needed to-day. We have no poor in spirit except those souls keenly conscious of their spiritual poverty, their extreme wretchedness, their absolute bankruptcy before God. You see it fully exemplified in the prodigal son. The besetting sin of this age is our inability to get even preachers to fall before God and confess their utter nothingness in his sight when it comes to ability to guide and teach men. Will you now listen as I read a few scriptures? Jeremiah (10: 23) says: "O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." How many have learned this lesson? And more: "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isa. 55: 8, 9.) In Prov. 14: 12 it is said: "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." In Deut. 12: 8, Moses says: "Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes." "Seeming religion," doing things just because it looks right in our own eyes, is the sin that curses the church to-day and has torn it asunder into warring factions. How sorely we need to learn the lesson that unless we "be converted, and become as little children," the kingdom, in the true sense, we cannot enter! (See Matt. 18: 3.) And here it would be well to listen to the Spirit-guided Paul as he speaks along this same line: "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise." Some church members need this lesson. This statement was made directly to those who wanted to form parties around Paul, Cephas, and Apollos; hence, Paul commanded such to "let no man glory in men." (See 1 Cor. 3: 18, 21.) Every man that starts a way of his own does his best to justify or defend self. All such need to become "poor in spirit," that the kingdom of our Lord they may once see. In 1 Cor. 8: 2, 8, Paul says: "And if any man think that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if any man love God, the same is known of him." This teaches, beyond question, that those of us who truly love God are the ones who want not our own ways in religion, but surrender wholly to God and let him guide all the way. David says: "The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit." (Ps. 34: 18.) He also says: "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." (Ps. 51: 17.) And in Isa. 66: 2 we have this statement: "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word." Yes, the poor in spirit never make laws for God. The poor in spirit want not their own ways in religion. The poor in spirit know that it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps; hence, fall before Jehovah's teaching with the determination to speak where Jehovah speaks and stay silent where Jehovah is silent. Do you wonder, then, that our Lord says, "For theirs is the kingdom of heaven?" This spirit can lead them nowhere else. In their hearts our Lord reigns and rules in the supreme sense. And what if all teachers among us to-day would thus be "poor in spirit?" Would it not bring us together in the one body as our Lord's disciples once were in the days of the apostles, and would we not obey the pleading words of the Spirit in 1 Cor. 1: 10: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment?" How could it be otherwise, if indeed we were all "poor in spirit," hence letting only God's will and way by us be taught and lived? We would be of the same mind, because we would have no mind but his. We would speak the same thing, because we would speak only what his word says, and the doctrines and commandments of men to the winds we would let go. And our Lord's prayer in us would be answered when he prayed for us to be one as he and the Father are one. But, instead of this happy state among us, our Lord still has to do as he did in the days of Isaiah: "I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, after their own thoughts."

Let others do as they may, but as for me, may God keep me in a state of absolute surrender to him, and my body sufficiently crucified by the cross that in not one thing in my teaching to aliens shall I have my own way, but tell them, as did the apostles, what our Lord says for them to do to be saved, and in not one thing in the work and worship of the church shall my will be done, but may his will, and only his, organize, regulate, and run every congregation with which I have to do. There is a joy that is unspeakable, and there is a peace that goes beyond even your own understanding; but have it you cannot until that poverty of spirit you possess that makes you flee to Christ for directions along life's way. And this joy I never knew until to Christ I thus surrendered.

If just one of the listeners in has been made to desire such a life, the moments I have spent in talking to you have not been spent in vain. May God's grace ever abide with all of you.

ONE BY ONE THEY LEAVE US. BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

Mid-January last, while in Florida, word reached me that our beloved Brother John T. Underwood, of Spruce Pine, Ala., had quietly laid his burdens down and gone home to rewards eternal. Doubtless a more fitting appraisal of his life will be written by others. I have been very closely associated with him for many years, and would here record some outstanding facts of his life and labors. During the summer of 1891, while he was in a meeting near my childhood home in Mississippi, I was instructed in the way of the Lord, and he baptized me. He has been a great inspiration to me through all these intervening years. Let some record of him be preserved.

He was the son of William and Nancy Gressem Underwood, and was born in Tishomingo County, Miss., on March 16, 1854. There, of a family of fourteen children, he grew up on a farm with almost no public schooling. He learned the gospel through the preaching of Brother John Taylor, and entered the famous Larimore school at Mars' Hill, Ala., when he was twenty-three. In that institution he remained through three successive terms, working his way. He was a vocal-music teacher of no inconsiderable ability, but was inspired to preach the gospel and give his life thereto by his great friend and mentor, T. B. Larimore.

While still a young man he was married to Miss Arrie Gresham, of Belgreen, Ala., who has been his faithful wife through all these years. She bore him eight children, and she and they survive him and seek to carry on the work of the Lord. At first, Brother Underwood confined his labors in the gospel to the country around Florence, Ala. But it was not long till this finely-mannered, upstanding, and winsome young man made himself so felt with the gospel that he was called to neighboring sections, and finally to many other States, both for meetings and debates; and for more than forty years he has gallantly kept up the fight, faithfully living and preaching the unmixed word of the Lord. Always dignified and kindly in manner, yet his unswerving devotion to the gospel often brought him into violent opposition with sectarians, which he accepted in good will and continued unflinchingly to expose all error and exalt the way of the Lord.

The most of his life has been lived in Northern Alabama; but through all the labor-filled years, working in several Southern States, he commanded the respect and confidence of everybody. There has never been a breath or whisper against him. By no unholy living did he bring reproach upon the church of the Lord. Men from every walk of life who knew him spoke well of him. His was a life of sacrifice, willingly made for the truth. He told me he preferred to preach in out-of-the-way, neglected places. He established many congregations, and was signally successful in leading people to obey the gospel.

While in a meeting four years ago, he was stricken with paralysis. With becoming fortitude he accepted enforced confinement at home; yet he often spoke of his great desire once more to be in the field preaching. Finally, the tired, worn-out frame gave way; and do we not know he is now safe in the arms of his Lord? How far his influence has gone, the ultimate of his service for good, will be revealed only in eternity. Rest sweetly, dear man; the fight will soon be over for us all.

LIGHT ON FARTHER HILLS.

The clouds upon the mountain rest,
A gloom is on the autumn day;
But down the valley, in the west,
The hidden sunlight breaks its way—
A light lies on the farther hills.

Forget thy sorrow, heart of mine!
Though shadows fall and fades the leaf,
Somewhere is joy, though 'tis not thine.
The Power that sent can heal thy grief—
A light on the farther hills.

Thou wouldst not with the world be one,
If ne'er thou knewest hurt and wrong;
Take comfort, though the darkened sun
Never again bring gleam or song—
The light lies on the farther hills.
—Richard Watson Gilder.

OUR MESSAGES

Ignorance is a crime.

Educated mind controls the universe.

The man who rides a hobby is on a high horse.

Don't call a preacher and then fail to support him.

The meeting at Twenty-second Avenue, North, this city, will continue through this week, with Lytton Alley doing the preaching.

Don't talk about a preacher if he is poorly dressed or in debt. While you had your pocketbook hid you became partly responsible.

C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark., March 18: "Last Sunday I was at Locust Bayou, Ark., and preached three times for the saints there."

W. M. Behel, Rogersville, Ala., March 1: "The Gospel Advocate has the right sound. It is food to the soul to read it. May God's blessings be on the entire Advocate force."

Hal P. McDonald, Oakman, Ala., March 16: "Please say in the Gospel Advocate that three or more families of faithful Christians who have practical experience in the manufacture of lumber may find regular work by writing me at once."

C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., March 16: "One young lady made the good confession at the evening services yesterday. The Lord has certainly blessed our labors so far this year, for which we are very thankful and praise his holy name."

B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., March 16: "I am sending you six renewals and one new subscriber. One was baptized and one added by statement at West End Avenue yesterday. Brother Hardeman will begin our meeting next Sunday."

The Tennessee Orphan Home has more applications to receive children into the Home now than ever before, and fewer applications by Christian families wanting to take orphan and dependent children into their homes to develop into Christian men and women.

A lumber manufacturing business with a great future requires the services of a few Christians who are practical millmen and who could take some stock in the company. Will bear rigid investigation. Give full particulars and references. Address Hal P. McDonald, Oakman, Ala.

Frank Baker, Berry, Ala., March 16: "I was with the few faithful brethren at Gorgas Power Plant on the second Lord's day in this month. Yesterday I was at Old Bethel, near Vernon, Ala. This is the home place of our beloved and aged brother, C. A. Wheeler, now of Jasper, Ala."

A. R. Hill, Avon Park, Fla., March 16: "I preached for the Sweetwater congregation yesterday. The attendance was good and the interest was the very best. I shall assist them in a Bible study each Thursday evening. H. C. Hinton preached here at home to two splendid audiences. I am sending two more new subscribers for the Gospel Advocate."

